Jackson Doors Hit In Night Encounter

by Joe Scorese
Senior News Staff Writer

Residents of Jackson Dorm in South Campus were temporarily inconvenienced during the weekend of October 7-9 when a car crashed head-on into two glass doors of the Northwest entrance. No one was injured in the accident but the Hartford Police have taken action against the owner of the vehicle because of negligence of responsiblity on the scene of an accident.

According to Michael Schweighoffer, Director of Security, Mather Front Desk notified them at 12:25 early Sunday morning, October 9. The vehicle was spotted leaving the scene of the accident and although, not initially caught, security was able to get the license plate number and report it to the Hartford Police. The police traced the car to a woman in New York State. The car was later found, parked outside of Mather with damage to the front grille. Police then proceded to tow it.

The driver responsible for the car for the weekend was stationed at Fort Bragg, according to Schweighoffer, and had apparently come to Trinity with a friend whose sister was a student. He denies all responsibility for the collision, claiming he was not involved at all. Because he is claiming ignorance, the Hartford Police are taking action, by Connecticut law, against the mother of the driver, in whose name the car was registered.

In his five years at Trinity, Schweighoffer has never come across a similar case of a car smashing into glass doors. It is generally against regulations to have cars operated or parked on campus walkways, particularly in

by Chiky Gustavson

From October 27-30, students from approximately 15 colleges such as UPenn and Boston College will be on the Trinity campus to participate in the Trinity Model United Nations (TNUN). The conference, which is sponsored by the World Affairs association, will be headed by Secretary General Alex Johnson. TNUN will have a series of world crisis simulations, as well as a model U.S. National Security Council, U.N. Security Council and NATO.

When the students arrive on October 27, their agenda will include a lecture on North-South relations in the U.N. by Professor Pierre-Henri Laurent, a professor of History at Tufts, and adjunct professor at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy. Professor Laurent will speak in Hamlin Hall at 7:30 pm and this as well as all conferences will be open to the entire student body.

The conferences begin on October 28, and run from 9:30 am to 10:00 pm on Friday, and 9:30 am to 6:00 pm on Saturday. On the 28th, NATO will discuss arms control negotiations and on the 29th NATO will have to deal with a mock Soviet invasion in Souther Europe. Erin Poskocil is the Director of NATO, and all NATO conferences will be held in the Faculty Club.

The U.S. National Security Council, led by Peter Sylvester, will confront the mock collapse of the Marcos government in the Phillipines. Delegates to the council will attempt to find a solution to best safeguard U.S. security interests. This committee will meet in the Alumni Lounge.

The United Nations Security Council, led by co-directors Jeff Raven and Michelle Mart-Abreu, will meet in Wean Lounge in Mather. The first issue to be presented is the central American conflict between Nicaragua and Hondurass. Delegates from all the central American countries will be present to give advisory opinions to the Security Council. The second issue will be U.N.I.F.I.L.--the peace keeping forces in Lebanon.

All students participating will be housed in Trinity dorm. The purpose of conferences like this one is to provide a forum for intelligent, intellectual debate, and to explore the practical function of international politics. In the true spirit of international cooperation, cocktail parties and other social activities are also planned.

The student body is invited to observe any of the conferences scheduled.

Internships Bring Wide Variety Of Advantages

by David Sagers
Features Editor

In past weeks, internships have been examined from the point of view of the Internship Coordinator and faculty advisors. Naturally, the best way to determine the value of the Internship Program is to see what students who have had an internship in the past think about their experience. One way to do this is to look at the student evaluations in the Internship Office, which are available to all students.

The evaluation forms ask a number of questions, the most important being possible improvement for the particular internship, and whether it helped to encourage further interest or study in the area the internship was in. Most students felt thst it definitely gave them an idea of what the field was like, and was either a "good opportunity to test your dedication," or a factor in the decision "never to work in this field." Another facet of internships students brought up was its ability to create connections off-campus. William Wubbenhurst,'83, who worked for the Center City Churches, said, "if only to get one to leave the campus, it is worthwhile." It is also an opportunity to "broaden your outlook while at Trinity."

The suggestions for improvement fell under several major categories. One student suggested that students have a background in the area of internship study. She was personally intrigued by her internship, but only because the paths from Jones to Jackson, where the incident occured.

