Kevin Fleming, guitar

Kevin Fleming was born on December 29, 1977, in Galesburg, Illinois. He began playing electric and acoustic guitar at the age of 14. In high school, Kevin played and recorded with many rock bands and has two albums from two different bands. Mr. Fleming attended Georgia Tech his freshman year of college, and quickly transferred to Kennesaw State University to pursue the personal dream of a life of music. He began studying classical guitar with Matthew Dunlap at 19. Six months later, Kevin entered the school of music at Kennesaw State University to study with Mary Akerman. He received his bachelors in music performance in 2002. That same year, Kevin migrated south to begin a Masters Degree in Guitar Performance at Florida State University, where he currently studies with Bruce Holzman and will graduate this summer, 2004. Kevin has received first prize in the Georgia Music Teachers Association competition in 1999, he has been a semi-finalist two years at the Appalachian Guitar Fest, and recently made the semi-final round in the Columbus State Guitar Symposium of 2004. Mr. Fleming plans on working through a Doctorate of Musical Arts in Performance and will lead the simple life of teaching and performing music.
