To the Memory of

Samuel Breck Parkman Crowbridge

Class of 1883

This Ivy is Dedicated
By the Class of 1931

holding in mind the many benefits which he bestowed upon us and upon our College

Foreword

In preparing this IVY for publication, our faults have been as the stars in number, and our virtues have been conspicuous by their entire absence. We can say with Ivy Boards of the past that we have done our best to mirror as accurately as possible the life and traditions of the college, but we cannot say with them that our best has been good enough. Be not too harsh in your treatment of us.

In presenting this, the 1931 Ivy to you, we admit, then, a majority of faults and a sad minority of virtues, but we hope that our attempts for accurate detail and a broader view have been partially successful. "Huius Re Hunc Tibi Liber."

Optimi

The grade of Optimus is awarded at Trinity College to a student who has received a mark of "A" at each marking period throughout his entire college course. It is therefore the highest scholastic honor attainable. The following is a list of graduates of Trinity College who received this distinction at the time of their graduation:

Samuel Hart, '66
 George Otis Holbrooke, '69
 Lucius Waterman, '71
 Leonard Woods Richardson, '73

THE 1929 Trinity football season, although not a success in itself, witnessed a renewal of Trinity spirit and a radical change in the coaching, both of which promise to bring victory to Trinity in later seasons. The team was captained by F. W. Cooper, 1930, who played a steady hard game at center. William J. Galvin was head coach and was assisted by "Johnny" Smith and Harry Herbert.

The brightest spot of the year was probably the Wesleyan game, which, in spite of a defeat for Trinity, showed the development that had been made during the season. It was not until the final quarter that Wesleyan managed to break a tie score to win 19-13. The Blue and Gold took the lead early in the game when Phippen kicked a field goal for the first score, and soon after passed to Nye who ran for a touchdown. Wesleyan managed to score twice in the second period, making it 13-10 at half-time. A blocked punt recovered by Eberle early in the half gave Phippen a chance for his second field goal which evened the score. During the last period the Middletown eleven made its winning score. Throughout the game the Blue and Gold showed a great deal of team spirit and a thorough system of offensive and defensive football.

In the first home game of the season, Trinity downed Worcester Tech. by the score of 7-6. The Trinity line worked in perfect unison, smashing wide holes on the offense and holding firmly on defense. Knurek and Britton alternated in carrying the ball down the field in the last quarter when Knurek went over the line to tie the count. Phippen's kick gave us the winning point after touchdown. Although the visiting eleven threatened to score several times, Trinity held them to one touchdown.

The season was opened at Williamstown when the home team, using a strong aerial attack, won, 44-0. Handicapped by lack of experience, Trinity threatened its opponent's goal line but once. Britton played a creditable game, although he failed to be consistent.

In the third game of the season, Haverford, with a team outweighing the Blue and Gold, smashed its way through a fighting Trinity line to win by a 19-0 score.

THE 1930 FOOTBALL SQUAD

Although handicapped by lightness, the team was also weak on blocking and tackling. The final home game brought a decisive defeat from Hamilton when the Trinity second team was swamped by the count of 39-0. The first team was held back because of the approaching game with Wesleyan. Eberle showed up well in this game, doing good defensive work and carrying the ball for short consistent gains through the line.

Throughout the entire season Phippen's kicking was one of the features of the games. His two field goals in the Wesleyan game were among the longest drop-kicks in the country for 1929. Knurek and Britton also did some excellent work in the back field.

In the line, in addition to Captain Cooper, Meier at guard was outstanding all year on both offense and defense. Nye played a very good game at end, scoring Trinity's single touchdown against Wesleyan.

Although the squad started in September with only a few letter men and almost no reserves of experience, by the end of the season Coach Galvin had increased the size of the squad sufficiently to have over three full teams. Galvin and his assistants deserve a great deal of credit for the work which they have done with football at Trinity; and the foundations which they have laid should aid materially in developing victorious teams for Trinity in following years. From a standpoint of the development of football spirit the season was a success.

