by Bridget Ahern

'Dawn of the Decade' is this year's theme for Winona State University's Homecoming. Festivities will commence the weekend of Oct. 3 and 4.

Preliminary elections for Homecoming King and Queen were held Monday, Sept. 23. In the preliminary elections, the number of candidates were reduced to five king candidates and five queen candidates. The final election will be held Oct. 1 at 8 a.m. The coronation will be Oct. 2 in the Performing Arts Center on campus. Following the coronation, there will be a private reception in the Alumni Lounge for all the candidates for King and Queen.

The Homecoming Parade will begin at 10 a.m. Sat., Oct. 4, from the corner of Huff and Second streets.

Floats participating in the parade will be representing various groups from Winona State. Cash prizes of $100 will go to the best float, $75 to first runner up and $25 to second runner up. Trophies will be awarded as well.

The Homecoming dance is scheduled for Friday, Oct. 3 in Old Memorial gymnasium. The band that will perform at the dance will be Sagebrush.

Half-time entertainment will be provided by the WSU Band, seven local high school bands, and a presentation of the winning floats.

Warrior Coach Myron Smith is confident about the Homecoming game against Moorhead State because of the victory Winona had over Bemidji State last weekend. The victory was the first win on the field since Smith was appointed coach in 1978.

The Warriors should have a winning combination with spirits high for the Homecoming game and the experience of a victory under their belts.

Student attendance is being predicted to be up for the events of this year's Homecoming. The student's enthusiasm has shown greater interest this year than in previous years.

Johnny Holm benefit concert rocks Homecoming weekend

by Kathy Johnson

Johnny Holm is back!

Holm and his band will be coming to Winona this Saturday for a Homecoming Benefit Concert at the Mississippi Queen. The event is sponsored by the Winona State University Alumni Society in cooperation with the Mississippi Queen Inc.

According to Vice President of University Relations, Harry Gianneschi, all proceeds for the concert will go to the WSU Annual Fund Campaign. These funds are used to support such programs as: Honors Program; scholarships; National History Day; Honors Band Weekend; faculty travel; and many more. Gianneschi said, "All the funds will be coming back to the students indirectly."

Each year funds are solicited from over 150 local businesses during the Fund Campaign. This year, however, along with the money raised, the University Relations office was offered a night at the Mississippi Queen by owner Bill Gaffney. Gianneschi chose Homecoming night, Oct. 4, appropriately. This will not only serve as an entertaining fund-raising activity, but also fit in well with the Homecoming festivities.

Cover charge for this event will be $2.50, all of which will go to the University. Approximately 1000 people are expected to attend, and Gianneschi hopes to raise over $2500.

For those of you who are not familiar with the Johnny Holm Band, it is a six-piece group out of Grand Forks, N.D. known for their foot-stompin', hand-clappin' times here in Winona.

They made their first appearance in Winona about six years ago. Gaffney stated that Mississippi Queen was the first club Johnny Holm played in and calls this his "favorite club." Up until then, he had run the barroom circuit.

Since then, Johnny Holm has expanded to a four-state area. And whenever at Mississippi Queen, he "fills it to the brim," according to Gaffney. "I've known people that have driven 150 miles to see them."

The band is probably best known for their hit single, "Lightning Bars Blues." They have also released three albums, containing a variety of music.

For anyone looking for an evening of entertainment, the Mississippi Queen is the place to be Sat. night. There couldn't be a better way to support your school.

Johnny Holm, constantly a big draw at Winona's Mississippi Queen, will appear this Saturday in a benefit concert for Winona State. The event is sponsored by the WSU Alumni Society in cooperation with the MQ.

Ex-student returns as dorm director

by Sharon Steinhoff

Who would leave a steady job after four years of college and go back to school to supervise nearly 200 kids struggling through the ups and downs of college life just two months before his wedding? Richards Hall's new dorm director, Mike Kruempel, for one.

Kruempel studied for four years at Winona State University and graduated in 1979 with a degree in business. He accepted a job with Perkins restaurant in Rochester, and had been employed there until his move back to Winona to apply for the job of dorm director.

"I like working with people and I like the management-type position," Kruempel said. He said he became interested in becoming a dorm director through a friend, Scott Peak. Peak is currently in his second year as dorm director of Lucas-Prentiss Halls. He is also a former employee of Perkins in Rochester.

Kreumpel, a half-time student, half-time dorm director, is now working toward a degree in chemical engineering. He will spend two years studying at WSU, then go on to complete his studies elsewhere.

"With a chemical engineering degree, you can go anywhere from the oil industry to the fertilizer industry," said Kruempel.

When asked about his duties as a hall director, Kruempel said it takes responsibility and common sense. "There aren't a lot of big problems, just a few little ones," he added.

The director mentioned that he was not present in the building with Richards Hall received a bomb threat two weeks ago, but he said he was impressed by the actions of the RAs. "I'm still trying to learn this job, and the RAs have been a big help," Kruempel remarked.

Both Kruempel and the RAs will be busy with the many improvements for Richards Hall. The director spoke of getting some of the rooms and dorms painted, putting murals on the walls of the residence halls, and restoring the basement lounge. In addition, maintenance crews are currently refurbishing the old WSU-

Tri-College begins faculty program

by Kim Skorlinski

Through faculty development, Winona's three institutions continue to strive for cooperation and improvement.

The Tri-College/University Program, which formally began in 1971 between Winona State University (WSU), College of St. Teresa (CST), and St. Mary's College (SMC), takes another step towards expansion through the Faculty Development Program.

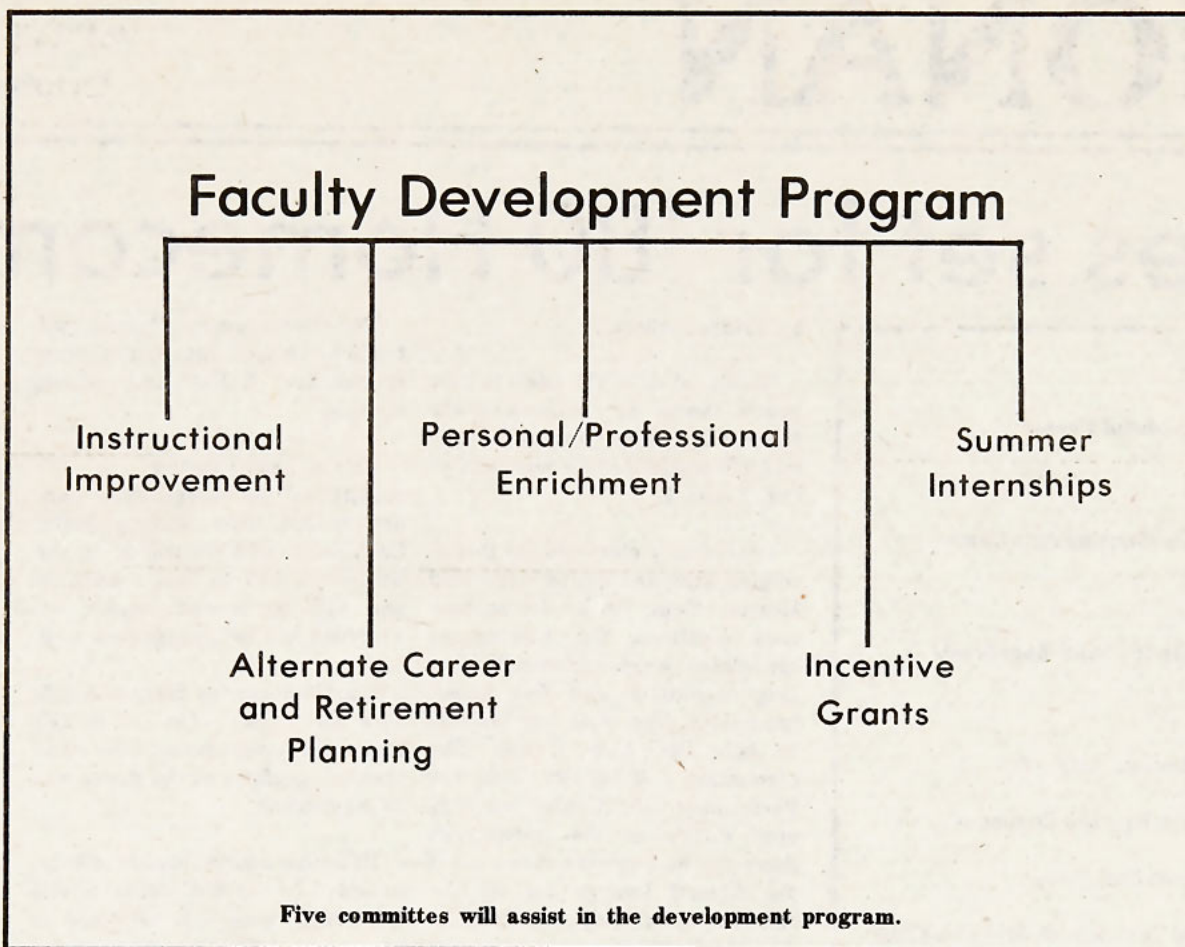

All three institutions will be participating in the new program, which will be formally announced Oct. 13, said Dr. Wesley Matson, Tri-College coordinator at WSU.

A grant request was written and submitted last spring by the three vice presidents of Academic Affairs to the Northwest Area Foundation for funding purposes.

