A Time for Healing

As each of us struggles to come to terms with the enormity of the events of September 11th and their horrific human toll, please know that you all are in my thoughts and prayers. We are one in our shock and grief.

I would also like you to know that La Salle is responding to our national crisis by offering opportunities to assist the relief efforts and ways to cope with the personal reactions we have to our national tragedy. Please visit the home page of the University's web site (www.lasalle.edu) to see how we're trying to help.

In addition, we want to know about members of the La Salle family directly affected by the terrorist attacks. We would like to learn about those who have died or are missing and about those who have survived or have been involved in the relief efforts.

Would you please help us? If you have been affected or have information about other Lasallians (alumni, students or friends, as well as current or former faculty, administrators and staff members), please share it with La Salle's Office of Alumni Relations. You can do that either by sending in the form at the bottom of this page, by filling out the information form on the University's Website homepage referenced here, or by phoning 215/951-1535. My hope is that we'll be able to reach out to these members of the La Salle community as appropriate.

As our country faces great trials and challenges, I ask all Lasallians to focus on the need for healing, for service, and for trust in God to see America safely through the times ahead.

Finally, I ask that you continue to pray for the victims of the September 11th attacks, for the courageous relief workers, and for the brave men and women defending our country from its enemies.

Sincerely,

Michael J. McGinniss, F.S.C., Ph.D., '70
President

Speech-Language-Hearing Moves Toward Accreditation

The School of Nursing's Master's degree program in Speech-Language-Hearing Science has been awarded candidacy status from the Council on Academic Accreditation in Audiology and Speech-Language Pathology (C.A.A.).

Candidacy precedes full accreditation and indicates that the curriculum is sufficient to allow a graduate of that program to meet the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association (ASHA) Certificate of Clinical Competence (CCC) Standards.

To practice in most work settings, speech-language pathologists must hold a Master's degree and become certified by ASHA.

"The Speech-Language-

Hearing Science Program expands the opportunities for our students and our community and is a good example of how we try to stay in touch with their needs," said Zane Robinson Wolf, Dean of the School of Nursing.

Speech-language pathology was listed as one of the fastest growing occupations in a recent report by the U.S. Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics. Speech-language-pathologists care for patients of all ages with communication disorders.

The program combines academic course work and clinical experiences. Affiliations with many local hospitals, clinics, schools, and rehabilitation facilities enrich the clinical experiences of the students.

Students Go 3-D Thanks to Think3 Software Grant

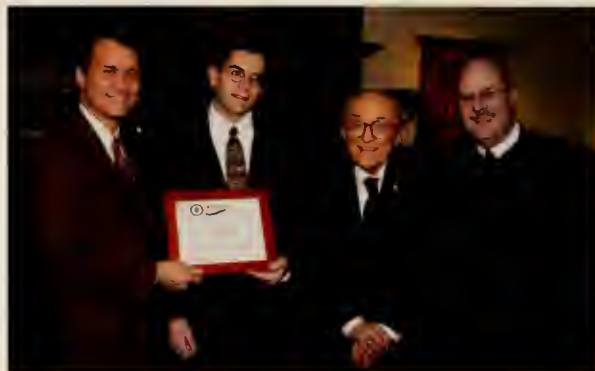

Think3 has awarded La Salle University Digital Arts and Multimedia Design a software grant in the amount of $499,100 for thinkdesign 6.0. This software package is used for building 3-D objects and animations.

The package will become a tool used in CSC 210 Creating Multimedia course. Students will learn the basics of 3-D design, creation and animation.

Some new courses will be developed involving Web-based gaming along with an expanded course on 3-D design techniques.

This software package will be used in both of these new classes along with the current animation course.

Some of the projects produced from this course will include games, tutorials, virtual sale campaigns and interactive Websites.

Flubacher Award Celebrated – Henry C. Franz, a resident of Levittown, Pa., received this year's Joseph F. Flubacher Leadership Award for demonstrating significant leadership in student organizations and University governance. Franz was a Resident Advisor for three years and La Salle's Channel 56 Creative Producer. "The people at La Salle enhanced my time here. I really enjoyed working on the TV station as well. It helped me develop my creativity," said Franz. From left, David T. Poiesz, '80, La Salle Trustee and Honorary Chair of the Flubacher Scholarship Committee; Franz; Dr. Joseph Flubacher, Professor Emeritus; and Br. Michael McGinniss, La Salle President.

