On the Cover

An unseasonably cold evening in September didn't deter those with warm hearts. Sixteen members of the University's Campus Ministry student organization P.E.A.C.E. (People Effectively Achieving Community Efforts) conducted a sleep-out on campus despite plummeting temperatures — with cardboard boxes as their only shelter. The result was gratifying: They raised more than $715 from sponsors' donations for Alpha Home, a Bridgeport-based shelter for homeless families with children.

Photographer Stephen Castagneto, whose credits include covers for Newsweek, assignments for The New York Times, Boston Globe, Philadelphia Inquirer, The Associated Press and corporate clients, captured the students' dedication.

PRESIDENT'S ANNUAL REPORT

- 22 The 1993-94 academic year was an extraordinary year, a period of celebration and affirmation. And now, with a new Strategic Plan nearly in place, Sacred Heart University is positioned to become one of the leading Catholic universities in New England.

Printed on recycled paper with 50% total recovered fibers with 20% post consumer waste. Please recycle.

When I joined the University's public relations staff nearly six years ago, the office's communications equipment was, shall we say, rudimentary. A handful of typewriters, several telephones, one copy machine, one relic of a computer. No fax.

Now, there is a computer at every workstation, electronic mail, voice mail, two copy machines and one slightly overworked fax. The four remaining typewriters are used primarily for preparing envelopes and labels.

The contrast is no less startling in our publications. In 1989, the alumni newspaper, Focus, consisted of four pages and was mailed twice a year. Today, we offer you the Premiere issue of Sacred Heart University Magazine, a quarterly publication that we hope will become an important part of your regular reading diet.

Each edition will provide insightful coverage of the evolving Sacred Heart University story — from our University's dramatic growth to the lives of our successful alumni to our dedicated faculty to the myriad outreach programs in which students, faculty, staff and alumni participate.

Many of the features that Focus readers enjoyed — the Alumni Profile, Achievers, Marriages, Births, items of interest from campus — have been incorporated into these pages, although the former Campus Capsules has been repackaged and expanded into Pioneering. Volume I, Number I also contains a bonus: The President's Annual Report for 1993-94.

Sacred Heart University Magazine was proposed by Dean Golembeski, a former journalist and public relations executive who was appointed director of public relations in May. All of us in P.R. agreed that a magazine format, with its capacity for graphics and four-color printing, represented the best vehicle for reaching the University's many constituencies: Alumni, faculty, staff, the news media, the expanding list of friends. Our vision was shared by Jim Lyddy, the vice president for institutional advancement, and Laurie Bellico '88, who now wears the dual mantel of director of annual giving and alumni relations. When President Anthony J. Cernera gave the project his unqualified endorsement, we moved ahead quickly.

More than 90 years of collective experience, encompassing newspapers, wire services, magazines, public relations and advertising, may be found in the magazine's five principals. Dean Golembeski's 20-year career includes nearly a decade with the Associated Press bureau in Hartford and freelance work prior to his entering the public relations sector at Xerox.

Graphic designer Gary Jordan began his graphic arts career in the promotions and advertising departments of Penton Publishing, a business magazine group in Stamford. As a UCLA undergraduate, Jordan chronicled the Los Angeles Dodgers for United Press International. Staff writer Richard Weizel's career includes full-time positions at the Connecticut Post and Akron Beacon-Journal; more recently, his prolific freelance work has appeared in The New York Times.

Since her arrival in 1990, production manager Martha Miller Byrnes has handled several roles in the University public relations office. Her career embraces both corporate (Bunker Ramo) and university (Salem College of West Virginia) stops.

This editor spent his entire journalistic career, 20 years, as a sports columnist, editor and writer with daily newspapers in New York City, New Haven and Waterbury. After nine World Series and regular trips to baseball's spring training camps, I sought new challenges and entered corporate advertising and ultimately freelance writing, which led to articles in publications as diverse as The Sporting News, Supermarket Business, Office Systems and The New York Times. Since 1989, it was my pleasant task to edit Focus and, for the past four years, to serve this institution as its director of sports information.

We hope you're pleased with our initial effort. Your comments are welcomed and, indeed, solicited for inclusion in the Letters section of our Winter issue.

PIONEERING

A Rose is a Rose is a book

A book designed to stimulate lively debate and critical thinking on the presidential selection process, "Controversial Issues in Presidential Selection," is now available in its second edition.

Gary Rose

Edited by Gary L. Rose, Ph.D., the University's highly respected professor of political science, the new edition (SUNY Press, 374 pages, $49.50 hardcover, $16.95 paperback) is comprised of two-thirds new material and provides the latest on controversies surrounding the presidential selection process.

Major issues examined through a point-counterpoint format span the various phases of the process, including the nominating system, the nominating convention, and the general election campaign. New issues covered in this edition include whether a third major party in U.S. politics is likely or needed.

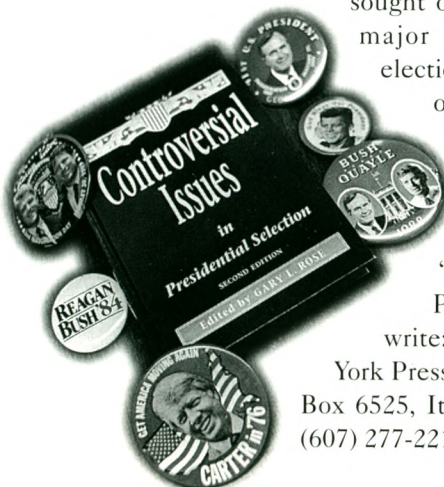

Contributors include distinguished academicians, a U.S. senator (Mitch McConnell, R-Ken.), political strategists, researchers and consultants drawn from both sides of the political spectrum.

According to A. James Reichly, author of "The Life of the Parties," Rose's latest effort gives "both sides of the question on practically all the critical issues now facing the presidential process — in many ways the key to the future of American democracy.

"Surprisingly," Reichly says, "its cumulative effect is a profound call for revival and reform of that battered institution, the political party. This book will be read with pleasure and profit by both specialists and general readers."

Rose, a prominent political pundit who is frequently sought out by the media during major state and national elections, has been a member of the Sacred Heart University faculty since 1982. He lives in Cheshire.

University elects three to Board of Trustees in May

ANGELICA URRA BERRIE, who was born and raised in the Philippines, is the director of the Paper Goods Division, Russ Berrie and Co., Inc. of Oakland, N.J.

Angelica Urra Berrie

After working for Compton Saatchi and Saatchi Philippines, she established the country's first professional modeling agency and was a founding director of the Advertising Supplies Association of the Philippines. In 1985, she formed Capital Interline, Inc., an export company specializing in paper products. Today, the company employs 130 people and does business in Europe and the U.S. In the spirit of togetherness, Mrs. Berrie joined her husband's business, where she utilizes her talents to create greeting cards and other products. She received a degree in communications from Assumption College in Manila. Her husband, Russell Berrie, is the chairman of the Center for Christian-Jewish Understanding of Sacred Heart University.

WILLIAM J. CONATY is senior vice president of corporate human resources at General Electric Co. in Fairfield, with overall responsibility for GE's 220,000 employees worldwide. He joined the company in 1967 following graduation from Bryant College with a degree in business administration. He has held a variety of management positions with GE, including manager of the Diesel Engine plant in Grove City, Pa., in 1978; manager-plant relations in Syracuse, N.Y., in 1981; manager-human resources of the GE Aircraft Engines division in Lynn, Mass., in 1984; and vice president-human resources for the company's Aircraft Engines business in Evendale, Ohio, in 1990. The native of Binghamton, N.Y., was named to his current position in 1993.

PAUL S. MILLER is the president and chief executive officer of Miller/Buick Ford in Fairfield. A man with more than 30 years in the automobile business, he joined with his father and brother to purchase the Buick franchise in 1964. With Miller serving as vice president, Miller Buick, Inc. became the state's largest Buick dealership within five years. Upon the death of his father in 1981, Miller became president and CEO. In 1986, the company acquired a Ford franchise and became Connecticut's largest Ford dealer in five years. Miller was president and chairman of the Buick National Dealer Council in 1991-92, Barnum Festival Ringmaster in 1984 and president of the Bridgeport Barnum Festival Society in 1983.

Mike Arnold was a creative administrator, a man who deserves much of the credit for the major growth of Sacred Heart University's Stamford programs and enrollment. Above all, he truly cared about his students.

"Mike will be remembered as a tireless proponent of the adult learner, both on campus and within several national professional societies of which he was a member," said Richard Farmer, Ed.D., dean of Graduate Studies and Continuing Education, upon Arnold's death at age 39 on Aug. 21. "He was dedicated to his students, often arriving early and staying late so that they always had access, could get an answer, beat the bureaucracy, or just talk."

As associate dean for Continuing Education and director of the University's Stamford programs from the Fall of 1990 until his retirement this spring, Michael Arnold was instrumental in establishing the Stamford campus as a degree-granting branch, with more than 40 undergraduate, graduate, accelerated, non-credit and community-related courses available.

