First
Oldham Scholars
to Graduate in '88

The Spring 1983 issue of University of Richmond Magazine—my first as editor—announced an exciting new program designed to help the University attract the nation's best and brightest students.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Dortch Oldham of Nashville, Tenn., had given UR $2 million to fund the Oldham Scholars program that would provide full merit-based scholarships to four entering freshmen every year. In this issue we are featuring a milestone in that program: the graduation of the first four Oldham Scholars.

We are delighted to report that this excellent dream has come to fruition. It also seems fitting to me personally, because this issue will be my last as editor. I am leaving the University to write a book (hopefully humorous) on relatives of famous Virginians from Colonial times through the Civil War. The next issue of the magazine will be in the capable hands of a new editor, Dorothy Wagener, who has been a writer and editor on our staff for three years.

I embark with mixed feelings of regret and anticipation. The articles we publish here on the strengths of the University and its people reflect a deeply held belief that almost everyone associated with UR holds: it is a wonderful place. I hate to leave it.

But the timing seems right. Upon graduation, the Oldham Scholars can look excitedly to a future shaped in part by their experiences here. They also can take with them campus memories to keep forever.... So can I.

Editor's Note: This fall the University of Richmond was ranked as one of "America's best colleges" for the third consecutive time in surveys by U.S. News & World Report. As UR gains a place in the spotlight nationally for its strength, the UR Magazine will be taking a look at some of the changes in the last 15 years that have made UR a stronger university. In this issue our focus will be the quality of student scholars; to illustrate, we'll highlight the first class of Oldham Scholars who will graduate this spring. In succeeding issues, we'll focus on other aspects of University life showing progress toward excellence.

Excellence

The 15 Oldham Scholars are only one group of first-rate students who have chosen UR for their undergraduate education. In addition to the Oldham Scholarship Program, several other scholarship programs are available for students who show outstanding scholastic and leadership ability. These scholarships, along with the University's strong emphasis on small classes, individual attention, and a top-notch faculty committed to teaching and research, are bringing more qualified students to campus.

Over 60 students are currently enrolled as University Scholars in a program established in 1978. They receive financial aid plus a number of other advantages, including special academic privileges; they may register early for classes, conduct independent research, and pursue programs of study based on individual interests, goals and needs.

In 1982 the CIGNA Corp. of Philadelphia provided UR with resources to help fund scholarships for minority students from the Richmond area. There are currently 21 CIGNA Scholars in this program, which seeks to encourage outstanding leadership in higher education and private industry.

The newest scholarship program was established by Virginia Baptists in 1986 to attract the top Baptist high school students to the University. Eight students now on campus are Virginia Baptist Scholars.

In addition to these special scholarship recipients, UR's freshman class boasts 10 1987 National Merit Scholarship winners, 15 National Merit Finalists, 19 National Merit Semi-finalists and 51 National Merit commended students. Included in the class ranks are 26 valedictorians and salutatorians and 302 National Honor Society members. As a whole, the Class of '91 is the University's brightest entering class ever in terms of SAT scores; combined verbal and mathematics SAT scores average 1,174, topping last year's record by 19 points. Making a Difference

By Cecilia Garner

Taking center stage in the kitchen of John Goodin's University Forest apartment is one half of a rack of caribou antlers. Goodin found this treasure on the north slope of Alaska while he was observing how birds relate to their habitat during his participation in a special study conducted by the Fish and Wildlife Service two summers ago.

Working in an internship through the Biology Department, Anne Sullivan was busy in a Virginia Commonwealth University pharmacology lab, feeding "CoCo Puffs" to rats in a maze. She was involved in neurochemical research, specifically studying a behavioral model for Alzheimer's disease. Sullivan combined the results of her internship with her biology senior seminar research; she gave a presentation on a genetics approach to Alzheimer's disease. In other research, Sullivan studied mutations in yeast DNA. She presented this research in an abstract at the Virginia Academy of Science meeting in Norfolk in the spring of 1987.

