Welcome to Antigua Guatemala, welcome to Latin America!

And welcome to the 2018 North American Conference of the Economic Science Association.

This is the North American Conference is held outside of the United States, and the first time the ESA hosts a conference in Latin America. The historic city of Antigua Guatemala, one of the most beautiful and best-preserved colonial cities in the Americas, is the location for this historic conference. We hope you are as excited about this as we are!

The Conference is organized by Universidad del Rosario and the Rosario Experimental and Behavioral Economics Lab – REBEL (located in Bogotá, Colombia). Experimental economics in Latin America has been growing, and now there are experimental labs and experimentalists in several countries.

Prior to the Conference, Ian Krajbich (The Ohio State University) and Charles Noussair (University of Arizona) are organizing an NSF-funded Workshop on Choice-Process Data in Experimental Economics. The workshop aims to expose experimental economists to exciting new research questions that use process data to shed light on fundamental questions related to data (beyond choices) generated from decisions (eye movements, processing time, brain activity, etc.).

The Conference, as well as the (pre-conference workshop) will be held at the Casa Santo Domingo, a hotel-museum built in the remodeled ruins of a 16th-century monastery. We hope you enjoy!

Juan Camilo Cárdenas is Full Professor in the Economics Department at Universidad de Los Andes, in Bogotá (Colombia). He is the pioneer of experimental economics in Latin America. His work focuses on the analysis and design of institutions (rules of the game) that promote cooperation among individuals and the solution of social dilemmas in the fairest, efficient, equitable, democratic and sustainable manners possible.

Prof. Marie Claire Villeval (CNRS, Gate University of Lyon)

Marie Claire Villeval is Research Professor in economics at the National Center for Scientific Research (CNRS) and she is affiliated with the GATE (Groupe d'Analyse et de Théorie Economique) research institute, at the University of Lyon, France. Her work includes the conduct of laboratory and field experiments on cheating and tax evasion, incentives and motivation, teamwork and leadership, punishment and cooperation, status seeking and ego utility, self-image, emotions.

NSF-funded Workshop on Choice-Process Data in Experimental Economics

organized by Ian Krajbich (The Ohio State University) and Charles Noussair (University of Arizona)

Invited Experts

Giorgio Coricelli

Associate Professor in economics and psychology at the Department of Economics and member of the Neuroscience Program in the University of Southern California. His work focuses on human behaviors emerging from the interplay of cognitive and emotional systems. His agenda includes the role of emotions in decision making and the relational complexity in social interaction.

Nicolette Sullivan

Neuroeconomist and Postdoctoral Associate in Cognitive Neuroscience and Marketing at Duke University. Her research interests include factors influencing the neural computations relating to consumer decisions. She uses methods including fMRI, eye tracking, and mouse tracking to address these questions.

Eric J. Johnson
