TRINITY COLLEGE, HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT

OCTOBER, 1971

Coed Ratio Raised by Class of '75

Approximately 397 freshmen, slightly less than last year, reported to the campus on Wednesday, September 8. The class includes 157 coeds as the College goes into its third year of coeducation and its 149th academic year.

The entering class brings the total expected enrollment of the College to a new high of 1,567 students, an increase of about 3.8% over last year when about 1506 students attended.

The total number of coeds this fall will be about 556, not including some part-time students.

The Freshman Class was drawn from 2,425 completed applications, which was about 50 less than last year, with more women applications than before and fewer male applications.

Also this year there are 34 exchange students, 13 visiting students and 55 transfer students, with about 34 of the students attending the fall program of the Trinity/Rome campus.

The new class underwent a five day orientation program which began on September 8. The program, developed by J. Ronald Spencer, the new dean of the Office of Community Life, which was intended to acquaint the incoming freshmen with the problems and concerns facing college students in the 1970's, dealt with the draft, drugs and sex as well as traditional academic matters.

Recreational activities included a picnic dinner on the quad, a mixer, a film, and a concert by the Trinity Pipes.

Judicial System Keys on Dean

A new all-college judicial system which gives the dean of community life and other administrators more authority in dealing with campus disciplinary problems has been enacted by President Lockwood.

The new system, which replaces the Trinity Adjudicative System adopted in March of 1970, puts the dean of community life into the center of campus dispute settlement. The adjudicative system turned responsibility for discipline on campus over largely to a student-faculty-administration adjudicative panel.

The new system makes use in each (see JUDICIAL, page 12)

New Black Orientation Program Eases Transition to Trinity

A new black orientation program intended to help Trinity's 26 black freshmen adjust to the academic and social life of the campus was conducted alongside the college's regular freshmen orientation program this year.

The new program, run by members of the Trinity Coalition of Blacks (TCB) with a $2,500 grant from the college, featured special academic counselling sessions, seminars with Trinity faculty and administration, and visits from business and civic leaders from Hartford's black community.

Most of the new black students received an initial introduction to Trinity during the summer and many came to the campus several days before orientation week to get used to the college.

Three TCB members, Larry Pleasant, Terrie Rouse and Steve Newsome, all of the class of '74, spent the entire summer in Hartford preparing for the program. They say they hope to make the orientation program an "ongoing" operation by keeping in close touch with new black students as the year progresses.

Pleasant, a 20-year-old urban studies major from Brooklyn, says he and his friends became interested in the orientation idea as they learned that many black students at Trinity were getting into serious academic difficulty.

He says that bad grades do not always mean that blacks are incapable of doing the work at Trinity or are poorly motivated. Sometimes they are just ill prepared and find that the deck is stacked against them.

Most blacks, Pleasant says, come from inferior big city public high schools and are less prepared for the academic rigors at Trinity than white students.

For most, too, Trinity is the first white-oriented environment they've lived in. Many feel the white student and many faculty and administration members don't understand them and don't know much about blacks.

"Trinity educates a student so that he will fit into the mainstream of American society," he adds. "This is somewhat alien to most black people."

Most of the TCB members involved in the orientation program are withholding judgment about how much it helped. They know that orientation seminars were well attended and things seemed to

An intensive studies program which would allow students to work entire semesters under a single professor, an increase in student enrollments, and a new emphasis on getting adult students into the college community were a few of the recommendations made by two task forces which studied the future of the college this summer.

The task forces, consisting of five students, eight faculty members and an alumna, were commissioned by the trustees last April to study two broad areas involved in the long range planning of the college: academic programs and student life and physical facilities.

A synopsis of the task force recommendations and an introduction by President Lockwood are reprinted on page 4.

Spencer Named To Dean Post

J. Ronald Spencer, a history instructor at Trinity since 1968 and former Hartford Times reporter, has been appointed Dean of Community Life.

Spencer, a Trinity alumnus (class of 1964) with a masters degree from Columbia, will replace Marc S. Salisch, who announced his resignation in April.

A native of Easton, Maryland, Spencer taught at Brooklyn College before returning to Trinity. Currently he is writing a Ph.D. thesis on the Democratic party in Connecticut. He will continue to teach one history course each semester while serving as dean.

In his new post, Spencer will be responsible for developing wholesome interaction among students and creating a campus environment which is conducive to student academic and social growth.

He will also be a member of the Trinity College Council, an administration-faculty-student deliberative body; run college orientation programs; and attempt to help minority group students and new coeds to adjust to life at Trinity.

Working closely with Spencer will be Joan L. Chipman, assistant to the dean, and Mohamed Jama Jibrell, special assistant in the Community Life Office.

Letters To The Editor

Student Comments Urged

I think you are doing a good job of giving news about the Trinity scene in the Trinity Reporter although I do agree with one correspondent that it would be interesting to hear more about what the students are thinking as perhaps mirrored in excerpts from the Tripod. But my only real complaint about the Reporter is that I seem to get only one out of every five issues. Probably my overseas location is the problem...

Chess Club Success

Of all the teams fighting under the Trinity banner perhaps none has achieved less glory in proportion to its success than the Trinity College Chess Club.

But if the local woodpushers haven't won any headlines, they've at least been winning intercollegiate matches. From a series of five contests held during the second term of '71, Trinity emerged with a record of 3-1-1. Among their victims were Wesleyan, 7-2; Hartford Community College, 3-2; and UConn, 4-3. Against Central Connecticut, the Trinityites managed a 5-5 draw, though being outnumbered necessitated that three Trinity men each contend with two CCSC opponents simultaneously. Yale inflicted the Bantams only defeat, by the score of 4-2.

If Trinity possesses a secret weapon it must be in the form of Jeff Robbins, the 13-year old son of Mrs. Paula Robbins, Placement Director. In his first formal appearance as a member of the Trinity team, Jeff won the morale factor completely onto the side of the Hartford contingent by upending a Wesleyan grad student nine years his senior. Later Jeff provided the winning margin in the matches against Hartford Community and UConn.

Over the upcoming year the Chess Club will continue its matches, sponsor a lecture and simultaneous exhibition by Chessmaster Jude Acers, host the Fourth Annual Trinity Open tournament, and enter a team in the North American Intercollegiate Championships.

For chess buffs, here is an example of college level competition:

CAMPUS NOTES

THOMAS A. SMITH '44, vice president, was recently appointed a member of the Executive and Finance Committee of University Research Institute of Connecticut, Inc. (URIC). Smith has been a member of URIC's Board of Directors since January 1969 and has served on the Environmental Conference Planning Committee for the past two years. URIC is a non-profit research institute associated with twelve Connecticut universities and colleges whose goal is to engage in cooperative inter-university research, development and educational activities in the interest of the community.