Upon spotting the damage, security called the carpentry department, who arrived and temporarily sealed the shattered doorway with a piece of plywood to protect against intruders. Schweighoffer reported that there were no robberies in the dorms affected (Wheaton, Jackson and Smith) while the Jackson entrance was vulnerable.

Buildings and Grounds have attached a temporary door operable by the same combination. Mr. John Wathne, the B&G Superintendent, commented that they were fortunate to find an extra door that fit while American Glass, Trinity's window supplier, repairs the door. A speedy replacement has been promised.

Career Decisions Can Be Aided By An Internship In Your Field Of Study

of her background study and interest in the area. In addition, experience may be helpful or, in some cases, you "won't be given any responsibility." Some students, such as David Berey,'83, found an internship "tended to be unorganized," but this was an infrequent problem.

Another area of contention was problems with the placement supervisor, who is the student's advisor when he is on the job. One student thought that there should have been "a little more assistance on the part of the people at the internship." Students felt the need for "positive reinforcement or feedback of any kind" when working alone in an unfamiliar environment. This idea was summed up when one student said, "Make sure that your supervisor has enough time to spend with you and that you have an understanding of what is expected of you." Another bit of advice was to "isolate yourself from internal problems" that the institution might be having.

On the other hand, many students enjoyed working with the staff, and most felt that the academic and on-the-job supervision was adequate. In fact, there were such comments as being "treated like a valued employee," having "work that was much appreciated," and the realization that "they treat interns as equals!"

The advantages of internships appear to be numerous from the comments in the student evaluations. It "surpasses any book learning done," according to one student. Some learned "how an organization makes its money," and were able "to grasp the fumdamentals of executive survival." Financial interns also found "great exposure to the Corporate World."

Praise was very liberal. "In college, there's no better way to steer yourself in the right career direction if you're unsure," stated one student. Another thought "one could not ask for a more comprehensive placement or experience." Peter J. O'Brien,'83, found absolute satisfaction, noting that his internship "helped get a career position with Paine Webber on Wall Street."

In the final evaluation, most students found that they enjoyed their internships because they were willing to put time and effort into them. A student in an internship at Channel 3 said "personal motivation is the most important factor in getting the most out of an internship." Internships can do anything from giving you the "professional angle" to being "time-consuming" to giving you that "feeling of having to meet deadlines," but most of all, it seems to give "emotional satisfaction."

EDITORIAL

One More Time

A letter printed in this issue from a group of faculty members defends the President's decision to exempt the fraternities from the anti-discriminatory policies of the college. These faculty members feel the President quite properly exercized the discretionary powers given to him by the Trustees in their Report to the College, a report which they agree represents "a mechanism designed to encourage an evolutionary movement toward coeducation."

Does it have to be said one more time? The real problem with the fraternity/sorority system is not its inherent sexism, but its inherent ELITISM. The failure of the Trustees' decision, and therefore the President's decision, is that they evade that very issue. What does it matter that they "encourage coeducation" within the fraternities and the sororities? What's the good of opening up the doors of the Greek system to both men and women, when all we're doing is institutionalizing coeducational elitism?

It's true that by virtue of being a private college, Trinity is an elitist institution. But there's a difference between that kind of elitism and the elitism of fraternities and sororities -- the former is based on objective academic standards, the latter on subjective social standards, standards that contradict the stated liberal and democratic objectives of the College.

Trinity should condemn any sort of sexism on campus, but this should not be its only concern when it comes to the fraternities and sororities; it should condemn elitism and any sort of exclusivity which leads to elitism. Permitting elitist institutions to exist on campus, because it goes against the basic tenets of a liberal arts education, poisons both the educational and social atmosphere, and ultimately undermines the quality of the institution.

The Spectator

You know what I really like? I like the school song. I think it represents the Trinity spirit admirably, and I think it is horrible that President Jim wants to get rid of it.

"'Neath the elms of our old Trinity
'Neath the elms of our dear old Trinity
Oh it's seldom we'll meet
In the moonlight so sweet
'Neath the elms of our old Trinity."

Kind of touching, ain't it? Really brings a tear to the eye. Especially when you condsider that the song was written long before dear old Trinity became coed.

