The group was particularly glad to have its sponsor, Dr. Henry Rogers, back on the campus to participate in this annual affair.

Annual Folk Festival Will Be May 21

The Folk Festival has become a traditional affair on GSCW campus and this year will be held on the lawn in front of Parks, Wednesday afternoon, May 21, at 4:30 —if it doesn't rain. If it does the festival will be continued in the gymnasium.

Everyone on the campus and off who likes to folk dance is invited to attend.

There will be a regular orchestra, composed of Mr. Lloyd Outand, violin; Nelle Moore, saxophone; Katherine Betts, accordion; and Mary Lou Laidler at the piano. Mary Lou is the accompanist for the club.

"Flambourgh," a sword dance, will be the only exhibition number the Folk Club will offer. The girls will wear full skirts with bright sashes. Other dances to be taught are: "Danish Schottische" by Martha Munn; "Csebogar" by Roseanne Chaplin; "Capt. Jinks" by Leslie Brown; "Crested Hen" by Myrtle Keel; "My Man's Away in the Hay" by Frankie Bennett (president of the club); and "Seven Jumps" by Jane Reeve.

Japanese lanterns and fancy Chinese kites will be spinning from the ceiling. The entrance to the "chop-suey house" will be adorned with Chinese curtains and the windows will be covered with bamboo serenades.

Of the four no-breaks, there will be a special one for seniors. After this one, a special skit will be given by the juniors.

Girls in Defense

As so many of the boys with whom we grew up are constantly talking about the war and the defense situation, we are having to listen to their talk with some interest.

A little over 20 years ago our mothers were hearing the same discussions. In this first world war the women were definitely home-bodies, but not so with the modern girl. Today the career girl can fly a plane as well as keep house, but just the same she is asking what she can do toward helping the national situation. As college women, we consider ourselves a somewhat separate class. We do not earn our livelihood, and yet we would like to be useful.

When the question is raised in a group discussion: "What can girls do for the defense program?"—we believe there are several answers that could be given. First, our intelligent reading of the newspapers should be accompanied by actual thought. Every day Congress is making plans; the draft system is being changed; European powers are developing new fronts. If we as college students cannot set examples as well-informed citizens, how can we question authority?

Besides reading, discussion groups, such as those sponsored by the Y and several other clubs on the campus, will lead to thinking. It is just as important for girls to be able to consider the future as for boys.

The second answer to the question might be that the girls can actually begin preparing themselves for defense. The men leave home for camps and become hardened to army life, but we can remain at home and do our small bit for the "preparedness."

GSCW is offering a first aid course in which 56 girls are enrolled. The University of Georgia has a similar class for students.

By next fall there will be, no doubt, parts of the country where girls will be taking over men's positions. Would it not be wise for college girls to be preparing themselves for such emergencies?

The third thing that we can do and should is to be ready in our minds for what is to come. The countries of Europe were not prepared and although England was unfitted for war physically, her unquestionable spirit has been the admiration of the world today.

Yes, there are many things college girls can do to help our country in the defense program. We can keep steady minds and make careful decisions as we face an unsteady future.

Dance Recital is a Success

The GSCW Modern Dance group is to be commended for their performance given Thursday night. Dances done to the accompaniment of the verse speaking choir and the Aeolian singers were professionally presented. From this recital, GSCW's Modern Dance group has proven itself worthy to be classed among outstanding groups such as the Texas Dancers who visited our campus recently.

PLUCK and LOVE

By BETTY BOOKER

Wilbur, don't go. You can't leave me in the lurch like this. Think of my future and remember what we've been through together. This is the only time that I've honestly needed you. Give me courage to go through with this ordeal.

I see now, You're giving in because you feel sorry for me. Well, you should. And don't think for a minute that I'm going to take the martyr attitude and let you leave. After all, haven't I kept you in drinks for three years? Answer me?

You bet I'm getting mad. Why, the very idea of you backing out on me! And, now, now, of all times. It can't be true.

Sure, I know you want a drink, but can't you, oh, dear Wilbur, won't you stay with me just another five minutes? Here's a bribe! I promise you that we may even go up north next year. You'll like that, won't you?

There, I knew you would.

Only two more minutes, Sweetheart. Keep up the old Parker spirit. Remember, a Wilbur Parker never gives up. But, confidentially, I'm beginning to worry about you, The need for a drink is written all over your face.