An $88,000 grant was then approved and will be used over the next three years, 1980-83, "to promote and maintain faculty vitality," as stated in the pamphlet titled Faculty Development Program. After three years, another request can be made for additional funding to continue development, said Sister Johanna Orlett, program director.

The organization of the program includes five committees to assist the developmental activities which are funded. Each committee will consist of three members, one from each institution, and they will serve with Sister Orlett as the coordinators for the program.

The five committees are: A) Instructional Improvement, B) Alternate Career and Retirement Planning, C) Professional and Personal Enrichment, D) Incentive Grants, and E) Summer Interncriteria by which projects will be judged, and notifies recipients of awards," stated in the faculty development pamphlet.

Summer Internships, Committee E, coordinates internship programs for college faculty. The internships are suggested for those who want to explore alternate careers, expand in specialty areas, or simply broaden their horizons. Faculty are encouraged to offer suggestions and assist in arranging the programs.

Ongoing internal and external evaluations of the entire development program will be conducted by the Tri-College coordinators and the program director.

Sister Orlett received the position of program director after an "invitation" from the vice presidents of Academic Affairs. They are: Sheila Kaplan (WSU), Richard Weiland (CST), and John Johnson (SMC).

Teaching faculty improvement activities, coordinating needs assessments, and helping to acquire incentive grants is how Sister Orlett described her duties and responsibilities within the development program.

Sister Orlett will also coordinate meetings, publish a newsletter on the program's progress which includes soliciting guest articles.

"I am not a funder," said the program director. The funding recommendation came from the incentive grant request, she added, and final approval came from the academic vice presidents.

A reception for all faculty from the three institutions is scheduled Oct. 13, 4:30-6 p.m. in the President's Room of the SMC Student Center.

Instructional Improvement, Committee A, is broken down into Structural Activities and Individually Designed Projects.

Teaching improvement service and a colleague consultant program along with faculty designing of "their own plans for improving their teaching performance" are part of this committee, according to the pamphlet.

Alternate Career and Retirement Planning, Committee B, deals with those faculty members who may be considering alternate or retirement careers.

A variety of services can be used to assess personal resources and explore numerous career options. Services such as career interest/ aptitude tests to clarify "Who am I," and support workshops in the areas of self-marketing, general adult development, and professional "burn-out" can be provided.

Personal and Professional Enrichment, Committee C, is designed to support faculty members who will serve their institutions for a prolonged period of time. Included in this committee are opportunities for self-assessment and consultation to assist the matching of individual projects with long-range needs of the institution. Also, funding is available for enrichment projects relating to areas of expertise together with support workshops in response to faculty interest.

Incentive Grants, Committee D, consists of the three Tri-College coordinators, Matson, Sister Fidelis Logan (CST), and Dr. Michael Flanagan (SMC).

The coordinators will review proposals for funding of group and individual projects keeping in the primary goal of "faculty vitality."

Committee D "publishes procedures and schedules for submission of proposals, develops the list of

New Minister sees plenty in faith, life

by Dee Dee Kalish

The college community sees many faces come and go. With the sadness of seeing friends go comes the joy of meeting fresh faces with new ideas. Winona State's United Campus Ministry has seen both the going of an old friend, Pat Russell who made Winona his home for 4 1/2 years, and the coming of Linda Kuhn, the new UCM minister this year.

Rev. Kuhn was ordained in the United Presbyterian Church last year after completing her third year at Drew Theological School in New Jersey. Before attending the seminary she completed 4 years at Carroll College in Wisconsin, where she double-majored in social work and religion. While attending Carroll College she tested the idea of becoming a minister, but said, "I wasn't sure it was what I wanted. Ministry happens in a lot of different situations. You don't have to be ordained to minister. My major concerns have always been with people. I ask them what they put their trust in. What are their values?"

While attending Drew Linda took two years off to get practical experience as campus minister at the University of Ill., Urbana-Champaign. She has also spent time working at a Presbyterian camp in Michigan and at the Colorado Indian Reservation in Parker, Arizona. Linda said, "I found the Indian Reservation eye-opening. I saw a lot of despair, but there was also a lot going on."

Although ordained in the United Presbyterian Church, Linda considers herself ecumenical. "By this, I mean that I look for the similarities. Christianity in the churches is going through a dark time. I'm a little frightened about those highly conservative and moralistic Christians. I keep getting an Us against Them feeling. There's a lot more to faith and life than that..."

For her first few months here, Rev. Kuhn plans to spend time getting to know the students, the community and the University. Specific activities include fellowship picnics, forming a women's group, working on hunger issues, innovative worship activities and in the near future the United Campus Ministry is planning a retreat. The subject of the retreat is "Faith and Doubt." Linda feels that "they don't necessarily have to be the antithesis of one another. Doubt is part of responsible believing."

The UCM is also planning a retreat on the topic of "Clowning." One of the purposes of this retreat is to work on communication skills. Linda says "I guess in a sense we're all God's fools in the world. The retreat will hopefully help us to have a sense of vision and hope, and a chance to celebrate our faith in the midst of a seemingly chaotic world."

According to Linda, the purpose of sponsoring activities is to provide a setting for students to do things they would normally do. "It's like being a catalyst. Although we (all the campus ministries) try to sponsor activities that will appeal to most students, we undoubtedly will never reach those students who are afraid we are trying to 'convert' them. We can only sponsor the activities—students need to take the initiative to participate."

When asked about the novelty of being a woman minister Linda answered "In a way it's like being a woman in any traditionally man's field. People don't always give you credit. I still have to work at proving myself. Men in untraditional fields, like male nurses, go through the same thing. When I was ordained, a good friend who was also a woman wouldn't even come to my ordination."

"Many people are thrilled, but then there are those who don't care. Some people will come in to talk just because I am a woman. In a way a woman is more natural for this position, after all the traditional roles of mother, listener, advisor and confidant. A minister at times does all of these."

Linda feels, "At times I let my job define me. I have to remember to define myself." Included in her list of hobbies and other interests are an aerobic dance class at the YWCA, international folk dancing at the Polish museum in Winona, science fiction, backpacking, canoeing, and camping. She also enjoys weaving, and trying her hand at creative writing.

Along with the other campus ministers, Linda feels that she needs to become as visible and accessible as possible. She plans to attend activities other than UCM's, and welcomes students to visit her during her office hours (the ministry office is located in the Student Affairs office in Kryzsko Commons) on Thursday and Friday mornings, or to call her at her home in the United Campus Ministry building located on Johnson Street across from the library).

bookstore, better known to Richards residents as the Barracks.

Kruempel cites the interaction with the students as the most enjoyable part of his job. With more sophomores and freshmen in the dorm than before, he anticipates having many students coming to him to talk over their problems.

In addition to the pressures and new responsibilities of being a hall director, Kruempel is also occupied with thoughts of his upcoming wedding. He will be marrying Laurie Boigtlander, a senior elementary education major at WSU, in November.

WSU Homecoming looking better

Once again, Winona State University will celebrate Homecoming. Hopefully, and quite possibly, this may be the best year for festivities WSU has seen for a very long time.

The whole attitude surrounding the events highlighting Homecoming this year seems to be looking up from the way it has in the recent past, and the general morale is up. The planning stages of Homecoming '80 have gone through many steps in order to insure that everyone has something to participate in and look forward to.

The co-ed flag football program has received a very enthusiastic greeting from many students, and from many more who will enjoy being spectators of the games.

Coronation will begin at 8 p.m. in the PAC on Thursday night, and hopefully the attendance will be much better than in past ceremonies.

Friday evening, the band Stagebrush will highlight a dance in the Old Memorial gymnasium.

The WSU Alumni Society deserves a big hand this year for the work they have/will be doing to promote and sponsor many of the various activities that will be incorporated into the Homecoming weekend. They are even sponsoring a tailgate party on Saturday before the Winona State Warrior - Moorhead State game right outside the stadium gates.

Also included on the Alumni Society schedule is a benefit dance at the M.Q. featuring non other than the Johnny Holm Band. Anyone who wants to donate their cover charge to a good cause should be there. All proceeds will go to WSU - at a time we really need it! Johnny Holm is a very professional and exciting performer, and it will be a good time.

Now, we get to one of the key events of the Homecoming tradition - the football game. Here's where we will be able to see for ourselves if the morale at WSU is on the upswing. The Warriors are coming home after two road wins, and are faced with a nationally ranked Moorhead club. Win or lose, the team should be recognized.

At any rate, let's not make this year's Homecoming become "just another Homecoming." In fact, in these times of budget cuts and tuition increases, we all need something to take our minds away from WSU's academic life.

Congrats to Kaplan

The WINONAN would like to congratulate Dr. Sheila Kaplan on her newly-appointed position as Vice-Chancellor of the Minnesota State University Board. Kaplan was named to the position on Monday, and will replace Emily Hannah, who resigned to become Chancellor at the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire.

Action a must for budget increases

Dear Editor:

I was hoping my first letter to the Winonan could be a more positive one. Unfortunately, I'm a college student just as you and during the budget discussion periods it seems students usually don't have much to celebrate about. This year, once again, the budget seems to be moving in the same dismal direction of increases.

As I'm sure most Minnesotans realize, the state is/was faced with $189 million shortfall for the second year of the current biennium. Because of this shortfall, agencies were required to cut various percentages of their budgets. The state university system was required to cut 5.3 percent of its budget. This 5.3 percent was then divided proportionately among the seven schools within the state university system. WSU was originally supposed to cut $385,000, and because of various reallocation formulas within the system, wound up needing to cut $286,055.