"College days are from care and sorrow free
And often will we see in memory
Those days that are past
Far too joyous to last
'Neath the elms of our old Trinity."

Another touching verse. Really celebrates the academic tradition here. I especially like the line "too joyous to last." I usually remember that during finals.

"Then we will sing to our old Trinity
To our dear old Alma Mater, Trinity
We're together today
And tomorrow away
Far from our old Trinity.

'Neath the elms of our old Trinity
'Neath the elms of our dear old Trinity
No more shall we meet
Or classmate to greet
'Neath the elms of our dear old Trinity."

Do you understand what this song is about? It's about spending four years partying with your friends. No where in the song is there a mention of academics. Only regret for ever having to leave such an edenic place where no questions are ever asked.

And that's the average Trinity student's approach to life here. In fact, the overall attitude can be summed up by this song and the three words I heard most often on campus this weekend:

"Hey, Yo! Party!"

So let's keep the song, let's salute Augustus P. Burgwin, class of 1882, and, if we're going to be making any drastic changes, let's change the attitude here at dear old Trinity.

We Should Try The Trustees' Approach

To the Editor:

Many members of the faculty of Trinity College believe that President James English has acted in good faith throughout the debate about fraternities that has troubled our campus. We recognize the fact that a college like ours is a complex institution and that the pace of change in such a setting, even terribly necessary change, is often limited by the history of the institution and the character of the constituencies that compose it. We recognize the difficulties inherent in thoroughly abolishing sexism on a campus that for the first century and a half of its existence was an all-male institution and see no indication that President English is unaware of the evils of sexism or not fully committed to causing its disappearance at Trinity.

What prevents President English from acting in this matter is a decision by the Board of Trustees. This decision contradicted both the will of the faculty as expressed in its votes on this matter and a postion more liberal than that of the Trustees laid out by the President in an open letter to the College community. While we do not agree with the Trustees' response to this issue, we do understand that it, too, represents, to quote a letter from President English that accompanied the report of the Ad Hoc Trustee Committee to study the Fraternity/Sorority System: "...a mechanism designed to encourage an evolutionary movement toward coeducation."

Reasonable minds have found ample grounds for disagreement about the best means for achieving coeducation in the fraternity/sorority system, but there is little or no disagreement about the desirability of eliminating the anachronistic system of sexual exclusion practiced by these organizations. We also believe, despite our differences with the Trustees, that their approch should be tried. If it is not successful in bringing about coeducation, there is ample reason to expect that the President will use the large discretionary powers granted to him by the Trustees to accelerate this process.

Will Someone Take Action?

An open letter to President English, the S.G.A., and the Tripod:

Recently, President English's report concerning student life and its improvement appeared in the Tripod, as did an editorial describing the Tripod as a watchdog for the Trinity community. Also recently, the S.G.A. received new officers affirming "positive student government" here at Trin.

A letter which appeared in the October 4th edition of the Tripod addressed the abuses of Follett's and is an open challenge to President English, the S.G.A., and the Tripod to act, to prove to the Trinity community if any reality lies behind their words.

High prices and lack of concern are nothing new at Follett's, but maybe they're nothing new at Trinity either. For all their talk, the administration's attitude towards the students of Trinity is viewed by many as being unresponsive and coldly unconcerned. Decisions and announcements made in the name of improving student life are seen as image boosting actions designed to improve Trinity's appeal to college reviewers and newspapers.

Also, in all the years I have been here at Trinity I cannot recall one instance of the S.G.A. acting in the interests of positive student government; actually, I can't remember the S.G.A. doing anything substantial at all. Does the S.G.A. serve any function, does it influence any action taken by the administration? I hope so, but I'm not sure it does. The students of a college are its lifeblood: they keep it open, they set its intellectual and social atmosphere above and beyond anything the administration can do. Unfortunately, the roles seem to have been reversed at Trinity; the administration shapes the College as the students tacitly sit by. If the S.G.A. wishes to introduce positive student government it will seriously consider the Follett's situation and make recommendations to the administration. Hopefully, the administration will consider what the S.G.A. has to say.

Perhaps these views of the administration and the S.G.A. are untrue, if so, action taken for the students against Follett's will prove these views false since this action will affect Trinity students immediately and in a strongly perceptible way.