After the final game of the year, Coach Galvin said: "Credit is due to Captain Cooper for instilling the fighting spirit in the men and overcoming the inferiority complex in the squad and on the campus in winning football games against colleges up against the same difficulties as Trinity. * * * The enthusiasm which has sprung up from the student body, alumni, and college in general has made the work pleasant and has spurred on the team."

BASKETBALL

WITH all five of the varsity men of the 1928-29 season back, the basketball team seemed to be headed for a record season this year. Bissell, DesChamps, Nye, Slossberg, and Fleming, with Knurek ready to take his place when needed, looked like an absolutely unbeatable combination. Their year of playing together had enabled them to know each other's every move on any play, and the 10-5 ratio of wins to losses was no disappointment to Trinity fans.

Trinity took the first four games on the schedule without undue trouble, losing the first game of the year to Springfield by three points. As Springfield is one of the strongest teams in the East, it is worthy of special notice that the Blue and Gold men came so close to winning on a foreign court. Without doubt this was the most exciting game of the season. Trinity led by two points at the half, and traded the lead several times during the second period, finally bowing before a desperate spurt in the last few minutes of play.

Connecticut Aggies lost to the Blue and Gold next, this victory being followed by four consecutive losses, the winning teams being Wesleyan, M. A. C., Albany Law, and Hamilton. The rest of the season was one victory after another, but all of the games were so well played that the interest never lagged, and the chance of a deciding spurt was present in several.

Although the record of this season did not better that of last year, the team is, nevertheless, the best that Trinity has seen for a decade, and the record of nineteen straight wins and no defeats in two seasons on the home floor is one which will not be beaten for some time to come.

Base ball!

THE 1929 season started off with a most encouraging defeat of the Lowell Textile team by an 8-0 score in four and one-half innings. The game was called at that time because of the heavy rain which fell for about two innings. In the next game the team lost by the close score of 2-1, when the Worcester Tech. players visited Trinity. The next two games were both lost by the same margin of one run, that with Rhode Island State ending in the eleventh inning with the score at 8-9, and that with Pratt being lost by the score of 4-5. Losses to Stevens, Clark and Connecticut Aggies followed, until the team defeated the Massachusetts Aggies by a 5-1 tally. Then a defeat by C. C. N. Y. intervened before the Williams game which Trinity won by the score of 8-5.

Connecticut Aggies took the return game by a greater margin than the first, and St. Michael's swamped the Blue and Gold nine 13-5. The Wesleyan double-header on June 15th atoned for the losses of the season, as the Middletown game went to Trinity 5-4, and the Hartford game was a 1-1 tie.

All in all, the season was not so lop-sided as a casual glance might indicate. With three one-run defeats, and one tie, as well as a victory over the strong Williams team makes the four won and nine lost record a little less one-sided.

Adams pitched excellent ball throughout the season, and lack of relief pitchers was the cause for many of the losses. Fielding was erratic, for a game of many errors would be followed by as tight baseball as the most exacting fan could desire.

At least one consolation can be drawn from an examination of the records, and that is that all but two of the regulars are back in the line-up for the 1930 season in which the experience and teamwork of this season will be an invaluable help to make a winning team.

THE 1930 BASEBALL SQUAD

TRACK

IN the hope of putting his men in condition for the regular outdoor schedule for 1929, Coach Oosting began this season with a practice meet on Amherst's newly constructed indoor track. On March 16th the Trinity team, handicapped by lack of facilities for indoor practice, met the Amherst squad and suffered a decisive defeat.

With the experience and early training afforded them by practicing for this meet, however, the team was in excellent shape by the time the first scheduled meet with Clark University was held, and had little trouble in defeating their opponents in spite of a soggy track. The next was one of the closest meets in which a Trinity track team ever competed. The Massachusetts Aggie team exhibited a strength in the field events which Trinity balanced by winning three-quarters of the running events, and the final score gave M. A. C. but a two-point lead.

A week later Norwich had no trouble at all in running away with a meet held on their home field, finding, as usual, that the real ability of the Trinity men lay in the running events. In the Eastern Intercollegiates, the men from the college were not able to place, and the week which followed did not gain for the team the strength needed to face successfully the strong Connecticut Aggie team which came from Storrs to defeat them by a score almost the same as that of the Norwich meet.