These budget cuts come from various places such as classified and unclassified personnel, rentals, repair and betterment, advertising, printing and binding and a general other saving category. Originally, students were to have picked up around $30,000 through student activity funds and myself along with some other students agreed that we are willing to do this for this year only.

On September 18, the WSU Student Senate learned that on October 14 in Bemidji, serious discussion of a tuition surcharge of one dollar per credit will take place, to be implemented this winter quarter. Well for you who can afford that, I envy you. But for those of you like me that are out-of-state students already paying $24.50 a credit hour, I'm requesting that you write and/or call the State University Board members, specifically Mrs. Alice Keller, our Winona State University Board representative. Also, calls or letters to Chancellor Garry Hayes and our own President Hanson may be warranted. Students must express their concerns about this proposal for a tuition surcharge. I think I speak for a large number of students who cannot possibly afford any more increases.

To top this all off, I received a letter with the final budget recommendations and those student activity monies will still be used to cover various cuts. Obviously, it appears that attempts will be made to cut our student activity fund money and tack on a surcharge.

Students, this is an opportunity to voice our concern on something that affects all, whether we're an undergraduate, a graduate, a freshman, or an upperclassman. Please take a few minutes and 15 cents to drop a line to our state Board Representative here in Winona.

I'm counting on WSU to provide the opposition that is so desperately needed to influence the State University Board vote on this consideration of a surcharge. Please help yourself out and write or call today. Phone numbers and addresses are available in the Student Senate office.

Old folks need new friends

Dear Editor:

Are you in need of a friend? There are some people who would love to share some time with you. In fact, some of them are just waiting for someone like you to come along. They are not college age and you probably won't find them at any of our social events, nor at any of the downtown spots we might be frequenting. That's kind of a shame really, because it means we often forget that these folks exist. If you haven't guessed what this article is about, it's about old people...and us.

Whether recognized or shut out, old folks are right around the corner in more ways than one. We may not recognize it, but they are worth our time. Each and every one has something to teach us. They once were young and spry, too, and they have seen change that we know nothing about. Unfortunately, their aliveness, much less their wisdom, often goes unnoticed. What a waste of potential beauty.

The elderly are really much like the prophets of the Bible and of history. But like Jeremiah, Isaiah, and those other blokes, nobody feels the need or the urge to listen or look. Older people, because of their exclusion from the "Pepsi generation," are no longer even taken seriously. It's shameful, but many do not even feel comfortable with anyone under 30. They are alienated. Perhaps, so are we.

We can work to change that. The most simple way is to talk to the next older person you see on the street. Walk with them a while and find out what it is to walk in their shoes.

Through a program on campus, one can be introduced to an older person in the community. Hopefully, a friendship might happen and two people can learn and grow through each other. More information on this "Friendly Visitor-Program" can be obtained through Brian at 452-1738.

Let's take a look at our attitudes about older people. Listen to these

MONK

On the Other Hand

by John Gabbert

On opposite hands, really, there are two new groups on the WSU campus this fall. The most obvious, ROTC, the Reserve Officers Training Corps, now holds its classes here rather than having its students drive to UW/LaCrosse. The other is a non-group as yet, a few unrecognizable 18 and 19-year old males who did not register with the Selective Service System this past July.

These two groups represent the two poles of a question that will probably receive renewed attention following the Nov. 4 election. The present strife between Iran and Iraq means that whoever is leading this nation on January 20 next year will face great pressure to take registration to its logical conclusion—adraft.

If a draft occurs without including women, it will certainly be challenged on the basis of sex discrimination. Federal court decisions are running consistently in favor of equality for women. That implies a draft of women eventually. The female draft does not necessarily mean that women will be dying in desert ambushes. It does mean that women, as well as men, ages 18 to 26, may have to give two years of their lives to the military.

Two years given in defense of one's own neighborhood is an entirely different matter than two years given to perpetuate America's present craving for oil.

So before Uncle Sam beckons in earnest, take time to find out just what interests tend to start wars and for what reasons. Be skeptical, look at both ends of the bullet, both sides of the gasoline pump and both faces of the escalating nuclear arms race. Ask what the alternatives to military service are. Learn about your rights under our legal system. Find out about Viet Nam and why WSU students before you didn't want to go.

And, if you didn't register this summer and are wishing you did or you did register and are wondering what's next, call the Minnesota Civil Liberties Union in Minneapolis, 612/378-9392. Better informed than interred.

WSU's SCAC organization seeks student help

by Becky McConnell

The Social Cultural Activities Committee (SCAC) is a student-run and student-funded organization whose goal is to provide students with the environment they want.

Concerts, lectures, theatre productions, operas, some movies, visual art exhibits, and a writer's exchange program are just some of the things that SCAC provides for Winona State students. Also, other organizations can come and ask SCAC for help to fund other activities, such as Homecoming.

SCAC is headed by chairperson Kristie Clausen and advised by Scott Peak and Dr. Lois Bueler.

The total number of members in SCAC is seven, plus two advisors. According to Peak, "SCAC's devoted members don't get the recognition they deserve."

SCAC, Peak says, is looking for a little help from WSU students. They need some feedback on the things they sponsor and also some more active members.

SCAC's office is in Kryzsko Commons, Student Affairs, Room 122.

Senate releases surcharge figures

Additional information has been received from the WSU's Student Senate concerning a proposed tuition surcharge.

According to a release, factors that will influence any surcharge include:

- tuition has increased seven percent for the 1980-81 school year.
- admission prices for athletic events have increased.
- there was an approximate 10 percent increase in student activity fees for 1980-81.
- The decision of whether or not there will be a surcharge and how much it would be will be discussed at a meeting of the State University Board in Bemidji on October 14.
- textbook costs have increased

WSU foreign students listed

The Foreign Student Advisor's Office has supplied a list of new and transfer foreign students. They are:

Mohammed Abedljawad, Saudi Arabia; Yahia Abdul-Rahim, Khalid Jarrad, and Fouad Abboud, Jordan; Kaoru Akiyama, Japan; Mehdi Attardezfuli, Mohammed Chitsaz and Mehrdad Emami, Iran; Debashi Chakraborty, India; Yin Fun Chu, Thailand; Chassan Forghani and Mohamed Shrif, Libya;

Sameer Habayed, Rakad Kablaoui, Mohammed Tarkhan and Ala'a Abed, Kuwait; Yisa Jinadu, Charles Okagbue, John Oyedele and Sunday Udo, Nigeria; Ahmad Karim and Khalid Haidari, Lebanon; Marco Lares, Venezuela; Mahmoud Mohamed-Ali, Egypt;

Francis Njie, Cameroon; Sergio Oliden, Peru; Silvia Ponce, Columbia; Reidar Saunes, Norway; Maureen Saviye, Zambia; and, Bung Hon (William) Tok, Malaysia.

The advisor's office would like it known that they welcome all returning foreign students, as well as the new members of their college community.

'Pow Wow' celel

"Oh give me a home where the buffalo roam," says the old folk song. WSU Sociology Professor Walter Funmaker admits, "there's no way we can go back to that."

are all related to these themes, and the flag ceremony at the beginning and end of each day is symbolic again of their heritage and a sign of manhood and maturity.

Funmaker does, in keeping with Indian tradition, attend two Pow Wows each summer: on Memorial and Labor Day weekends at Black River Falls, Wisc., which is about 60 miles east of Winona.

"In the past, the Indian looked upon the early immigrants as a higher being, a spirit almost. But the Indian soon learned the differences between the white man's ways and their ways," he said. The American Government has always hoped all people would assimilate into one type of culture: but, "it hasn't worked," he said. "The Indian culture is conservation oriented, ... Kinship is the overriding factor, rather than politics, religion, or economics. That's the big difference between our western civilization and the Indians; kinship hasn't been broken."

Funmaker, a Winnebago Indian and a member of the Bear Clan, sees a bright future for the Indian people. "The Indian has already gone through his nightmare," he said. He feels the dominant society is beginning to decline, so the Winnebago can pursue his destiny, whatever that is — a positive view of humanity.

"The Pow Wow," according to Funmaker, "is a reaffirmation of man as a social animal, and a celebration of their humanness, or humanity. Symbolically, the Pow Wow is also a statement of their Indianness." The songs and dances

In a closing moment, Funmaker added, "the kinship factor can't be overlooked, the biological and social aspect needs to be looked at further to understand the destiny of the Winnebago's and humanity in general."

Open modeling offered by ASA

by Carson Brooks

The Winona State University Art Students Alliance has scheduled events for the year to include nude-model drawing experience, presentations by local artists, and meetings with faculty and administration.

The drawing session, offered Tuesdays from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., is the beginning of the Art Students Alliance (ASA) new program and is open to any student for practice in drawing. Students attending the session will be charged about a dollar to pay the model, depending on how many attend, according to Leo Peck, program director of ASA.

In addition to the drawing session, ASA will have an artist giving a presentation of his or her work as part of the Tuesday evening program. Next Tuesday, an artist from the Winona area will be making a presentation.

At a recent meeting of the ASA, officers were selected for the year: Bruce Barker, president; Janis Martin, vice-president; Kim Lundberg, treasurer; Denise Stromberg, secretary; and Peck.

As program director, Peck is responsible for the presentation part of the meetings. The officers vote on who they would like to see give an art-related presentation; it is Peck's job to arrange for that artist's appearance. During the year he hopes to include artists from the WSU faculty, student body, and the Winona community.

