At 8.30 the camp fire and illumination occurred. The grounds were very preitily hung with Japanese lanterns and, with the bright light of the camp fire, made a very fine show. The exercise used at the camp fire was one prepared by the General Circle, and was of much interest. "The Past," was ably spoke for by Rev. O. S. Baketel. "The Present," by Miss Ellen Mosman, and "The Future" by Rev. Dr. Warren, and with this ended the services of Recognition Day, one long to be remembered by the C. L. S. C. of '86.

Friday ushered in another lovely morning, which waslgreeted by the early risers at Fryeburg. At 8 a. m. the prayer meeting was 'led by Rev. A. E. White, of Bath, and was well attended.

At 8.30 the primary teachers' conference, and the choir rehearsal led by Prof. Morse, were held, one in Normal Hall, and the other in the Auditorium. These lessons by Mrs. Crofts are such that no one can afford to misseven one lesson.

At 9.30 the fifth Normal Hour, led by Rev. W. F. Berry, took place; subject, "Study of the Bible from God." It was a lesson of much interest and profit.

A peculiarity of the fire is that it spreads from underground and breaks out in the unexpected places. Another large stack of hay owned by P. Antwiler was burned last evening. The fire is now spreading slowly but surely, and may yet do incalculable damage to hay and other property besides ruining the land. George A. Jenks of Pennsylvania Appointed Solicitor Ceneral.

nal Revenue Collector of Maine.

The Conferees on the River and Harbor Bill Agree.

[Special to the PRESS,] WASHINGTON, July 30 .- The conferees on the river and harbor bill have reached an agreement, and it was reported to the House this afternoon. The Hennepin Canal clause, somewhat modified, remains in the bill, and the items for the Potomac flats, New York harbor, and others of importance are conceded by the House conferees. The bill is still considered in jeopardy, howver, as Willis of Kentneky, chairman of the House committee, refused to sign the report, and will contest it on the floor. The roll calls of the past two days reveal the presence of a bare quorum, and quite a number of members left town today, but the friends of the bill in its present shape find encouragement in the fact that but few of the advocates of the Hennepin Canal clause, whe accept the compromise, are among the absentees.

The Senate passed the Morrison resolution substantially as reported by the finance committee. It provides by an amendment put in by the Senate for the redemption of trade dollars. The resolution goes back to the House for concurrence. and that body is placed in the position of either rejecting it and thus showing it has no faith in the financial stability of the Secretary of the Treasury, in whose hands the management of the surplus is practically placed by the Senate amendments, or of adopting it and thus abandoning the stand taken on the start. The chances are that if action can be had before the quorum melts away it will be adopted. It took the Senate but fifteen minutes to dispose of the bill for the increase of the naval establishment after the Morrison resolution was adopted. It adopted the bill as it came from the House, with a proviso that no materials of foreign manufacture shall be used in the construction of the new cruisers except shafting. Redman, nominated for collector of internal revenue for the district of Maine, was confirmed in the brief executive session held it was mutilated so as to require amputation today. His nomination, received Wednes day, was referred to the committee on finance at the next executive session, held Thursday, and was at once reported back favorably.

The Maine Senators interposed no objection to his immediate confirmation. Of the appropriation bills now in conference committees, the sundry civil is causing the most trouble. The conferees have me once and after a protracted session have disposed of but eight amendments out of nearly 250. It is doubtful if an agreement can be reached on the bill before next week. The deficiency bill will cause but little trouble in conference as it appropriates for deficiencies which actually exist, and about which there

The New Solicitor Ceneral.