Not to be outdone, Eric Goldstein took off to Spain, "a fantastic country," where he studied Spanish at the University of Salamanca. A Spanish (as well as French and piano) major, Eric participated in a summer abroad program sponsored by the University of Richmond's Department of Modern Foreign Languages.

In Ireland a dynamic American with an Irish-Catholic family tree was backpacking her way to Dublin. Aileen Smith represented the University of Richmond at the International Interdisciplinary Women's Conference held at Trinity College. Smith became more aware of women's concerns and the need for women's solidarity, particularly as they relate to the Third World. "It's wrong that not many women from underdeveloped countries could attend the conference," Smith says.

The exciting and challenging diversity that marks their many activities shows up in the lives of Goodin, Sullivan, Goldstein and Smith. But each of these students could pursue his or her own particular interests because of the unique scholarship made available to them. The four are Oldham Scholars, the first students chosen to participate in an exceptional scholarship program now in its fourth year at UR.

Meeting and talking with the senior Oldham Scholars is like watching "Who's Who in American Colleges" come alive.

Sullivan, a tall, soft-spoken biology major, has been accepted at the Medical College of Virginia for the fall of 1988. "I love all the sciences," Sullivan admits, "but biology is the most human of the sciences, and I've always known that I was interested in some form of health care. I decided to become a doctor after I came to the University of Richmond."

In addition to her own study and research, Sullivan has found

"By bringing me to UR, the scholarship has allowed me to continue learning in all my areas of interest, not just biology. It is because of this that now, four years later, I am able to clearly define my career goals."

—Aileen Smith

"Opportunities for research here are stimulating, but I will remember these four years through the people—professors, students, special friends—who have enriched my experience immeasurably."

time to become involved in teaching and tutoring. She has tutored or worked as a lab assistant in the physics, chemistry and biology departments. "If you have to explain a concept to someone else, you learn much more yourself," Sullivan says, "and it's more fun to study with other people."

Sullivan does a great deal; she is a member of the Catholic Student Association; she is the treasurer of Mortar Board; she serves on the UR Self-Study Undergraduate Program Committee; she is active in Beta Beta Beta and Sigma Xi, national honorary societies; and she is listed in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Sullivan, whose home is in Cleveland Heights, Ohio, mentions UR people—faculty, administrators, students—as the highlights of her four years on campus. "A special part of having an Oldham Scholarship is getting to know the Oldhams. Each year we have dinner together. It's wonderful to know the individuals who have made it possible for us to study at the University."

Sullivan refers to Mr. and Mrs. W. Dortch Oldham of Nashville, Tenn., who four years ago donated $2 million to establish the Oldham Scholarship program. At the time the Oldhams gave their gift, Dortch Oldham said, "I have a dream of seeing in 10 years up to 100 outstanding young men and women enrolled at the University on the scholarships."

The scholarship program Mr. and Mrs. Oldham helped to establish provides a scholar with full tuition, room and board; a summer study and/or travel stipend; and many other advantages such as early registration for courses and the use of a reserved study room in the library and privileges in campus housing selection.

The four senior Oldham Scholars have brought a quality of academic excellence and leadership ability to the University that has challenged their faculty and their friends. "They really have made a difference," Dr. John Roush, executive assistant to the president, said upon his return from spending a weekend in New York City with all the Oldham Scholars. "We have

"The scholarship has allowed me to select summer opportunities based on the biology field experience I can acquire, not on what jobs will earn my tuition money."
—John Goodin

two events each year which give the students different experiences and the opportunity to know each other," Roush continued. "All the group looked to the seniors for leadership, and the seniors sensed the responsibility; they know who they are."

Smith, who grew up in Waccabuc, N.Y., laughs infectiously when she talks about herself and her future. "People call me an idealist," Smith says, "but I'm a liberal realist. For example, I think that it's possible to strike a balance between the human rights concerns of Third World peoples and the economic interests of the United States."

Smith is glad that she decided to accept the Oldham Scholarship that brought her to UR's campus. "I had thought about studying agriculture at Cornell," she says, "but at the University of Richmond, which is much smaller than Cornell, I have had the opportunity to learn about the needs of the Third World as well as to study science. My classes have been small, and the faculty are accessible and anxious to have a dialogue with students. As a result, I have a different perspective. When I came to Richmond, I was angry with much of U.S. foreign policy, especially in regard to Latin America. My education has given me the tools to approach realistically that anger, by enabling me to define a career objective in terms of my concerns."