President LOCKWOOD '48 attended the fifth annual meeting of the Education Commission of the States whose theme was "Educational Goals and Public Priorities." He participated in a panel discussion on the subject of "Financing Higher Education." Included on the panel with the President were: Bryce Baggett, State Senator, Oklahoma; Watts Hill Jr., North Carolina Board of Higher Education; John D. Millett, Chancellor, Ohio Board of Regents and John C. Weaver, President, University of Wisconsin.

CLYDE D. MCKEE, associate professor of political science and urban and environmental studies, will be on sabbatical next year. Starting in September he will be working as a Public Administration Fellow in the office of the Assistant Secretary of Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, Washington, D.C. His specific assignment will involve the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1971. He has been asked to evaluate the impact of various other Labor Department programs, assess the administration procedures of these programs and draft proposed administrative procedures for the new Act. Because of McKee's interest in planned communities, he and his family will live in Columbia, Maryland, America's best known planned city.

MARJORIE V. BUTCHER, lecturer-in-mathematics, has collaborated on a book, "Mathematics of Compound Interest," with Cecil J. Nesbitt, professor of mathematics at the University of Michigan. Published in June, the book is intended for the serious student of the subject and as a reference on compound interest theory.

RONALD J. QUIRK '64 who has been teaching at his alma mater since 1969, has been promoted to assistant professor of modern languages. Quirk, salutatorian of the class of 1964, received his masters and doctorate degrees from Brown. During the summer he taught in an eight-week intensive training session in Puerto Rican language and culture for selected Hartford teachers which was conducted at Trinity under a grant from the Connecticut Commission on Aid to Higher Education. He recently accompanied the teachers on a two-week study of Puerto Rican culture and history conducted at the University of Puerto Rico.

The annual Town-Gown Forum, a series of seven lectures on provocative topics of current interest sponsored by the wives of Trinity alumni, faculty, administration and friends, has been announced for the 1971-72 season. Entitled "The Dynamics of Change," the series will feature members of the faculty: DREW A. HYLAND, associate professor of philosophy; MICHAEL R. T. MAHONEY, professor of fine arts; THEODOR M. MAUCH, professor of religion; NORMAN MILLER, professor of

NEW ORGAN—A four-keyboard console, part of the College's new $150,000 French classic organ, was installed in the Chapel this summer, together with 4,465 pipes. The pipes are being tuned in preparation for a dedication concert (around the first of the year). See story on page 12.

sociology; EDWIN P. NYE, dean of the faculty and professor of engineering; and SAMUEL HENDEL, professor of political science. The forum sessions begin October 5 and continue through November 16 and will be held in the Austin Arts Center at 1:30 p.m. on six successive Tuesdays.

DR. ALBERT C. JACOBS, Hon. '68, former president of the College, addressed the Hartford Rotary Club on Monday, August 9. Dr. Jacobs spends his summers at Edgartown, Martha's Vineyard, Massachusetts. On hand to greet him was JOHN L. BONEE '43.

Two 1970 graduates were awarded first and fourth prizes in the annual Clement Prize Essay Competition. The first prize winner was ROY A. WENTZ III of Wilmington, Delaware who received $850 for submitting the best thesis in support of the principles of the United States Constitution and the Bill of Rights. The fourth prize winner was EDWARD A. BEACOM IV also of Wilmington who received $250. The prizes were established by the will of the late Percival Wood Clement, former governor of the state of Vermont.

DAVID ELIET, instructor in theatre arts, has written a play entitled "One Moment Please" which was broadcast last January on RIAS Radio Berlin. The comedy was well received by German critics. A recording of the broadcast was selected for inclusion in the Library of the Blind, an honor which is awarded to few radio drama scripts, especially those of foreign authors. Another of his plays, "The Death of the Twenty-fifth Soldier," was selected as only one of two American entrants in the Prix Italia, the International Radio Drama Festival. Currently, Eliet has three plays being considered for production both in this country and abroad, and he is at work on a three-act play, "The Plague of Maquen."

The REVEREND KENNETH W. CAMERON, associate professor of English, was installed honorary Canon of Christ Church Cathedral by the Rt. Rev. J. Warren Hutchens, Episcopal Bishop of Connecticut. Canon Cameron was elected to this position by the Cathedral chapter upon nomination of the Bishop and Dean Robert S. Beecher.

GEORGE E. NICHOLS III, chairman of Theatre Arts, returned in June from a three-month sabbatical leave in London. While there he saw fifty plays in the West End and in various fringe theatres. According to Nichols, the general level of acting in the commercial theatres was consistently high, but he felt that the vitality that characterizes many of the American productions was lacking in London.

Among the chief advantages of the British theatre, he said, were still the availability and relative cheapness of theatre tickets, the wide variety of fare and the opportunity to see the work of many of England's most distinguished actors and great companies. Of particular interest were the lunchtime shows, hour-long minimal productions which focus on new playwrights and young performers.

Dr. JOHN WILLIAM WARD, new president of Amherst College, will deliver the Clement Memorial Lecture in Kriebler Auditorium on Thursday, November 18. Dr. Ward will speak on "Violence and American Liberal Values."

DR. ROBERT B. OXNAM, an assistant professor of history, has been named special assistant to President Lockwood on a part-time basis. Oxnam will help advise the President on matters of long-range planning.

Students Can 'Stop Out' But Most Won't, Says Dean

Students returning to Connecticut colleges this fall will find it easier than ever to interrupt their academic work for travel or work experience, but — according to one top official at Trinity — most students won't use the new freedom.

The official, Robbins Winslow, dean of educational services, says a Carnegie Commission report, "Less Time, More Options," has stimulated many colleges — including Trinity — to double their efforts to allow students to "stop out" of college without having to worry about being readmitted again. But he said very few students — at least at Trinity — will take advantage of the new offer.

The commission report, Winslow explained, said one cause of student unrest is a feeling among students that they are "trapped" in school. It said students feel the draft and the fear of becoming "college drop-outs" force them to stay in school whether they want to be there or not, he said.

But Winslow argues that once students know they can leave school if they want to, they'll decide — in four out of five cases — to stay where they are.

As an example, Winslow pointed to a new (or at least newly publicized) "guaranteed readmissions" policy at Trinity which allows virtually any student to take an extended leave of absence from school and then return without having to re-apply. Students need only notify the college registrar six months before they return to campus.

He said that about 75 of Trinity's 1,500 undergraduates will take advantage of the new freedom and "stop out" of school next year. And even when the policy is well-known on campus, he says the number won't go over about 150.

The reason, Winslow says, is that Trinity already offers "enough avenues through which students can make their college experience meaningful."

Many courses combine classes with a "practicum" already and the college is involved in a number of programs which allow students to study or work off campus for credit, he said.