Finally, ope the Tripod can act as a watchdog for this issue; it is in their ability to investigate and report in depth. As the Tripod editorial mentioned above suggested, changes are occurring within the power structure of our college. Where do the students fit in? Action taken on the Follett's issue will make it clear as to where all the sides stand.

Thank you,
G.C., a student

NEW Letters Policy

The Tripod welcomes and encourages letters to the Editor. All letters must be signed, although names will be held upon request. Letters which are libelous or in poor taste will not be printed.

All letters must be typed and no longer than 250 words. The deadline for submission is on Fridays at 5:00 p.m. Please deliver all letters and commentary via campus mail (Box 1310) or to the Tripod office in the basement of Jackson Hall.

Name, Please

To the Editor:

As a member of the Trinity community I find it particularly disconcerting to walk around campus and see all types of banners and signs for events being held by groups who identify themselves only by abbreviations. Who are these people? I suppose if I delved deeply enough into my Trinity Handbook I might be able to find out, but as yet I haven't been up to the challenge. Rather than waiting until my sophomore or junior year to find out by natural process, it would be nice if any group who chooses to identify themselves by abbreviation (as is often necessary with long names) would list their full name at the bottom of the poster or publication.

Thanks,
Kevin McKaig '87

Campus Notes

Dr. Armstead Robinson, an associate professor of history at the University of Virginia, will speak at Trinity College on Tuesday, Novemeber 1 at 8pm in the Faculty Club of Hamlin Hall. His topic will be "In Fear of Darkies Playing Thunder: Insurrection, Anxiety and the Collapse of the Confederacy." The event is sponsored by the American Studies program, and admission is free to the public.

Robinson, who is also director of the Carter G. Woodson Institute for Afro-American and African Studies at the University of Virginia, is the author of numerous articles and reviews on Civil War and Afro-American history. His forthcoming book, which will be published by Yale University press, is an analysis of the collapse of the Confederacy.

Robinson is a graduate of Yale and earned his doctorate from the University of Rochester. He taught at Yale and at UCLA before joining the Virginia faculty.

Dr. Gonzalo Palacios, the counselor for cultural affairs and information at the Embassy of Venezuela, Washington, D.C., will present a lecture, "Simon Bolivar: Education for Freedom" at an open house sponsored by the Watkinson Library/Trinity College Library Associates on Thursday, November 3. The talk, which will be presented in the Watkinson Library at 8 p.m., is free to the public and will be followed by a reception.

Born in Maracay, Venezuela, Dr. Palacios holds a Ph.D. from the Catholic University of America where he wrote his dissertation on The Notion of Freedom in the Political Philosophy of Simon Bolivar. He is the author of many articles and teaches on the faculties of George Washington University in Washington, D.C. and San Diego State University in California. Dr. Palacios is an active member of the diplomatic community in Washington and presides over the Association of Cultural Affairs Officers, as well as having organized the Ibero-American Group of Cultural Attaches.

Men's X-C 8th At NESCAC

by Thomas Swiers
Sports Staff Writer

The men's cross country placed eighth out of ten teams last Saturday at Amherst in the NESCAC meet.

The competition was strong with seventy-two runners from Bates, Williams, Colby, Wesleyan, Middlebury, Hamilton, Bowdoin, Trinity, Amherst, and Tufts participating. The scores ranged from Bates in first place with 57 points to Tufts in tenth with 247. Trinity's score was 226. Coach John Kelly had compared the Bantams' times with those of the other teams before the meet. The eighth place finish did not come as a surprise to Kelly on the basis of his earlier research.

Steve Klots was first for Trinity, placing 33rd with a time of 25:20. Dave Barry was second with a time of 25:31 to place 35th overall. Steve Tall was third in a time of 25:45 and placed 46th. Dave O'Donnel was fourth and Joe Wire was the fifth Trinity runner to cross the finish line.

For Barry, it was a bad day, and Kelly felt that Barry's weak performance was due to exams this week. At the second mile marker, Barry looked pale and was already exhausted and Klots was right behind Barry. By the third marker, Klots had passed Barry and Tall was not far behind.

