PIERRE LEGENDRE

A 'CONSILIIUM' OF JOHANNES TEUTONICUS*

The recently published catalogue of the University of Pennsylvania manuscript collection described a letter of a certain Johannes who was a praepositus of Halberstadt.<sup>1</sup> The letter was located on folio 43<sup>v</sup> of MS Lat. 82. Besides this work, the manuscript also contained a canonical treatise by Arnulfus of Anagni, a notarial handbook by Johannes of Bologna and Exempla of notarial documents.<sup>2</sup> The manuscript can be dated in the second half of the thirteenth century; thus it seems likely that the author of the letter was the canon lawyer, Johannes Teutonicus.<sup>3</sup> In fact, upon examining the manuscript, the text proved to be not a letter, but a consilium of Johannes.<sup>4</sup>

However, only half of the text was the work of Johannes. After Johannes had ended his consilium with the words 'sigillo proprio consignauj,' the text continued with a casus conscientiae that was taken from the Summa de casibus of Raymond de Pennafort.<sup>5</sup> It seems unlikely, however, that Johannes himself had used Raymond's Summa. From Johannes' reference to an archbishop of Magdeburg, Albert of Kevernburg, as 'dominus Albertus archiepiscopus,' one may assume that Albert was still alive.<sup>6</sup> Since Johannes became a praepositus in 1223 and <sup>2</sup> Ibid. Arnulfus of Anagni's Summa has been edited most recently by J.G.C. Joosting, 'Die Summa Ut nos minores nach der Leidener Handschrift herausgegeben,' ZRG Kan. Abt. 17 (1928) 153-227. Johannes of Bologna's Summa has been edited by L. Rockinger, Briefsteller und Formelbücher (München 1863-64; repr. New York 1961) II 603-712.

<sup>3</sup> There was not another praepositus of Halberstadt named Johannes in the thirteenth century. In 1223 he became the praepositus of the collegial church in Halberstadt, St. Mariae, and in 1241 he advanced to the position of praepositus in the cathedral church. See J.F.V. Schulte, 'Johannes Teutonicus (Semeca, Zemeke),' Zeitschrift für Kirchenrecht 16 (1881) 107-32. S. Stelling-Michaud, 'Jean le Teutonique,' DDC 6.120-2. On Johannes' literary activity, see Kuttner, Repertorium 93-9, 357, 370-81, and Kuttner, 'Johannes Teutonicus, das vierte Laterankonzil und die Compilatio Quarta,' Miscellanea Giovanni Mercati V (Studi e Testi 125; Città del Vaticano 1946) 608-34.

<sup>4</sup> On the consilia literature see Van Hove, Prolegomena (2nd ed.) 505-7, 558-9. Also P. Riesenberger, 'The Consilia Literature: A Prospectus,' Manuscripta 6 (1962) 3-22.

<sup>5</sup> Raymond's text can be found under De voto in Summa de poenitentia et matrimonio (Rome 1603; repr. Farnborough 1967) 76-7, also Summa (Veronae 1744) 75-6. Hostiensis also discussed this text in his Summa aurea (Lugduni 1517) fol. 34v.

<sup>6</sup> If Albert had died, the conventional form would have been 'quondam' or 'beate memorie.' For Albert's dates see C. Eubel, Hierarchia catholica medii aevii 1 (2nd ed. Monasterii 1913) 320.

Albert died in 1232, these dates establish the time limits within which Johannes must have written the consilium. Further, in Raymond's text, the decretal references were to the Gregoriana, which would indicate that the scribe copied the second recension of Raymond's Summa (ca. 1234).<sup>7</sup> Thus a later 'patron' of the manuscript, and not Johannes, probably combined the two texts. As it is, there are only a few unimportant differences between the Penn. Lat. 82 version of Raymond's text and that in the printed editions.

Johannes had written the consilium in answer to a problem which the praepositus of Kezzenouc<sup>8</sup> had set to him. The question was whether women who had professed the Benedictine rule in a monastery that had been founded by a mother house that permitted the eating of flesh and the use of linens and beds could continue to practice the same lax rule at the new foundation.<sup>9</sup> To this inquiry Johannes concluded that although he would not consider them to be true Benedictines—but only Benedictines in so far as they were accustomed to wear a black habit—he did think that they could continue to observe the hitherto accustomed rule.

Here, Johannes articulated a principle that was a common maxim of medieval law: that law and privilege were interpreted through custom. To illustrate how this principle might work, Johannes referred to the case of Lauterberg (Mons Serenus), an Augustinian monastery near Halle. Unfortunately, the incident that Johannes had in mind is not definitely ascertainable. There was, however, a letter in Compilatio tertia that Innocent III had written to the monks of Lauterberg in 1202.<sup>10</sup> In this letter, Innocent had given the monks permission to break a custom of their monastery which did not permit the monks to eat meat on certain days. This was a case of privilege derogating custom, but it could be that this privilege was later rescinded, and the custom of the monastery renewed. If this hypothesis is correct, perhaps Johannes referred to this later action. At any rate, no evidence of this later event is extant.<sup>11</sup>

TEXT

Most of the text of Penn. Lat. 82 is a large, gothic script, quite typical of the legal scripts of the thirteenth century. However, on the last folio the script changes abruptly. On folio 43<sup>r</sup>, in the last section of Arnulfus of Anagni's work, the script changed to a small, rather crude gothic script. After Arnulfus' treatise ended on folio 43<sup>v</sup>, Johannes' Consilium was written in the same script. The manuscript measures 23 x 17 cm.