The only consolation for a poor season is that there has been shown to be in the two lower classes a dozen men whose work for this season promises that they will be a strong nucleus for the team of next year, for revenge may sooth the sting of past defeats.

THE 1930 TRACK SQUAD

STARTING the 1929 season without the help and experience of J. S. Bissell, captain of the 1928 team, and feeling the loss of one of its strongest players who failed to return to college, the tennis team, captained by Ralph D. Britton, '31, succeeded in tying a Rensselaer Polytechnic team of approximately equal strength in its first match. This seemed a fair start for a practically new team, but defeats by Williams, Worcester Tech., and Wesleyan soon followed, the first and last of these being decisive losses, and the second a close match to the end.

At the New England Intercollegiates the Trinity representatives were not at all successful, partly because of inexperience in match play. The losing streak of which this unsuccessful trip seemed to be the climax was temporarily broken by the 4-2 defeat of the Clark University team three days later, when Trinity, for the first time in the season, took the winning match in the doubles, and bringing back to the college the only victory for the year in this department of intercollegiate sport.

But elation over this conquest was short-lived. Four days later a trip to Springfield to meet one of the strongest teams in this section of the country resulted in a four-love defeat for the Trinity men, thus closing the season.

With the experience gained from the matches of this season, and with the approach to perfection which comes from practice, as well as with the possibility of new material for the season to come, the tennis team may hope for successes as yet unrealized.

The Jesters, 1930-31

DURING the past year the Jesters have been faced with the problem of perfecting their business machine to the point where the work of the society would show a substantial profit. To do this, they decided to have no public performances until after the mid-year examinations, but to organize a players' group which was to present short one-act plays before the college body, thus providing an opportunity for the discovery and development of talent without the financial strain of a longer, more elaborate production. The plan was successful, and with the help of Mr. Motten and Professor Allen, two one-act plays, "Trifles" and "Suppressed Desires," were presented before the student body on December 11, 1929, in Alumni Hall.

In addition to these two plays, the Jesters succeeded in bringing to the college the well-known troupers, the Jitney Players, once in November, at Alumni Hall, and again in February at the Bushnell Memorial.

On their first visit, the troupers presented "The Murder in the Red Barn," written by John Latimer, and adapted by Montague Slater. The success of this venture was so marked that the Players returned in February to give the play "One Wonder: A Woman Keeps a Secret," a seventeenth century drama written by Mrs. Centlivre and acted by David Garrick at Drury Lane.

With two successfully financed efforts behind them, the Jesters turned to their major work for the year, the production of "The Show-Off," a play by George Kelly, which they decided to give in Alumni Hall on May 24, 1930. By the coöperation of everyone in the cast, and particularly by the unstinted labor of William D. Guckenbuehler who coached the players with the help of Professor Allen, Mr. Motten, and Mr. Paden, the Jesters turned out a finished production which was thoroughly enjoyed by the college body and its Senior Week-End visitors. Business Manager Stumpf, who succeeded Edward Taggard to this position at mid-years, made the financial arrangements for the performance.

At the end of a successful season, and with hopes for an even more elaborate and profitable one next year, the Jesters turn back to pay tribute to their first president for this year, Dorance Heath Coles, whose death brought to an end his invaluable work for the organization which he headed, and to hope that future leaders of their organization may have some of his enthusiasm and ability to carry on the work which he once so ably directed.

The New Trinity College Chapel

UNIOR classes come and go, but however other Junior classes have felt at the close of the college year or with whatever feelings they have looked forward to Commencement in their Senior year, we of the Class of Nineteen-hundred and Thirty-one feel that we have a bit the advantage of them. For we shall be the first of Trinity's long array of classes to be graduated in the shade of the new chapel.