There's More Than One Way to Give Back

When most alumni and friends think about giving to La Salle, they get out their check-books. However, there are a variety of ways to show your financial support.

Securities – If you own securities that have appreciated in value, you are subject to capital gains taxation rules when they are sold. By making a gift of these appreciated securities to La Salle, you avoid capital gains taxes and receive a charitable deduction. Thus, the actual cost to you is often far less than the value of your gift.

Real Estate – You may make a gift of your residence or other real estate to the University. As with gifts of appreciated securities, you avoid capital gains taxes and receive a charitable deduction.

Life Insurance – If you own a fully-paid life insurance policy that has outlived its original purpose, you may wish to donate it to La Salle. You will receive a charitable deduction based on the present value of the policy (an amount close to the cash value). You may also name La Salle to be the beneficiary of any life insurance policy that you own. Although you will not receive a charitable deduction, you will have the satisfaction of knowing that future students will benefit from your gift.

Bequests – A bequest to La Salle is a gift that involves no immediate loss of capital or income. There are several different types of bequests, and we would be happy to discuss various options with you and your attorney. Your estate will receive a charitable deduction, and the tax savings can reduce the ultimate cost to your heirs.

Trusts – Many people believe that trusts are for the wealthy. Often, however, those with limited assets establish trusts to preserve their capital and increase the earnings derived from it. You may establish a trust that will permit you to make a gift to La Salle (and receive a charitable deduction), while increasing your income. We would be happy to discuss with you and your attorney the various types of trusts that you can establish to benefit La Salle.

For more information, contact Gregory J. D'Angelo, Director of Planned Giving, at 215/951-1881. All inquiries are held in strictest confidence.

Zarrilli Honored with Second E-Vision Award

Stephen Zarrilli, '83, former president of US Interactive and currently Chairman, C.E.O. and President of Concellera Software, Inc., of Malvern, Pa., received the University's second annual E-Vision Award for contributions to the field of electronic commerce.

"Steve was honored for his entrepreneurial spirit, of seeing a need in the marketplace, building a company to meet that need, and then launching the company as a world leader," said Paul Brazina,

ISBT Program Receives $100,000 Commitment from Ben Franklin Partners

La Salle University's Integrated Science, Business and Technology Program (ISBT) has received a $100,000 commitment as part of Ben Franklin Technology

Partners Young Entrepreneurs Challenge Fund Program. This program will provide seed funding to La Salle students who have high technology business concepts that require feasibility studies and start-up support.

This commitment requires that the University raise $100,000 in matching funds from its alumni/ae. Student projects will be supported on a 50-50 basis from both funds.

La Salle graduates who have founded and managed their own business ventures will also be invited to serve as mentors, advising students in all facets of entrepreneurship.

Ben Franklin Technology Partners Young Entrepreneurs Challenge Fund will be administered through a partnership of the Ben Franklin Technology Partners and those colleges and universities in the region that are interested in participating. The entrepreneurs will be obligated to repay the investment if their business ventures are successful, thereby creating a revolving fund.

Ben Franklin Technology Partners is a statewide network that fosters innovation to stimulate Pennsylvania's economic growth and prosperity. Ben Franklin Technology Partners brings together the best of Pennsylvania's people, ideas, and technology to serve as a catalyst for advancing the state's knowledge-based economy.

If you are interested in learning more about the Young Entrepreneur Challenge program at La Salle, please call Professor Marsha Timmerman at 215/951-5133 or email her at timmerman@lasalle.edu.

Honor Roll of Donors and President's Report
2000-2001

Letter from the President

We remain intensely focused on students, helping them achieve their potential and preparing them for the social, political, moral and religious challenges of contemporary society.

