CRIMINOLOGICAL RESEARCH BULLETIN

No. VI

THORSTEN SELLIN, Editor

Several years ago, the Bureau of Social Hygiene, Inc., of New York City, began the publication of an annual survey of current criminological studies in the United States, which it continued to issue until it disbanded in 1934, previously making provision, however, for the publication of the 1935 issue. The 1934 Bulletin was compiled and edited by Leonard V. Harrison, at that time Director of the Bureau; the 1931-1933, and the 1935 Bulletins—Nos. I-III, V—were compiled by the present editor. The continuance of the Bulletin is made possible by the aid of the officers of the American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology and the Editor of its Journal.

This issue of the Bulletin is patterned on the immediately preceding one. One hundred and nineteen new projects are listed, i. e., projects begun since the spring of 1935 (or earlier but not previously listed), and the present status is given of the 253 projects reported as incompleting in Bulletin V.¹ It is to be regretted that an unusually large number of the latter group (23, or 9 per cent) have had to be marked "no report."

The term "research," strictly interpreted, may not be applicable to all studies listed. The selection, at least, has not been so stringent as to exclude any project with merit. The list is not complete, for some projects have undoubtedly not been brought to the compiler's attention.

The projects have been grouped into eight sections or subsections in order to facilitate the use of the list:

¹ Follow-up reports on a project are made in these Bulletins even after it has been designated as "completed" until the results have been published (in which case the place of publication, publisher, etc., are indicated), the manuscript report deposited somewhere (in which case the place of deposit is given), or mimeographed (in which case copies may presumably be secured from the author or sponsor). In a few instances projects reported as uncompleted in previous Bulletins have been dropped because no information regarding their status has been forthcoming for the last two years or because their withdrawal has for some reason been requested by the reporters.

- I. General.
- II. Criminal Statistics (Studies concerning organization and function of statistical agencies; crime statistics in local areas; statistical analysis of the operation of administrative agencies).
- III. Causation (Case studies of individual offenders; ecological studies; environmental factors in relation to crime, etc.).
- IV. Police Organization and Administration (Includes science in detection).
- V. Law, Procedure, and the Administration of Justice.
- VI. Penal Treatment
 - A. Institutional
 - B. Probation and Parole
 - C. The Effectiveness of Treatment.

In addition, an index of projects, by number, and an index of the names of project reporters will be found at the end of the list. Cross-references to projects in other sections which contain relevant information will be found at the end of each section.

The Process by Which Misbehavior Does or Does Not Receive Official Attention in the Rural and Small Town Situation.
Sample counties in the South reflecting simple homogeneous situations. It is hoped that comparison will be made later with more complicated rural situations, especially where trained social workers, juvenile officers, organized welfare (especially child welfare) programs are found. Mostly qualitative data will be used, i. e., descriptive data obtained from community observations, interviews with key persons, deputies, judges, teachers, etc. Case studies of children who have been through the legal processes and of those who have not. Attempt to get