"We're involved in the twelve-college exchange through which students can spend a year at Smith or Wellesley or a number of other colleges. Students are studying in Europe, Africa and the Philippines for sometimes less than it costs to stay on campus. And there's the Open Semester Program which permits students to design semester-long projects, such as working in Washington for a senator or being a clinical assistant in a hospital," Winslow said.

Once the option of dropping out of school completely is given to a student and he no longer feels trapped, it often loses its attractiveness, he said. "Then taking time off becomes just one option."

Students begin to think about the problems involved in looking for a job and getting an apartment and the "meaningfulness" of the venture isn't always apparent, Winslow said.

"I wonder about the argument that somebody's non-educational experience gives them maturity of judgment and clarity of goals," Winslow said. "I'm not sure that experience in our society necessarily brings maturity and clarity." Taking leaves of absence from school is probably "educationally neutral," he said.

"I think it was Robert Frost who said the 'book side' of things has to be integrated with the experience side of things," Winslow said. "The young feel things have been too bookish, but there still needs to be an integration of the two," he said.

In a report sent to President Lockwood on July 15, Winslow estimated that between 200 and 300 students — or about 15 per cent of Trinity's student body — will be involved in programs this year which exemplify "the flexibility for student movement recommended in the Carnegie report," and allow students to learn off campus.

Thirty-four students will spend the first semester at Trinity's new campus in Rome; 28 will study at other universities outside the United States; 34 will be on leave to study at other American campuses; and the rest will either "stop out" of school or be involved in an open semester project, he said.

In the second semester between 60 and 80 additional students will be moving off campus for one reason or another, he said.

Old Biology Building Bows To New Age of Technology

Boardman Hall, the three-story brownstone building which once housed Trinity's well-known Museum of Natural History, became the victim of progress at the end of August.

Her high ceilinged biology laboratories, her long wooden stairways, her darkened corridors and leaded windows—once considered plush and one of the best facilities of its type—crumbled at the hands of demolition experts.

She could no longer compete. Science had passed her by. And all those students who had learned and grown within her walls since 1900 would have found her obsolete and useless today.

Some called her ugly. But even they admit she will be missed. Students had become used to her ivy walls. She could not compete with the new concrete structures which grew up around her. But she fit in.

"Boardman Hall did not meet the requirements of the new fire codes," Riel Crandall, director of buildings and grounds explained. "The costs of meeting the codes—such as providing more exits—were prohibitive."

Boardman—in recent years—was a catch-all. Originally used as a science classroom building and a museum, it became a haven for programs and activities which did not seem to fit elsewhere on campus.

Most recently it was the home of Channel 24, Connecticut's educational television station, and housed the college's art and dance studios. One of Hartford's Alternate Learning Centers, special centers run by the Hartford board of education, also resided within its walls.

Designed by an 1869 alumnus, William C. Brockesley, Boardman was built for $50,000. It cost nearly $10,000 and took nearly two weeks to tear it down.

The original construction was financed by a gift from trustee J. Pierpont Morgan and pledges from five undergraduate students. By the 1930's a first class Natural History Museum was built into the hall including dinosaur fragments and vertebrate skeletons of all sorts; aquatic specimens and stuffed mammals; microscopic forms and fossils; and a large collection of rocks and minerals.

The museum, known throughout Connecticut, was finally dismantled in 1967. Geology was almost simultaneously dropped from the College curriculum.

The college has no immediate plans for building on the old Boardman Hall site. Work crews are expected to grass in the land by the end of October.

More Students, New Programs Urged

Trinity has an enviably distinguished position among this country's independent colleges. We have strong academic programs; we have a dedicated faculty; we have a diverse and talented student body; and we have a balanced budget. But we cannot afford too heady a dose of self-congratulation. Like any great institution Trinity must reassess its position if it is to respond vigorously to the needs of tomorrow and to remain in the forefront of higher education.

Three developments make this reassessment imperative:

1. The public now expects an accounting from colleges and universities as to what they are doing and why.

2. The nation's leading institutions have substantially modified their approaches and thus compel the smaller liberal arts college like Trinity to distinguish its offerings evermore clearly.

3. The national economic condition, particularly the rapid inflation of recent years, has put tremendous fiscal pressure on all higher education.

To these general developments has been added another challenge: the actual number of men and women seeking admission to independent colleges has declined this year. Rising costs, competition, and a limitation on financial aid contribute to this shift away from private institutions.

For all these reasons we have undertaken at Trinity a substantial effort in long-range planning. In choosing how best to respond to these altered circumstances, we wish to build on the strengths which 150 years of distinguished service have provided. Ever conscious of the impact of rising costs in education, we wish so to design our approach that we retain our vitality without escalating the price—a tough assignment.

Therefore, a number of us have spent this summer considering alternatives which we shall actively discuss on the campus during the next few months. These are the assumptions from which we proceed:

1. Trinity must make special efforts to maintain and to improve the quality and the intellectual excitement of its academic programs. This goal presumes that we can retain and attract outstanding faculty and well-qualified students; it presumes that by our choice of programs we can assure the continuance of a stimulating intellectual environment.

2. Trinity must be attractive to the imaginative and able faculty member, for a decline in the quality or diversity of the faculty will inevitably lead us to mediocrity in our curriculum and in our teaching. This goal means that we must continue our effort to improve salaries and to increase the opportunities for interaction between faculty and students—a hallmark of the smaller independent college.

3. Trinity must continue to attract talented students. How do we do this? It is clear that we must nourish an exciting academic and residential environment, enthusiasm among both undergraduates and faculty, a physically congenial campus, and a provocative cross section of young men and women. All this we must provide at a competitive tuition with respect to both private and public institutions.

I am persuaded that few would dissent from these goals. I am also persuaded that, just as Trinity has made timely and progressive changes in the past, we have the requisite conviction to change now while we still have the resources and flexibility which we have inherited from the past. Among our faculty, staff, students, alumni and friends we have the talent necessary to determine which alternatives offer greatest promise. The task is not a root-and-branch reconstruction; rather, we must seek those new programs and structures which develop from and complement our present strengths and which ensure that we can meet the challenges that confront us.

The reports which were prepared this summer represent a series of proposals. They are not a master plan. Our job is to choose those which make the best sense and add others which, I am certain, will emerge from our future discussions. Having sorted out the alternatives, we shall then need to add the requisite details before presenting them to the Trustees by no later than the first of the year.

Great institutions continually renew themselves. Sensitive to this obligation, Trinity will, I am sure, respond creatively to the new conditions under which colleges now operate and thereby enhance her position among institutions of serious educational aspiration and achievement. I know I shall have your help in this effort.

New Trinity/Rome Campus Opens for Christmas Term

Forty-one Trinity students are spending the first semester this year on the Aventine Hill in Rome as part of the new Trinity/Rome Campus fall program.