The appointment of Mr. George A. Jenks of Pennsylvania as Solicitor General is generally received with favor. His ability as a lawyer is everywhere recognized and respected. He was for a considerable period a Representative in Congress, and until within a few months was the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, to whom the most important law matters of the department were referred. He was the first incumbent of the new position of Second Assistant Secretary that was created two years ago in the Interior Department. He resigned his office about three months ago upon the death of the wealthy and eccentric lumberman of Pennsylvania, who had formerly been his client, in order that he might take charge of his vast estate. Upon his death-bed the aged millionaire exacted a promise from Mr. Jenks that he would always look after the estate and be the counsel for life of the young man who was the only heir to several millions. Mr. Jenks was left $10,000 annually for life in the will. The New Solicitor Ceneral.

The President sent the following noming tions to the Senate to-day: Cornelius C. Wattes to be United States Attorney for the district of West Virginia. Dubney H. Maury of Virginia, to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to the United States of Columbia.

Fighting With Bears Over Dead Friends--An Esquimaux's

Sad Story.

St. Johns, N. F., July 30.—Hergenatis Yer, one of the Esquimaux who recently arrived here on the Nancy Barrett, from Okkak, Labrador, tells a frightful story of destitution and suffering which the inhabitants of that region are undergoing. The population of this settlement was not far from 130 souls, yet when he left with his wife not a soul remained. He says that early in March the food gave out, and they were unable to obtain more. Every available drop of oil or piece of sealskin was utilized as food. Finally, in June, there was absolutely nothing left. Now and then a bear would be killed, but this was the exception. On June 3d they had had no food for six days, and how they were to escape death was to then a mystery. Several whites and a few Indians had died from exposure to the cold blasts which came sweeping down from the Arctic north, and the only thing left was to resort to cannibalism, which was done. When one of the party died, his or her body was cut open, the entrails taken out and the remainder frozen up for use. From this food a terrible dysentery set in among the survivors and on July 1st there were but 16 persons left alive, the bodies of over 25 having been eaten.

The 16 survivors started down the coast in WAR OF THE ELEMENTS. A Fearful Thunder Storm in Massachusetts. A Man at Attleboro Found Dead in His Room-Others Prostrated.

ATTLEBORO, Mass., July 30.—During the violent tempest this morning between 3 and 4 o'clock the tenement house owned by Fred Fogg on Union street was struck by lightning with fatal results. The lightning struck the chimney running down to the roof either way, tearing the ridgeboard and shingles up and entered the building, taking a downward course. The attic rooms were badly damaged and the westend of the building was entirely torn out. The second floor rooms were damaged and the plastering and pictures were torn down.

Bennie Packard, a popular young man aged 22 years, a hack driver here for some time, was instantly killed. He was found lying against the door when a friend tried to gain admittance. The shoe on his right foot was torn in two, his underclothing and outside garments torn from him, leaving him in nearly a nude condition.

The theory is that, becoming frightened, he dressed himself, and on approaching the door met his death. The lightning struck his left shoulder, running down, crossing to the right leg and downward. His shoulder arm and side were terribly burned and blackened. All the inmates of the house were affected by the shock.

The building took fire, which was put out by one of the tenants, who burned his hands badly. Mr. Packard's parents reside in Middleboro. Mr. Jerry Benton, night watchman at the depot was prostrated by the shock.

PORTLANDS, 8; NEWBURYPORTS, 2. The Portlands won their third victory for this week on the home grounds in a finely played game with the Newburyports yesterday afternoon. Madden pitched for the Portlands, and his work was the feature of the game, the Newburyports were unable to hit Madden with any success, five singles and Whiteley's home run summing up the result of their batting. Shoeneck played an errorless game as usual, with 11 put-outs to his credit. The fielding of the Portlands was excellent, and they hit Gruber, who was perhaps a little wild, with considerable freedom. The Newburyports also played a fine fielding game. A diffcult catch of a foul fly by Hatfield in the sixth inning deserves mention. But for an unfortunate error the Newburyports would have been shut out. In the fourth inning Flanagan got first on a wild throw of Hatfield's after two men were out and went to second on a wild pitch. Whiteley, the next batsman, then made a home run on a clean hit over the left field fence, sending Flanagan in ahead of him. After this the Newburyports failed to score. The following is the official score: The Portlands won their third victory for NOTES. Freligh's umpiring in the three games played here this week has been eminently satisfactory. He possesses sound judgment, has an intimate knowledge of the game, and sufficient firmness to enforce his decisions. It is to be hoped that he will retain his position during the remainder of the season.

