CONTENT AND SCOPE OF THE COLLECTION

A major portion of the Bertha Filson papers consists of certificates of award, membership, and certification--all pertaining to Mrs. Filson's activities as an educator, churchwoman, and Marshall University alumna. Correspondence includes letters from Lawrence J. Corbly, president of Marshall College from 1896 until 1915; George M. Ford, state superintendent of schools; and James Leftwich, a former student of Mrs. Filson's who became president of the F. W. Woolworth Company.

There are also some compositions written by Mrs. Filson for an English class, many of which describe persons, places or events in Mason County, West Virginia. A large collection of newspaper clippings relate to the collapse of the Silver Bridge at Point Pleasant, West Virginia, in 1967. Also included is a typescript of the minutes of the first meeting of the Joint Board of Education of Mason, Waggoner, and Hartford Joint High School District in 1925; Wahama High School was formed as a result of this meeting.

BERTHA JULIA STEINBACH FILSON, 1883-1976

Bertha Julia Steinbach was born 19 August 1883 in Middleport, Ohio, the daughter of William and Sophia Munch Steinbach. In 1891, the family moved to Point Pleasant, West Virginia, where Bertha Steinbach completed her education in the public schools. In 1899, she entered Marshall College Normal School; she received her diploma in 1901 and returned to Point Pleasant to teach. In 1916, she married William C. Filson. The couple had one daughter, Eleanor.

In 1923, Mrs. Filson was elected superintendent of Mason County schools, and was instrumental in the consolidation of Waggoner, Hartford, and Mason Districts into a joint high school district. She served two four-year terms as superintendent, was president of the West Virginia Education Association in 1926, and became a life member in the National Education Association in 1929.

After the death of her husband in 1931, she continued to teach and began attending summer sessions at Marshall College, Morris Harvey College, West Virginia University, and Ohio University, from which latter institution she received the bachelor of science degree in education in 1939. After a brief retirement, she returned to the classroom, continuing to teach until 1967. After retirement, she continued to tutor in her home.

She was active in the Mason County Retired School Employees Association, Presbyterian Women of the Church, Order of the Eastern Star, Association of Retarded Children, and Alpha Delta Kappa. In 1972, at the age of 89, she was elected the first president of the Mason-Gallia Chapter of the Marshall University Alumni Association, and was given the Marshall University Alumni Association Community Achievement award in 1975, less than a year before her death on 8 February 1976.