During his tenure, enrollment rose from just 57 undergraduates to 350 undergraduate, graduate and part-time students.

Twice, he supervised the physical move of the Stamford campus, first to St. Basil's Preparatory School and most recently to Trinity Catholic High School.

Among his myriad accomplishments were the formation of the Learning in Retirement Institute, a 400-member organization of retired persons dedicated to lifelong learning, and the University's leadership role in the AIDS Educational Consortium in association with the Stewart B. McKinney Foundation.

A man committed to community service, Arnold was the last elected treasurer of the City of Bridgeport (1989-1991), and he was past treasurer and a director of the Bridgeport Area Arts Council and a director of Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Fairfield County. More recently, he was the director of education and a member of the board of directors of the McKinney

Foundation and a director of the Connecticut Humanities Touring Group and the Fairfield County Chess Association.

Arnold, who lived in his native Bridgeport, came to the University from Albertus Magnus College in New Haven, where he was dean of continuing education from 1986 to 1990. He earned a B.E.S. in humanities and social sciences from the University of Bridgeport and an M.A. in English from DePaul.

"Michael's death creates a great sense of loss within the University community in general, and very specifically within the Office of Graduate Studies and Continuing Education," Farmer said. "I take comfort in knowing that Mike is finally resting in the arms of the Lord."

Donations may be made to the Stewart B. McKinney Foundation or to the Michael S. Arnold Scholarship Fund at Sacred Heart University. D.H.

Ianniello to sow for REAPS

He may be new to his job, but Deacon Daniel J. Ianniello is trying to do for the Institute for Religious Education and Pastoral Studies (REAPS) at Sacred Heart University what he did for decades in the business world — bring in more money.

As the new volunteer director of development and grants for REAPS, Ianniello is responsible for raising funds to help people further their religious education and develop church-related skills. REAPS provides laity, clergy and others in the religious community with professional training and personal growth related to religious education, pastoral studies and other chosen fields of ministry, as well as opportunities for personal enrichment.

Prior to his recent retirement, Ianniello was deputy to the vice president of business development, as well as director of engineering and programs, for Dow United Technologies Composite Products. He was ordained as a deacon in 1988 and has been active in ministry at Holy Rosary Parish in Bridgeport.

Ianniello and his wife, Ilene, are the parents of three children and reside in Trumbull.

CCJU to honor Cardinal O'Connor

The Center for Christian-Jewish Understanding has been invited to publish a Jubilee Festschrift to honor Cardinal John O'Connor's 75th birthday, which will be on Jan. 15, 1995. The special tribute will be presented to Cardinal O'Connor at a dinner in his honor on the Sacred Heart University campus.

For the festschrift, 12 prominent scholars, academicians and clergymen, six each from the Catholic and Jewish faiths, have been asked to contribute articles on various topics of interest to the Cardinal and the Jewish-Christian community.

Acceptances have been received thus far from the CCJU's director, Rabbi Jack Bemporad; Cardinal Edward Cassidy of the Vatican; former Israeli President Chaim Herzog; Archbishop William H. Keeler of Baltimore; Cardinal Bernard Law of Boston; David Novak, professor of religious studies at the University of Virginia; Rabbi Mordecai Waxman of Temple Israel, Great Neck, N.Y.; Nobel Laureate Elie Wiesel, Andrew W. Mellon Professor in the Humanities, Boston University; and Rabbi Walter Wurzbarger of Lawrence, N.Y. Maureen Lutz

Global Studies receives grant

To support its expanding course offerings in international studies, Sacred Heart University has been awarded a two-year grant in excess of $120,000 by the U.S. Department of Education. The funds for the grant will be matched by the University.

According to Katherine Kidd, Ph.D., the University's director of Global Studies, "The grant will help us expand our foreign language faculty staffing and will provide curriculum development in other areas that relate to international efforts."

The grant, which falls under the U.S. Dept. of Education's Undergraduate International Studies and Foreign Language program (Title VI), carries a first-year amount of $59,782. Next June, the University will re-apply for a non-competitive renewal of the grant for the second year totaling $65,008.

The University will use the grant to hire two faculty to teach French, Italian and Japanese; provide compensation to faculty members developing new courses with an international focus along with funds for library acquisitions related to those courses; and provide funding for outside speakers for both student- and faculty-oriented activities.

"In some respects, our Global Studies program is at the cutting edge," Kidd said. "For example, we require that Global Studies majors study abroad. We want our students to operate on a nuanced and sophisticated level, from an in-depth experience, and with fluency in their second language. This kind of expertise generally cannot be acquired without experiencing another culture directly." D.H.

By George, another award

The awards continue to arrive for Babu George, Ph.D. On Oct. 1, the distinguished chair of the Faculty of Science, Mathematics and Computer Science was presented the Space Science Education Award by Dr. Gerard Brown of the United States Space Foundation. George was recognized for his outstanding work in science education.

George also was named the first recipient of the "You Make a Difference" award from the National Teachers Association. The organization praised George for his dedication and impact on the future of science education.

Brown, an aerospace education specialist who has worked extensively with NASA, was on campus to present a three-day workshop, "Getting Comfortable With Teaching in Space," sponsored by SMARTNET 2000.

Reed steps forward in Stamford

After more than two decades of making a name for himself in the business world, Charles H. Reed has made it to the top and is now running one of the fastest-growing enterprises in Fairfield County.

He's the new director of Stamford programs at Sacred Heart University, and says his main goal is to make sure the branch's dramatic growth continues.

"I envision that growth to continue, as will our primary focus continue to be on adult education," said Reed, a 1981 MBA graduate of the University.

An adjunct assistant professor of management at the University since 1985, he has taken over as director of a branch campus that had just 57 undergraduate students four years ago — but has grown to 350 undergraduate and graduate students now taking part in a variety of programs geared primarily to working adults.

Reed knows what it takes to make an enterprise grow: He has a total of 22 years experience in sales, marketing and general management of Fortune 100 corporations. He's also started three businesses and is currently president and owner of Reed Products, Inc., which distributes janitorial supplies and industrial uniforms.

He says he is aware of how vital the Stamford campus is to lower Fairfield County. "We want to be a good corporate citizen and a good community citizen and make sure that everyone knows we're here to provide a wide variety of educational and community programs," he said.

The Stamford branch moved to larger facilities last year at 926 Newfield Avenue in the Trinity Catholic High School building. The new location includes a dozen classrooms, a state-of-the-art computer lab and parking for more than 400 cars. R.W.

Adviser handbook wins national award

It took an entire year to produce the premiere edition of Sacred Heart University's academic advisers handbook, but the time and effort have paid dividends.

Entitled "Guide to Student Academic Advisement, 1994-95," the 200-page book won the Certificate of Merit Award in the 1994 National Academic Advising Association's publications contest, Adviser Publications category.

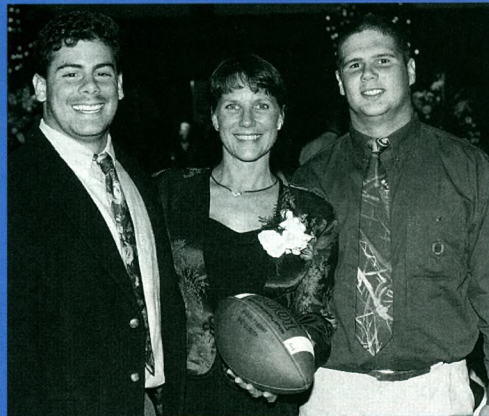

The co-editors are Mitchell J. Holmes, now assistant dean of students, and Carol Batt, Ph.D., assistant professor of psychology.

Estate gift requires careful planning

Stepas Blynas believed in education. Upon his retirement from work, he enrolled at the University, receiving a B.A. degree in 1986. He appreciated the opportunities a college education afforded, in work and in life, as well as the personal satisfaction and enrichment.

Blynas believed in the commitment to excellence that distinguishes a Sacred Heart University education; he appreciated what it meant for him. He also wanted to assure that others would have the same opportunity. When he died earlier this year, he fulfilled his wish, granting the University a $10,000 bequest that helps meet his objectives and the University's.

Gifts like Blynas' require planning. But estate planning is something all of us should do, given the medical issues, family concerns and tax consideration involved.

Today, a will may also involve medical and organ donation instructions as well as arrangements for disposition of one's estate. They may be simple or complicated but in any case, preparing a will requires a lawyer.

John Daley, director of special gifts, provides assistance to alumni and friends of the University who may want to consider making a gift to the University through their estate. The ultimate arrangements, however, are by the donor with his or her attorney and financial planning advisers.

There are several ways to provide an estate gift for the University through your will, the most common of which are:

Specific bequest: The amount of the gift is usually stated as specific dollars, or as a fraction of the estate. It may be in cash, securities, real estate, personal property (art, antiques, jewels, rare coins or stamps) or other assets.