One more minute! You haven't gone back on me yet. The situation is desperate.

Peace! The ordeal is over and, once again, we've pulled through together. I've passed. I can graduate. There never was anyone as wonderful as you for getting me through finals, my little Parker fountain pen.

MY BILL

By ARAMINTA GREEN
He's not so tall as Dawson is,
Nor quite so little broad,
But all the same he quite suits me,
And him do I applaud,
His hair won't curl like Boesen's will,
His voice won't boom like Noah,
But still my heart will turn cart wheels
When he comes in the door.
Now Dr. Wells tells funny tales,
And Wynn can dramatize,
But they can't hold a match to Bill
When he looks in my eyes.

CAMPUS CAMEL

THE GADABOUT

By BLANCHE LAYTON

Well, have any of you learned why does a mouse when it spins? I guess not, as the hot weather is too uncomfortable for such nerve-racking thoughts. But I'll be a good scout and keep my promise by telling you the answer—"the higher the fewer." Now, wasn't that simple?

Everybody had a wonderful time at home (or at least, off the campus) this week-end. Isn't it fun taking a vacation now and then, especially when the moon is full?

The orchestra had a military banquet on Tuesday night, the military idea being in honor of Miss Beatrice Horsburgh who received her citizenship papers on Monday. And girls, the most fun of all was Miss Chandler's attempt to blow a trumpet. All of those who said they didn't sing in the bath-tub had to walk the "bull ring" (around the table) five times, and leading the group was Dean Ethel Adams.

The 4-H club will have its next meeting on Monday night, at which time they will elect officers and have Mr. Comer speak on landscaping about his home.

The Modern Dance club did some hard work on their dances, but their performance was worth it. "La Conga" with "Pete" Diaz in the lead was unusual, wasn't it? The costumes were good, too.

The Dietetics club elected Frances Lehmann as its next year's president.

What are the seniors doing about dancing? Their "jook" is broken.

How many of you cried when you saw "Penny Serenade"? The Juniors and seniors are all "up in the air" about the dance this week-end. The Juniors are on their knees to seniors asking them to take in their dates. "Just pass the door," each one says.

The records being played in spoken English and play production classes are every good. Every one liked Lynn Fontaine's "The White Cliffs of Dover."

Gee whizza-
Little Boy Blue, go blow your horn
The sheep are in the meadow
The cows are drinking corn,
Early to rise, the same to bed.
Makes a man wealthy, but socially dead.

Sophomore: "Did you take a shower?"
Freshman: "No, Why? Is there one missing?"

"This suspense is killing me," said the Arkansas horse-thief as he hung from the end of a rope on the limb of a sycamore tree.

"I'm de-lighted - no end," said the lightning bug as he hit the frying pan.

Wife: "Before we were married, George, you were always giving me presents. Why don't you give me any now?"
Husband: "My dear, did you ever hear of a fisherman giving bait to a fish he had caught?"

Voice on the phone: "John Smith is sick today and can't come to class. He requested me to notify you."
Professor, "All right. Who is this speaking?"
Voice on the phone again: "This is my room-mate."

"When I'm dead, you'll find it hard to find another man like me."
She replied: "What makes you think I'll ever want another man like you?"

"Random Harvest" Tells of Survivors of Other War

By DOROTHY MILLER

RANDOM HARVEST is one book that, however trite and outworn the phrase has become, will hold the reader spell-bound to the last page. It is written with all that warmth and human understanding displayed by James Hilton in GOODBYE MR. CHIPS; and also with something of that mystical, other-world feeling which has made LOST HORIZON live in our memory.

RANDOM HARVEST is the story of a man before the present war, one of that countless multitude who survived the other war—for better or worse. The plot is most unusual. It is not the story that one has read many times disguised by some thin trick of the author but an entirely new idea. In fact in most of the advertisements, the reader has been asked NOT TO REVEAL THE PLOT.

After the first few pages the story catches the reader in the whirlpool of Charles Rainier's life and for the rest of the book the loves, the ambition, and most of all the fear of Charles Rainier that he will never... well, you read the story and see if he does.