"We hope to make this tri-college," explained Peck, "then we could swap artists between the three schools." Peck added that the WSU art department will continue to sponsor student art shows as has been done in the past.

While ASA has faculty advisors because it is supported by student activity fees, the students are not encouraged to attend departmental faculty meetings. "We want to provide a forum for building a sense of community rather than burdening the students with all of our paperwork," said Tom Sternal, chairman of the art department.

"We would rather get together to share our dreams and aspirations," Sternal added. The alternative was to set up an all-student, all-faculty art department meeting at a time when everyone will be able to attend.

"Students will be excused from classes so that everyone's grievances, suggestions and feedback can be heard," explained Bruce Barker. This first combination meeting will be held on Tuesday, October 28, at 10 a.m. with the Dean of Arts and Humanities, Dr. Helen Popovich in attendance.

One of the larger ideas ASA is suggesting is a tri-college student exchange program. "Art students at Winona State live in Watkins Hall," added Barker, who feels this could provide a needed change.

The exchange program would give Winona State art students an opportunity to spend two or three days attending lectures and studio classes at either St. Mary's College or the College of St. Teresa. Barker went on to say that the student would be able to explore all the possibilities the other schools' art departments have to offer. Likewise, students from the other two colleges could spend an equal length of time in Winona State's art department.

"Our faculty is really excited about the idea," said Barker. "I hope we can set a precedent to keep this program going from year to year."

Another change ASA would like to see in the art department is in the established number of credits for each studio art class. "When the school changed their classes from three to four credits, the art department got left out," Peck

ASA program director Leo Peck said.

Art students are advised to take only two or three studio classes a quarter because of the large amount of outside time that is needed on projects. Barker claims that with an art class worth three credits, a full course load in the art department doesn't match the regular 16-credit quarter-load.

As a result of this, a revision in the requirements for a B.A. in Art may also be necessary. This will be discussed at the October 28 meeting.

St. Mary's displays photographs

by Vicki Koscianski

Saint Mary's College is currently playing host to a one-man exhibit of black and white photographs by Carl Chiarenza.

The exhibit opened Monday, September 15 in the College Center Gallery and will continue through October 15.

Chiarenza's career spans about 25 years. He is noted for his similarities to photographers Aaron Siskind, Harry Callahan and Minor White. He has had 20 one-man exhibitions and his work has been included in more than 100 group exhibitions in galleries and museums in the United States and Europe since 1960.

The current exhibit contains more than 60 black and white prints that depict the style and power of Chiarenza's work.

Most of the photographer's work in this selection was shot in the United States. Some of these show the same view taken at different times. For example, his series of seven photographs called "Somerville" were taken first in November 1975 and continued through February 1976.

Another feature of his photography is the use of close-ups. One of his earlier works from 1960, called "Honey Falls," is a close-up of ice on the front of a barn. "Michigan, 1958" is a close-up of a very white paint that has bubbled and is about to peel off a dark wall. Both pictures use a lot of contrast.

Not all of Chiarenza's work are so direct. He uses soft shades of gray to present his slightly out of focus picture entitled "Cambridge 19, 1974."

The photographer does not rely on close-ups to show his range of images. His series of pictures taken in White Sands provides us with an idea of his diversity. These pictures are landscapes. Other shots use a variety of shutter speeds.

Carroll T. Hartwell, the Curator of Photography of the Minneapolis Institute of Arts, states in a display at the exhibit, "To enter into these images is to participate in the artist's personal sense of wonder and discovery about how to find substance and significance in photographs."

He also says that photography can provide access to how a photographer sees and would like others to visualize his world. The photograph provides us with clues about the photographer and his own experiences.

Chiarenza is a man of experience. He is a noted photo-historian and many of his articles and reviews have appeared in publications including Afterimage, Contemporary Photographer, and Art Journal. He received his Ph.D. from Harvard University and now teaches at Boston University.

The exhibit was organized by the Minneapolis Institute of Arts. The Carl Siembab Gallery, Boston, has aided in the development of this exhibit through support and participation.

Selected photographs will be on view from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. weekdays and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on weekends.

'Unique' miniature art exhibit ends

by Kathy Johnson

As you entered Watkins Hall last month, you noticed something interesting and unique. On display in the gallery was a new form of art — "Inch Art."

"Inch Art" consists of over 300 pieces of art — including paintings, sculptures, woodwork and photographs — in a one inch format done by more than 100 artists.

This type of artwork is the first of its kind to be exhibited. According to the Minnesota Monthly magazine, "Inch Art" originated when the Rochester Art Center began coming up with ideas to attract people to an exhibit, "Impressions and You." The first idea was to display one million dollar bills, "just to show people what this amount looked like."

The funding of this idea was much too extravagant and the space needed to display it would have been enormous.

From that came the idea of stamping one million one inch squares with a dollar sign. This took care of the funding problem, but did not minimize significantly the amount of space needed.

But the novel idea of a one inch display stuck, and before long, the idea of an invitational amateur inch artwork show was spawned.

These one-inch sculptures by DuWayne LesPerance, La Crosse, Wis., were among artworks exhibited last month in Watkins Hall. (Photo by Yoshiko Ohkura)

Anyone submitting an inch of art was guaranteed a spot in the exhibit. Over 1000 local amateurs participated and the popularity of it brought about the notion of a professional show. And why not?

The size allows it to be easily transported.

Collan Kneale, an industrial engineer, designed a special display case. Since the tiny artworks require more lighting than conventional art, Kneale built a lighting system right into the display panels. When he was finished, each piece was displayed at eye-level, well-lit, and easily transportable.

The artists contributing to this exhibit come from as far north as Duluth, all the way down to Des Moines, Iowa. There is even a contributor from Winona, Ray Kiihne.

The curator of the show, Judith Onofrio, a Rochester artist, feels that there is a certain intimacy in the artwork because of the size. And because of the many pieces, people have to choose and sort what they're looking at or they may miss something.

The artists also have limitations. They must "think small." They have to adapt their materials to the format; paints must be thinned, yarns must be separated, and tweezers used. Artists must dig deeply into their imagination.

Some examples of the "Inch Art" include photographs reduced in size, tiny sculptures made out of candles, miniature drawings, and small tapestries.

"Inch Art" started out relatively light-hearted, but seems to have turned out to be something more important. It has stimulated artists to explore an area which they may not have otherwise delved.

This unique exhibition of "Inch Art" was brought to Winona State University through contributions by the Dayton-Hudson Corporation and IBM of Rochester. The show is funded to tour Minnesota and parts of Wisconsin, and plans to continue as long as funds and interest continue.

You still have to pay $6 or $7 for a new Cars or Jackson Browne album, but the list price on hundreds of LPs has been sliced to $5.98, meaning you can pick up the albums in stores for as little as $3.88 during sales.

Why?

The recession-plagued record industry is trying to recapture the impulse buyer.

For years, record stores benefited from the multiple-purchase syndrome: Customers went into stores for one album and ended up buying two, three, or more.

That practice slowed in recent years as LP prices went up as the economy went down. Record sales were down an estimated 19.1 million units in 1979 from a peak of 521.3 million units in 1978.

The new $5.98 line, introduced about a year ago by CBS Records, is designed to revitalize sales by making hundreds of older albums available at a price attractive enough to get buyers back in the habit of buying a second LP.

Other labels have followed the CBS lead. They include the Warner-Elektra-Atlantic complex, MCA, RCA, and Arista Records.

The number of titles on the new line is impressive. The CBS lineup includes two titles by Cheap Trick, two dozen by Miles Davis, five by Bob Dylan, four by Earth, Wind & Fire, four by Dan Fogelberg, three by Billy Joel, eight by Carole King and seven by Weather Report.

The Warner-Elektra-Atlantic group's batch includes albums by George Benson, Bad Company, the Doobie Brothers, the Doors, the Eagles, Genesis, Firefall, Emmy Lou Harris, Bette Midler, Joni Mitchell, Linda Ronstadt, Rod Stewart, Talking Heads, Yes, and Z.Z. Top.

Among the 80 MCA titles: five by Elton John, three by Olivia Newton-John, three by Lynyrd Skynyrd, five by Steely Dan and four by the Who.

RCA is offering LPs by Willie Nelson, Elvis Presley, and the Jefferson Starship. Albums by Herb Albert, Joe Cocker and Pablo Cruise also are available at the lowered price through its distribution ties with A&M.

MUSICAL NOTES: Sometime late last Wednesday or possibly Thursday morning the rock 'n' roll world lost one of its greatest drummers. John Bonham, who had been the backbone of Led Zeppelin since its formation in 1968, died at age 32. At the time that this column went to press the cause of death had not been determined, but it was known that Bonham died at the home of Led Zeppelin keyboardist/bassist John Paul Jones.

Bonham's death is as devastating a loss as was suffered by The Who in 1978 when they lost their great drummer, Keith Moon.

John "Bonzo" Bonham will long be remembered by many as the drummer of one of the greatest and most successful rock bands in history. Jimmy Page, Robert Plant and John Paul Jones may never find a replacement good or strong enough to carry the load that Bonzo carried for almost twelve years in Led Zeppelin.

Professor writes novel

by John Jaszewski

A five year dream may be coming true for Emilio DeGrazia. His first attempt at writing a novel was completed during the last week of August this year, and has been submitted for possible publication.

DeGrazia said that he has wanted to write a novel since about 1975, and was just waiting for the right plot to come along. That plot came along in 1978. DeGrazia started his novel in April of that year.