Residuary bequest: The University is named residuary legatee to receive the remainder of the estate after specific bequests are fulfilled.

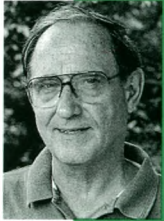

Contingent bequest: This takes effect only if the primary beneficiaries named in the will are dead. It could prevent the property or assets from going to the state. Another form of contingent bequest could spell out conditions for a gift to the University, and if those conditions are met, the executors make the gift from the estate.

Testamentary trust: Designated part or all of the estate to go to a trust where a stated amount is paid to one or more beneficiaries (spouse, relative, etc). The principal goes to the University.

For more information or assistance, write: John J. Daley, Director of Special Gifts, Sacred Heart University, 5151 Park Avenue, Fairfield, CT 06432-1000. Or call: (203) 371-7925.

Welcome, Fathers

They arrived on campus two months apart, and they come from different backgrounds. But Sacred Heart University's two new campus ministers share the same love of God and the desire to work with young people.

McLernon

Their names are Rev. Thomas Michael McLernon, who joined the campus ministry team in August, and Rev. Philip F. Fabiano, O.F.M.Cap., whose starting date was Oct. 12.

"We are twice blessed," said Margaret Palliser, O.P., S.T.D., director of campus ministry. "Father Michael's love for students, his varied experiences in university settings, his expertise in both pastoral and therapeutic counseling, and his evident gifts in liturgical celebration make him a wonderful addition to our campus ministry program.

"Father Philip's personal gifts, his enthusiasm for ministry, his wealth of experience in the area of pastoral counseling, and his love for young people will prove to be invaluable resources," she stated.

Fabiano

A priest of the Diocese of Harrisburg, Pa., Father McLernon brings to the University an extensive background in counseling and campus ministry. His most recent position was that of director of counseling at Georgian Court College in Lakewood, N.J. The native of Jersey City, N.J., served as campus minister both there and earlier at Roanoke Valley College, the College of William & Mary and York (Pa.) College.

Father Michael earned an A.B. in philosophy from Mount St. Mary's College and Seminary, Emmitsburg, Md., and a master's degree in education and certificate of advanced studies in counseling, both from Johns Hopkins University.

A member of the Province of St. Mary of the Capuchin Order, Father Fabiano brings a wealth of pastoral experience to his new position. He served as pastor at Sacred Heart Parish in Yonkers, N.Y., and at St. Michael Parish in East New York, Brooklyn.

In addition to parish ministry, Father Fabiano has ministered within his Franciscan community as a member of his Province Council (1984-90). Most recently, he was chaplain to the Congregation of Christian Brothers at Westcourt, New Rochelle, N.Y.

The New York City native received a B.A. from St. Anthony College in Nashua, N.H., a M.Th. at Mary Immaculate Theologate in Garrison, N.Y., and a M.S. in pastoral counseling at St. John's (N.Y.) University. D.H.

Homecoming '94

Manny Cardozo '81, his wife, Sherri, and children, Sara 5, Benjamin 2 1/2 and Manuel 8, enjoy their togetherness at the Pioneer Pride Homecoming on Oct. 8. Cardozo, general manager of Westec Security, is deeply involved with his alma mater, serving as alumni representative to the Board of Trustees and, since 1992, as chairman of the Alumni Executive Committee.

A memorial tribute

Homecoming '94 had its solemn moments, too. In the morning, alumni, spouses and friends gathered for a Memorial Mass and dedication in memory of three students, Robin Bellamy, Emily Mossey and Linda Wall, whose lives ended in a tragic auto accident 10 years ago.

"When we pass this place in the future," President Anthony J. Cernera said at the rededication of a parcel of land, "we will remember these three young women. We will recall their active participation in our sororities, their accomplishments, their young lives."

GE grant supports minorities

Stephen Tucker, General Electric Foundation's higher education program manager, addressed GE Scholars at the University during the September reception for the new program. GE's three-year grant provides $250,000 in scholarship support for 25 minority students. "Sacred Heart University very much meets our foundation's goal of promoting women and minorities in the areas of engineering, science and business education," Tucker said. "We are very enthusiastic in our support of the University because of the excellent programs they provide in attempting to meet these goals."

Head Coach Gary Reho debates a point with an official. Assistant Coach Dave LeSage listens in.

For four seasons, Bill Johnston, linebacker and 1994 tri-captain, has been pointing Sacred Heart University's fledgling football program in the right direction.

Pointed

The Pioneer quarterback may be a freshman, but Chris Kelly (18) commands attention from his teammates.

Upended but unbowed, junior running back Scott Warman picks up the tough yardage. Warman ranked sixth nationally in NCAA Division II kickoff returns a year ago.

Right

The University dance team, new this fall, provides halftime entertainment.

Direction

Autumn afternoons mean the pageantry and melodic sounds of the University band.

Sacred Heart football has its first senior class this fall, marking four years of growth and maturity. The program's addition provides a focal point for students, alumni and local residents on crisp fall Saturday afternoons.

Fall sports in focus

Senior running back Ron Stopkoski (31), junior offensive guard Mike Dombrosky (54) and squad sing the National Anthem.

MEN'S BOWLING The Red team of juniors Chad Autore (Naugatuck), Dave Campbell (Ithaca, N.Y.), Mike Morrissey (Waterbury), Vinny Yesenosky (Bronx, N.Y.) and Mark Taylor (Fairfield) and freshman Marc Kozak (Schenectady, N.Y.) placed second in the 1994 Nittany Lions Kegler Classic, just two pins behind Ohio State.

WOMEN'S BOWLING Sophomore Jen Swanson (Shelton) led the Lady Pioneers to a first-place finish against a limited field in the Nittany Lions Kegler Classic.

CROSS COUNTRY Freshman Shannon Heald (Northwood, N.H.) captured second place in the Stonehill Invitational at North Easton, Mass., the best finish by either a Pioneer male or female runner this fall.

EQUESTRIAN Seniors Dawn Colica (Darien) and Alexandria Heebner (Fairfield) and sophomore Shelley Lyford (Chelsea, Vt.) were runnersup in the flat class Oct. 23 in the team's opening competition hosted by Stony Brook on Long Island. Sophomore Nicole Klammer (Babylon, N.Y.) was second in the fences class.

FIELD HOCKEY Sophomore goalie Cheryl Simmons (Vernon Center, N.Y.) kept the Lady Pioneers in most matches. Offensively, freshman Deidre Hynes (Mahopac, N.Y.) sparkled.

FOOTBALL A team with a strong senior presence entered the final weekend of October with a 3-4 record — but just a handful of points removed from 5-2. Senior end Marco Soto (Paterson, N.J.) and senior linebackers Bill Johnston (Bourne, Mass.) and Rob Stopkoski (Clinton) have been the defensive standouts. A freshman halfback, Kasi Fletcher (New London), is capable of breakaway runs, as exemplified by his 61-yard bolt for a touchdown against unbeaten Bentley.

MEN'S SOCCER The Pioneers are headed for their first losing season in six years, despite the play of sophomore Luigi Garafano (West Haven), who has generated seven goals and 18 points, and freshman goalie Derrick Del Cegna (Stratford), who has logged three shutouts.

WOMEN'S SOCCER Juniors Jen Fallon (Milford) and Deanna Young (Dalton, Mass.) have combined for 32 goals and 74 points, sparking the Lady Pioneers to their second straight winning season.

WOMEN'S VOLLEYBALL The record may be disappointing, but the performance of sophomores Karin Mann (Portland) and Renata Zujewski (Shelton) has kept the team competitive.

Senior defensive end Marco Soto has been sacking opposing quarterbacks with startling frequency, as Tom Kleine of St. John's discovers.

Respect well earned

Jen Fallon is the cornerstone of the University's women's soccer team, a Division II All-New England choice as a freshman and sophomore and a probable repeat selection as a junior this fall. Her scoring prowess — highlighted by a career-record 50 goals — has brought a young program instant respect, including two straight winning seasons. "I don't really care about personal records," Jen has said more than once. "I want to win. I want respect for the team." The junior from nearby Milford also commands respect as a lacrosse player; she earned All-America honors last spring. D.H.

1994-95 Annual Fund goal:

Lofty yet attainable

By Susan DiGangi

Classroom renovations, library books, new program development and student aid — these were among the visible results of Sacred Heart University's successful 1993-94 Annual Fund campaign that reached a record $540,000 in donations by June 30, the end of the fiscal year.

This year, to keep pace with the University's remarkable growth, the Annual Fund campaign goal has been increased to $700,000. The figure includes $500,000 in unrestricted funds to support general operating expenses, faculty/student interaction and student services, and $200,000 for scholarships. And this year, more than ever before, participation from all constituencies will be the catalyst behind the University's continued success.