Dear Friends of La Salle:

On behalf of the University and our students, I want to offer my heartfelt thanks to all our loyal benefactors. With your help, La Salle continued to build on its heritage of success in the 2001 academic year, preparing the way for even greater achievements in the future.

The generosity and the trust of the thousands of supporters whom we recognize in the following report are truly invaluable assets for the University. Here I can only highlight a few of the very positive trends that your investment in La Salle has fostered, but I do want to emphasize that I see the beneficial impact of your support in many ways every day and am continually encouraged by it.

For several years, La Salle has been committing significant resources to the development of new academic programs to prepare students for leadership in the 21st century. This investment continued to bear fruit in the 2001 academic year, as new programs in Integrated Science, Business, and Technology (ISBT) and Speech-Language-Hearing Science successfully completed their first year, attracting a solid enrollment of students with strong academic credentials. The year also saw our successful introduction of a new core curriculum, fostering interdisciplinary problem solving and using the city of Philadelphia as a key educational resource.

With these new developments, and many more like them, one thing has not changed at La Salle. We remain intensely focused on students, helping them achieve their potential and preparing them for the social, political, moral and religious challenges of contemporary society. This is in keeping with the over 300-year-old tradition of the Christian Brothers to which the University proudly remains faithful. The success of our academic initiatives is clearly reflected in the growing number of students seeking admission to La Salle. For the fifth straight year, we have received a record high number of applications. Our enrollment continues to increase as well, exceeding even our own goals for the Class of 2005.

Importantly, almost 100 of the freshmen who entered in August 2001 declared interest in majors that did not exist here just four years ago. In addition, we are attracting students with stronger academic credentials, as measured by SAT scores and class ranking, than we have seen in a decade or more.

La Salle also continues to receive recognition in terms of awards and greater levels of grant support from government agencies, private foundations and corporations. A good example of such recognition is the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Community Services Excellence Award received by La Salle's Neighborhood Nursing Center (NNC) in November 2000. The work of our NNC is just one illustration of how the University strives to enhance the quality of life in our surrounding community. This is a core value of the University, deeply rooted in our Catholic identity.

So, in many ways, the first year of the new millennium was an auspicious one for the University. But we cannot build on that momentum without increased support from our benefactors, especially our alumni. I look forward to working with you and with many new supporters as we strive to take La Salle to an even higher level of excellence.

Many thanks, again, for your generosity to La Salle and to our students.

Sincerely yours,

Fulbright Scholars

Two recent graduates, Nick Susi, '01, and Christopher Steinitz, '00, are spending the next few years abroad studying politics and culture after receiving the prestigious Fulbright Scholarship.

Steinitz, a political science major, is living in Kuwait, studying the opposition to women's political rights. Susi, who majored in German, is in Austria researching the writings and father-son relationship of Fritz and Ernst Molden, a prominent literary and publishing family.

After meeting a Kuwaiti official at the University's Diplomat-in-Residence Conference, Steinitz became intrigued with Middle Eastern politics. Even though he applied late for the program, he was accepted. "About a week and a half after I had heard the news, I was off to Middlebury College in Vermont for a nine-week crash course in Arabic," he said.

Susi said he was "walking around in a daze" after hearing he'd been accepted. Unlike Steinitz, Susi will not have any language problems overseas; and in fact will be teaching English at a high school in Vienna as part of his studies.

Steinitz and Susi are the 50th and 51st La Salle students to receive a Fulbright Scholarship since 1965.

La Salle Fulbright recipients have traveled to Mexico, France, Fiji, New Zealand, Korea and Yugoslavia. In 14 of the past 31 years, more than one La Salle student was awarded a Fulbright (in 1974 five students received it). About half the recipients have majored in German, but other majors include economics, history, education, chemistry and other foreign languages.

Michael Goetter, '93

Paul Brazina, Executive Director of La Salle's Electronic Commerce Institute, had gotten a call from a company called "The Sycamore Group," who wanted to meet with him. Brazina had no idea what to expect once he got there.

He was greeted by 28-year-old Michael Goetter, '93, its co-founder and executive vice president and a La Salle graduate.