The Portlands will play an exhibition game with the Yarmouths Monday afternoon. Clarkson will pitch for the Portlands. The Yarmouths are one of the finest amateur teams in the State, and will undoubtedly make the Portlands play ball.

DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CONVENTIONS.

The date of holding the Democratic county convention for Waldo county has been changed to Tuesday, August 17th. It is intended to have a public meeting on that day to be addressed by Hon. William H. Clifford of Portland and others. Mr. Clifford could not be in Belfast on the 12th, and for that reason the time of holding the convention has been changed.

Mr. Clifford will also speak with D. J. McGillicuddy of Lewiston, at the York county convention at Alfred on August 5th.

The convention of Knox county will be held at Rockland, August 14th; of Lincoln county, at Wiscasset, August 21.

FREEPORT. The Republican delegates chosen at the caucus Thursday evening were Edward B. Mallett, Jr., James Ródick, Joseph D. Curtis, Benj. P. Joule, Josiah P. Merrill, James H. Banks.

A DEMOCRATIC UPRISING IN BUCKSPORT. Ever since Joseph L. Swazey was appointed deputy collector for the port of Bucksport by Collector Spofford there has been a growing feeling of indignation among the Democratic voters of the district. The feeling has at last taken form in a paper which reads as follows:

REMONSTRANCEAND PLEDGE.

We, the undersigned, Democratic voters of Bucksport and Verona, county of Hancock. State of Maine, do hereby denounce in the most emphatic manner the appointment of Joseph L. Swazey as deputy collector of customs for the port of Bucksport; a man who has never been known as a Democrat; has always voted the Republican ticket, carried torchlights in Republican processions, and Illuminated his dwelling in honor of Republican victories. Said appointment was made through the efforts of Thomas H. Swazey and a small clique of Republicans. We regard his appointment as a Republican triumph and a crushing defeat to a true and faithful Democraey.

Therefore we pledge ourselves to each other never to vote a Democratic ticket at any future election as long as Joseph L. Swazey remains in said office. REMONSTRANCE AND PLEDGE.

election as long as Joseph L. Swazey remains in said office.

This paper is neatly printed in the form of a four-page circular with the State seal and appropriate political quotations on the outside and extracts from President Cleveland's letter of acceptance following the signatures. The document bears about 160 signatures with the following comment:

The above list shows a majority of the Democratic voters of the town of Bucksport and Verona. About 40 other Democratic voters declare they will not go to the pells or cast their ballots, but rather not sign the pledge. IN MEMORIAM.

Barrows. The Memorial and Resolution of the Cumberland Bar. Exercises Before the Supreme Court Yesterday.

At a meeting of the Cumberland Bar held at half past two yesterday afternoon, the report of the committee on resolutions on the leath of Judge William G. Barrows, was presented by Judge Cleaves, chairman of the nmittee and unanimously adopted. The neeting then adjourned to the Supreme Court room where the full Bench was in ses sion. President S. C. Strout of the Cumberand Bar then spoke as follows:

May it please the Court,—It has become my painful duty to announce to your Honors that since your last session in this county William G. Barrows, for many years your associate upon this bench, has deceased. His character as a man was pure and above

His character as a man was pure and above reproach; his ability and learning as a lawyer and judge were of that high quality that always commanded the respect and commendation of the bar and the community.

Associated with the eminent judges who have adorned the bench of Maine, he was in all respects their peer; while at the bar we esteemed and loved him, and his career upon the bench increased our regard.