"The University is growing steadily in enrollment, academic programs and facilities. That growth drives our need for increased support for the Annual Fund," said Laurie Bellico '88, director of alumni relations and annual giving. While the goal is ambitious, it is attainable, she says, indicating that the University is already well on its way to meeting its need for scholarship monies.

The sixth annual Scholarship Dinner and Discovery Awards gala on Oct. 15 contributed a gross of $175,000 toward this effort, thanks to the generosity of 355 Sacred Heart University supporters. In addition, the University received a generous corporate gift of $50,000 from General Electric Co. in Fairfield.

But it is the participation of all the University's constituencies that will truly make the difference this year, said Bellico. Of the 10 sources of Annual Fund support — trustees, alumni, corporations and foundations, parents, faculty and staff, vendors, friends and honorary doctorates — the University will look to its alumni and trustees for leadership support.

This year, the Alumni goal is $121,000, a 4.4 percent increase over last year's objective of $116,000. As a Sacred Heart University graduate, Bellico is especially proud of the strength of alumni giving over the past six years, noting that donations have increased 145 percent since the 1989 yield of $47,033.

"The strength of alumni giving adds immeasurably to the University's ability to appeal to new avenues of support, particularly from those outside the traditional Sacred Heart University family," said the director. She notes, too, that she's heartened every time she talks with an alumnus who recounts how much the University's name and stature have developed over the years.

"As alumni, every time the University reaches a new level of recognition, the value of our Sacred Heart degree grows right along with it. The Annual Fund ensures that such growth continues," she said.

Last year, alumni support included gifts from 1,974 people, with an average gift of $50.19. Bellico estimates that approximately 100 new alumni participants are needed to attain this year's goal. She reminds alumni to be mindful of matching gifts programs that may be available at their workplace, which can double or triple the size of their Annual Fund gift.

Similarly, the University hopes to increase significantly support from other constituent groups, particularly trustees, friends and business. Last year, donor groups who surpassed their giving goals, in addition to alumni, included vendors and honorary doctorates, at 362 and 159 percent, respectively, followed by foundation and staff at 114 and 102 percent.

"We thank those who have supported us in the past and ask that they continue to support the Annual Fund, and whenever possible, to consider increasing their gifts," said Bellico.

"Participation toward a common good — the Sacred Heart University community past, present and future — that's what the Annual Fund is really all about," she said.

Annual Fund's climb

Six stories high, West and South halls provide a home-away-from-home for students and, earlier, jobs for construction workers.

“It’s the economy, stupid,” was a snappy campaign slogan that helped elect a president. Simplistic perhaps, but to many a statement of vision.

That vision has never been exhibited better than at Sacred Heart University, where the dramatic growth of the University over the past five years — even throughout a recession — has helped to keep the local economy afloat.

Making a University's remarkable growth has a cascading effect difference in the community

“To put the impact into perspective, all you need to realize is that in the last few years Sacred Heart University’s construction projects represented the only major contract for workers like the bricklayers in Fairfield and New Haven counties,” said Michael Giaquinto, the University’s director of facilities, management and construction. “Our projects have had a profound impact on putting people to work; concrete and asphalt workers, bricklayers, landscapers and construction companies.”

By Richard Weizel

Indeed, with $27 million in campus construction over the past three years, economists and leaders in the business community say the local economy has been helped in two crucial ways:

- The ongoing expansion has created hundreds of jobs, a fact that became even more significant than usual because of the economic downturn;

- The establishment of campus housing has brought 1,050 resident students to the Town of Fairfield from throughout the country — students who pump a tremendous amount of money into local businesses.

With an annual $35.2 million budget and $20.1 million (excluding salaries) in operating expenses, the economic impact generated locally by the University is at least $100 million a year. When intangibles are factored in, such as the way it has become a center for the arts and cultural activities, and how it contributes to the overall quality of life, it's probably much greater.

Enormous impact on local economy

"Sacred Heart University's impact on the local economy is enormous, you really cannot overestimate its importance," said Thomas D. Corrigan, Ph.D., associate professor of economics and faculty chair for Financial Studies, Government & Law. "Students and faculty spend money in food stores, restaurants, gas stations, clothing stores and other businesses and the dollars keep on turning over.

"Now, with the University's growth, students from all over the country are living here and spending money here. It's a cascading effect that builds and builds, like compounding interest," Corrigan added.

John Young, the University's director of finance, said that with a total of 450 people employed, representing annual salaries of $15.1 million, there is clearly an enormous amount of money being spent locally by faculty and other employees, as well as by students.

"It's not something you can calculate down to the exact dollar, there is no way of doing that," said Young. "But it's obvious that people who work here are spending their money in a variety of ways. And, of course, that goes especially for resident students."

Dean of Students Kevin Kelly said student spending provides a major boost to the economies of Bridgeport as well as to the towns of Fairfield and Trumbull.

"Merchants in all three of those municipalities will tell you just how important Sacred Heart University students have been to their businesses," said Kelly. "In addition to that, many of our students are also working in part-time jobs and as volunteers in places like the Jewish Community Center and at the Jewish Home for the Elderly."

That kind of service to the community is a carryover from last year when the entire University community — comprised of students, faculty, staff and alumni — far exceeded its goal of donating 30,000 hours of volunteer service in the University's 30th Anniversary year.

And it is programs such as the Saturday Hispanic Academy — a science and math program at Sacred Heart University designed to help Bridgeport's Latino high school students stay in school — that impacts the local economy by helping to educate more skilled workers.

Academic, cultural enrichment

In fact, the University is helping economically in a lot of ways other than student and faculty dollars being spent in local restaurants, shopping malls, movie theaters and coffee shops — though these are important ways in which the University is impacting the local and regional economy, according to Gary Levine, executive director of the Fairfield Chamber of Commerce.

Levine said it is also the University's multi-faceted academic curriculums and adult education courses, as well as its growing music, theater and lecture programs that contribute a strong local presence that helps to attract people from outside the community and provides residents here with a wide range of educational and cultural activities.

"First of all, during the school year the town is filled with students from Sacred Heart University. You can't go into any of the town's eight or nine coffee shops without running into students with their books and laptop computers," said Levine. "But the wide variety of concerts, lectures and shows at Sacred Heart is also providing people with wonderful cultural events, and that contributes to the local economy by providing education and entertainment that gets people out of the house and into the community where they eat, drink and shop."

Paul Timpanelli '69, president of the Bridgeport Regional Business Council, said that Sacred Heart University's rapid growth has made it a major economic factor in the region. "I don't think there's any question that it has a very significant and far-reaching impact on the region's economic health," said Timpanelli. "Each new student and each job created by the University adds enormously to the region's overall economic growth."

Workers unload furniture for newly built West Hall.

Local businesses prosper as a result of money spent by the University community.

Giaquinto said that the $27 million of campus construction — which includes the building of six residence halls, the creation of a more functional and aesthetically pleasing main entrance off Park Avenue, and installation of a synthetic-surface, multi-purpose athletic field, running track and lighted tennis courts — has been even more crucial to the area's economy because of the recession. "There just wasn't any other building of this magnitude going on anywhere else in the area during the last few years, and we're continuing to build as we head into the middle and end of the decade," he said.

That's good news for general contracting companies like P. Francini of Derby, which has been able to put about 75 people to work during various building projects at the University. "It's helped to employ a lot of people, which was really important last year when things were really tough and there wasn't any work around," said Ted Grieder, the company's general superintendent. "I don't think people realize how important Sacred Heart University's expansion has been in providing people with work."

And, with the University providing a continuous and growing pool of graduates who live, work and raise families in the community and throughout the region after completing their education, the overall economic impact cannot be measured only in student dollars or construction jobs. Corrigan said it must also be measured by the long-term benefits a growing and thriving University provides in terms of adding to a community's stability and overall quality of living.

"While we cannot calculate these factors into the equation, they are certainly as important over the long-term as the more obvious and immediate economic benefits," said Corrigan.

"The majority of our students do stay in the local area after graduating and we help to place them in 300 companies throughout the state," said Judy Filipek-Rittaler, Sacred Heart University's director of career services. "We are an important source of employment for many of these companies."

Laurie Bellico, director of annual giving and alumni relations, agreed that the University's graduates are making a major economic contribution. "From the very beginning, the University's alumni have had a positive effect on the local economy by settling, working and raising families here," she said. "But now that impact is even greater. More than 85 percent of our 13,400 alumni live in Southwestern Connecticut and more than half work in Fairfield and New Haven counties. As time goes on, those numbers will continue to grow."

Bellico herself is a breathing example of those percentages. Raised in Trumbull, she chose to attend Sacred Heart University — she's a member of the Class of 1988 — and has worked at her alma mater for nearly six years.

"Watching the University grow and gain in prestige and stature has been very exciting for me," said Bellico. "When I was a student this was a small commuter school, but now it has become a residential university that is having a major impact in many ways...including on the region's economy."

James J. Hayden, Ed.M., Ed.D., is principal of Freehold Township High School in Freehold, N.J. He received the Evelyn Headley Award for Outstanding Dissertation in May 1994 from the Rutgers Graduate School of Education.

