ACQUISITION OF THE COLLECTION

This collection was donated by Dr. Robert Alexander as part of his Drinko Fellows Project (1999-2000) "Timber: The Times and the Life at Cass, WV." The L.D. Fowler Papers were donated as part of a larger collection that included: material related to the Durban Mercantile Store in Durbin, WV; oral interviews collected by Dr. Alexander; and other materials related to the "Timber: The Times and the Life at Cass, WV" project.

ABSTRACT

Collection consists primarily of correspondence (letters, telegraphs, and postcards), business receipts, business cards, diaries, popular culture items, and other materials concerning L.D. Fowler's employment with Pocahontas Tanning Company and correspondence with his family while residing in Durbin, WV 1900-1920.

HISTORICAL NOTE

L.D. Fowler was an employee of Wheeling West Virginia's Pocahontas Tanning Company. He rented a room in the Durbin Mercantile Store in Durbin, WV. This room is where Dr. Alexander located Fowler's papers and other materials. These include letters and other materials dated 1900-1920, indicating the probable period of Fowler's employment with Pocahontas Tanning Company. Many letters concern the lumber and tanning industries. As a popular cash crop in the area at the time, several letters include requests to gather ginseng on lands associated with L.D. Fowler and the Pocahontas Tanning Company.

Although most of these materials are professional in nature, some personal letters are included. Fowler appears to have had a daughter named Lara and a wife named Lizzie. Because he received letters from these family members, it appears that he and his immediate family lived separately from 1900-1920.

SCOPE AND CONTENT OF THE COLLECTION

The papers in this collection are both the professional and personal records of L.D. Fowler from 1900-1920 while working out of Durbin, WV. As an employee of the Pocahontas Tanning Company, L.D. Fowler's business papers relate primarily to timber and the acquisition of bark associated with the tanning process. Among the type of materials included in the collection are correspondences (i.e. letters, telegraphs, and postcards), well-documented business transactions with a wide range of business partners, business cards, diaries, maps, popular culture items (calendars, etc.), and materials related to legal issues and political affiliations.

This collection is divided into two overarching series: The Business Records Series (Series I) and The Personal Records Series (Series II).

SERIES

The Business Records Series (Series I) consists of correspondences between L.D. Fowler with business associates from surrounding timber companies, administration at the Pocahontas Tanning Company, and concerning business matters of a variety of natures. Because this series constitutes the majority of the collection, the business records are further broken down into six sub-series: Engineering and Railroad, Investment and Finance, Legal, Miscellaneous Business Records, Tanning, Timber and Natural Resources.

The Personal Records Series (Series II) contains correspondences with various family members, private diaries, and a variety of documents unrelated to business. This series contains letters to and from L.D. Fowler's daughter Lara, wife Lizzie, siblings, unidentified friends and/or family members, and certain popular culture items like calendars.

Within both Series I and Series II, files are organized alphabetically by name/subject. Within individual files, material is organized chronologically in ascending order. If materials are undated, then they are placed in front of the chronological material. If possible, undated material is alphabetized.

PROCESSING NOTE

Because original order was not kept in place when the records were initially taken from L.D. Fowler's room at Durbin Mercantile, the Marshall University Special Collections received the papers in plastic binders arranged in an order unrelated to how they were actually found. The papers for the entire collection were divided into appropriate subject groups and consistently organized within each folder by chronological order. Researchers should be aware of this collection's lack of original order. Additionally, all efforts were made to identify which materials appropriately belonged in the L.D. Fowler collection and which materials should be housed with the Durbin Mercantile, the "Timber: The Times and the Life at Cass, WV" collection, and the collection of oral interviews donated with these materials.

SERIES I

These business records are divided into sub-series, folder titles within each sub-series arranged by alphabetical order, and the documents arranged within each folder are placed in chronological order whenever possible. Undated materials are organized together in the front of the appropriate folder, in alphabetical order if possible.