If you are a James Hilton fan, as who isn't, you will be captivated anew by his wonderful portrayals of human nature and his mastery style of story-telling that holds you fighting and struggling with Rainier until the end; and if you are not a Hilton fan it's never too late to begin an acquaintance with one of England's foremost literary men. Horsburgh is Interviewed on Radio Program

In the radio program of GSCW over WSB May 17, at 10:30 —Nelle Womack Hines interviewed Miss Beatrice Horsburgh, who has been connected with the college as teacher of violin since 1926. Miss Horsburgh came to this country during the World War to join her brother, a civil engineer, who was killed in France.

She received this week the papers which make her a citizen of the United States. In the interview, Miss Horsburgh gave much first-hand information which comes to her through letters from her friends in England. Among these are three girls who were students of GSCW sometime during the past several years.

English Faculty Member Receives Citizenship Papers

By ANN WATERSTON

It's great to be an American and it's even greater to welcome a new American. Miss Beatrice Horsburgh, teacher of violin on our campus, received her citizenship papers last Monday morning.

Miss Horsburgh lived the greater part of her life until 1914 in Surrey, England. Part of her youth was spent in Germany and Belgium, and she lived in Italy for one winter. She studied music in Russia for two years under the famous Leopold Auer. Auer is considered the greatest violin teacher of modern times, having developed such great artists as Heifetz and Elmen. In 1937 Miss Horsburgh returned to England and took a ARCN degree from the Royal College of Music in London.

Miss Horsburgh and her mother came to America in 1914 to make a home for her brother who was an engineer in Brooklyn. During the war he enlisted in the Canadian forces and was lost. After the war Miss Horsburgh went to MacMurry college in Jackson ville, Ill., where she became instructor in violin. In 1926 she resigned to take her present position on our GSCW faculty.

Monday afternoon and evening was like "open house"—with friends dropping in continuously

Pinafores, jerkins and eyelet dresses are the make-up of ever Jessie's school wardrobe this spring.

Elizabeth King and Isabel King looked like twins this week when they came out in their striped pinafores with a ruff over each shoulder. Elizabeth was blue and white striped and Isabel's was red and white striped.

The eyelet embroidered pinafore was the perfect choice for the smart simple shirt-waist style of Thelma Broadrick. It opened to the waist with buttons and had a gracefully flared skirt. Thelma wore a green belt with this.

Edna Davis looked stunning in her white dress with an eyelet top and sharkskin shirt Monday. The white emphasized her lovely tan.

Geraldine Field's red silk jerkin, like others of this season, is the smartest, youngest fashion under the summer's sun with this slim-waisted side buttoned jerkin, she wore a white pleated sharkskin skirt and long-sleeved blouse.

Mary Jean Everett was having a "coc" on the porch of Arts in a striped pinafore of green, lavender, and greyed blue with a full skirt and a lavender blouse.

Ernestine Johnson has a black and white checked sharkskin pinafore with a detachable top. The skirt is fully gathered and she wears a white long sleeved shirt with it.

I didn't want to mention broomstick skirts, but I just couldn't end this column without a word about Elizabeth Hodges' red one. It's really very cute.

After Home-going, Students Return With Town Chatter

By BLANCHE LAYTON

Do you know what people are talking about just after a home-going week-end, or are you usually so busy talking yourself that you don't know what others are saying? This is about how it goes.

"John was so sweet this week-end, honest. He was with me almost every minute. I barely got to see my family."

"I went shopping Saturday. Bought an old dress and hat I really don't like. Do you like it?"

Then there's the old maid-type who brings back all the community gossip. "Yes, they had to fire Mr. Runaround because he started dating the high school girls."

Oh, and here comes Susie with that far-away look in her eyes. She's back here in body, but not in heart. For in heart and thought she's with Bill who gave her that engagement ring last night. "It wasn't really a surprise, because you see, I knew all the while he was going to give it to me."

Just because Sara didn't have a date while she was home, she thinks she just must have an alibi. "Sonny was called to his grandmother's brother's funeral, and Jack was so sick he couldn't be out."

And here comes Mildred who met Tom this week-end and fell head-over-heels in love. "I can hardly wait to go back home. He's the cutest thing I ever saw. Honest, I believe I made a hit because he asked me for my school address."

Last but not least, at the very

If you've never heard such remarks after the week-end is over, just get in a corner and stay real quiet after the next home-going week-end. You're sure to hear them!