We have watched from the time the ground was first broken. We have seen the steam shovels pick up the first bits of green campus, and we have seen the cement-mixers, other symbols of our great machine age, coming with their vast loads of fluid solidity to mould foundations which will outlast the weathers of many ages to come. We feel that we have a real connection with the new chapel, for its beginnings and its completion will have been ours to watch. For us it is one of the many ties that bind us to Trinity, a symbol for us to live up to in the years to come and something vital which we shall connect with our college life forever.

Literally bound into union with the two great Trinities of England and with Trinity College, Dublin, from whose ancient walls we have received gifts of stones to be incorporated in these new walls, the chapel will be a place of worship more than worthy of the hundred-odd years of Trinity, Hartford. This touch alone will be enough to lend the atmosphere of age which buildings ordinarily achieve only after generations of sympathetic usage, and the new chapel will thus at once assume an air of comradeship and harmony with the surrounding buildings. It will need no period of acclimation, no probationary fifty years to make it a part of the Trinity College campus. An atmospheric niche has been waiting for three generations, and now it is adequately and admirably filled.

“And all the people shouted with a great shout when they praised the Lord, because the foundation of the house of the Lord was laid. And many wept with a loud voice, and many shouted aloud for joy; so that the people could not discern the noise of the shout of joy from the noise of the weeping of people: for the people shouted with a loud shout, and the noise was heard afar off.”

This extract, taken from A Hebrew Chronicle of Ezra, is a picture of the rejoicing of the multitude at the completion of the second temple. It is thus that we feel at the completion of the foundation of our new temple, although the Anglo-Saxon strain in us prevents our indulging our feelings to quite the extent of the people represented in the quotation. Nevertheless, it is with great rejoicing that we see the new chapel rising out of the ground, and it is with a sense of selfish (but, we hope, forgivable) pride that we of the Junior Class make it a part of our future lives.

And to William Gwinn Mather, 1877, who has made our rejoicing possible, we extend the thanks of a grateful college and the assurance that his great gift has already made a change in our lives, as it is bound to affect the lives of all Trinity men into the ages.

The Trowbridge Memorial

T is my hope that the young men who use this building will get from it something of the spirit of Breck Trowbridge and all that he stood for." This expression, spoken by President Ogilby in the dedication of the Trowbridge Memorial, marks the beginning of a new period of development for Trinity. With the opening of the swimming pool and the squash racquet courts in the new building, two new sports have been added to the list of Trinity's activities, and a still finer spirit of sportsmanship has been sponsored.

The building was formally open on October 19, 1929, when the tablet in memory of S. Breck Parkman Trowbridge, of the Class of 1883, was unveiled. After the dedication, President Ogilby made a brief address about Mr. Trowbridge. "Mr. Trowbridge was a distinguished architect, an enthusiastic sportsman, a cultured gentleman, and a loyal alumnus of this College. It is most fitting that this building on the Trinity College Campus should bear his name, for he worked out the original scheme of a swimming pool with squash racquet courts above." Following the speeches, members of the Yale and Wesleyan swimming teams gave exhibitions of swimming, diving, and water polo while exhibition squash racquet matches were played in the courts on the top floor. Since this time, the pool and the courts have been in constant use by the students and some of the alumni.

On December 7, a swimming exhibition was given under the direction of Joseph C. Clarke, instructor in swimming. Members of the faculty, their wives, and some students were present at this informal meet. Following the races, Jerome Wyckoff, '31, won the diving match and was awarded the squash racquet offered by President Ogilby. There was a life-saving demonstration and several water games.

The first inter-fraternity swimming meet was held on February 28th when St. Anthony Hall won a first leg on the trophy offered by Alexander Ogilby, the youngest son of President Ogilby. The neutral body team won the greatest number of points, but the cup was formally awarded to St. Anthony Hall which was second, as the trophy can be given only to groups representing fraternities. Jerome Wyckoff, '31, and Dorance Coles, '30 were tied for first place in the individual scoring honors, each one winning two first places. The Neutrals scored 19 points; St. Anthony, 12; Alpha Delta Phi, 11; Psi Upsilon and Alpha Tau Kappa 10 each. Swimming classes have been held every day for those who wished to take this instead of regular physical training classes.