Smith has a double major in biology and Third World studies. She is combining her interests in genetics and political science in preparation for a job in genetic agricultural research. In addition, she is currently secretary of Mortar Board; a member of Beta Beta Beta, the national biology honorary society; a member of Gamma Sigma Epsilon, the national honorary chemistry society; and she is secretary for the Campus Peace Forum. She is also engaged to be married.

Like Smith and Sullivan, Goodin, from Rockville, Md., is a biology major. He is looking forward to graduate school and then a career focused on ecology or environmental science, one in which he will be able to set environmental policy. "I want to be where decisions are made," Goodin says. "I'd like to have a management position, where I can help effect changes in our environmental policy—such as a regional directorship for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service," he says.

During his four years at UR, as well as during the summer months, Goodin has taken advantage of numerous opportunities to excel in his fields of interest. As a part of the honors program, Goodin has worked with Dr. William Woolcott, professor of biology, in a two-year independent study project. He has studied the systematics of small fish on the East Coast and will present the results of his research at a national biology conference this summer. He has served as a naturalist at the Aspen Center for Environmental Studies, teaching, conducting nature tours, researching and even bird-banding. In addition to his summer in Alaska, he has worked around Vancouver Island studying aspects of Canadian forestry practices.

In his freshman year Goodin participated in the Quill program. He served as an intern for the Virginia Wildlife Magazine and contributed articles based on his experiences for publication in the magazine.

Goodin continued to explore his great interest in the outdoors by participating in a two weeks' volunteer research project over the past Christmas holidays. He travelled to New Zealand where he worked on an EARTHWATCH project, studying the feeding behavior of dolphins.

Goodin never seems hurried or too busy to talk. Yet his accomplishments might exhaust many achievers. Throughout his academic career Goodin has made the Dean's List. He is the president of Beta Beta Beta; a member of the Richmond College Judicial Council and the UR Self-Study Effectiveness Committee; and he is the treasurer of the Amnesty International group on campus. Goodin is an associate member of Sigma Xi and he is also in the Blue Key National Honorary Society. As the academic chairman of his fraternity, Sigma Phi Epsilon, Goodin worked to initiate and maintain a scholarship program and to improve the GPA of the fraternity.

The one senior not majoring in biology is Eric Goldstein, who has three other majors—Spanish, French and piano performance.

Shakespeare's observation that "the stage is the thing," holds true in Goldstein's case. Although it is not required for his music major, he gave piano recitals his sophomore and junior years; and he presented his senior piano recital in January. For three years Goldstein sang baritone in the Schola Cantorum, a select group of singers from the larger University Choir. He played "Jesus" in the Catholic Student Association's production of Godspell. His roles with the University Players have included "Strider" in Strider; the piano accompanist in Tomfoolery; a principal role in Company; and he was a company member of As You Like It. As a member of the UR Dance Company, Goldstein danced the lead role in the Dec. '87 production of "Desperado."

Goldstein, from Charleston, S.C., is one of four students in his class to be initiated into Phi Beta Kappa in his junior year. Only the top one percent of a class at the University of Richmond can qualify for this honor. When Goldstein was tapped, he also received the Phi Beta Kappa Book Award, which recognized that he held the highest GPA at the end of four semesters for Richmond College.

In addition to Phi Beta Kappa, Goldstein is a member of Omicron Delta Kappa, a national honor society which recognizes academic and athletic leadership; Phi Sigma Iota, the national foreign language honor society; Phi Mu Epsilon, the national mathematics honor society; and Phi Kappa Mu, the national music honor society.

After graduation Goldstein plans to study music in Europe. His ultimate career goal is to perform in concert at the piano.

Taking a moment between a rehearsal for As You Like It and his piano practice, Goldstein captured the enthusiasm expressed by all four senior Oldham Scholars: "The highlight of my four years at UR...? Oh, just experiencing all the opportunities UR provides!"