Paul F. Kriemeyer of Black Rock, Bridgeport, is vice president at People's Bank, Bridgeport.

Janis Pataky of Stamford is president of Studio 32, an advertising, graphics and events marketing company in Stamford. She was recently featured in one of the Connecticut Post's "Woman of Substance" articles, notably for her role in reviving the Stamford Classic Marathon, the first U.S. marathon, run from Stamford to New York in 1896. She told the Post "The marathon is a good way to promote tourism, economic development and to pull the community together." Pataky was president of the University's alumni board of directors from 1978-83, and was alumni representative to the Board of Trustees from 1988-91.

Robert Hallock of Fairfield was recently promoted to sergeant by the Westport police. He joined the force in September 1971, was named a department detective in 1978 and named a youth officer in August 1980. He became the department's first Drug Abuse Resistance Education officer in September 1992. He is also a certified emergency medical technician.

Timothy Sullivan, a native of Bridgeport and parishioner at St. Augustine Cathedral for 46 years, was recently made a permanent deacon for the Diocese of Bridgeport. He is employed as a counselor at the Easter Seal Rehabilitation Center of Southwestern Connecticut in Stamford. Sullivan also graduated from Christ the King Seminary in Southport and earned master's degrees in both theology and counseling. He studied Spanish at the Instituto de Idiomas in Bolivia and later earned certification from the National Board of Certified Counselors.

Vincent Ursone of Stamford, a teacher at Westhill High School in Stamford, was recently re-elected treasurer of the Stamford Education Association, a 1,000-member teacher's union.

Patty Hemenway Cook was the subject of a Connecticut Post feature recently. The former lead in the Broadway and touring company productions of Evita! is now the event manager of the Regina A. Quick Center for the Arts at Fairfield University. She was also one of the founding members of the Cabaret Theatre at the University, which later became the Downtown Cabaret Theatre in Bridgeport.

Frances Pierwola was installed as the president of the Kiwanis Club of Westport on Oct. 5. She is the town's conservation director. It's notable that the club installed a president, first and second vice presidents who happen to be women, since the Kiwanis International organization did not admit women until 1987.

Matthew Kozlowski, son of Walt Kozlowski and his wife, Susan, was born June 10, 1994.

'74

Dullivan C. Chavis, formerly of Milford, has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Air Force. He is based at Hickam Air Force Base in Honolulu. He earned a master's degree from Northern Michigan University in 1976.

'75

Bernice A. Donahue of Trumbull, vice president of the board of directors of the nonprofit Child Guidance Center of Greater Bridgeport, has been elected to the board of directors at Fairfield First Bank & Trust Co. She is the former assistant dean of students and director of career services at Sacred Heart University (1981-85).

Eveyln (Lynn) McNamara of Hamden is the associate director of the Connecticut Conference of Municipalities, headquartered in New Haven.

Eddyce J. Merritt is the owner and director of Lil' Blessings Academy and Daycare, Inc. in Bridgeport. She provides programs for children of nursery, pre-K and kindergarten levels and is working on adding accommodations for infants and toddlers.

Comedian Kevin Nealon, who recently started in his ninth season with NBC's New York-based Saturday Night Live, is adding to his repertoire this fall with a new program, Amazing America, which he hosts, on the Discovery Channel. He will also star in a movie scheduled to be in production soon based on the "Hans and Franz" routine from Saturday Night Live.

Richard Belden is the Town of Branford's new finance director. He resides in Shelton. He previously was treasurer and financial officer in Woodbury. Three years ago he ran for mayor of Shelton.

Fairfield native Ray Giovanni, vice president of Shawmut Bank and manager of the Fairfield branch, again served as chairman of the St. Vincent's Medical Center Aquathon to support cancer screening and education programs. The 24-hour swim took place at Fairfield University Aug. 5-6 in conjunction with the Swim Across the Sound. He is also active in such community organizations as the United Way, Junior Achievement and the American Cancer Society of Eastern Fairfield County.

Rev. Gregory Huminski has been assigned to St. Matthew's Parish in Norwalk following the end of his year in Campus Ministry at Sacred Heart University.

Denise Plante, formerly of Norwalk and now living with her husband Robert in Carlsbad, Calif., is raising two children, including a daughter who recently won second place in a national Parent-Teacher Association Reflections contest. Allison Plante, 8, wrote an essay about her maternal grandfather, who died in 1991. The piece won first place in November 1993 at Mission Estancia Elementary School where Allison was in second grade. Then the essay advanced through the county to the state level, where she took first place against all grades (through 12). In June the family learned that the essay had been chosen second in the nation.

'77

Joseph R. Nuzzo of North Haven has moved up a few grades. After teaching elementary school for 15 years he has moved on to the middle school and is now teaching seventh grade science and health in Meriden Public Schools.

'79

Sean Mahar is studying at the University of Iowa toward a Ph.D. in environmental health and preventive medicine. He also earned a license as a professional engineer. He and wife Ellen (Cwilichoski) Mahar '81 live in Iowa City. Ellen is a substitute teacher in the junior high school.

Matt Boyle of Monroe, a product of Catholic schools from elementary school through college, is the first executive director of the Connecticut Federation of Catholic School Parents (CFCSP), formed in 1990 by the state's Catholic bishops and based in Bridgeport. In addition, he was selected by federation members this summer to the newly created National Advisory Committee for Parents of Catholic School Students. The 13-member advisory committee will work with the Office for Catholic School Parent Associations, a new arm of the U.S. Catholic Conference Department of Education. These organizations will aim both to influence public policy decisions on issues related to school choice and to educate the public about Catholic schools.

Marilyn Cormack of Stratford is a social worker who works with the mentally ill and victims of domestic violence in the Valley. She is involved in the United Way, member of the board of directors of Ansonia Community Action, member of the Committee for Cultural Diversity in Ansonia, and co-chairwoman of the Valley Council of Health and Human Services Organization, which she helped found.

Kayla Ann Chuba, daughter of Gary Chuba and his wife, Diane, was born March 7, 1994.

'82

Nicole Merie, daughter of Marc Lorenti and his wife, Mildred, was born May 4, 1994.

'83

Rev. Bohdan Kin, MARS, was appointed principal of St. Mary Star of the Sea school in New London this fall. Kin has served as pastor of St. Mary's Ukrainian Church for the past six years. Although a priest in the Eastern Catholic church, he has permission to celebrate Roman Catholic rites. He is currently pursuing a master's degree in educational administration here.

Ray Bastarache '83:

Laughter makes his business world go 'round

By Don Harrison

Many of Ray Bastarache's sentences are punctuated with a hearty laugh.

"I'm tired but very happy," says the 33-year-old president and chief executive officer of the Barter Network Inc.

There is ample reason for the joy and fatigue in the frenetic life of this wunderkind of commerce and 1983 Sacred Heart University graduate.

Bastarache has parlayed an engaging personality, 70-hour work weeks and an indefatigable desire to succeed into a $16 million enterprise in Milford. His net worth, he says almost as an afterthought, is "in excess of $2 million."

A workaholic bachelor until 18 months ago, Bastarache has buttoned up the personal side of his life by marrying Cathy Lassiter, a woman he met at the Bing Crosby Celebrity Golf Tournament in Winston-Salem, N.C. What does his bride say about his business lifestyle?

"She thinks I'm involved in too many community activities," he states with a typical laugh.

The Barter Network's growth has been both rapid and impressive. Founded in 1985 with $3,000 borrowed from his parents, the business has mushroomed from three employees, a handful of clients and average monthly trading of $6,000 to 34 employees, more than 3,700 members and $1.5 million in trading activities per month.

Originally operated from a 10-by-10 makeshift office in a warehouse on Bridgeport's East Side, the company now conducts business from second-floor offices in a handsome 9,200-square-foot structure in downtown Milford, with branches in Hartford and Hyannis on Cape Cod. However, Bastarache is contemplating moving his headquarters to a 30,000-foot building at the head of Milford Harbor; he will complete the purchase of the unoccupied structure in December.

"The barter concept has been around for a long time,"

Bastarache explains. "Basically, the concept operated on a one-on-one basis where there had to be a coincidence of wants. You had to want what I have and I had to want what you have."

Barter exchanges had their origin in the United States during the 1960s, according to Bastarache. Today, they act as "third-party recordkeepers."

Products and services are traded through a system employing trade dollars or credits issued by the exchange. They seem to thrive, he says, in both good and bad economic times.

"We do a lot of work with the Barter Network. They're very helpful to us," says John Ryan, general sales manager for WEZN (99.9 FM) radio in Bridgeport. "For some of our promotions, we offer trips to Bermuda, the Bahamas, Europe. We'll contact them and they'll get the trips in exchange for air time. Then they'll trade the air time to another company for their goods. The system works for us."

