What we're doing!

We are creating a fully searchable digital page image archive of rare historic Kentuckiana books using a microfilm to digital methodology.

Who cares about it?

- Students, teachers and scholars will use this material to support their research and teaching.
- Programs are in development for K-12 students

In short, we're making good stuff for the right reason, the right way.

How does this preserve anything?

- Microfilm ensures preservation
- Digital images ensure easy access and wide distribution

This hybrid, standards based non-proprietary approach can serve as a model for cost effective access and preservation for published materials!

What are these "historic Kentuckiana" books anyway?

J. Winston Coleman, Jr.'s:
A Bibliography of Kentucky History

Published 1949

- Includes printed books and pamphlets relating to Kentucky history or the lives of Kentuckians at home
- No magazine or newspaper articles
- No manuscripts
- 18th century to mid-20th century coverage

- First question: Do we create files from –
    - Source documents (which are likely brittle, bound and guarded by that ogre librarian with the nasty cattle prod) or....
    - Microfilm (leaving the master neg in the vault where it's safe while using the service neg, or print master, that's used to make boring paper copies)?

Right, so, how do we make these things?

- First we scan!

- Meikel M525 scanner
  - Using the service master negative
  - Manual scans instead of automatic
  - Scanner splits images into their respective pages

Quality Control (QC) is key

- Scan Fix
- Photoshop
- ACDSee

- Rename

This calculation accounts for $3,953,808, which do not fall within the ordinary current expenses of the government. Deduct then from this $3,953,808 00 the sum of 2,676,774 42 and we have the sum of 1,284,033 58 in favor of Mr. Adams's Administration during the three years, instead of seven or eight millions against it.

The present Administration has been charged with great extravagance, as to the expenses of our foreign intercourse. We cannot present a more full and satisfactory view of this subject, than that given by Mr. Bartlett, a distinguished member from New Hampshire, in a speech delivered in Congress, during last winter, which upon a careful examination, we believe to be correct. In answer to Mr. Rives of Virginia, he said,

"The fallacy or error of the statement (of Mr. R.) is in imputing to Mr. Adams one year of the expenses incurred and provided for, before he came to the office. The appropriation for 1825, was made in February, and with which Mr. Adams had no more to do, than his successor, whoever he may be, now has with the appropriation of this year. The amount of appropriations for foreign intercourse then stands thus:

UNDER MR. MONROE.		UNDER MR. ADAMS.
In 1823, - - -	$ 82,000	In 1826, - - -	$ 187,506
In 1824, - - -	199,500	In 1827, - - -	82,000
In 1825, - - -	213,000	In 1828, - - - (Panama)	40,000
	$484,500		49,000
			$457,506

"Leaving the expense of the three last years, $27,000 less than the three last appropriations of the preceding administration. But let us look still further back: and first, to Washington's administration. The foreign intercourse appropriations were then as follows:

In 1791, - - -	1,733 33	In the time of Mr. John Adams:
1792, - - -	78,766 67	In 1797, - - -	172,504 23
1793, - - -	89,500 09	1798, - - -	242,711 22
1794, - - -	146,403 51	1799, - - -	199,374 11
1795, - - -	912,635 12	1800, - - -	185,145 33
1796, - - -	109,739 64
	$ 1,338,827 27		$ 799,734 89

"In Mr. Jefferson's time these expenses, exclusive of the expense of the Barbary intercourse, were:

In 1801, - - -	139,851 73	In 1805, - - -	2,665,769 62
1802, - - -	416,253 62	1806, - - -	1,613,922 09
1803, - - -	1,001,968 34	1807, - - -	419,345 61
1804, - - -	1,129,591 62	1808, - - -	214,233 26
			$ 7,591,435 89

"These tables are authentick, and shew how very far from the fact may be the conjectures and assertions, respecting the increasing extravagance and prodigality to the government.

"Again: That item of the expense of foreign intercourse, embraced under the title of contingent expenses, has been adverted to, as a source of great abuse. Here, for answer, let us resort to official documents. There was expended of this fund:

UNDER MR. MONROE.		UNDER MR. ADAMS.

"Leaving the expense of the three last years, $27,000 less than the three last appropriations of the preceding administration. But let us look still further back: and first, to Washington's administration. The foreign intercourse appropriations were then as follows:

In the time of Mr. John Adams:		In the time of Mr. John Adams:
In 1791, - - -	1,733 33	In 1797, - - -	172,504 23

"In Mr. Jefferson's time these expenses, exclusive of the expense of the Barbary intercourse, were:

In 1801, - - -	139,851 73	In 1805, - - -	2,665,769 62

This calculation accounts for $3,958,808, which do not fall within the ordinary current expenses of the government. Deduct then from this $3,688,808 00 the sum of 2,676,774 42

and we have the sum of 1,284,033 58 in favor of Mr. Adams's Administration during the three years, instead of seven or eight millions against it.

The present Administration has been charged with great extravagance, as to the expenses of our foreign intercourse. We cannot present a more full and satisfactory view of this subject, than that given by Mr. Bartlett, a distinguished member from New Hampshire, in a speech delivered in Congress, during last winter, which upon a careful examination, we believe to be correct. In answer to Mr. Rives of Virginia, he said,

"The fallacy or error of the statement (of Mr. R.) is in imputing to Mr. Adams one year of the expenses incurred and provided for, before he came to the office. The appropriation for 1825, was made in February, and with which Mr. Adams had no more to do, than his successor, whoever he may be, now has with the appropriation of this year. The amount of appropriations for foreign intercourse then stands thus:

UNDER MR. MONROE.		UNDER MR. ADAMS.
In 1823, - - -	$ 82,000	In 1826, - - -	$ 187,500
In 1824, - - -	189,500	In 1827, - - -	82,000
In 1825, - - -	213,000	In 1828, - - - (Panama)	40,000
	$484,500		$457,506

"Leaving the expense of the three last years, $27,000 less than the three last appropriations of the preceding administration. But let us look still further back: and first, to Washington's administration. The foreign intercourse appropriations were then as follows:

Beyond the Shelf

Beyond the Shelf

We are creating a fully searchable digital page image archive of rare historic Kentuckiana books using a microfilm to digital methodology. Students, teachers and scholars will use this material to support their research and teaching. Microfilm ensures preservation and the digital images ensure easy access and wide distribution. This hybrid, standards based non-proprietary approach can serve as a model for cost effective access and preservation for published materials.

This two-year project has been funded in part by an Institute of Museum and Library Services National Leadership Grant for Preservation and Digitization.