DeGrazia, a native of Dearborn, Mich. studied History and English at Albion College, a small liberal arts college in Southern Michigan, and then got his Masters and Doctor of Philosophy degrees in English from Ohio State University. Dr. De Grazia has taught in the English Department at Winona State University since 1969.

When asked if he would reveal the story line of his new novel, DeGrazia said, "Suffice it to say that the plot resembles the Howard Murder Case." (Donald Howard, a Winona businessman, was convicted in 1978 of hiring another man to murder his wife.) DeGrazia explained that he had been fairly close to that case because his wife, who is an attorney, represented one of the defendants in that case.

"I did all of my homework," DeGrazia said, "but I found that the facts got in the way." He said that he simply used the case as an excuse to write a book.

He emphasized that to submit a manuscript for consideration, is not to get it published. DeGrazia estimated his chances at getting published at just a little better than 1000-to-1. His chances are perhaps a little better than some other first time novelist because an editor from Simon and Schuster has shown some interest and is looking at the first draft now. DeGrazia will know in two or three months whether the publisher will ask for a second draft.

In the mean time DeGrazia is following his compulsion to write by starting preliminary work on a second novel. He said this will be a better story, more carefully constructed, and "a real work of art."

DeGrazia talked about the mechanics of writing, and said that for him it is difficult. He said that he tried to devote two hours daily to the book, and aimed for producing ten pages per week. He estimated the length of his book at about 450 manuscript pages and about 120,000 words. He said that a novel should be at least 100,000 words in length and a good novel should have at least one good theme, and will hopefully entertain.

DeGrazia compared the writing of a novel to a pregnant woman carrying a baby and quoted an unknown philosopher by saying, "Writing is easy, you just have to wait for the beads of blood to form."

Although this is DeGrazia's first novel, he has written for and been published by some small magazines and professional publications. He has written poetry, short stories and articles for these journals.

DeGrazia described the writing of this novel as a learning experience—learning how better to teach creative writing by engaging in it. He does not plan to stop teaching, calling it "the labor of my life," even if this and subsequent novels are critical and financial successes.

DeGrazia teaches many courses at WSU: English composition, approaches to the film, creative writing, to name a few, but his favorite is the course he teaches in literature...The British Romantics.

IRHC discusses issues, proposals in meetings

by Lisa Gillen

The Inter-Residence Hall Council (IRHC) discussed important topics concerning on-campus housing, Student Senate, Winona State University Homecoming, pizza sales, and committee reports in their last meeting on Sept. 22.

Fire alarms were discussed extensively. In the past two weeks, four false fire alarms have been set off in the dormitories. The IRHC is offering a $50 reward for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of anyone tampering with fire equipment. This year, the Housing Office of WSU is offering an additional $50. Tampering with fire equipment is also a federal offense warranting a $300 fine.

Fire alarms cause concern to resident assistants because the students are not responding to the alarms. This could become dangerous in a real fire situation.

Another important on-campus housing issue was whether or not to make Sheehan Hall a co-ed dormitory. Girls have the College of Saint Teresa to live at, but men must find off-campus living quarters. This is a major problem for the WSU Housing Office. There are many controversial items to be discussed on this subject, and nothing was finalized until it is discussed after the Off-Campus Housing Committee has met.

The last main point discussed was the vacation planned housing issue. In the past, the dorms have remained open for students who could not go home during Thanksgiving and spring breaks. This year, due to energy problems, only Richards Hall will remain open, at the cost of $7 per night and $22 per week. Each student must obtain permission from the person occupying that particular room and a signed agreement must be shown to the Housing Department.

Student Senate President Diane Smith was on hand to remind the floor representatives to announce on their respective floors the upcoming elections for Student Senate. The elections were held on Sept. 24 in the main cafeteria and the student Smog area.

Other upcoming Student Senate events are a tug-of-war contest on Sept. 28 by the pavillion at Lake Winona, the Senate Open House, which will be held on Oct. 1, and the Student Senate activities lined up for Homecoming Week.

Smith also stressed the issue introduced by WSU President Robert Hanson. This issue is a surcharge proposal of $1 per credit, beginning Winter quarter of 1980. This has become a very controversial issue. Students are being asked to pay more while student aid has been cut by $286,000. Smith and the Student Senate will be lobbying this action before the state board meeting in Duluth on Oct. 14.

Small committee reports were also given. These reports were from the Improvement and Betterment Committee, the Temporary Housing Committee, the Operation Identification Committee, and the Public Relations Committee.

Forum for candidates planned

by Brian Goergen

The Students for Political Action Association (SPAA) made some final plans on Sept. 23 for a "WSU Issues and Answers" forum involving candidates for the District 34B House and Senate seats.

Decided at the meeting of the SPAA was the format, length, time, and possible date of the forum.

Candidates Robert DuFresne, Tim Sherman, Pat Kronebusch, and Roger Laufenberger will be contacted and informed on the forum. According to Diane Smith, student-body president, all are expected to attend. She added that local radio station KWNO has agreed to carry the forum live.

The format of the program will include a five minute allotment for each candidate to make opening remarks, followed by two one-hour question and answer sessions. Candidates will first answer questions put to them by a panel on stage before fielding those from the audience.

Though tentative at this time, it was suggested by SPAA president, Nancy McCarthy, that the panel should include one representative from local business, area Chamber of Commerce, WSU faculty, a local radio station, a senior citizen's organization, and the WSU student body.

The forum will begin at 7:30 p.m. and run for about two and one half hours.

The date and location are also tentative but it was decided at the meeting that Oct. 22 would be presented to the candidates for their approval. If the PAC Recital Hall cannot be reserved, the forum will be held in the east cafeteria on the WSU campus.

According to Smith, the finalized time and location will appear in local newspapers before the event takes place.

Exchange Club presents travel series

The 21st Annual Exchange Club Travel and Adventure series will begin on Oct. 4 with the showing of Jim McDonald's Spain After Franco. After that there will be five more showings dealing respectively with France, Denmark, Malaya, the Badlands of South Dakota, and the final showing on Hawaii...

Tickets for adults are $12 for the six presentations and only $5 for children.

All presentations begin at 8:04 p.m. at the Jr. High Auditorium.

Tickets will be available beginning next September 22 at Ted Maier Drug and all Winona banks. Or from any Exchange Club member. Proceeds go to good local causes. The Fishing Pier on Huff St. and the new swinging benches in Lake Park are Exchange Club projects.

The WINONAN maintains complete coverage of all campus events.

Six new RA's added to dorms

by Sharon Steinhoff

Free room and board at college. Sounds tempting, doesn't it? However, there is quite a bit more involved with being a resident assistant (RA) than just free room and board.

In addition to the veteran RAs, there are 13 new RAs scattered throughout the six campus dorms. Each RA is in charge of one or two floors of a residence hall.

The selection of new RAs began last January when the housing training as RA assistants last spring.

This fall, the RAs and dorm directors of WSU traveled to Whispering Hills camp for a week-long session of training, problem solving and "ice breaking."

From there, the next step for the RAs was the WSU residence halls. Back in the dorms, they plunged into room check-ins, roommate assignments, and dorm office duty.

Morey-Shepard, Conway and floor, she also has 60 men under her charge. Drusch remarked that does not seem to matter to her, or the guys on her floor.

Drusch is an elementary education major and is also studying for a special learning disabilities minor. She is a senior this year, and hopes to student teach next fall.

In previous years, the third floor RA had been involved in SMEA and had been active as a freshman orientation team leader. "But this year," Drusch said, "just being an RA keeps me more than busy enough."

Drusch has scheduled many activities for her floor, including a hayride, an ice cream social, and a monthly birthday party.

Commented Drusch of her floor: "It's really a good floor this year. There's a lot of enthusiasm."

After graduation from WSU, the Morey-Shepard RA is considering student teaching in one of the English-speaking countries of Europe. Following her student teaching, Drusch hopes to become a private tutor.

Living below Drusch on the second floor of the Morey-Shepard Hall is RA Mary Falvey. Falvey is also a senior elementary education major, working toward an early childhood minor.

Like Drusch, Falvey also heads a co-ed floor. The men outnumber the women of second floor, two to one.

There was no question in Falvey's mind why she wanted to become an RA. "If I'm going to be a teacher, I want to learn how to be a leader and be responsible in something, because that's what my occupation is going to involve."

Falvey had lived off campus for two years of her college career, but she came back to the dorm. "I haven't had any problems yet. I thought it would be a challenge. It is even more than I thought," she laughed.

As a member of an intramural flag football team, a volleyball team and her floor soccer team, Falvey says heading activities is not new to her. Second floor Morey-Shepard has enjoyed a hot dog bash, a party at the lake, and a hayride.

Falvey's familiar face is also seen taking tickets in the campus cafeteria five hours a week.

A third elementary education major, who is also a new RA this year, is Sandy Witt. She heads 52 girls on first and second floors of Conway Hall. Witt is a junior with a special learning disabilities minor.

Witt got a taste of dorm leadership as an IRHC member last year. She enjoyed being involved with dorm activities and dorm government, so she decided to apply for an RA position.

The most difficult part of Witt's job, she said, is that her girls are split up between two floors and it is hard to get to know everyone on the different floors.

"It's hard for the girls on first floor because I live on second floor. But we've found ways to overcome that. We try to promote together-

Evicted nun seeks reinstatement

by Tim Connelly

If she could just get Bishop Lorrans Watters to visit with the Pope, former nun Lillian Kral believes, all her troubles would be over.