The program, an expansion of the highly successful Trinity/Rome Campus summer program which was inaugurated two years ago, is again under the direction of Professor Michael R. Campo '48, chairman of the modern languages department. Campo said 34 of the students are from Trinity and seven from Clark University, University of Connecticut, Wheaton, Connecticut College, University of Massachusetts and Emmanuel College. They left for Rome on September 5 and will return January 15.

The resident director will be Marilyn Caldwell, adjunct professor. Miss Caldwell received a B.A. from Stanford, and masters degrees from the University of North Carolina and the University of London, where until recently she was a Junior Research Fellow. She has taught in the Overseas Division of the University of Maryland in Italy, Germany and England and in the Stanford-in-Britain program. She will also teach two courses in the program: "The Grand Tour: Rome in the Imagination of Western Man," and "Gods and Heroes in Art: A study of the Pictorial Representation of Classical Mythology."

Associate director-in-residence will be Gertrude S. Hooker who holds a doctorate in comparative literature from the University of Chicago. She lived in Rome for many years where she served as the Deputy Cultural Affairs Officer of the United States Information Agency. Since 1967 she has been visiting professor of literature at the University of Hartford.

Synopsis of Planning Reports

Over the past few years Trinity, like most institutions of higher education, has felt pressures to rethink its goals and to plan carefully for the future. In addition to the economic crisis which has forced up prices and tuition at a rapid rate, we also find our methods and goals called constantly into question by the general public, by our students, and by our faculty and administration. Responding to these pressures, last April the Board of Trustees asked for recommendations on the future of Trinity. Consequently, during this past summer two faculty-student task forces, Professor Ward Curran (Director of Institutional Planning), and Dean Edwin Nye (Dean of the Faculty) studied various aspects of our present condition, considered alternatives, and presented their recommendations.

What follows is a synopsis of their reports, which is being sent to all students and staff in the hope that everyone in the Trinity community will become actively involved in the planning process. Two open hearings will be scheduled in September and October, to which all members of the Trinity community are invited. Within a few days copies of the full report will be available on reserve at the Circulation Desk of the Library. Students who would like a copy of the full report may obtain one at the Office of Community Life.

I.

Professor Ward Curran's report, "The Financial Future of the College," is a projection of the College budget over the next decade based on a series of restrained assumptions about revenues and expenses. His paper was drafted prior to the August 15th wage-price freeze and implicit in his analysis is that in the future wage and price decisions will not be subject to review and approval by federal authorities. If wage and price controls become a more or less permanent fixture, they will lower both the revenue and expense projections which he has made. Controls, however, are not likely to lessen the difficulty Trinity is going to have in maintaining a balanced budget throughout the 1970's without continued increases in tuition. He also observes that tuition increases without increases in scholarship aid will have considerable effect on the quality of the student body since fewer and fewer qualified students will be able to afford the cost of a Trinity education.

Professor Curran's primary conclusion is of great importance. If the College is going to maintain the economic and cultural diversity of the student body as well as the fiscal integrity of the institution, one or both of the following steps must be taken: 1) lower the rate of increase in educational and general costs per student without appreciably affecting the quality of services; 2) raise non-tuition sources of income, i.e., endowment and annual giving. In addition, if the College is to maintain a program of wage and salary increases which exceed the rate of inflation, "visible productivity" (a term which he explains in his paper) of college personnel must also rise. His assumptions on expenditure increases are as low as conceivable.

II.

The Task Force on Academic Programs established the following goal for the College:

The primary concern of Trinity College ought to be the creation of an exciting community of scholars. Such a community should pride itself on both individual excellence and on its abilities for sharing intellectual experiences. In order to realize this goal we must elicit concerted enthusiasm among students and faculty on the grounds that Trinity College is an exciting and worthwhile institution.

The Task Force also concluded that this community of scholars should not be a secluded and introspective entity, but should include stimulating individuals representing a wide range of ages and backgrounds, provide variety of learning experiences, and encourage widespread intellectual exchange among its students and faculty. To these ends the Task Force (see SYNOPSIS, page 12)

Trinity Reporter - October 1971

ANNUAL GIVING REPORT

JULY 1, 1970 to JUNE 30, 1971

It is my happy privilege to present this report of gifts to Trinity College during the past year. Never before in the long history of the College have so many contributed so much in an annual, non-capital campaign. Alumni, parents, friends and business firms all have set new levels of generosity.

I salute all who participated in this magnificent effort—Andrew Onderdonk '34, Chairman of the Alumni Fund; Alfred Raws, Chairman of the Parents Fund; Crampton Trainer, Chairman of the Friends of Trinity Fund; Pomeroy Day and Hugh Campbell '32, Co-chairmen of the Business and Industry Associates; and the scores of alumni and friends who served in the ranks of volunteers. To those who served and to those who gave, Trinity is profoundly grateful. You have made a significant contribution to preserve and nurture the quality of the academic program at the College.

Theodore D. Lockwood
President

SYNOPSIS

Force made several recommendations.

INTENSIVE STUDY PROGRAM They recommend that Trinity College establish a program consisting of intense study of selected areas through a close student-faculty relationship. The Intensive Study Program will permit students to spend entire semesters working individually or in small groups with a single faculty member in an area of mutual interest. The faculty member's instructional activity will be devoted to a group of students and to other responsibilities related to the Intensive Study Program. They call the group of faculty and students involved in this program The Tutorial College, though the mode of instruction can be tutorials, group seminars, supervised research, or a combination of these.

FACULTY AND ACADEMIC ENVIRONMENT

They recommend several actions designed to improve our faculty and the general academic atmosphere of the institution. These actions are: strengthening our recruiting procedures; improving faculty evaluation; encouraging faculty scholarship through leave grants; improving our evaluation and recognition of student achievement; augmenting our regular faculty through exchanges; and encouraging academic interaction outside of classes.

TRINITY'S RELATION TO HARTFORD AND THE URBAN-ENVIRONMENTAL PROGRAM They recommend that Trinity take several actions to improve our academic and civic relations with Hartford. These actions are: widening opportunities for all students to have an urban component in their education; encouraging Trinity faculty to live in Hartford; offering repayment in kind for educational services given to our students by nonacademic institutions in Hartford; creating short-courses for secondary school teachers interested in newly-developing areas; and making facilities available on Trinity's campus for a small, selective public high school.

ALTERNATE DEGREE PROGRAM They recommend that Trinity College establish a program in which certification for the B.A. is not based on course requirements, to be completed at varying times. The formal requirements for the degree will be the satisfactory completion of two sets of examinations and projects. The program would be equivalent in rigor and depth to our ordinary degree program. Since the program is ultimately defined by the two sets of examinations and projects, this requires that the faculty undertake the task of describing the knowledge and abilities that it expects of its students in each discipline.