Simple in his tastes, just and well balanced in mind, :/arm hearted, but not impulsive, modest almost to a fault, to his own merit,—he was a good judge on whom suitors could he was a good judge on whom suitors could safely rely for a fair and impartial determination of their rights, according to law. The members of the bar of Maine, who have known him long aud well, will cherish his memory, and our successors will learn to know and ap-preciate him from his able opinions contained n our reports.

As a fitting tribute to his memory, the ba of this county, in which Judge Barrows for many years had his home, have adopted appro-priate resolutions, and charged Judge Cleaves with the duty of presenting them to this court, which he will now do.

At the conclusion of Mr. Strout's remarks Judge Nathan Cleaves, chairman of the committee on resolutions, addressed the court as follows: May it please your Honors,—The relations which Judge Barrows sustained for so many years towards the bar of the State and the A man he was to all the country dear, Remote from towns he ran his godly race, Nor e'er had changed nor wished to change h

Nor e'er had changed nor wished to change his place.

In the quiet picturesque village of South Bridgton, at the modest home of his uncle, our deceased brother passed his youth. His preparation for college was largely under the personal instruction of this cultured and eloquent "village preacher" who paid with willing hand the expenses of the college course of his adopted son, who graduated at Bowdoin college in 1839, and his alma mater somewhat tardily bestowed upon him, a few years ago, the degree of Doctor of Laws. He pursued his professional studies in Portland, with his uncle, General Samuel Fessenden, whose name and fame are known throughout New England. The story of his subsequent life I leave for others to tell in fitting terms, having of necessity, but briefly alluded to it in the memorial which I now have the honor to present.

Judge Cleaves then read the following

Judge Cleaves then read the following William Griswold Barrows is dead: and the members of the Bar of the Conuty of Cumberland with a deep sense of personal bereavement, desire to express in enduring form, their high estimate of his life and labors, and to commend his excellent example to those who

His natural love of knowledge was quickened and encouraged in his early years by fortunate family and social influences, and he came to the practice of his profession with a mind well grounded in fundamental legal principles, and enriched with the fruits of diligent classical and general study.

In his practice at the bar he acquired an uncuestioned reputation for faithfulness in whom he heartily despised, or by the dullness of the victims of that art, he always claimed with apparently full confidence, that the de-termination of the majority would be ultimately just.

He was by nature self-reliant, and a strange to fear. His allegiance was to justice, and not to power. He did not quail in the presence of a majority. He was willing to be alone for conscience sake. His standard of righteousness was not the actual doing of any man nor any party. He judged by rule; not as the world judged. He was of strong af-fections; but his scorn of evil doing was so

Net though as judge and citizen, he would not compromise with evil, he had compassion for all but penal suffering, and often even for that; womanly gentleness and sympathy which those who met him only in the ways of public business, did not often see. In his house was a most generous hospitality. Sad to say, there was no child there; but he had that delight in the company of children which men of great learning often, if not usually show; and strange as it may seem to some, they recognized him as their fit companion.

When his worldly task was done, and it was

When his worldly task was done, and it was no more good that he should be in pain; a shadow cams upon him, and he ceased to hear the din of our life; but when every other sound was lost in silence, he still heard and knew one voice—the one most welcome among all the voices of the earth. So, for him, even while he was yet among us, love had survived sorrow. And in the shadow, where haply, the peace of God was brooding, he went away.

To this place, where we have been wont to meet him, from which he is now absent forever and ever, we of the Cumberland Bar, united and ever, we of the Cumberland Bar, united by the memory of so many of the mighty and true-hearted that have gone, and now yet more strongly bound together for his sake, have come with these already fading garlands, our last

We do not know in what distant age his personality, and even his now splendid fame may be forgotten; but we believe the in-fluence of his life will even then abide, strength to the heavy-laden and inspiration to those who may not know from what pure source it came, "until the day of Jesus Christ."