<sup>8</sup> I found it impossible to identify this place name with certainty. Two Benedictine monasteries in Germany seem likely: either Riesa (Rezoviensis) or Kitzingen (Kitzinung, Kitzung, and various other spellings).

Ad hoc respondeo, si femine alicuius monasterij utuntur nigro habitu et habent usum carnium et utuntur lineis et lectis et ab illo monasterio sumptum et fundatum est aliud monasterium quod eandem seruat regulam, tam in habitu exteriori quam in esu carnium quam etiam lectis et lineis, et tanto tempore use sunt cuius non extat memoria, et a prima fundatione 15 semper tali regula use sunt, dico quod non sunt de regula beati Benedicti nisi quo ad exteriorem habitum. Unde licet promittant se seruare regulam Benedictj, non tamen promittunt quod in omnibus statutis suis eam seruent, et ita sufficit si in aliquibus, maxime in exteriorj habitu, eam seruent. Et ut nulla super hoc hesitatio habeatur, presentem paginam sigillo proprio consignauit.

APPENDIX: THE TEXT FROM THE ‘SUMMA DE CASIBUS’ OF RAYMOND DE PENNAFORT

In the text that follows, I have collated the Rome 1603 edition of Raymond’s Summa (R) with Penn. Lat. 82 (P). I have also had an opportunity to examine the manuscripts of Raymond’s Summa in the Munich Bayerische Staatsbibliothek. There are twenty-three manuscripts of the Summa de casibus in Munich, and of these I have selected six to collate with the text.<sup>13</sup> I also found several mention a change in the privilege up to that date. See Chronicon Montis Sereni (1123-1225) ed. E. Eherfeuchter (MGH Scriptores 23.169).

<sup>13</sup> The catalogue lists twenty-nine; however, Clm 4595, 6020, 7208, 7821, 9664, 14789 are various summae on Raymond’s Summa de casibus. Clm 9664 is the Summa ‘Quid sit symonia,’ see Traditio 16 (1960) 562, and 17 (1961) 541-2. Clm 5863 fol. 158r-233v is an apparatus to a metrical adaptation of Raymond’s Summa which begins ‘Omnem scientiam et doctrinam sacra scriptura transcendit’; cf. Berlin MS theol. q. 291 (Rose, Verzeichnis der lateinischen Handschriften No. 648).

canonical texts which are not listed in the Catalogus codicum latinorum Bibliothecae Regiae Monacensis, and I have noted these works after the appropriate manuscripts.

There is one interesting manuscript of Raymond's first recension, Clm 6040 (E) fol. 1<sup>r</sup>-83<sup>v</sup>. This manuscript is of particular value because a later scribe had added in the margin the changes which Raymond made in his second recension. Unfortunately, the scribe also erased a few pertinent parts of the first recension to make additions in the text proper, but he did this infrequently (e.g. fol. 9<sup>v</sup>, 14<sup>r</sup>, 14<sup>v</sup>). This manuscript also includes Tancred's Summa de sponsalibus et matrimonio, fol. 90<sup>r</sup>-103<sup>r</sup>.<sup>14</sup>

Another manuscript, Clm 7631 (A) fol. 1<sup>r</sup>-121<sup>r</sup> cites the Compilationes antiquae, but the text appears to be only that of the second recension. Except for E, all the other manuscripts have four books with Raymond's Summa de matrimonio as the fourth book.

The other Munich manuscripts are Clm 9572 (B) pp. 1-237, 243-275 (book 4); Clm 17166 (C) fol. 1<sup>r</sup>-208<sup>v</sup>; Clm 26310 (D) fol. 1<sup>r</sup>-101<sup>v</sup>; Clm 9539 (F) fol. 63<sup>r</sup>-135<sup>v</sup>; this manuscript also contains a set of casus for 3 Comp. on fol. 193<sup>r</sup>-197<sup>v</sup>.<sup>15</sup>

All the manuscripts with a gloss have the apparatus of Guilielmus Redonensis. Of the manuscripts collated, the text is located on: A fol. 14<sup>r</sup>, B pp. 25-26, C fol. 25<sup>r-v</sup>, D fol. 11<sup>v</sup>-12<sup>r</sup>, E fol. 14<sup>v</sup>-15<sup>r</sup>, F fol. 70<sup>v</sup>, R pp. 76-77. The consensus of ABCDEF is indicated by Σ.

<sup>14</sup> For a discussion of the relation of Tancred's Summa to Raymond's, see A. Teetaert, 'Summa de matrimonio sancti Raymundi de Penyafort,' Jus Pontificium 9 (1929) 54-61, 228-34, 312-22. Also for the relation of Raymond's Summa de matrimonio to de poenitentia in the manuscript tradition, see Teetaert, 'La Summa de poenitentia de S. Raymond de Penyafort,' Ephemerides theologicae Lovanienses 5 (1928) 49-72.

An unfinished, and hitherto unknown Commentary on the Decretum by Nicholas de Tudeschis, known as Panormitanus or Abbas Siculus, has recently come to light in the Biblioteca Capitolare Feliniana at Lucca.<sup>1</sup> His authorship is attested explicitly both at the beginning and at the end of the manuscript, as well as at the end of various chapters, and also by the general similarity in style to his other writings.