To join the Barter Network, companies such as Volvo International Tennis, Scribner's Restaurant, Mt. Snow Resort and Valley Cable pay $350 and put up $100 worth of goods or services. The network's commission ranges from 12.5 to 15 percent per transaction.

Son of French-Canadian immigrants

Bastarache is the third of four children born to French-Canadian parents, Osias and Mae, who immigrated to Stratford from the province of New Brunswick in 1955. Mrs. Bastarache has vivid memories of Ray's early work ethic.

"When he was nine or 10 years old, he used to deliver the TV Guide and get five cents a copy," she recalls. "He'd go out the whole day and look for customers."

Early on, much of his emphasis was on soccer; he starred in the sport at Stratford High School and was awarded a soccer scholarship to Sacred Heart University. Even with All-America Lawrence Taplah '83 as a teammate, Bastarache was the leading scorer when both were juniors, generating 10 goals and 10 assists for 30 points. But because of other, more global priorities, Ray elected not to play as a senior.

"I've always been the type of person who is outspoken; I have the ability to focus people in the right direction. I'm a straight shooter," he says. "I also had my business classes and they required a lot of attention."

The record is there: Raymond J. Bastarache served as president of the freshman and sophomore classes, and then was elected president of the Student Government as a junior and senior. He graduated cum laude with a double major in finance and business administration.

However, the overriding factor in his decision to forego soccer was an invitation to serve as an intern to University President Thomas J. Melady, Ph.D. in Washington, D.C., where he was on leave as assistant secretary of education for post-secondary education. Bastarache spent much of the spring and summer prior to his senior year with Melady in the nation's capital.

And they remain close: An autographed photograph of Thomas and Margaret Melady with Pope John Paul II hangs on the wall behind the expansive black desk in Bastarache's office, a gift from Melady's more recent tenure as U.S. ambassador to the Vatican.

Another person who had a pronounced effect on Ray's life during his undergraduate days was Frederick McKinney, a professor of economics. "A dynamic, bright individual," Bastarache recalls. "I always walked out of his classroom feeling I had learned something. He was very challenging."

These days, Bastarache seems to be meeting all challenges. In 1992, he was named Business Person of the Year by the Milford Chamber of Commerce. He has received three major awards from the International Reciprocal Trade Association, an Alexandria, Va.-based group he now serves as president. Four years ago, he received national recognition as one of Top 100 Young Entrepreneurs under 30, and the company was ranked 13th. The Small Business Association selected him as Connecticut's Young Entrepreneur of 1989.

He is chairman of the United Way of Milford's 1994 campaign, which was approaching its record goal of $1,075,000 in early fall. He serves on this board and that committee and operates two other companies. He is a part owner and director of the Skyhawks of the semi-pro United States Basketball League.

In the recent past, Bastarache was a member of his alma mater's Alumni Council, but a myriad of other commitments forced him to withdraw, at least for a while. Nonetheless, he likes what he sees.

"I'm pleased where the University is headed," he says. "President Cernera has taken it to the next level."

PRESIDENT'S ANNUAL REPORT

*In his annual address to the University community on
Aug. 29, 1994,*

President Anthony J. Cernera, Ph.D.

provided an overview of the past year's accomplishments while outlining the opportunities and challenges on the horizon.

I. The State of the University

As we begin the 1994-95 academic year, I am pleased to report that the University continues to grow and develop in ways that can make all of us both grateful and proud. The 1993-94 academic year was an extraordinary year for Sacred Heart University. It was a year of celebration and affirmation, of remembering and dreaming, of realization and planning.

We chose to use the 1993-94 academic year as our time to celebrate the 30th anniversary of the University's mission and work. It was our opportunity to renew our commitment to the educational tasks for which we were founded in 1963. Our pioneering spirit and our willingness to respond to the educational needs of the people of the region have characterized this University community from its beginning. Our renewed willingness and commitment to grow and develop in ways that are consistent with the founding vision of the University and yet responsive to a significantly different societal context have allowed us to respond successfully to many of today's challenging educational needs.

Our principal way of celebrating our 30th anniversary was through our 30,000 Hours of Community Service project. Members of the Sacred Heart University community participated in activities that ranged from tutoring at the Mercy Learning Center to serving meals at the Thomas Merton Soup Kitchen. We joined in the important work of Habitat for Humanity and visited the aged and infirm at the Jewish Home for the Elderly. We participated in literacy volunteer efforts in Stamford and collected books and scholarly journals for the University of El Salvador. What a wonderful testament to the kind of University community we are seeking to be every day as we go about preparing women and men to live in and make their contributions to the contemporary world! On behalf of the entire University community, I thank Eilene Bertsch, Assistant Vice President of Academic Affairs, for her leadership on this project.

The extraordinary growth and development of the University according to our Strategic Plan was recognized and affirmed by a broad array of people and external agencies last year.

First, the NEASC Commission on Institutions of Higher Education "commended the University for its clarity of vision and certainty of purpose" and was delighted that "a defined character and purpose permeated the University's current activities and plans for the future to an astonishing degree." They recognized that the University had achieved "fiscal stability and strength, thus effectuating a significant financial turnaround since 1988." More recently, Charles Cook, director of the commission, said of the growth going on at Sacred Heart University: "That kind of growth is even more impressive when you consider there are far fewer 18-year-olds in the region than there were a few years ago...What's been going on at Sacred Heart is very, very impressive."

Second, we have had more prospective full-time undergraduate students inquire about and apply to Sacred Heart University this year than at any other time in our history. The inquiry pool grew to 43,803 for this year's entering class as compared to 34,472 inquiries last year and 3,271 in 1990. The total applicant pool grew from 2,605 last year to 3,036 this year. In 1990 we had a total of 907 applicants.

Third, during the 1993-94 year we raised more money in our annual fund-raising efforts and in our other fund-raising campaigns than we had raised in any previous year in our history. In fact, we raised over $5,150,000 in gifts and pledges this year as compared to $3,850,000 last year. Please recall that in 1987-1988 we raised a total of $737,000.

When we review the efforts to implement the academic objectives within the Strategic Plan, we can be pleased with our many accomplishments. Five new faculty members joined the ranks of the full-time faculty last year, thus allowing us to increase the number of full-time faculty to 111. Our application for our first Fulbright scholar was favorably received, and we are pleased to welcome Monsieur Henri Etienne. Professor Etienne will work with our management and international business faculty.

The Title VI grant from the Department of Education is helping us in our efforts to enhance our modern language offerings as well as to extend our efforts to develop a more comprehensive global perspective on the campus. The new three-year, $1 million grant from the National Science Foundation will allow us to expand the important project that Dr. Babu George has led in the area of science and math teacher education. In addition, we received approval from the State of Connecticut to begin to offer the Masters in Computer Science.

Grants from URCG and ACT are assisting faculty members in their professional development efforts as teacher/scholars. I am pleased to have been able to award seven sabbaticals based on recommendations that I received from Dr. Thomas Trebon and the Sabbatical Committee. Our second Celebration of Scholarship provided a rich opportunity for faculty and staff to present to their colleagues numerous concrete examples of scholarly achievement.

The programs of the Institute for Religious Education and Pastoral Studies reached over 2,000 students during the 1993-94 academic year. The Center for Christian-Jewish Understanding's year of significant activity was highlighted by our meeting with Pope John Paul II on April 28. The meeting, which I attended with Rabbis Jack Bemporad and Joseph Ehrenkranz of our Center, Cardinal John O'Connor of New

Oct. 29, 1993: Lucie McKinney, founder of the Stewart B. McKinney Foundation, is presented the degree, Doctor of Humane Letters, honoris causa, by President Anthony J. York, and Archbishop William Keeler of Baltimore, was an important recognition by the Pope and the Vatican of the work and the promise of our Center.

Last year we opened our largest residential facility, South Hall, and began construction of West Hall, which will open with the arrival of our full-time undergraduates at the beginning of this Fall semester. There was a significant increase in student life programming and activities during the year. I am pleased with the efforts of the Student Life staff to develop their programs in a comprehensive fashion. The University was also fortunate to see a major increase in the activities offered by the Campus Ministry Department. The new athletic field was a significant step for us in the development of the campus. Also, to the list of sports at the University, we added ice hockey and tennis for men as well as field hockey and equestrian for women.

Next week we will welcome over 1,900 full-time undergraduate students to the campus, of whom 605 will be first-year students and 150 are transfer students. This means that we have the fifth largest freshman class among the 22 Catholic colleges and universities in New England. Here is a brief profile on the entering class of first-year students: Sixty-four percent come from the top half of their high school class compared to 52 percent of the class entering two years ago. They represent 18 states, six countries, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. Nineteen percent are AHANA students representing African, Hispanic, Asian and Native American backgrounds; three percent are international students. Seventy-five percent of our first-year students are residential, bringing our resident population to 1,050 from a total of 85 students in the fall of 1990.