AGE HETEROGENEITY AMONG TRINITY'S UNDERGRADUATE STUDENT BODY They recommend that Trinity actively seek students outside the usual age range, including both high school juniors and older students. The older students can be accepted either as degree or non-degree students, and we should arrange our scheduling in order to attract such part-time students.

III.

The Task Force on Student Life and Physical Facilities observed that "rather than await the time when change would be forced upon us in haste, it seems preferable to start to change now, and to change in ways that may be financially beneficial, without harming the academic or social life of the campus; indeed we may find, if we start now, that we can help all areas simultaneously." Heeding Professor Curran's admonitions, the Task Force sought alternatives which might increase Trinity's revenues while avoiding substantial annual tuition increases.

EXPANSION OF ENROLLMENT

Realizing that Trinity underutilizes its classroom facilities but fully utilizes its eating and residential facilities, the Task Force considered the possibility of admitting significant numbers of non-residential students. They recommended that the College acquire several large houses within a reasonable range of the campus and that several students as well as one or more faculty members occupy those houses.

For economic, academic, and social reasons, the Task Force also made several suggestions concerning the admission of local non-residential students. Among the possible sources for such students are recent graduates of community colleges, adults who wish to complete or further their higher education, and Blacks in the Hartford area. In order to attract and accommodate such students, Trinity would need to develop several options: a two-year program of extension courses offered in the evenings; a daytime adult education program and day-care facilities; an external degree program for those who cannot attend regular classes; and human relations courses designed to establish greater contact among people of all ages and races. In order to operate these programs, the Task Force recommends the creation of a flexible, semi-autonomous institute renting Trinity's facilities but having a separate faculty and non-residential student body.

TUITION OPTIONS AND FINANCIAL AID

The Task Force recommends that Trinity consider adopting a variable tuition policy in which the rate would increase with family income and decrease with the desirability of the student. They also point out other possibilities such as a deferred tuition plan and work-study program.

STUDENT LIFE The Task Force, very concerned about the need to promote a greater sense of community at Trinity, makes several recommendations about student life. They urge an expanded orientation program of 4-6 weeks in which remedial education would be offered for disadvantaged students and in which Blacks would take a course concerning the white environment and whites a course in elements of Black culture. In order to make faculty more sensitive to the needs of Blacks, it is recommended that we initiate a faculty exchange with Black universities.

The Task Force also recommends greater attention to our female students by the addition of women counselors, gynecological facilities, an expanded sports program for women, and lectures by women who are professionals in various fields. In addition, modification of the present system of student advising is recommended, specifically the selection of some fifty upperclassmen to assist faculty in the advising of freshmen. Finally, the Task Force provides a series of recommendations concerning student groups and organizations: College subsidies of open fraternities and College purchase or rental of discontinued fraternities; College financial aid and academic credit for students working in the Cinestudio, WRTC, and Tripod; and provision of "drop-in" centers for those with drug, alcohol, or other problems.

The Task Force recommends that more efficient methods for handling data employed in order to permit administrators more time for talking with members of the community. Finally, they urge that the students who presently serve on faculty committees also be permitted a vote in faculty meetings on matters which are not restricted to the faculty alone by the Charter of Trinity College.

IV.

Dean Edwin Nye's Report is a detailed analysis of trends in course enrollments and faculty utilization over the past

New Classic French Organ "Voiced" for Dedication

Trinity's new $150,000 classic French organ was installed in the College Chapel this summer and is now being "voiced" in preparation for a dedication concert scheduled for early January.

The new nine-ton, 32 feet high instrument, made possible by an anonymous gift in memory of long-time Trustee Newton C. Brainard and former Mayor of Hartford, was built in the Hartford factory of the Austin Organ Company and assembled in the ante-chapel during the last weeks of August.

Spokesmen from Austin Organ said the organ has 4,465 pipes, ranging from two feet to a half inch in diameter, and took over a year to build. At times up to 60 people worked on building it in the factory, they said.

The console for the organ has three manuals and a pedal keyboard.

The old organ, built by the Skinner Organ Company of Boston in 1930, was sold to the Church of St. Mary the Virgin in New York City. Trinity Chaplain Alan Tull said tonal ideas have changed significantly since the 1930's and the instrument was poorly located and difficult to maintain. Placement of the new organ at the back rather than at the side of the Chapel makes acoustical and liturgical sense, Tull said.

The new organ was designed by Adams and Woodbridge, architects of New York with the help of Trinity organist emeritus decade. This analysis will serve as a starting point as we consider the structure of our curriculum, and the composition and size of both the faculty and the student body.

The effects of two major curriculum revisions, a 50% increase in student enrollment, the innovation of coeducation and a "freeze" in faculty size are reflected in a variety of ways in the patterns of student course enrollments over the past 11 years. The most significant force for change was the 1969 Curriculum Revision. Enrollments in modern languages and the physical sciences, including mathematics, have decreased by approximately one-half when expressed as percentages of total enrollment, while sharp increases in psychology, religion and fine arts have been recorded. Enrollment in philosophy has remained remarkably constant over the entire period.

The freezing of faculty size in 1969-70 has resulted in a notable rise in the student-faculty ratio. However, an unexpected effect of an opposite character was found in the size distribution of course sections. Between 1961 and 1966 the size of an "average" section rose from 18 to 19.3 while the median size rose from 16 to 18. In 1970-71 the average size was 22 but the median size had fallen to 15. This is explained by noting that a sharp increase in the number of small seminars and classes was brought about by the 1969 Curriculum Revision, tending to restore close student-faculty contact even though there was also an increase in the number of sections having enrollments over 50.

Faculty teaching loads, expressed as numbers of student course enrollments per full-time equivalent faculty member, vary widely among the various major fields. During the past year the average ratio for the College as a whole was 116, and ranged from a high of 225 in psychology to a low of 41 in classics. It must be noted that such ratios reflect both the idiosyncratic nature of different fields and the relative "efficiency" of faculty utilization.

Clarence Watters. Its French baroque style was designed to blend with the Gothic architecture of the Chapel.

Besides being used for chapel services, the massive new organ will be used for recitals by visiting organists and as instrumentation for Trinity choir concerts. Organ students at the College will also be permitted to practice on the new instrument when it is finally tuned.

Tuning or "voicing" of the organ will take about three months. Each pipe has to be tuned to the Chapel building and the other pipe, in the instrument. When the voicing is completed, Professor Watters will perform at the dedication concert.

In speaking of the organ, Frederick F. Mitchell, of Austin Organs, explained that workers at Austin were excited both by the organ's design and the building in which it would be placed.

"Everyone in the Austin shop was involved in the building of the organ," Mitchell said. "The building itself (Trinity Chapel) was an inspiration, so everyone wanted to do his best...In my opinion Trinity's organ is one of my ideal instruments."