Hon. Joseph W. Symonds, also one of the committee on resolutions, then spoke as follows: The universal regret, with which Judge Barrows' retirement from the bench was re-ceived, was followed only too quickly by the which Judge Barrows sustained for so many years towards the bar of the State and the court over which you are now presiding, render it highly appropriate that you should join with us in paying just public tribute to his memory. It is perhaps not generally known that in early childhood, upon the decease of his father, he was adopted by his uncle, the Rev. Joseph Palmer Fessenden, of Bridgton, Maine.

A man he was to all the country dear. almost say of wonder as well as of regret.

It seemed strange that he should have reached such a decision; and the conviction arose in our minds that he must have in view some services, was at the time the subject I might almost say of wonder as well as of regret. It seemed strange that he should have reached such a decision; and the conviction arose in our minds that he must have in view some literary work, historical or otherwise, to which he prefered to devote the leisure of his later years, and that, in putting off the robes of his profession he was only to reap the harvest which, with his scholarly tasts and habits, he had planted in other fields than those of the law.

But in the light of the latter event, we can seem to trace a connection, undisclosed before, between his retirement from the bench and his suddenly succeeding illness and death. We find ourselves inclined to believe—I know not whether it may be true or not, but one inclines to believe—that some word of premonition of the future, which others did not heed, had already fallen upon his own ear, that some shadow of the impending change was even then stretching closely along his path, and that when he left the bench he may have known, what we could not believe, that there was before him in this world only the quickly gathering darkness.

He had given his life to the service of the intervence of the impending change was even then stretching closely along his path, and that when he left the bench he may have known, what we could not believe, that there was before him in this world only the quickly gathering darkness.

He had given his life to the service of the strange that hat department rendering him alterates that department rendering him alterates that department rendering him alterates that department rendering him alterates and assisted to the seastsocion to the community, his experience in that department rendering him alterates a nisi prints glide of probate, filling the position with his restorion to the community, his experience in that department rendering him alterates a nisi prints glide of probate, filling the position with as ansistaction to the community, his experience in that department rendering him a given his life to the State and few men come bringing to their native State a costlier offering than a life and service like his. After years at the bar, after the period of valuable services rendered in the discharge of the delicate and responsible duties of judge of probate in this county, after twenty-one years of arduous labor upon the supreme bench, it is not strange that it seemed good to him to withdraw from the cares and distractions of his profession to the calmness of contemplation and fession to the calemness of contemplation and the companionship of his books.

He has acted well his part. As a judge at nisi prius, he had made the most constant and classical and general study.

In his practice at the bar he acquired an unquestioned reputation for faithfulness, integrity and accurate learning, and gained the confidence and respect of his associates, the courts, and the community in which he lived.

He was elected Judge of Probate for the County of Cumberland in 1856, and most acceptably performed the duties of that office, until 1863, when he was appointed an Associate Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of the State. For twenty-one years he was a distinguished and honored member of this court.

He brought to the administration of his high judicial trust a sleepless conscience, an absolute rectitude of purpose, an almost intuitive perception of right and wrong, and a resolute determination to apply the principles of law to the rights of men, with unerring justice. As was said of one of the Chief Justices of England, "He seemed to love justice as his life, and the laws as his inheritance, and acted as if he remembered whose image and commission he bore, and to whom he was accountable for the equity of his decrees."

His judicial opinions extending from volume fifty to volume seventy-seven of the Maine Reports, are models of sound judicial thought and judgment, expressed in the choicest and clearest language. They will always be held in high estimation by the pirist, and regarded with admiration by the scholar. Si monumentum quaeris, circumspice suam vitam et suas labores.

He wrote with facility and clearness, and the companionship of his books.

He had accet well his part. As a judge at the companionship of his books.