Alumni Leaders

Conference Brings Alumni Boards To UR for Updates

By Randy Fitzgerald,

A keynote address by Robert S. Jepson Jr. highlighted a day-long Conference for Alumni Leaders on campus this fall. About 200 officers and members of various alumni boards and fundraising leaders were invited to campus by the Alumni Office to receive current information about UR and to get to know one another better. They had the chance to hear from a fellow alumnus who has committed to his alma mater $20 million toward a center for leadership studies. The leaders also got university updates from the four vice presidents and other UR officials and a tour of the campus.

Robert S. Jepson Jr., B'64, MBA'75, answered for a group of fellow alumni leaders in September the question of why he has committed $20 million to his alma mater.

Jepson was on campus to deliver the keynote address for the annual Conference for Alumni Leaders. The day before, he had presented his alma mater a check for $5 million, the first installment on a $20 million gift he and his wife have committed to an innovative new center for leadership studies. The $5 million he presented to Dr. E. Bruce Heilman, chancellor and interim chief executive officer, will go toward a $7.5 million Jepson Hall to be built to form a quadrangle with Ryland Hall, The E. Claiborne Robins School of Business and The T.C. Williams School of Law and Boatwright Memorial Library.

Jepson told the alumni group that that simple question "Why?" was the one everybody asked about the gift. "I've had people all over the country call me...alumni... Forbes magazine,...the Chicago Tribune...Fortune...I've even had my sons ask, 'Why?'"

The "why" is in two parts, he said. "Why this gift for leadership studies and why the University of Richmond?"

"I think we're doing a good job at Richmond. Among educational institutions as they exist today, we are doing a superior job. I would submit to you the job is not good enough," Jepson said. The gift would provide some help toward doing that even-better job.

"We have given the gift because tomorrow for the University of Richmond can be the cutting edge if we all pull toward that end... Richmond was not the only opportunity for Alice and me to do something that would make the world a better place. There are lots of universities that would have done a good job with this gift and obviously wanted it desperately. Again, why Richmond?"

The answer: "The University is large enough to attract students from a national...and world base, and I think with this gift coupled with the reputation of this institution, again a base that was built in the past, we can have any student we want here. There's no limitation, it's infinite.

"Yet the University is small enough and intimate enough that this gift will have a very big impact at this university and because of its impact and importance here it can propel this small, and always-to-be small, institution again to that cutting edge.

"The University in its heart and soul and its fiber believes in excellence. That belief in itself and its base and its future will only enhance where we want to go with this gift, so another reason to pick Richmond."

Another important reason was "four years here and all of you that I have met and known through the years and the class of '64, which was a very special class, kind of lingers on in your heart forever; so the class of '64 had something to do with it. Thank you both, Elaine and Archie. You were more important in this than you know." (Trustee Elaine Johnson Yeatts, W'64, who presided over the luncheon; and her husband Archer L. Yeatts III, R'64 and L'67. In 1963-64, Jepson was president of the business school student government association, Mrs. Yeatts was president of the West-hampton SGA, and Mr. Yeatts was vice president of the Richmond College SGA.)

"So the University of Richmond, because it had all of the right stuff to maximize a gift that is too precious not to do something for the most number of people over the longest period of time. Leadership, because I have seen it in action around the world. I don't know if we can create leaders, nobody here knows, but we'll never know unless we try; and so we're going to try together: Richmond, all of you, and Alice and Bob."

Also at the luncheon, Marcus, R'49, and Carole, W'63, G'75, Weinstein received a silver vase as educational fund raisers of the year. Receiving the award as volunteer of the year was Susan W. Clarke, W'72.

Besides getting an opportunity to hear and meet or renew an old friendship with Jepson, the approximately 200 alumni leaders also got to tour the new student apartments, the renovated Thomas Hall, the under-renovation Boatwright Library, and the Chapel with its new stained glass windows. The group also got an update on the search for a new president from Rector Joseph A. Jennings, B'49 and H'80, and on the University as a whole from the four vice presidents. They also enjoyed a sports update that included a live ABC Sports feature on the Spider football team's incredible four-overtime victory over the University of Massachusets the previous week.