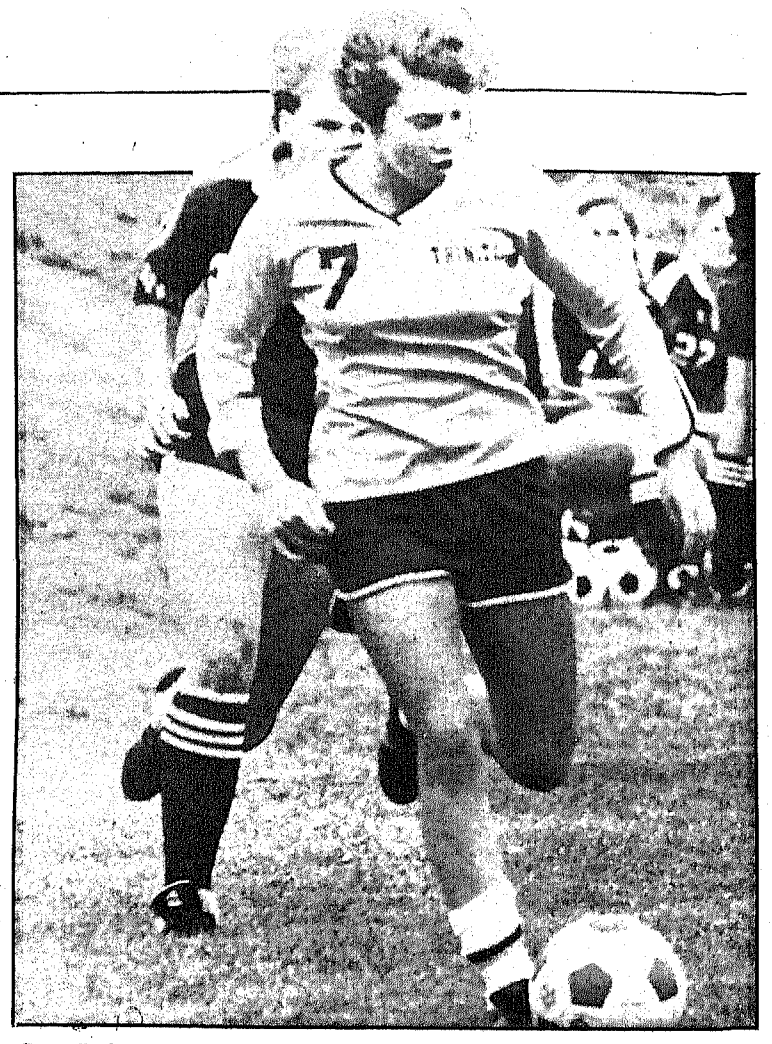
Tall is now definately coming back and improving, but still has more room to improve based on his times of a year ago.

O'Donnell also ran well and has improved. Joe Wire, like Barry, had a weak day. Wire's time was 20 seconds off his last performance.

It wasn't a bad day for Trinity, but the Bantams deemed to be unable to have their best performance overall. Two of the Bantam's better runners, Greg DeMarco and Woods Fairbanks, are still unable to run due to injuries. Tall's improvement could not have come at a better time fro he has filled the gap left by DeMarco and Fairbanks. It is now questionalbe whether DeMarco will be able to run at all the rest of the season. Fairbanks will probably be able to run again this season.

The Amherst course was fairly fast. The only difficult part of the course was a rather long hill. It was also very windy last Saturday, and this made the going a little harder.

Next week's meet will be at home against WPI. It will give the Bantams a chance to see how they perform on their home course.



Cary Lyford had an assist in Thursday's 1-0 win over Smith.

. . . for all of us

Graduate into the fast lane.

Guarantee flight training after you graduate with the Marine Corps undergraduate Officer Commissioning Program. If you're a college freshman, sophomore or junior, you could qualify.

All training is conducted during the summers between school years and you'll receive your commission as a Second Lieutenant the day you graduate. You'll also receive $100 a month during the school year and qualify for free civilian flying lessons.

If you're a senior, you can still qualify for our graduate Officer Commissioning Program. In it, you'll complete your training in one 10-week summer session. You can also be guaranteed flight school after initial training if you qualify.

So, if you're looking for a chance to fly, to prove yourself amongst the best, check out the undergraduate and graduate Marine Officer Commissioning programs. They're your chance to graduate into the fast lane as a Marine Officer.