Student Vote

Upperclassmen at Trinity will probably be able to vote in local Hartford elections next month, but freshmen will have to vote in their home towns.

According to Nick Bonadies, Hartford Democratic Registrar of Voters, students who lived at Trinity last year can consider their Trinity address as their home address—and therefore meet a six-month's residency requirement for voting—even if they went to another city for the summer.

Officials say, however, that Bonadies' interpretation of the residency requirement might be subjected to a court test before election day.

instance of formal complaint of a Board of Inquiry made up of one student, one tenured faculty member and one administrator. These three persons are selected by the dean from a standing panel of three students, three tenured faculty and three administrators appointed by the President. More responsibility is also given to the dean to settle disciplinary problems informally without convening the Board of Inquiry.

Provisions for overruling decisions made by the board are also spelled out in the new system. The board's rulings are "recommendations," according to the new policy, and "the dean is responsible for the disciplinary action finally implemented."

In releasing the new system, Vice President Thomas A. Smith complained that members of the College were reluctant to file the formal complaints necessary to set the old system in operation.

He said under the new system, students aren't required to formally "press charges." The dean of community life can initiate an investigation and take disciplinary action against campus offenders on behalf of the College.

An editorial appearing in The Tripod shortly after the new system was enacted criticized it as a step which would "undo every advance in college governance which President Lockwood has made" since he came to the College in 1968.

The editorial maintained that the system was "based on the premise that responsiveness to pressure from trustees and faculty is more important than individual rights or a just decision."

SAM BERMAN—“Stille Here” was the caption in the Hartford TIMES on May 16. It seems that Sam was present at a celebration at the Hartt School of Music honoring alumni and he was referred to in passing as Dean Emeritus in Residence at the school. Sam noted that he is still carrying on and hopes for 100 years. Incidentally he did a wonderful job as dean for many years. He and your acting secretary have been neighbors for 35 years.

BOB O'CONNOR—He retired from the architectural firm of O'Connor and Kilham as of December 31, 1968. Until February, he was architect-member of the Art Commission of the City of New York. Since then he has endeavored to taper off his architectural activities and acclimatize himself to somewhat lower professional pressures. Immediately upon being released from the Art Commission in February, 1971 he left with his wife and another couple for London and thence to Nairobi, having been deterred from journeying via Uganda by the political upheaval which broke out at that point. The next three weeks were happily spent, however, in visiting some of the great game reserves in Kenya, in viewing the sites of prehistoric man in the Olduvai Gorge, and in enjoying the beautiful land and interesting archeology of Ethiopia, before returning via Athens and Vienna to New York. Since then he has spent about three mornings a week in his office and the rest of the time in rural and generally innocuous pursuits.

ERHARDT G. SCHMITT—Dutch's picture and a note appeared in Life NEWS published by the Life Division of the Aetna Life and Casualty Company. He is a Life Regionnaire, in fact one of three such at a big gathering at Buck Hill Falls where he was fittingly recognized and photographed—very wise and prosperous in appearance. As ever he is enthusiastic and successful.

FRANK LAMBERT—is rector emeritus of St. Luke's Church, Sea Cliff, Long Island and eager to have us all do our part in standing by the College via the Alumni Fund.

CHARLES T. EASTERBY—Charlie writes from his office of Charles T. Easterby & Co. in Philadelphia and appears to be going strong.

JOHN H. TOWNSEND—The Venerable “Jack” is carrying on valiantly in Kerrville, Texas (1229 Virginia Drive 78028)

Your acting secretary celebrated his 50th anniversary this year—graduation from Hartford Seminary, Ordination and Founding of the Elmwood Community Church in West Hartford and Golden Wedding.

It is hoped that many of the members of the class will be present at the Homecoming-Reunion, November 12-14, marking their 55th year since graduation in 1916.

The fellow whose rich baritone voice which teamed up with the tenor voices of the CULLUM brothers and the bass voice of BILL BRILL to blend the most beautiful renditions of hymns that were ever heard in the old College Chapel has passed on. FRED BOWDIDGE passed away May 25, after spending ten weeks in the hospital fighting complications which aggravated his paralytic condition against which he had waged a valiant struggle for several years. Fred's devoted wife, Gladys, phoned me the sorrowful news from her home in Kansas City, Mo. where she was being comforted by her children and grandchildren.

Then I picked up the Hartford Courant of June 10 and read the sad news of the passing of our valedictorian and class poet, HARRY CLARK, on June 6. As you know Harry was professor of English at the University of Wisconsin for many years. He continued to pile up honors upon honors throughout his life. Harry's loss will be suffered by the entire intercollegiate world. Harry was sick only one week when the end came. Here again a devoted wife, Kathleen, was fortunate to be comforted by children and grandchildren.

BISHOP CONRAD GESNER and the charming Mrs. Gesner paid us a short but very pleasant visit last May 29. They were en route to St. John's Episcopal Church, Farmington Ave., West Hartford, where the good Bishop was to perform a wedding ceremony in the absence of the rector who was suddenly called away because of his mother's passing. Connie is a pretty handy man for the Church to have around. The Gesners now reside at 186 Longmeadow St., Longmeadow, Mass. 01106.

I dropped in to see JOE FOLEY recently at his magnificent travel agency office at 33 Lewis St. here in Hartford. Joe is still the blue-eyed, ruddy, handsome Irishman who is in such great shape that he could team up with BOB HARTT and still make the football team. Remember they were among the 14 or so players who traveled to Princeton, N.J. to hold the great Princeton team to about 21 points. That was in the fall of 1919 during our freshman year. Incidentally the BOB HARTTS spent June touring British Columbia.

It was great hearing from MAURICE JAFFER of Sarasota, Fla. He questions my brand of Scotch. Well, let me tell you mates now that I'm feeling much better although not discharged by my urologist as yet. And let me also inform you that the Trinity Reporter of June 1971 made a glaring omission in my notes. I asked for a good Scotch that dissolved KIDNEY STONES. Now doesn't that make sense?

Please write me, fellows. Let me know how you're doing.

FRED and Mildred BASHOUR announce the marriage of their daughter, Irene, August 14 in Hartford to Eric Waynes Estes of Lake Plymouth, Conn. The bride and groom are both teachers in the Berlin, N.H., school system.

Our thanks to ANDY ONDERDONK for his fine leadership in the 1970-1971 Alumni Fund. 2,489 alumni gave $242,838 as compared to 2,251 contributors and $187,118 a year ago.

It was good to see Andy, HOFF BENJAMIN and RAY ROSENFELD at the Cape Cod luncheon August 9.

Congratulations to WARREN REUBER who has been promoted to associate director, sales promotion, by Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co.

BERT HOLLAND vacationed in England and Scotland and reached the Isle of Skye as did your class secretary. 'Tis fun driving on the left at a roundabout.