Kral, who prefers to be called Sister Elzear, was dismissed from the Franciscan Order and evicted from a Winona convent. Since February, she has been living in a car in the parking lot of the Sacred Heart Cathedral.

She has vowed not to leave the parked car until the Bishop agrees to ask the Pope to overturn a Catholic high court ruling dismissing her from the sisterhood.

Kral was dismissed in 1978 and the decision to expel her was upheld in January of this year by the Supreme Tribunal of the Apostolic Signatura in Rome.

Prior to her dismissal, Kral accused of being disruptive, disobedient and divisive while living in the religious community. She called the charges lies.

"There are crooks in the Vatican," she said, "I have found out how to correct it and the only way is if the Pope learns it through the media."

As evidence of the state of affairs in the Catholic hierarchy,

Lillian Kral, better known as Sister Elzear, has been living in a car in the parking lot of the Sacred Heart Cathedral since February awaiting word from the Pope on her dismissal from the sisterhood. (Photo by Brad Burch)

Kral said none of the letters she has sent the Pope were answered by him.

She received the last response from Rome in June. It was signed by the Vatican secretary of state, and indicated that the pope was praying for her. But, Kral doubts the pope received the message.

Kral said, "People want to know the truth." Why did my case end in gross miscarriage of justice. In Kral's mind, bureaucratic manipulation, as well as false charges from her fellow sisters are to blame.

Among numerous contentions, supported by pile after pile of church documents, Kral charges that she was denied legal representation at a second dismissal hearing in 1977; that the bishop was absent from the hearing; that she has not been given an unedited copy of the three-hour tape of that hearing; the tape, she said, will provide her salvation and that she was not informed of her first dismissal's invalidation until 1980.

In addition to seeking reinstatement, Kral wants the church to pay her relatives for expenses she incurred while living in Sleepy Eye, Minn., after her original dismissal, in 1976 until 1977. Although the first dismissal was changed to excommunication she was expelled from the order again in 1978.

The bishop said that Kral had been given the opportunity for various appeals and said he could not do anything further about the matter. A spokesman for the Rochester headquarters of the Sisters of St. Francis declined to comment on the case.

Two weeks ago, Kral received a letter from the bishop indicating that he had explored every alternative to help her and that he could not be responsible for her safety on church property any longer. The bishop encouraged Kral to accept the decision of the church concerning her dismissal.

Kral has left church property and parked her car on the street by the Pastoral Center.

Also, police gave her a ticket for obstructive vision, because of cardboard signs in the car window. Kral will go to trial Oct. 16 for refusing to pay the fine.

Kral believes she is waging a

PARENTS WEEKEND AT SMC

A series of intercollegiate athletic events, a photography exhibition, and an antique show will mark Parents' Weekend at Saint Mary's College Friday-Sunday, Oct. 3, 4, and 5.

There will be a volleyball match with Dr. Martin Luther College of New Ulm at 6:30 p.m. Friday and a round robin with Saint Mary's College, Winona State University, and Dr. Martin Luther beginning at 9 a.m. during Parents' Weekend.

Another highlight that will mark Saint Mary's College Parents' Weekend will be a photography exhibition. Photographs by Carl Chiarenza will be on display in the Center Gallery now through Oct. 15. The photographs will be available for viewing each day during regular gallery hours, 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday and 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. A special display, "Rugs and Other Weavings of the World," will be the theme of a display in the college's Fitzgerald Library lobby Saturday and Sunday.

On Sunday, an antique and collectibles show and sale will be held in the Hall of Fame Room of the College Center from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sponsored by SMC faculty, students, and administration, the show is free and open to the public. Especially for parents on Sunday will be a continental breakfast with morning papers in the campus tap of the College Center and a 10:30 a.m. liturgy in St. Thomas More Chapel.

ART TOUR PLANNED

A Thanksgiving tour of major art museums in New York City is being offered by the University of Wisconsin-LaCrosse for the fifth year. The trip is scheduled for Nov. 26-30.

Highlights include visits to the Museum of Modern Art and the Guggenheim, Whitney and Metropolitan Art Museums. Galleries along 57th Street and in the SoHo area will also be toured.

Participants will stay at the Hotel Abbey Victoria, located near Times Square. The package fee, including tickets to the Broadway shows "Sugar Babies" and "Evita," is $385 for triple rates, $400 for double accommodations, and $455 for a single room. Those not wanting tickets for the plays will receive a $35 fee reduction.

The package also includes a Thanksgiving Day cocktail party and dinner, the Macy's Thanksgiving Parade, and a wine party in a SoHo artist's loft. In addition, there will be a time for shopping and sightseeing.

The group will fly via Republic Airlines from LaCrosse, with stops scheduled in Madison and Milwaukee along the route.

To register or for more details on the trip, contact tour director Dale Kendrick at the UW-L Art Department, 608-785-8230. A $75 deposit is due Nov. 1.

Cooney did not go through the standard procedures for becoming an RA. After all of the RA positions had been filled for this year, another one opened up. He applied through the Richards dorm and got

WSU's Byman studies Martyrdom

by Bridget Ahern

Martyrs have always played a part in history. According to Seymour Byman, history professor at Winona State University, any political leader who is killed "is considered to be a martyr."

Byman is writing a book, The Mind of Martyrdom, on the subject. Martyrdom (in the 16th century) was not the result of deliberate and cruel persecution on the part of an evil establishment: those who died wished to die," he wrote in an earlier publication.

He writes about martyrs in a view of an historian. He gathers facts about time the martyrs lived in.

He wrote a monograph, "Guilt and Martyrdom: The Case of John Bradford." The article is about the life and death of John Bradford who had embezzled funds from his employer and became so guilt-ridden over the theft that it led him to a martyr's end. For the martyrs, the article stated, the burden of guilt was so weighty and pervasive that the remedy was a literal burning away of the sinful self.

While Byman was writing the Bradford article he discovered that the guilt complex of many of the martyrs in England at that time stemmed from their childhood. Here again, the scholar in Byman is illustrated. He was not that knowledgeable about the adolescent years of the 16th century martyrs so he began researching that monograph.

"Child Raising and Melancholia in Tudor, England," was Byman's next article. Investigation into the child's upbringing in the 16th century England led him to discover that it was one of a controlled affection and if the affection was withdrawn it was because the child did not measure up to the demands of his parents.

be a challenge for him, because the floor will be separated into two wings.

The other new RA in Richards, Greg Kaplan, is a junior social work major. Kaplan said in order to gain experience in his field, being an RA is the best job he could have right now.

Like Cooney, Kaplan missed the standard procedure for becoming an RA. Kaplan was attending summer school at WSU this year, when he heard of an RA opening. "I really didn't have much time to think about it. I applied for the job on a Thursday in August and by "The excessive guilt, sin and need for expiation (need to make amends), was in large part caused by the prevailing methods of child care in Tudor, England," said Byman.

The child would blame himself if his parents were not showing him attention. Because he paralleled love with punishment, he actually sought out chastisement. In this theory, the child took on masochistic traits which led to their self-damnation in their adult lives.

Byman's research has led to his writing The Mind of Martyrdom. Although the book has not yet found a publisher, he says that Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y., has expressed an interest in the work.

In his book, Byman takes a look at the various personalities and the abnormalities of the Tudor martyrs. He analyzes the martyrs through the eye of an historian. "I am an historian not a poet: where poets grapple with the expressions of our deep emotional reactions... historians analyze only aspects of death — wars, famine...as statistics or data to explain other subjects."

Professor Byman has done his research in places such as England and New York. At the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., he has studied with a number of psychologists trying to recreate the mental and behavioral aspects of the 16th century Tudor England martyrs.

Byman keeps informed on this subject by receiving journals and pamphlets from other publishers. He also travels, making and listening to speeches. In the future he will be going to Ohio State University where he will give a speech on martyrdom. He receives financial aid through Winona State University. He said without this aid he would be unable to further his research.

Byman feels that, "a good teacher must continue his research," or he will become dormant. And becoming idle not only shows in the instructor himself but it also appears in his teachings.

Although Byman admits his work on martyrdom is laborious, he enjoys the writing and hopes that it is reflected through his work at WSU.

What appealed most to Cooney about the job was the responsibilities involved. "I wanted to get more involved with the way things were run," said the junior.

He is glad the guys on his floor come to him with their problems. "I haven't run into any major problems yet, but it's good that the guys trust me," Cooney said.

There are currently 25 men on first floor of Richards, and that figure will more than double when the work on additional rooms is completed. Cooney feels this will

Friday afternoon I heard I got the job," said Kaplan.

Kaplan has a brother John who also attends WSU. John is a veteran RA in Prentiss Hall.

Greg was pleased with the reception by the guys on his floor at their first floor meeting. "Something inside of me tells me that I'll get along with these guys well. I hope they'll come to me with their problems," he added.

In addition to his classes and heading 38 men, Kaplan also has a part-time job at Bloedow's Bakery, Winona.

Women benefit from Warrior Club

Ed. Note: This is the second of a two-part series dealing with Winona State University's 'Warrior Club.' This week's article deals with views expressed by female coaches at WSU.

by Jim Kohner

Any time you go from nothing to $4380 a year, you've made quite an improvement.

That is what the Warrior Club has done for the women's sports programs at Winona State.

