AIDS and FAMILY THERAPY: ARE YOU READY?

The Western New York AIDS Program, in cooperation with The Northwest Buffalo Community Health Care Center, is pleased to offer this unique, one day program by Carol O'Connor, M.P.S. to mental health professionals of Western New York.

ACKERMAN INSTITUTE ...

Since 1985, an interdisciplinary team at the Ackerman Institute has been providing clinical interventions for families whose lives are disrupted by AIDS. Their work has focused on both traditional and non-traditional concepts of "family". These include homosexual and heterosexual couples, children with AIDS, substance users, hemophiliacs and the family systems of which they are a part.

CAROL O'CONNOR, M.P.S. ...

Ms. O'Connor is a private psychotherapist in New York City and is an integral team member of the AIDS Family Project at the Ackerman Institute. Her skills as a family therapist specifically dealing with the AIDS issue are nationally acclaimed.

SEMINAR CONTENT ...

In the AIDS crisis, medical and psychosocial services have concentrated on the individual patient. The impact of this catastrophic illness on families, lovers and caregivers has been largely ignored. Ms. O'Connor will discuss intervention strategies which have proven successful in meeting the diverse needs of persons with AIDS and their loved ones. Therapeutic issues include sexuality, safer sex, HIV testing, homophobia, contamination, betrayal, guilt, denial, isolation, social stigma, death, debilitation and bereavement.

PARTICIPANTS ...

This seminar is designed for Child and Family Therapists, Social Workers, Psychologists, Psychiatrists, Counselors and all mental health professionals. It is intended not only for practitioners but, administrators and policy-makers as well.

THE CHALLENGE ...

Mental health professionals in Western New York will continue to face families affected by AIDS. The mission for compassionate, caring and skilled clinicians is to respond now to this growing crisis. Let this be one of our first steps in achieving this mission.