35ers meet in the most unlikely places. In May your correspondent went to a high school class reunion in Wethersfield and met three: DOUG RANKIN, BOB FIELD, and CHARLIE HAASER. All Wethersfield High School '31 in addition to their Trinity affiliation. It's been ten years since we swapped tall stories and memories. Your SECRETARY, at the kind invitation of Charlie and Jeannette, luxuriated in their summer home. It turns out that Doug is a seafarer of some stature and plies the waves out of Ipswich, Massachusetts (I think).

Shortly after the summer issue went to press, TERRY MOWBRAY came through with a chatty note from Bermuda. Terry, who has been with the Department of Tourism and Trade Development for many years, speaks of an impending retirement in a year or so. As usual Terry has seen quite a few Blue and Golders of sundry classes. Terry has heard from my New Hampshire compatriot, JIM WALES, who has bought a Florida hide-away for the winter. Translated that means Jim has copped out of New Hampshire snow.

BILL WALKER of Hopewell, New Jersey, has been elected chairman of the national Insurance Rehabilitation Study Group. The group provides a forum for insurance executives who are experts in the field of physical rehabilitation. Bill, who is assistant secretary of the New Jersey Manufactures Insurance Company, is also a member of the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped.

BOB LAU, Class Secretary emeritus, with one of his valiant efforts advises your current amanuensis that he is (a) deep in his fourth year as a County Library Commissioner and is currently its vice president (b) on the executive board of his Local American Legion Post (c) District Committeeman of the 6th District of New Jersey (d) in his third term of the County Democratic Committee (e) has just completed his captaincy of the annual Cancer Drive. In a lighter vein widower Bob states he has not remarried but he adds “yet.” Bob must be the Chamber of Commerce since he extols Ewing Township with statistical thoroughness. He concludes his note by saying that his chapeau will be soon tossed into the mayoralty race. Last minute brief from the multi-faceted who enclosed a clipping on Bill Walker's appointment mentioned above. Bob has added another appointment to his cluster—that of member of a six-man New Jersey State Association of County Library Commissioners Executive Board.

To and Fro—TONY CACASE and CHARLIE WEBER swapped climes: Tony moved from Venice, to 82 Gates Road, Old Saybrook, Connecticut 06475, while Charlie switched from Baltimore to 509 North Missouri Avenue, Clearwater, Florida 35515.

FRANK MULCAHY is now serving as a part-time government consultant in the field of rehabilitation, working with the various State Directors of Vocational Rehabilitation. This is in addition to his full-time position as executive director of the downtown Washington Goodwill Industries, serving also nearby Virginia and Maryland. His organization, which is a form of business employing handicapped people, has about 400 personnel at the present time.

DICK BESTOR has been named senior vice president and secretary of the State-Dime Savings Bank of Hartford. Dick joined State Savings in 1950 and was elected vice president and secretary in 1968. He is an alumnus of Stonier Graduate School of Banking.

The honorary degree of doctor of business administration was awarded to DICK DOTY, “44” president of a Fort Lauderdale, Florida public relations and advertising agency, at the recent commencement of Indiana Northern University. In conferring the DBA degree on Doty, Dr. Gordon A. DaCosta, president of Indiana Northern University, said the degree was given “in recognition of his activities in the fields of public relations and news reporting and his participation in civic affairs.”

Lt. Col. HARRY T. JARRETT of Avon, Connecticut, has been appointed to the new position of construction and facilities manager with the Connecticut Army National Guard. Colonel Jarrett has been serving since 1967 as engineer staff officer with the Connecticut Army National Guard. He enlisted in the Army in 1942 and was commissioned in 1950. He was promoted to the rank of LTC in 1967. In his new position, he will be responsible for compliance with the National Guard Bureau directives, regulations, and policies for the development and execution of the military construction, Army National Guard Program and the base operations portions of the Organization and Maintenance Program within the State of Connecticut. His office will be in the Hartford Armory.

1971 Reunion/Homecoming

The 1971 Reunion and Homecoming events have been combined into one weekend, that of November 12-14. In addition to what promises to be a tough football game with Wesleyan, there will be cocktail parties, music, a Field House luncheon, a dinner and dance at the Hotel Sonesta, a smoker, movies, and a Shakespeare play.

We also are pleased to have Skip Schumacher, Class of 1965, return to the campus to discuss the Pueblo incident. Skip was Operations Officer on the ship and has written a book about the incident and his year's detention in North Korea. Following Skip's presentation on Saturday morning will be a discussion of the arts by noted alumni and moderated by Professor John Dando.

The College has kept the cost down and the entertainment high so plan to come for all or part of the Reunion-Homecoming Weekend. You will be receiving more details in the mail soon.

YOUR SECRETARY is pleased to report that he survived seven weeks of life on the Aventine Hill in Rome. In fact I did more than survive. It was a rich and rewarding experience to teach Italian Renaissance history "on location." Thanks to Professor Campo's efforts, Trinity is now well established in the Eternal City.

News has been slow in reaching me during these summer months, so I hope you will all consider bringing me up to date in the near future. IN MEMORY

FRANCIS STEPHEN MURPHY, Hon. 1947

Francis S. Murphy, the holder of an honorary Master of Arts degree from Trinity, died August 17. An editorial from the Hartford Courant summed up his active career:

"Connecticut has had few more active and colorful figures than Francis S. Murphy, the former publisher of the Hartford Times, who died Tuesday. When he retired after more than half a century of service with the Times, he had seen his newspaper flourish from a local circulation of 12,000 to become the leading afternoon daily in the state. For much of its growth and prosperity, he was responsible, although he began working for the Times as a $3-a-week messenger. His was, in effect, an Horatio Alger rags-to-riches career; he never lost the hint of Ireland in his voice bequeathed him by his immigrant parents.

"But if his colleagues and competitors have good reason to remember Mr. Murphy's career with the Times, it is his tireless contributions to aviation, particularly in the state of Connecticut, that the public will best remember him. Largely through his efforts, the first State Aeronautics Commission was established; he was its first chairman and his service as commissioner remained unbroken; his current term would have expired in 1974. He was in large part responsible for the return of Bradley Field to the state after the war, and he was an indefatigable crusader for its continued development as an international airport. It is altogether fitting that the terminal building at Bradley is formally named the Francis S. Murphy Terminal and that a handsome bronze bust of Mr. Murphy is displayed in it.

"Most of the leaders in the development of modern American aviation were close acquaintances of Mr. Murphy and he followed and hailed their successes with enthusiasm. As The Courant is happy to testify, he was a good competitor who did not let competition come between personal friendship."

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Esther Riley Olcott; three sons, Frank R. of Rumney, New Hampshire, George Jr. of Norwalk, Connecticut, and Jack R. Olcott of Newington; and four grandchildren.