Prior to the Warrior Club, the women's sports could only offer two $100 Foundation Scholarships. Those went to talented athletes who were also physical education majors.

Then when the Warrior Club got underway in 1978, women received some very needed money for scholarships.

Women's sports get $4380, or 36.5 percent of the $12,000 that the Warrior Club raised this year.

Women's Athletic Director LaVonne Fiereck then splits the money up among the nine sports.

For this season, volleyball and basketball will each get 16 percent of the money, or $700. Track and cross country, gymnastics, swimming, which has now been dropped, softball, and tennis each get 12 percent, or $526, and golf gets the remaining eight percent, or $350.

"Basketball and volleyball are the sports which go after the demanded athletes," Fiereck commented. "The competition for those athletes is greater, so they get more money."

"Winona State is still on the bottom money-wise in women's sports compared to the other state universities," Fiereck said. "Our booster club is the newest and we're among the few colleges that has one booster club for all sports, both men's and women's."

"The Warrior Club has had an effect on our programs," Fiereck went on to say. "Before, we didn't have anything to offer; now, we have something. But we're still not at the level to compete with Mankato State and St. Cloud State for athletes."

Gymnastics and softball coach Steve Juare gets $525 for each sport.

"The Warrior Club has done a lot for women's sports," Juare said. "We've received help from the community and within the department, but the high level administration hasn't given us any help. We need that high level support now that the economy is so bad."

The word competitive is how Juare describe the WSU women's athletics now. "The people behind the Warrior Club want to see us be competitive. With the money we get from them, we can be competitive, but we can't win a championship," Juare said.

Pat Sherman gets $700 for her basketball program and $525 for her tennis program.

"The Warrior Club has gotten things started, for both the athletic and educational programs," Sherman said. "But we need more support from the people of Winona to make our athletic programs grow."

"With the money we have, we have to sell the athletes on our education program and the city of Winona," Sherman commented. "But the big thing that is hurting at Winona State is the housing shortage. I've already had a couple of girls who wanted to come here but they couldn't afford to live off-campus."

Track and cross country coach

Marge Moravec is one who thinks the Warrior Club has made a difference in the success of women's sports. "The Warrior Club has done a heck of a job giving money for scholarships," Moravec said. "Right now, the Warrior Club has the incentive to get more money, and I think the money we get for scholarships will go up."

I'm happy with the Warrior Club," Moravec went on to say. "We had nothing before. Now we can give some sort of money. With the little money we have, it's better than nothing. The girls like to talk about getting scholarships in college, no matter how big it is."

Moravec thinks that the Warrior Club has definitely helped her sports, and according to her, "in a matter of time, we will be able to see just how successful the Warrior Club is."

"If I can't sell a person on our program and the advantages of this area and other financial aid she can get, then I can't get her to come here," Moravec said. "What I would like to see is the state giving us tuition waivers which pay for an athlete's tuition. Wisconsin and Nebraska both have these. It's not an athletic scholarship because it comes out of a state fund."

By the looks of things, the women's sport coaches are pretty happy with what the Warrior Club has done for them.

The money might not be what everyone expected, but according to Fiereck, Winona has a lot of other advantages.

"We may lack money for scholarships, but the women's program is stable, we have adequate facili-

SCAC sponsors animation display

by Lee Christopherson

The Social Cultural Activities Committee will sponsor an exhibit and sale of original animation cel paintings in Kryzsko Commons on Oct. 20-21.

The cels, used in the filming of animated cartoons, are all authenticated by Gallery Lainzberg of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, the nation's best-known specialist in the art form. A representative of the gallery will be on hand at the exhibit to answer questions.

According to a release from the gallery, one of the strongest appeals of this art work is that "...the characters — Raggedy Ann or Bugs Bunny or Porky — are old friends. People who buy cels have a genuine affection for the characters, an affection which began in childhood. Of course, cartoon characters are also an important part of popular culture. Owning a cel painting is owning a bit of American film history."

The release went on to say that animation art is now the hottest collecting area within the field of coming art and that fine art collectors "look upon the cels as an art form and buy them as an investment, just as they would buy traditional forms of art."

The exhibit/sale will offer the public an opportunity to see a broad range of animation cels, including examples from the Disney studios, Warner Bros. and Academy Award-winning animator Chuck Jones. There will also be characters from Star Trek, Betty Boop, Krazy Kat and many current TV favorites.

ties, the size of our institution is smaller, plus we have a good location," Fiereck said. "I think with the advantages we have, it will even out the number of women athletes we get compared to what other schools get."

There are a lot of things to blame for the little scholarship money at Winona State. But no one blames the Warrior Club. They work for nothing and have given money to the sports at WSU that many of the teams never had before.

Some blame the administration for poor support of the Warrior Club, and others blame the fact that the three colleges in Winona make it impossible for Winona State to get the money Mankato and St. Cloud have.

But whatever the case, the Warrior Club has given the sports, especially the women's sports, a big boost, and with the continued success that a lot of the coaches and members of the club are looking forward to, the Warrior Club should grow and give more money to all the sports.

Special teams key Warrior win

The short time that special teams are on a football field, big things can happen.

In many games, the people on the special teams just do their regular assignments like making tackles and throwing blocks for the return men.

And in other games, the special teams can play the biggest factors in a game.

Last Saturday at Mankato, the Winona State special teams were very big factors in the outcome of the game as they blocked two punts and returned one for the winning touchdown as the Warriors came from behind to defeat Mankato State 26-21 in a Northern Intercollegiate Conference game.

The win was the second straight for the Warriors, who are now 2-1 in the conference.

The big-play man for the Warriors on Saturday night was Steve Messling. The junior defensive back from Seneca, Wisc., blocked two Brent Wohlers punts, and the second one he returned 52 yards for the winning touchdown with 6:41 remaining in the game to erase Mankato's 21-20 lead.

"We always work on our blocking of punts in practice," WSU coach Myron Smith said. "They (Mankato) just let us come in from the outside and Messling did the rest."

The game was a see-saw battle the entire way. The Warriors put points on the scoreboard first when Dave Watson recovered Kurt Brauns fumble in the end zone after Braun hauled in a pass from quarterback Jack Marmon. Brad Schmidt added the conversion and the Warriors led 7-0.

In the second quarter, Mankato's Dave Miller scored two touchdowns on runs of seven and eight yards, and both extra points tries were good, putting the Mavericks up 14-7.

But the Warriors battled back and Braun scored on a four-yard run with 19 seconds remaining in the first half. Schmidt's extra point

Moorhead big test for Homecoming

by Jim Kohner

The Winona State football team is flying high after winning their last two games, and nothing would feel better for the players and the coaches if they could come away from Maxwell Field on Saturday afternoon with a win to capoff the Homecoming festivities.

The Warriors are currently playing some very fine football, but they will be tested, and tested, and tested on Saturday when Moorhead State invades Winona.

The Dragons are currently tied for first place with UM-Duluth with 2-0 records in the Northern Intercollegiate Conference. The Dragons are 4-0 overall following last Saturday's 39-3 clobbering of Bemidji State.

Going into last Saturday's game, Moorhead was ranked ninth in the country according to the small college polls, and that win over the Beavers could even move them up higher.

"They are the class of the league this year," WSU head coach Myron Smith said. "They have an excellent ball club. We're just looking forward to playing them."

"They have better personnel and more experience than we have," Smith went on to say. "But right now, we might have an emotional edge."

The Dragons will come at the Warrior defense with a potent aerial attack. In their win over Bemidji, senior quarterback Mark Reed completed 16 of 25 passes for 261 yards and five touchdowns.

"I don't think our secondary and the rest of the defense will let him (Reed) do that against us," Smith said. "I feel we have the best secondary that we've had in the last three years."

"Our defensive line has to pressure Reed," commented Smith. "We'll have to do a combination of a lot of things to stop him."

A lot of times, emotion can carry a team a long way, which Smith and his coach staff are hoping for. But that will have to wait to be seen until Saturday afternoon rolls around.

Volleyball team has rough week

The Winona State women's volleyball team found the Fargo-Moorhead area a tough place to win volleyball matches as they dropped five out of six matches up there over the weekend.

On Thursday, the Warriors took on Moorhead State and Moorhead won three out of five games.

Women's CC 10th at Mankato

The Winona State women's cross country team competed in its first meet of the season and came away with a 10th place finish out of 13 teams in the Mankato State Invitational held Saturday at Mankato.

Denise Turney was the top qualifier for the Warriors with a 34th place finish in a time of 20:34.

The other finishers for Winona State were Mary Hammes, who came in 51st, Lynnette Grothe came in 68th place, Sue Peterson finished in 86th place, and Terry Hildebrandt came in 96th place.

This Saturday, the women harrriers will compete in the St. Olaf Invitational in Northfield.

Moorhead won the first two games by scores of 15-5. Winona State then played hard and won 16-14 and 15-8 in the next two games. Victory for either team depended on the fifth game. Moorhead pulled ahead in the decisive game and lead 14-3. Then WSU fought back to make the score 14-9, but they didn't rack up any more points as Moorhead won by a 15-9 score.

On Friday, Winona State won one match, but lost two in the North Dakota State University Invitational in Fargo.

The Warriors were beaten by Bemidji State University 15-2, 9-15, 15-9. Augsburg also won two out of three games against WSU by 15-12 and 15-10 scores.

WSU won their only match of the tourney by beating Gustavus Adolphus 15-11, 15-10.

The Warriors lost two matches in Fargo Saturday to finish ninth in the Invitational.