For September 1995, admissions information has already been requested by 32,295 students, an important early indicator that our enrollment should continue to withstand the demographic and economic challenges facing higher education today. In addition, as of last week, 558 students have responded positively to our Open House invitation for Saturday, Sept. 10. With over 1,500 visitors expected on campus, we expect this Open House to be the largest in our history. This University event is critical to our enrollment goals, and I thank everyone in advance for participating in the day's activities.

During the 1993-94 academic year, enrollment patterns of part-time undergraduate and graduate students reflected the challenges of the region. In the fall semester we had 1,778 part-time undergraduates and 1,487 graduate students. Among the independent colleges Sacred Heart University continues to be the largest provider of undergraduate education to the working adult in Connecticut. Our MBA program in Luxembourg reached a new high of 115 matriculated students during this past year. Last June 32 students were awarded their masters in business administration at the Commencement exercises in Luxembourg City. The University is deeply indebted to Professor Rawlin Fairbaugh for his pioneering efforts in establishing and directing this program. Not only do we have a solid program in that country, but we are now in a position to develop several similar programs in other parts of Europe.

Turning to the financial side of the University, we finished the 1993-94 academic year having exceeded the objectives that we had set for ourselves. The University closed the year with a balanced budget, having met its commitment to the Financial Reserve Fund for the sixth year in a row. We will again have recorded a surplus at the end of the year. After the audit is completed, the Reserve Fund should be approximately $10 million, and total endowment and quasi-endowment funds will have reached $12.8 million. While continued attention to the growth of these funds is critical for us as we move ahead, we can be proud of the fact that these funds have grown by 815 percent since 1988, when we had $1.4 million in the endowment. All of us have played a role in accomplishing this. Thank you.

With regard to renovations, we are continuing our program of enhancing academic and student life spaces every year. During this summer, the second floor of the South Wing was converted to new classrooms, and offices for the faculty of Social and Behavioral Sciences are being completed. Also during this past summer, a new servery and kitchen area in the Dining Hall was constructed with funding from the food service contractor. We shall continue our renovation program during the year in a manner designed to cause the least interference with academic and student life activities.

I am aware that I have only touched the surface of the many important activities and events that are going on at the University every day. All of these activities have helped to move us forward as we seek to implement our Strategic Plan, making us a stronger and more viable institution of higher education.

Jan. 24, 1994: U.S. Senator Joseph Lieberman (D-Conn.) announces the University's receipt of a $1,045,000 grant from the National Science Foundation, which will be used to expand the teacher-training program, SMARTNET 2000. Thomas Trebon, Ph.D., provost and vice president for academic affairs, listens in.

I am also aware that we could not possibly be where we are today without the extraordinary dedication and commitment of so many people in this community. It is this extraordinary dedication and commitment that are seen and felt by our students. This past year, I asked my Presidential Interns to conduct personal interviews with members of the Class of 1994. I wanted the graduating seniors to have an opportunity to reflect on their time here and to share with me their positive and negative experiences at the University. Since the first part of my presentation has been about the past year, I thought you might like to hear a few of the responses from the 99 seniors who were interviewed in May.

Among their memorable experiences:

- making the dean's list
- caring professors
- class project
- one-on-one faculty
- improvement in academic ability due to motivating teachers who pushed you hard

When asked whether they would recommend Sacred Heart University to other students, over 78 percent gave an unqualified "Yes" for the following reasons:

- quality education
- sense of belonging
- friendly, personal environment
- excellent professors
- professional staff
- caring teachers and administrators
- personal development and career training
- ideal for learning experience
- school is headed in the right direction

When I take a step back, I am struck by the fact that we have done something here that is perhaps miraculous. We are growing and developing in an environment where forces are strongly pulling against such an occurrence. We are a more viable and healthier institution today in no small part because of the determination of so many of us to ensure the continuing dynamic growth of Sacred Heart University. We were bold enough to believe in ourselves and in the strength that we have as an institution of higher education when few in the outside world believed in us. We were bold enough to believe that a community with a vision and a deep sense of purpose could play a significant role in the shaping of its collective future, a future that would be filled with bright promise. We continue to be bold enough to believe that with the continuing help of God, there is even greater promise for this University as we face the challenges of the next decade. We are even more than we have been.

II: Positioning the University for 1999

During this past year, a large portion of the University community participated in the development and shaping of the new Strategic Plan. I want to particularly recognize the major role that Dr. Donna Dodge, S.C., Dr. Richard Farmer, Dr. Edward Malin and Dr. Kristen Wenzel, O.S.U., played in working with me to guide the process. I am very grateful. The five of us formed a steering committee that met so often that the spouses of three of us each concluded independently that their spouses spent more time with the steering committee than with them. I have not yet heard from the Sisters of Charity or the Ursulines, but I suspect that I will. The Strategic Planning Committee of 29 members and the members of the sub-committees worked long and hard at analyzing our strengths and weaknesses and identifying the opportunities and threats in the external environment. Please accept the thanks and appreciation of the University community for all your hard work.

I am recommending that during the next five years, Sacred Heart University position itself as one of the leading Catholic universities in New England. There are currently 22 Catholic colleges and universities in New England. We rank third in overall student enrollment, ninth in the number of full-time undergraduates, eighth in the size of the entering freshman class—based on Fall '93 numbers—and ninth in size of annual budgets—based on figures for 1991-92. Our objective is to be recognized publicly for what we are in fact already becoming—one of the five leading Catholic universities in New England.

How will we achieve this positioning? We will achieve this position in the marketplace by undertaking five broad initiatives. These are:

1. deepening the character and quality of Sacred Heart University as a comprehensive Catholic university
2. attaining the enrollment goals as articulated in the new Strategic Plan
3. further developing the campus according to a revised master plan
4. reaching the financial goals that we have established for ourselves
5. increasing significantly the gifts and grants that the University is raising each year.

First Initiative: Deepening the Character and Quality of Sacred Heart University as a Comprehensive Catholic University

The primary way for us to achieve this positioning in the market will be by deepening the character and quality of Sacred Heart University as a comprehensive Catholic university. What will this require of us? I would suggest that we will need to focus on seven aspects of our identity as a comprehensive Catholic university during this next planning period.

First, we will develop new academic programs and enhance existing ones at the undergraduate and graduate levels. These programs, by their distinctiveness and quality, will contribute significantly to the character of the University. We will take to the Board of Trustees at its annual retreat next year a comprehensive long-range plan for the academic area. Major academic initiatives will be made in the health sciences, management, education and in several targeted liberal arts disciplines. It will be imperative for us, in order to complement these efforts at new program development, to complete a full cycle of academic program review during this strategic planning period.

A revised undergraduate core curriculum will express more fully the mission of the University. It will provide the principal vehicle through which our undergraduate students will encounter and critically engage the Catholic intellectual tradition and the liberal arts tradition.

The second aspect of our university life that we will need to attend to as part of this first initiative is the growth and development of the faculty. The faculty will play a critical role in the strategic positioning of the University. We will seek to increase the number of full-time faculty, improve the performance review system for full-time and adjunct faculty, complete and implement a comprehensive faculty development plan and complete implementation of our plan to achieve competitive salaries for full-time and adjunct faculty. We will work aggressively to attract men and women to the faculty who are committed to furthering the mission of the University, and we will also work to develop a greater degree of racial and cultural diversity within the faculty. We will develop alternative contract arrangements that will allow us to meet our strategic objectives.

Third, excellence in teaching is one of the greatest strengths of the University. John Henry Newman reminded us in the 19th Century that we find information in books, but real learning must come from exposure to those in whom it lives. The real learning Newman wrote about is a hallmark of a Sacred Heart University education. A continuing commitment to such excellence is of critical importance in deepening the character and quality of the University. During this implementation period, we will continue to develop new and diverse learning opportunities within the curriculum. Among other steps to be taken, it will be critical for us to provide increased opportunities for members of the faculty to learn and utilize appropriate instructional technology in the classroom.

Fourth, while striving to be recognized as one of the leading Catholic universities in New England, we will improve the quality of student services and programs in order to enhance our students' personal growth and development. These improved and expanded services and programs will be critical to our efforts to achieve the University's mission:

The University aims to assist in the development of people who are knowledgeable of self, rooted in faith, educated in mind, compassionate in heart, responsive to social and civic obligations, and able to respond to an ever-changing world. It does this by calling forth the intellectual potential of its students, nurturing each one's spiritual and moral growth, and deepening in them a sense of social responsibility.

Among the other goals that we are committed to achieving is that of developing and implementing an integrated comprehensive student services plan to address the educational and developmental needs of the University's diverse student population. We will work to increase to 65 percent the number of undergraduate students involved in co-curricular or intercollegiate activities, concentrate on student leadership development, and implement a holistic wellness model in our student affairs division. In addition, we will implement a comprehensive plan for the University's participation in intercollegiate sports after such a plan has been approved by the Board of Trustees.