ROBERT WADE SHEEHAN, 1926

Robert Wade Sheehan, a member of the board of editors of Fortune magazine from 1959 to 1968, and who wrote many articles on corporate business, particularly on the insurance and the automobile industries, died July 23, in St. Clare's Hospital, New York City.

Mr. Sheehan joined the staff of Fortune as an associate editor in 1945. He was Washington staff correspondent for Time magazine from 1943 to 1945. In 1942-43, he was associate editor of War Progress, a confidential report of the War Production Board.

He was born March 20, 1903, in Wallingford, Connecticut, and, while attending Trinity, was a correspondent with The Hartford Times.

N.E. College Champions Ready for New Season

The football team will open the fall sports season on September 25 when it journeys to Williamstown to meet the Ephmen in the 30th renewal (the series now stands at 12-16-1) of a series which dates back to 1884.

Last fall, the Bantams scored an impressive 35-28 victory over Williams by rallying for 21 points in the fourth quarter. The victory was the beginning of a great season for the Bantams which ended in the team being honored as the No. 1 team in the New England College Division and Coach Don Miller being selected as Coach of the Year in that category. Star running back Dave Kiaris, who now holds many of Trinity's rushing records, received many honors including a position on Kodak's Little All-American Team.

Needless to say, 1970 will be a hard act to follow but Bantam Head Coach Don Miller has been exhibiting some optimism about the prospects of producing another fine squad.

Coach Miller's main job will be in developing a defensive line which has only one returning starter in junior defensive end Bob Theil and replacing the entire linebacking corps. Sophomores Mike Hoskinson and Barry O'Brien and juniors John Knapp and James Finn will be working out at linebacker while sophomore George Lincoln will try out for the defensive line. A strong point on defense for the Bantams is the secondary with the return of starters co-captain Ned Hammond, Ray Perkins, Bill Foster, and Gene Coney.

The offensive line has three returning starters in guard and co-captain Tom Schaible, tackle Bob Ghazey and tight end Whitney Cook. Ed Raws, who started several games at center before knee surgery cut his season short, will be back in action. Sophomore Ron Duckett, a 9.9 sprinter for the track team last fall, is leading candidate for the wide receiver spot.

The Bantams have several possible starters at quarterback, including junior Erich Wolters, who started several games last season and sophomore Saul Wiewenthal who led the Bantam Yearlings to a fine 4-1 record. Joe McCabe is returning starter at fullback and should pick up some of the slack left by the graduation of Kiaris. Senior Dennis Lindeman is the top prospect at running back.

An important part of the offense will be kicking specialist Quentin Keith who set a New England Collegiate record with 27 consecutive PAT's last season.

If the Bantams are to be successful in 1971, they will have to fill several areas depleted by graduations. The coaching staff is confident that they have the players to solve that problem so Trinity should have another fine season. The Williams game, in the past, has been important to Bantam football fortunes. In 1967 the game ended in a tie and the Bantams went on to have a good season in posting a 6-1-1 record. Last fall, the victory over the Williams Ephmen was the keynote to Trinity's finest season in fifteen years as it finished 7-1. A victory on September 25 could have the same effect.

Soccer Opens with M.I.T.

The varsity soccer team will open its schedule on October 2 against M.I.T. After eighteen consecutive winning seasons, the team suffered its worst season in memory last fall losing eight games and tying one. With the return of twelve lettermen including five starters, the 1971 squad should be much improved.

Coach Roy Dath's squad should be particularly strong in defensive backs with the return of co-captains Steve Hill and Bayard Fiechter at the fullback slots. Hill is a versatile player and may be moved to halfback. The squad also has two returning starters at halfback in Donald Burt and John Suroviak. In particular, Suroviak will help the team offensively and as well on defense.

A question mark in the defensive alignment will be at goalie with the graduation of last year's starter Dick Wood. Junior Charles Gonyer and senior

Charles Ray are returning varsity goalies but neither of them have had much action on the varsity. Competing with them will be a fine goalie up from last year's freshman team, Glenn Preminger.

Lack of offense was Dath's big problem last year and it will have to be solved this fall if the season is to be a successful one. Doug Snyder is the only returning member of the varsity's forward line so much will depend on the showing of sophomores Paul Gossling and Pete Heimann who both started on the frosh squad.

The Bantams face a demanding schedule including Brown and Middlebury who are regularly among the top ten teams in New England. M.I.T. and the Little Three will again provide stiff opposition.

This should be another challenging fall in soccer for the Bantams, but the season's end should find Trinity with a much improved record.

Woman Coach Joins Staff

"After dealing with an all-male staff it should be a novel experience having Jane on the staff," commented Athletic Director Karl Kurth concerning the appointment of Miss Jane Millspaugh; the first woman ever to teach in the Trinity Athletic Department. "With her experience, she should provide great impetus to our women's athletic program."

Miss Millspaugh, a native of Englewood, New Jersey and a graduate of Springfield College with a B.A. in Physical Education, is currently studying for an M.A. in education at Trinity under an award given to her as a graduate assistant. This fall she will teach women's physical education courses and coach women's field hockey. The team has a six-game schedule, including opponents such as Yale and Miss Porter's School. Miss Millspaugh will also be responsible for all women's extracurricular activities and coach intercollegiate lacrosse, squash and tennis in addition to field hockey.

Before coming to Trinity, the versatile sports enthusiast was a physical education instructor and varsity swimming coach at Brockton (Mass.) High School.

Trinity crew pulls one and three quarter lengths ahead of Fitzwilliams College, Cambridge to win the semifinals of the Henley Royal Regatta in July. Earlier the Bantams had defeated Pembroke College and Emmanuel College. Trin lost in the finals to a strong University of London crew by one and a quarter lengths.

Cross Country Ready to Face Tough Schedule

Hard times have fallen upon the Trinity cross-country team. Last fall, the Bantams finished a second consecutive season without a victory. The 1971 squad should be improved over last year but much will depend on the performances of returning lettermen Bob Haff, Rick Ricci, and captain Bob Halpern.

A major factor in the team's lack of success in recent years has been a lack of depth. The varsity should have some help in this department this fall with four promising runners arriving from last year's freshman team. Greg Bartlett, Fred Francis, Jay Moller and David Stabler all received their freshmen numerals in 1970.

A big boost for the squad will be the coaching of Craig Phillips of Manchester, Connecticut. Phillips was a member of the cross-country teams at Manchester High School and at the University of North Dakota where he graduated in 1968 with a B.A. in Physical Education. In addition to his duties with the Trinity cross-country team, Phillips is employed as a physical education instructor in the Manchester school system and is an assistant varsity track coach at Manchester High School.

The Bantams will face another challenging schedule this fall beginning with a dual meet on October 2 in Maine against Bates College.