In so many words, Goetter explained that he was able to attend the University on a Christian Brothers Scholarship—otherwise college would have been difficult. "Without that scholarship, a college education would have been really tough to afford, and I definitely couldn't have gone to La Salle," he said.

His company, founded in 1997, was making inroads in e-commerce; its workforce would double soon. He had heard about Brazina's work, and wanted to help out in any way he could, as a way of giving back to La Salle.

Goetter has become a member of the Institute's advisory board; his Director of Information Management, Anne Marie Smith, '96, has spoken to students at Institute lectures; and he's helped Brazina make contacts with other leaders in the e-commerce field. (It was Smith who heard about Brazina and suggested Goetter give him a call.)

He's also done much more: Brazina says Goetter helped develop the lecture series for the E-Commerce Fellows program and has provided speakers for it. He also helped design the structure and content of the new E-Commerce Certificate Program.

In addition, Sycamore is designing a state-of-the-art Website for the Institute. "And Goetter has contacted other young alums and generated interest to get involved with our e-commerce program," says Brazina.

Dana Buchanan, '99

La Salle University is one of the few schools in the Philadelphia area that owns a Scanning Electron Microscope (SEM). Thanks to alumni donations and a substantial grant from the Housing and Urban Development Division of the federal government, students—and other area colleges and universities—are able to use this instrument for a variety of research projects.

All of these projects are ideal learning experiences and some have the potential to make a significant impact in their fields, which is the case with Dana Buchanan, '99.

Buchanan is in her third year of medical school at Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine (PCOM) and has returned to La Salle to do her part in an experimental research project that may be put to use in hospitals worldwide.

Dr. Charlotte Green, Ph.D., Buchanan's supervisor, and other researchers at PCOM were looking to pair with another institution that had a SEM when Buchanan mentioned her work with one at La Salle. This led to the two schools collaborating on the project.

Technically speaking, Buchanan is working on an aortic graft project. To put it in simpler terms, she is working on a way to improve the current technology used to repair weakened vessels, such as the aorta, in patients.

Elsie Hartigan, '01

An award-winning pediatric nurse and single mother of two, Elsie Hartigan, '01, credits La Salle University as a major contributor in achieving her goals.

The second graduate from La Salle's Licensed Practical Nurse (LPN) to Bachelor of Science in Nursing (BSN) Program, "thirty-something" Hartigan was able to go back to school full-time after receiving the Helene Fuld Grant for $10,000 to help with educational expenses.

"La Salle was so accommodating," she said. "They accepted so many of my credits. I knew I couldn't pass up this opportunity."

Not only did she successfully balance work and school with two sons at home, but Hartigan was on the Dean's List every semester and was chosen to deliver the closing speech at her class' nursing pinning ceremony.

Her efforts were recently recognized nationally when she was named "Nurse of the Year" by her employer, Bayada Pediatrics.

Physicians "graft" or add material to the vessel's wall to help strengthen it. Because the synthetic graft is foreign to the human body several problems can occur, such as infections and blood clotting.

Perhaps the biggest difficulty with synthetic grafts is that they are only temporary.

Eventually they fail and the patient's original condition resurfaces. It is likely that young patients will need to undergo several operations throughout their lifetime.

"Trust me," said Buchanan, "you do not want more than one graft replacement, so this research is really important."

Researchers hope to lessen these problems by using biosynthetic material—potentially using tissue from donated organs—to create the graft.

Studies have shown that using biosynthetic material to correct vessel impairment is less likely to cause infection and there are less blood clotting problems. In addition, because the material has a biological base, the graft will literally connect with the patient's tissue and become part of his or her body. This allows the graft to grow along with the patient to ensure lifelong efficiency.

Buchanan's research is paving the way for full biological grafts to be performed. Her role in the aortic graft project is to use the microscope to scan the surface of the graft in the research model to see if the biosynthetic graft is merging with the vessel.

"It looks very promising so far," said Buchanan. "The grafts I am looking at now have only been in place for about three months so we have a lot of work ahead of us."

Although her research has a long way to go, the expertise Buchanan developed through her work with the SEM at La Salle has enabled her to play a key role in this groundbreaking study.