Fifth, we will increase the effectiveness of our response to the educational needs of adult learners. The non-traditional-age student—the person over 22 years of age who is pursuing an undergraduate degree—has been a significant member of the Sacred Heart University community for many years. This will continue to be the case. During the five years covered by our previous Strategic Plan, the major emphasis was placed on reversing the dramatic decline in the full-time undergraduate population at the University. During the next five years, in addition to increasing the full-time undergraduate population, it is our intention that the University continue to make a significant contribution to the education of adults in Connecticut at the undergraduate and graduate levels. We will need to assess and respond to the needs of adult students in a more comprehensive way. We will explore and develop, if appropriate, an undergraduate degree program focused exclusively on adult students, and we will better prepare faculty and staff to work with them.

Sixth, the University will take as full advantage as possible of the technological developments that are occurring in teaching and learning. We will implement a comprehensive technological plan that encompasses instruction, administration, and library and learning resources. By the end of this planning period, every full-time student will be equipped with and every part-time student will have access to a computer. In addition, by the fall of 1995, every full-time faculty member and administrator will have a networked computer.

Seventh, the University will continue to develop and nurture its Catholic character so that it is experienced as an integral part of the University's life. Students who receive an undergraduate degree from Sacred Heart University should have had ample opportunity to engage the Catholic intellectual tradition during their course of studies. All of our students—undergraduate and graduate—should be able to think critically about the ethical issues in our society and within the professions for which they are preparing. Our objective beyond the curriculum is to provide the environment in which our students can appropriate in a critical fashion their own religious traditions and develop a greater appreciation of the other great religious traditions of the world. Opportunities to serve others, especially the poor, are an integral part of the education of our students. The University has a responsibility to serve the church and the wider religious community. The work of our Institute for Religious Education and Pastoral Studies will continue to serve the religious education needs of the region and further develop the pastoral studies dimension of its work. The Center for Christian-Jewish Understanding will serve the Church and the Jewish community by providing a key place for inter-religious research and dialogue around theological issues of concern to both religious traditions.

Second Initiative: Enrollment Growth

In addition to deepening the character and the quality of Sacred Heart University as a comprehensive Catholic university, the second initiative that we will undertake in order to achieve our position by 1999 will be to increase our enrollment. I am proposing that we set these enrollment goals for ourselves:

Goal 1: Increase the number of full-time undergraduate students to 1,900-2,100 by FY '99.

Goal 2: Increase by FY '99 the number of:

- Part-Time Undergraduate Students: 2,000-2,200
- Part-Time Graduate Students: 1,700-2,000
- Full-Time Graduate Students: 150-200

The University's primary campuses will continue to be in Connecticut, with approximately 90 percent of its students studying on these campuses. Fairfield will continue to be the main site of the University during this next planning period. The other 10 percent of its students will be studying in our programs at other sites outside of Connecticut. These sites may include other places in New England or perhaps different parts of the United States. They will include our MBA program in Luxembourg and other countries in Europe and perhaps in Asia or Latin America.

Third Initiative: Continued Campus Development

The third initiative concerns the master plan development. During the previous strategic plan, we made significant strides in reaching our objectives regarding the physical facilities. Our overriding concern has been to transform what was a high school

Cernera for the University's 30,000 Hours of Community Service project. facility into a modern university campus. But much more needs to be done. We need a Health and Recreation Center, additional classrooms and laboratories, a Student Union, additional residential facilities that we will either own or rent, and expansion of the Dining Hall.

Fourth Initiative: Further Strengthening the Financial Position of the University

The fourth initiative that we will undertake is to continue to strengthen the financial position of the University. By 1999 the University will seek to position itself as a BBB+ bond-rated institution. Our challenge will be to reduce greatly our dependency on tuition. We will build the trustee restricted reserve fund to at least $18,000,000. We will obviously continue to operate with a balanced budget each year.

Fifth Initiative: Significant Increase in Gifts and Grants

The fifth initiative that we will undertake is to increase significantly the funds that we raise through gifts and grants. It is our intention to increase our Annual Fund contributions to $750,000 annually by 1999. This will represent an 88 percent increase over what we raised this year. During this planning period, we will have reached our $9,000,000 goal in the Special Gifts Campaign. We will also be laying the foundation for a comprehensive Capital Campaign plan. In addition, we have set objectives for doubling the true endowment fund and for substantially increasing the amount of grant funds for University operations and for strategic planning initiatives.

Our objective is to increase the restricted fund-raising efforts that have a direct effect on the annual operating budget of the University from one percent of income to four percent of income. This will represent a significant change for us and will challenge us to undergo a dramatic development in our fund-raising efforts.

Other Issues

Mission

The driving force and the underlying foundation for moving forward with all of these initiatives will be the University's mission. We have identified a number of ways during the next five years that we hope will contribute to deepening and strengthening the mission of Sacred Heart University. Clearly, we must continue to provide opportunities for reflection and discussion on the University's mission at all levels of the institution. We will continue to ensure access and opportunities for economically disadvantaged students to earn a degree at Sacred Heart University. This will challenge us to do an even better job than we have done in the past. The 30,000 Hours of Community Service project last year brought us to a new level of involvement in the community. We need to build on this. In addition, this plan affirms that the University is and will continue to be a major cultural and educational resource to the Greater Bridgeport area, even as we emerge as a regionally recognized institution of higher education. We recognize that our cultural and religious diversity is an institutional strength that we need to celebrate and understand better.

The vision I have described is a bold and exciting one, but it is one that I believe we are capable of making a reality during the next five years.

FINANCE

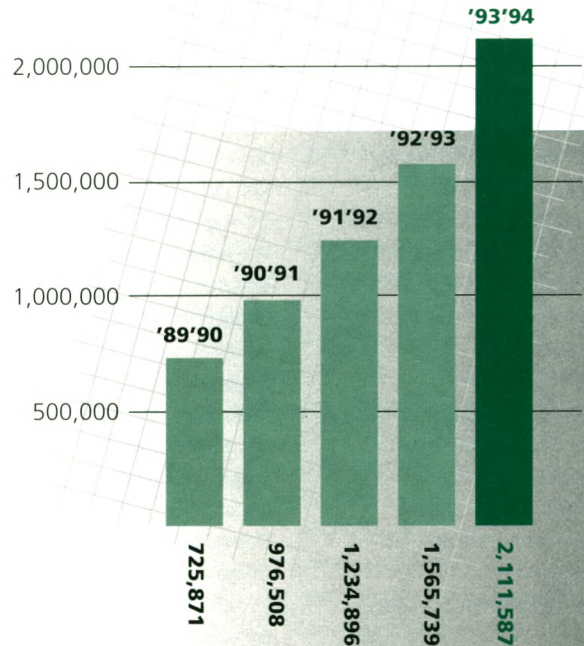

The 1993-94 fiscal year was extremely successful for Sacred Heart University. The year marked the conclusion of the University's Five-Year Strategic Plan, a period during which the University substantially strengthened its financial position. The fiscal year also saw the University record its sixth consecutive balanced budget.

Current unrestricted revenues totalled $35.3 million during the year, up 16 percent compared to the $30.3 million in 1992-93. Compared to 1988, the year before the Five-Year Strategic Plan was implemented, these revenues increased 110 percent.

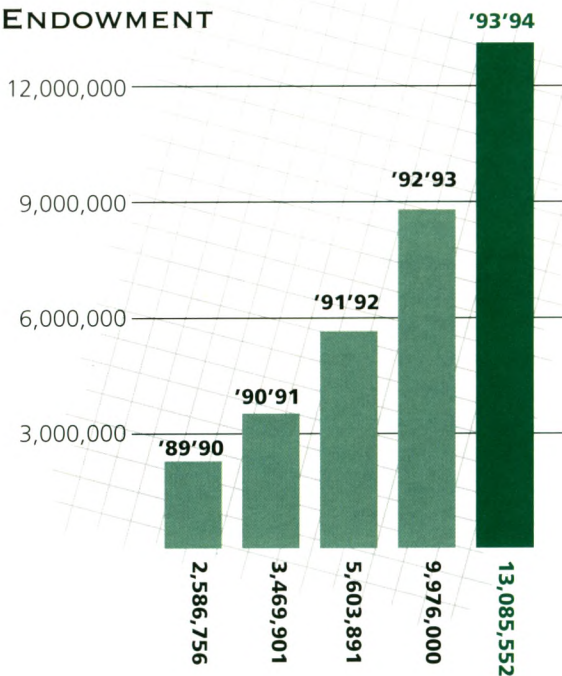

The Trustee Restricted Reserve Fund also improved significantly during the year, increasing to $10.2 million, or 66 percent higher than the $6.2 million reported during the last fiscal year. In 1988, this quasi-endowment fund totalled $500,000.

Another sign of the University's financial health and stability was that it issued $12.5 million of Connecticut Health and Educational Facilities Authority Revenue Bonds to finance construction of residential housing for students and improvements to athletic facilities. It was the first time the University was able to issue bonds, which were based on its own credit rating issued by Standard & Pools.