He had acted the most constant and exacting demand upon himself in his attention to the details of controverted cases. Many men in this State who hold their exact legal rights, neither more nor less, as the result of compliance and difficult investigations, over them to the painstaking and self-sacrificing efforts of Judge Barrows, to his vigilance that waked, in court and out, during the trial of cases before him, and to his patients and

While the printed reports of this court abundantly attest the fulness of his learning, the correctness of his taste, his eminent ability and untiring patience and industry, his associates and contemporaries will remember the kindness of his heart, his ready sympathy, and faithful friendship, his pure life and Christian virtues, and perpetuate them with grateful admiration, in this brief testimonial of his life and character,—

Resoleed, That this tribute of respect in memory of our deceased brother, be presented at the Law term of the Supreme Judicial court, now in session, at Portland, with a request that the same be entered upon its records.

Weston Thompson, Esq., of Brunswick, of the committee on resolutions, followed Judge Cleaves with the following remarks:

May it please the court,—Our common grief has been made easier by the several griefs that we have borne before. Some of us have been so bereft that the treasures of our hope and memory had become the same; and yet so blest that the heaven of our longing will sufficus if it but restore what has been given to us here. When they depart whose presence made us wish that earthly life might never end, voices unheard by our dull sense before begin to say that waiting love shall have its own again. The recollection of past happiness pleads with us then, until ingratitude becomes thanksgiving. Even from distant Galilee comes greeting, "Be of good cheer—it is 1."

Therefore, now to those who have been so afflicted and so consoled, it is cause for exultation as well as for mourning, that our late companion, leal and true—illustrious and long-loved, has left the world. We should be willing to accept his burden that he may be relieved of it; to do without his presence for a season that he may be with those that neither lose, nor mourn, nor say farewell.

It seems quite certain that

It seems quite certain that while he was a member of this court, his days passed pleasantly. He had honest pride in the judicial office. He had not the uneasiness of a political ambition. He must have had that happiness which attends the doing well of any work; with the advantage of his vast and profound learning in the law and beyond it, of his singular skill in the use of language, and in that no man doubted that the righteousness of Peace, good-will and grateful remembrances follow him, to guard his repose!

But here in the court his influence lingers and will remain. Year by year, generation fections; but his scorn of evil doing was so intense, and his power of expressions was so great that unsound men were not easy in his company, and all hypocrites were afraid of him.

Yet though as judge and citizen, he would not compromise with evil, he had compassion of control of the complex of compromise with evil of the complex of the com after generation, may I not say age after age, the judicial opinions which he elaborated with direct the course of judicial decision, determine the difficult bondaries of private rights, shape legislation and affect the administration of public affairs. But when the present genera-tion, with its love and respect for him per-sonally, with its warmth of affection for him as a man, shall have passed away, when his fame shall have become impersonal, resting only on his works which remain, when the written page shall be the only witness left that can speak of him as he was, then is it not safe to say, he will be remembered and known as one of the ablest and best among the judges of Maine?

At the conclusion of Judge Symonds's refame shall have become impersonal, resting only on his works which remain, when the

At the conclusion of Judge Symonds's remarks Chief Justice Peters, in behalf of the Supreme court, made the following response:

Gentlemen of the Bar,—We cheerfully lay aside our labors for the hour, to join with the bar in paying a tribute of respect to the memory of our late associate, Judge Barrows. We cordially concur in the sentiments of the resolutions offered by you, and in the culogies pronounced. The faculties, attainments and public services of our late friend have been fully and fitly portrayed in what has been already spoken. Still, it would be an omission, if we did not, even at the risk of repetition, give some expression of our own feelings and At the conclusion of Judge Symonds's regive some expression of our own feelings and sentiments on this impressive and interesting

The deceased was known to most of the present members of the court only while he was a judge. I remember seeing him but once engaged in trying a cause as an advocate. But it is easy for us to apprehend, from our knowledge of the man, how excellently he must have performed all the duties resting upon him in that capacity. We can readily appreciate that industry and promptitude, those indispensable qualities for professional success, personal independence and self-reliance, full and careful preparation, directness currestness and force were among directness, earnestness and force were among his marked qualities while he was at the bar. It would be unlike him to have wasted his own time or words or the time of the court.

