

Contributors

Ulf Jonas Björk, Ph.D., is Professor of Journalism at Indiana University Purdue University in Indianapolis, where he teaches journalism history and media law. He has a long-standing interest in the immigrant press in America and has published several articles and book chapters on that topic, which was also the subject of his dissertation. He can be reached at bjork@iupui.edu.

Erik Hieta, born and raised in the San Francisco Bay Area, completed an undergraduate degree in history at the University of California, Berkeley, and a Ph.D. in history at the University of California, Davis, with a designated emphasis in Native American Studies. With his grandparents being from Finland, he took advantage of an opportunity to conduct academic research in Finland while on a Fulbright scholarship. His research interests include immigration, decolonization, and changing transnational ethnic and indigenous identities. He currently lives and works in Finland. He can be reached at erik.hieta@gmail.com.

Junghyun Hwang received her Ph.D. in American Literature and Cultural Studies from University of California, San Diego. Her research interests include transnational Asian/American studies, United States-Korea comparative cold war studies, and American literary/cultural studies. Hwang's scholarly articles have been published in the United States and Europe as well as in Korea, including "From the End of History to Nostalgia: The Manchurian Candidate, Then and Now," The Journal of Transnational American Studies, 2010, and "'I've Got a Hunch We're Going Around in Circles': Exceptions to American Exceptionalism in Hollywood Korean War Films," American Studies in Scandinavia, 2017. She can be reached at junghyunhwang@gmail.com.

Mikkel Jensen holds an MA in English and History and teaches at the Department of Culture and Global Studies at Aalborg University, Denmark. He recently finished his PhD dissertation on David Simon's television series: The Corner, The Wire, Treme, Show Me a Hero, and The Deuce. Before his employment at Aalborg University, Jensen worked as an upper-secondary school teacher. His articles have appeared in Academic Quarter, Culture Unbound, The European Journal of American Studies, The Explicator, The Irish Journal of American Studies, and Series – International Journal of Television Serial Narratives. He can be reached at mjensen@cgs.aau.dk.

Tao Zhang earned his doctoral degree in U.S. history at Peking University, China, in 2000. He has been affiliated with Sichuan International Studies University (SISU) in Chongqing, China, ever since and is now the director and professor of American Studies Center at SISU. His research specialty is the history of Chinese Americans and Sino-American cultural interactions. He has published five book-length monographs and over forty scholarly essays in both international and Chinese journals. He can be reached at mizzouzhang@aliyun.com.