North Dakota won 15-7 and 15-2 against the Warriors, then Concordia Moorhead beat WSU 11-15, 15-3, and 15-11.

The volleyball team will be playing Wednesday at Mankato State University, and on Saturday they will be at the St. Mary's Invitational at St. Mary's College in Winona.

St. Mary's team tops WSU team in Lite Beer Tug-of-War competition

by Todd Minske

Once again, the colleges of Winona State and St. Mary's waged war on each other. A war that is quickly becoming a tradition in Winona. The battle field was the sand beaches of Lake Winona; the prize was the title of champions in the Miller Lite Beer Tug-of-war. This year the title went to a team representing St. Mary's.

The championship pull pitted the Lite Weights of St. Mary's against the defending champs from last year, The Bomb Squad of Winona State. The Lite Weights outlasted The Bomb Squad and took home the spoils of victory, the three foot high Miller Lite Beer Tug-of-War traveling trophy.

This years pull drew 12 teams, four representing St. Mary's and eight pulling for Winona State. Each team consisted of nine members, three of which had to be female. The teams were then paired up against each other according to which school they represented. The WSU teams battled amongst themselves to see which team prevailed and would have the honor of tugging for their school, as did the teams from St. Mary's.

This years match had about 100 spectators, which was a substantial increase from last year, according to Bill Reuhl, the local Miller representative and coordinator of the tug-of-war.

In comparison to last year, Reuhl said, "The competition was really high this year. The teams were more evenly matched and the pulls lasted a lot longer."

Reuhl mentioned that the idea for the Lite Beer Tug-of-War came from the Lite Beer Big Guys Tug-of-War, in which the celebrities that made Lite Beer commercials met and had a televised tug-of-war about three years ago.

There are now about 150 Lite Beerwars in colleges all over the country. The tug in Winona is sponsored by the Miller Brewing Company, Winona Distributing, the Winona State Student Senate and the Campus Pub from St. Mary's.

Brad Schmidt: foot of WSU offense

Warrior place-kicker Brad Schmidt has added a little instant-offense for the Warriors this year. (Photo by Yoshiko Ohkura)

by Jim Kohner

When someone thinks of a place-kicker, they usually think of a man standing on the sidelines of a football game just waiting to get in to kick a field goal or an extra point, or just to kick-off after a touchdown.

In professional football and on a majority of college teams, that's all the place-kickers do. So a majority of time, their input into a game is only when the team is in scoring range.

That is not the case for Winona State's kicker Brad Schmidt. The sophomore from Lakeville (MN) High School would rather consider himself a defensive back than a kicker, because he feels more involved in the game that way.

And why not consider himself a defensive back. He started there the first game of the season against the University of Wisconsin-Stout. But since that game, he has seen little or no action in that position.

"I started him (Schmidt) the first game mainly because he's so smart and doesn't make mistakes in the secondary, which we wanted in the first game," WSU coach Myron Smith said. "But now, he's becoming so valuable as a kicker that I don't want to risk an injury to him while he's on defense."

Last year as a freshman, Schmidt's value of the team was a long-range field goal kicker, and he wasn't used at all on extra points.

"I thought that I should have been doing all the kicking last year, but I'm not the type of guy who's going to make a big deal about it," Schmidt said in an interview recently. "I was just happy to make the traveling team last year."

Over the summer, Schmidt went out and worked on his kicking game, and according to Smith, it has made a big difference in his performance this year.

"I really didn't think that much of Brad's kicking ability last year, but with the work he's done over the summer, he's improved 50 percent," Smith said. "Right now, I feel I have more confidence in him than any kid I've coached."

"It's nice to know that when a drive stalls at the 25-yard line, we still have a real good chance at getting three points out of it," Smith said.

Schmidt's 20-yard field goal won the game for the Warriors two weeks ago against Bemidji State. And the week before that, he kicked his longest field goal of his career, a 40-yarder against St. Cloud State, that tied the game with before the Huskies won that game in the last minute.

Smith thinks that if everything is right, Schmidt is capable of kicking a 50-yarder in a game. Schmidt has been successful from as far out as 55 yards in practice.

"I really don't know that much about kicking," Schmidt said. "You just can't go out there and kick the ball as hard as you can. I just try to kick the ball and follow through."

Quarterback Jack Marmon is the holder for Schmidt on field goal and extra point tries, and Jim Altoff snaps the ball to Marmon. "Those two never get any credit. I'm supposed to get the kick off in about 1.3 seconds, and if anyone is off, the kick will be off too."

A lot of times the value of a place kicker is not noticed, but in the case of Schmidt, the score of the Bemidji game alone showed his value.

Defending champions win in men's IM actions

by Ross Evavold

Last year's men's intramural football champions, the Wackers, showed why last Thursday as they broke a scoreless tie in the second half and then held on to defeat Hogue's Heroes 6-0.

The Wackers are led by their captain and quarterback Scot Ender, who was featured in an article that appeared in last week's Winonan.

The first half was dominated by the defenses, as the Wackers' Todd Prigge intercepted two passes, and Harvey Fladeland picked off one for the Heroes.

The only first down either team managed in the half was when Ender found Randy Skophammer for an 18-yard pass play just before the half.

Hogue's Heroes are named after John Hogue, who shares the co-captain title with quarterback John Fladeland.

They elected to keep the wind at their backs in the second half, so once again the Wackers started out at their own 20.

It took them only eight plays and seven minutes to score. After Ender had scrambled for a first down, he was pushed out-of-bounds, which is illegal in intramural play. The 15-yard penalty put the ball at the Heroe's 23-yard line.

But it took a fourth-down pass by Ender to score the only touchdown of the game. He hit Mark Bogie in the end zone for six points, but Ender's pass for the extra point was low and sent Bogie sprawling.

Hogue's Heroes then took to the offensive, with John Fladeland completing a 15-yard pass to Hogue. On the following play, Fladeland ran for 21 yards to the Wacker 29, but then the drive stalled.

By this time, both sides were fighting a driving rain, which proceeded to take its toll on the offense. The Heroes got their break when the Wackers failed to convert a fourth-down try, getting the ball just 25 yards away from the goal line.

Quarterback Fladeland ran for eleven yards, and a defensive penalty moved the ball to the 9. But the Heroes chances evaporated when Fladeland's pass was deflected by Brian Ender and picked off by Tim Fagely, and the Wackers ran out the clock.

Kamikazes triumph in women's action

by Teri Handt

The Kamikazes got off to a good start in the women's intramural flag football game Tuesday with a 13-0 victory over the Indulgents.

The Indulgents started the game off with a successful pass to Terri Poehls who ran the ball to the 30-yard line, but they were halted there by a strong Kamikaze defense.

Denise Erikson ran 30 yards for a touchdown for the Kamikazes giving them a 6-0 lead early in the game. The extra point run by Erikson was unsuccessful.

The Indulgents had some bad luck when Louis Matheys intercepted a pass attempt, giving the Kamikazes control over the ball once again at the 30-yard line. A completed pass to Erikson got the ball in scoring position for the Kamikazes at the 15-yard line.

The Indulgents held off the Kamikazes' advances and gained possession at their own 10-yard line, with seven minutes remaining in the first half. Quarterback Lynn Herman threw a successful pass to Stacy Schmidt to get a first down at their 25-yard line, but time ran out in the half leaving the Indulgents scoreless.

In the second half, the Kamikazes made no advances on their first possession and quarterback Michelle Lacy punted on their fourth down, sending the ball to the Indulgents 20-yard line.

Kamikazes Diane Stiff showed tough defense in the second half breaking through the line and downing Herman on the next two running attempts, holding the Indulgents at the 30-yard line.

Lacy threw a 20-yard pass to Erikson advancing the Kamikazes to the 15-yard line, but the Indulgents held them at their 10-yard line.

With nine minutes remaining, Herman made an exciting 35-yard run sneaking along the sidelines, but was stopped by Erikson, who downed her at the 15-yard line. Stacy Schmidt caught the next pass at the 5-yard line for a first down, putting the Indulgents in perfect scoring position.

But, Erikson intercepted the next crucial pass on the goal line and ran it back 80 yards for the Kamikazes second touchdown. The extra point attempt was successful this time making the score 13-0.

Stiff showed her strong defensive action again on the final play of the game by sneaking around the offensive line and downing Herman while the remaining seconds ran out.

Bill Baker, the Warriors' no. 2 runner last year, has been sidelined most of this season with tendonitis.

And now more recently, this year's no. 1 runner, freshman Mark Bennett, was found to have tendonitis of the foot.

And another key performer for the Warriors, freshman Bill Russell, has tendonitis of the knee.

Warrior coach Randy Miller has only 10 men on this year's team, but he's got a lot of high hopes for the personnel that he's got.

"The team has a lot of potential," Miller said of the Plainview native. "But the younger kids aren't used to the longer races as of yet."

Injuries or not, the Warriors will compete in the St. Olaf Invitational this Saturday at Northfield.

try was no good, and Mankato went to the lockerroom at halftime with a 14-13 lead.

The Warriors grabbed the lead early in the third quarter on a one-yard run by Mike Johnson. Schmidt's kick put the Warriors ahead 20-14.

But Mankato battled back quickly and took a 21-20 lead when quarterback Scott Sherden scored on a 10-yard run with 21 seconds left in the third quarter.

The score remained the same until Messling's fourth quarter heroics.

"I'm very pleased to come away with a win," Smith said. "We did