Undoubtedly, his career on the bench, having been a member of this court for twentyone years, ensures to his name the greater and more enduring fame. This field of labor was probably more fitted to his taste and abilities than was that of the bar. Before coming to

The amount of nisi prius work which must have been accomplished by Judge Barrows may be appreciated when we remember that there were assigned to him not less than six terms upon an average annually, during a period of twenty-one years,—and never a day

such an arduous judicial experience necessarily must be an endless chain sort of employment, the work of one day so much like that of any other. The labors and responsibilities of such a public servant are appreciated but by the few. Even though the world grants him a good name, his good acts are mostly soon forgotten. "The good that men do is oft interred with their bones," ejaculated Mark Antony deploringly and half-truthfully, over the body of Cæsar; but a more inspiring sentiment should animate the motives of judges and lawyers. There is a consolation in the reflection that the judicial, or professional zeal and industry, may be, should be, expended for the public good. Faithful work is to be done at the rear as well as at the front of the battles ly must be, an endless chain sort of employment, of life. Having constructed his judicial work so carefully, he was quite tenacious that it should stand against any objection from his associates. His matured judgment was not easily affected by the opinion of other men either in or out of the consultation room. He would hardly have the consultation room. He would hardly have agreed with Burke, that he who calls in the aid of an equal understanding doubles his own: nor would he very much appreciate the re-

He possessed that strong moral power which comes from honesty and integrity in all things—in thought, word and deed. He abhorred fraud intensely, and every semblance of it, in whatever guise presented. Mere conventional honesty, such as the world might accept as satisfactory, would fall below his standard. This disposition might have been even of the combination of character,—his kindness and benevolence, his fine sympathies, easily touched, and his profound regard for justice and truth.

Judge Barrows, although retiring in his manners, was a companionable man with those who were companions to him. He possessed

June 8, 1884, he wrote me a letter from which I quote: "Perhaps the fates will let me look in on you in Portland. But, however it may be, my constant feeling towards the court will be, beneleisure thus far very much when the ailments that have been creeping upon me for the last two or three years have permitted, and I hope I am on the mending hand. Any way I shall be clear of the worry I should experience if obliged to feel that somebody else had to do the work that belonged to me. I am glad to think that so long as I held on I never lost a day in court on account of sickness, and always got through the work assigned me, after a fashion. I am content to leave it now in younger hands and hope they will be better paid, both in praise and pudding, for their labors." He came to see us, not until our last law term here, a year ago; and it was a last interview for most of us. The memory of it cannot be but sad.

The public and private life of our departed brother, as a whole, furnishes a record such as is rarely attained. It was an industrious, useful, honest and honorable life—to the end. He will always be affectionately remembered by his judicial associates. His virtues and his services as a judge will be long remembered and appreciated by the bench and the bar, and by the people. His future fame will be that he was a benefactor of his State.

It is a sorrowful duty, in this family meeting of bench and bar, called to pay last honors to the memory of their beloved friend, to utter the final benediction of farewell.

"But this much we know full well. When a man has faitbfully sought to do that which is right, and to improve the talents God gave him, for the benefit of his kind, there remainet about his memory a fame as well as a fragrance that no amount of success in the accumulation of the riches, so eagetly sought by most men of to-day, can ever give."

Judge Barrows will be best known to history in another department of judicial labor. The opinions of the court prepared by him will be his enduring monument, his best eulogy. Here, too, did he give most unsparing pains to the work belonging to his hands, really seeming not to possess the capacity to neglect anything. His quiet energy and perseverance, a machinery that worked noiselessly and without friction or chafe, conquered all tasks. He thoroughly investigated all questions, both of law and fact, whether pertaining to cases in the first instance assigned to him, or to cases previously examined by other judges. His associates felt a relief of responsibility after his examinations, knowing that no fact, however blindly embraced in the record of the case, would escape his discovery, and that all questions involved had been exhaustively considered.