The game of squash racquets was given an excellent start at Trinity when, soon after the opening of the Trowbridge Memorial, Mr. Harry L. Cowles, coach of the Harvard tennis and squash teams, spent a week here teaching the rudiments of the game. He (Cowles) played several exhibition matches during his stay here and his work aroused a great deal of interest in the game.

A preliminary tournament was held two weeks before Christmas when men who planned to enter the cup tournament later in the year were given an opportunity to gain experience. Thirty-two men entered, and at the end of the fourth round R. D. Britton, '31, and A. A. Arnold, '32, were the contenders for first place. The latter took the match by a score of 3-0 from Britton.

Mr. Newton C. Brainard offered a beautiful silver cup as the prize for the winner of the annual tournament which was held this year during February and March. Britton and Arnold met in one of the semi-final matches when Britton won 4-0. John E. Burke, '32, defeated Phippen, '32, in the other semi-finals, and then displayed unusual form to win over Britton in the finals of the tournament by the score of 4-3. Burke was awarded the cup offered by Mr. Brainard and has his name inscribed on the bronze plaque which was also given by Mr. Brainard and on which the names of the winners of the annual tournament will be placed.

The use which has been made of the Trowbridge Memorial during the year shows the great interest which Trinity students have in swimming and squash racquets and promises to fulfill Mr. Trowbridge's hopes.

Trinity College

HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT

TRINITY COLLEGE under the name of Washington College, was founded in Hartford in 1823 by certain members of the Episcopal Church as their contribution to higher education. Although the college has maintained this original Episcopal connection, the provisions of the charter forbidding the application of any religious test to professor or student have always been upheld. In 1845, largely because there were several other colleges in the United States bearing the name of our first President, the name Washington College was changed to Trinity College. In the seventies the original site of the college was sold to the State, and building on the present site was begun.

The original building including Northam Towers in the center, Jarvis on the north, and Seabury on the south, is one of the longest line of college buildings in this country. It is built in Portland brownstone with sandstone trim. In 1914 the Williams Memorial Building, containing the Library and the administration offices, was given to the college by the late J. P. Morgan, in memory of his life-long friend, John Williams, once President of the College and fourth Bishop of Connecticut. In June, 1930, a corresponding wing at the south end of the long line of buildings will be begun, to consist of dormitories and Commons, erected from the bequest of the late Charles Cook of Windsor. This south wing will terminate in a Chemistry Laboratory, just as the north wing ends in the new Chapel now being built. This last is the gift of William G. Mather, '77, and, when finished, will, in the expectation of those in charge of its construction, be considered of high rank in the architectural world, worthy of being dedicated to the worship of Almighty God.

In October, 1929, the first unit of the new gymnasium was dedicated, consisting of a swimming pool and six squash racquets courts. Plans are being considered for two more units, one on each side, to consist of a field house and a general gymnasium, but no immediate construction is contemplated. When this unit is completed, the old gymnasium at the north end of the campus will be moved or taken down.

The contribution made by Trinity College to education is in its training for leadership. Many of its students have entered the learned professions and proper preparation for graduate schools is always in the mind of the Faculty. In addition, other students receive a broad cultural foundation which will enable them to complete their formal education on graduation from Trinity and enter business or other fields of industry.

For information about admission, application should be made to the Dean.

Miss Ina Claire, famous actress, producer, formerly a protege of Belasco and Ziegfeld, says that if the wood pulp made into paper and wasted by would-be playwrights were conserved for more productive purposes, there would be no need of a reforestation program.

When we examine one lone use of wood, such as paper-making, and consider the countless tons used each year, we wonder if there will be a single tree left a decade hence.

There will be more than there are today. The National Government has provided for that, and assures us that lumber conservation is assured.

NOWHERE will beauty in architecture be achieved in greater degree than on your own campus. The Trinity Chapel you are now building will definitely leave its mark upon you. Its influence will endure for all your years. We consider the task of interpreting our part of the architect's plans an exceptional honor.

Our medium is Indiana Limestone—time will age and mellow it — but like your college, it will endure through the ages.
