program notes

Morceau de Concert | Jean Pennequin (ca.1850-1914)

Pennequin was a French composer more known for his works for violin than trumpet. In that field, he specialized in composing method books and etudes. That makes the fact that he was able to write such beautiful music idiomatic to the trumpet even more impressive. Morceau de Concert is a show piece filled with fast runs, delicate slurs and a fanfare finish.

Fugue in C minor | Johann Sebastian Bach arr. Jonathan Fallin

It is difficult for one to discuss the most influential composers in history without mentioning J. S. Bach. A master of counterpoint and fugue, Bach made one of his many marks on history by compiling Book I of The Well Tempered Clavier in 1722. This was the first book in history that contained works in all 24 keys (major and minor) for a keyboard instrument. The book is also unusual in that it cycles through all of the keys chromatically rather than in a circle of fifths. The C minor fugue is a recognizable one, having been performed countless times over the centuries and sampled by various pop artists. The contrapuntal nature of this fugue lends itself to be performed by more than one instrument, so in 2016, Jonathan Fallin arranged this work for brass quintet.

The Hollow Men | Vincent Persichetti

In 1925, T. S. Eliot wrote a poem that captured the tensions present in Europe post-World War I. 19 years later, in 1944, Vincent Persichetti composed a stirring work that was set to his interpretation of the poem. The trumpet whispers the introductory melodic line and moves through the register of the horn, building in intensity until it is roaring its forceful message. In tonight's recital, you will hear a juxtaposition of the two; Persichetti's haunting melody will float over a reading of Eliot's powerful prose.

Complainte de la Butte | Georges van Parys & Jean Renoir arr. Rufus Wainwright

Georges van Parys directed a film in 1955 titled The French Cancan. The synopsis of the film is that a man is trying to attract a woman and, in order to do so, he opens a cabaret in Paris and resurrects an old dance - the cancan. Parys hired Jean Renoir to compose the music for this film. This is a song that the man sings about the woman he is trying to attract, desperate and morose in the fact that she has yet to return his affections. Complaints de la Butte was adapted and arranged in 2005 for the film Moulin Rouge! by Rufus Wainwright.

Upon discharge, he decided to pursue a career as a music educator and again took up trumpet. He attended Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College from 2012-2014, where he studied trumpet with Don Coates. After completion of the available curricula, he transferred to KSU in the Fall of 2014 where he is currently studying under Dr. Douglas Lindsey. Following graduation, Fallin hopes to be a middle school band director.