His opinions are models of literary neatness, clothed in chaste and classical expression, finely finished, scholarly productions. In what he spoke as well as in what he wrote there was good style and taste. His opinions are notable for their ability, those of the greater insportance being replete with legal thought and learning, and strong and sound in argument. ### Our Selectmen Defended.

To the Editor of the Press: I am not used to writing newspaper articles, but after reading in No. 29 of your valuable paper what Mr. Stickney has to say in the Home Farm, about Selectmen, and knowing that there was no class of men so and mean but what there was sor deeming feature about them, I thought it was my duty, in my humble way, to defend our unfortunate selectmen. I do not propose to differ with Mr. Stick ney as to the origin of the board of select men, but I do differ with him as regards the qualifications of these men and I think the people are to be congratulated that they are isually so fortunate in the selections they make at their annual town meeting, not only in the choice of selectmen, but of all their town officers. Of course there are mistakes made, and a few of these mistakes having come under the observation of Mr. Stickney, he has jumped at conclusions and gone into print declaring that most of the officers chester at our town meetings are not such men as en at our town meetings are not such men as should occupy such positions. Mr. Stickney, I beg to differ with you on this question, and say that most of such men chosen are the very best men in the towns in which they reside, and that very few of the class you mention ever find a place on a board of selectmen.

"How do you expect to become a duchess, my child?"

Have you a bitter taste in the mouth? Dr Soule's Pills are just the thing to relieve it. "No," said a bankrupt merchant, sadly, "advertising doesn't pay. I tried it just before I failed, so I know what I'm talking about."
"What newspapers did you advertise in?"
"Not any newspaper. I pasted 500 dodgers on a barn just out of town, and I'm a sinner if a wind storm that same night didn't scatter that barn over a ten acre cow pasture. Don't talk to me about advertising."

A Novel Experiment.

A hovel Experiment.

About a year ago a common fodder plant, tasteless as wood, was accidently found to have a most remarkable sustaining power after hard labor, either mental or physical, acting on the nerves like a food. Two hundred and seventy girls, who were engaged at piece-work in a large establishment in New York, conceived the idea of buying a large amount of the manufacturer at the wholesale price and take it constantly. At the end of six months they found its support had made it possible to do almost double the amount of work by giving increased strength, and preventing overwork from compelling them to lose time by resulting illness. If all classes of people were as shrewd as these girls, whose necessities drove them to the experiment, it would improve things very much. The plant FOR THE WEEK ENDING, July 30.

A LITTLE SUFFERER Cleansed, Purified, and Beautified by

the Cuticura Remedies.

It affords me pleasure to give you this report of the cure of our little grandchild by your Cuticura Remedies. When six months old his left hand began to swell and had every appearance of a large boil. We poulticed it, but all to no purpose. About five months after it became a running sore. Soon other sores formed. He then had two of them on each hand, and as his blood became more and more impure it took less time for them to break out. A sore came on the chin, beneath the under lip, which was very offensive. His head was one solid seab, discharging a great deal. This was his condition at twenty-two months old, when I undertook the care of him, his mother having died when he was a little more than a year old, of consumption (scrofula of course). He could walk a little, but could not get up if he fell down, and could not move when in bed, having no use of his hands. I immediately commenced with the Cuticura Remedies, using the Cuticura and Cuticura Soap freely, and when he had taken one bottle of the Cuticura Resolvent, his head was completely cured, and he was improved in every way. We were very much encouraged, and continued the use of the Remedies for a year and half. One sore after another headed, a bony matter forming in each one of these five deep ones just before healing, which would finally grow loose and were taken out; then they would heal rapidly. One of these ugly bone formations I preserved. After taking a dozen and a half bottles he was completely cured, and is now, at the age of six years, a strong and healthy child. The scars on his hands must always remain; his hands are strong, though we once feared he would never be able to use them. All that physicians did for him did him no good. All who saw the child before using the Cuticura Resolvent, file. Message of six years, a strong and healthy child.
