Biographical Sketch

Frances "Frannie" Peabody (née Wilson) was born April 18, 1903, in Washington, D.C. From a young age, she recalled her mother's encouragement of women's engagement with social issues. Early in her life, her father, a Harvard trained lawyer, moved the family to New Mexico, which at the time was a U.S. territory. There she passed her adolescence. She attended boarding school for three years before going to Smith College, from which she graduated in 1925.

After college, Peabody worked briefly at a Macy's department store in New York City. She then married childhood friend Millard S. Peabody, and together they had five children. In the late 1920s, the family moved to Boston, MA, where Millard Peabody worked for E.E. Taylor Shoe Company. When the company relocated to Portland, ME, in 1951, the Peabodys moved with it.

In Portland, Peabody involved herself with historical preservation, helping to found Greater Portland Landmarks. From 1964-1968, she served as president of the National Society of Colonial Dames, the organization responsible for running the historic Tate House in Portland's Stroudwater area. Peabody also devoted attention to Sweetser Children's Home of Maine.

Her grandson's death in 1984 sparked Peabody's interest in HIV/AIDS-related activism. She joined an AIDS support group and worked to establish Maine's first AIDS telephone hotline. By 1986, she and others founded The AIDS Project (TAP, 1986-2002), which grew into Maine's largest agency serving people with HIV/AIDS through prevention education and health and support services.

Peabody, seeing a need for home-like hospice care for HIV/AIDS patients, raised money and support enough to open Peabody House, a renovated, three-story residence in Portland, in 1995. Through a combination of professional and volunteer support, Peabody House strove to provide holistic care, housing, education, and support services to those in the advanced stages of AIDS. It was the only residential care facility people with AIDS in Maine.

In 2002, TAP and Peabody House merged to form the Frannie Peabody Center. According to the Center, they “promote awareness and risk-reduction through programs that provide prevention education, outreach, and anonymous HIV testing services.” They also address needs of individuals through “case management, support services, and housing assistance.”

Frances Peabody died on July 2, 2001, at the age of 98. Throughout her time as an AIDS activist, she participated in many community events, including Portland's Gay Pride Parade, and spoke in venues around Maine. She earned renowned in the state and nationally for her work and received many awards for leadership and distinguished public service.

In addition to the Frances Peabody Papers, the University of Southern Maine Special Collections also houses the [William] Barry- [Frances]Peabody Papers, which contain research materials gathered for the writing of the book, "The AIDS Project : a history." Other institutions holding papers of Frances Peabody include Greater Portland Landmarks, Maine Historical Society, University of New England, and the Library of Congress.

Description of the Collection

The Frances Peabody Papers contains the personal accumulation of Peabody's personal papers and materials primarily related to her work with The AIDS Project (TAP) and Peabody House, along with numerous subject files concerning HIV/AIDS. Subseries appearing in the collection include Correspondence, Publications, Boards, Committees, Financial Records, Events, Public Relations, and Policies. The bulk of the material dates from the 1980s and the 1990s.

The Papers is divided into four series:

Series 1. Personal Papers, 1973-2002, undated:

The first series is divided into six subseries. Materials include original letters, photographs of Peabody, copies of speeches, honorary diplomas and awards, and many articles and clippings. Some materials have Oversize location designations.

Series 2. The AIDS Project (TAP), 1985-1998, undated:

The second series contains files pertaining to The AIDS Project. Materials include meeting minutes, committee notes, budget and financial records, press releases, event paraphernalia, proofs of TAP's published book, and noteworthy video recordings of Peabody's 95th birthday party and an autobiographical interview.

Series 3. Peabody House, 1993-1998, undated:

The third series contains materials pertinent to Peabody House, a Portland hospice facility for AIDS patients. Included are committee meeting minutes, mission statements, job descriptions, correspondence, press releases, and articles and clippings.

Series 4. Oversize

This series contains materials too large or bulky to fit into regular boxes. Listed within their regular series, they are included here to give their physical location.