Jennings began the day with a review of the search process for a new president. He said the board would employ a single search committee composed of 12 trustees and five faculty members aided by a consulting firm. He said he hoped a new president would be chosen by March or April 1988 and in office by Sept. 1, 1988.

Next came a University overview. Dr. Zeddie Bowen, vice president and provost, told the leaders about the self-study report nearing completion. An abbreviated version of the 400-page single-spaced, preliminary report included summaries of 124 recommendations of 11 different University committees. Among them: the endorsement of a committee on institutional effectiveness to ensure the University's programs are of high academic quality; the development of new incentives to continue attracting the best new faculty members; and a "curriculum renewal" to ensure students' development of "intellectual capacity, fundamental knowledge, basic beliefs and values, career preparation and physical well being."

Dr. Bowen also said that UR's 5,019 applications for admission this year put the University "in a rare position." Less than half of those could be offered admission to fill the 727 spots in the freshman class. The average SAT scores for this year's freshman class were 1,177 for Richmond College and 1,170 for Westhampton College.

Louis M. Moelchert Jr., vice president for business and finance, had a quiz for the leaders. Sample questions: How many buildings on campus? A. 51. How many acres? A. 335. How many acres is the lake? A. 13.6, not 10.

What year did the law school come to campus? A. 1954. What are the six original buildings on the present campus? A. Ryland, Brunet, Jeter and Thomas Halls, North Court and the steam plant.

He also told the leaders that 10 percent of the University's budget goes to financial aid, profits from the bookstore go to an endowed scholarship and that there were 1,021 employees at UR. Moelchert handed out prizes from the bookstore to those coming up with the answers.

Leonard S. Goldberg, vice president for student affairs, told alumni about new initiatives and recent successes such as an open discussion on campus for AIDS prevention by Dr. Richard Keeling of the University of Virginia that attracted a crew from "Good Morning America" and the bright, sensitive students that brought the crew back for a second session; and CARE, a program designed to combat alcohol and substance abuse.

He said that residential advisers had been increased and that sional theatre lights, dance floor and sound equipment set-up for professional disc jockeys or live entertainment, provided an important alternative to fraternity activities—which in the past have done an often underestimated job of filling the void—Goldberg said.

Another major initiative was in setting up an active preventive system of health care sensitive to such problems of the '80s as bulimia and anorexia nervosa. Gone are the old student health forms.

Finally, Dr. Goldberg pointed to the overwhelming success of the colonization of sororities, which last year attracted 480 women.

H. Gerald Quigg, vice president for university relations, said that UR intended to "go forward aggressively" in fund raising, even though there is a "little loss of momentum" without a president. He said one of the strategies would be to broaden the base, seeking "greater numbers, no matter what the dollar figure." Last year the annual fund hit a record $2.8 million.

Quigg said he wanted in 1987-88 to have "the largest cash flow of any year in the University's history, which means we must exceed $12.2 million, and to have the highest percentage of participation (over 40 percent)." Quigg also distributed a list of 11 donors (individuals, families or corporations) who have given $1 million or more in recent years, including the Robins family; the Gottwalds; Mr. and Mrs. W. Dortch Oldham, R'41 and H'74; the Jepsons; and Mr. and Mrs. Nathan S. Gumenick, H'83, H'85.

"Why does UR need money?" Quigg asked. "We're a blessed institution. As you get stronger, you develop a greater need. We need the resources to be one of the leading private universities, to be the best we can be." Some of the objectives for '87-'88 include $7.5 million for the Jepson Center, $5 million for Boatwright Memorial Library, $750,000 for a new campus ministries center, $500,000 for the George E. Allen Chair of Law, $150,000 for the F. Carlyle Tiller Chair in Business, $50,000 for the Robert R. Merhige Center for Environmental Studies and an unspecified amount for scholarships.

In the afternoon Dr. Candine E. Johnson stressed the high academic standards UR has for its scholarship athletes. "So many people have checked the credentials of our student athletes. If they don't meet our academic standards, they can't come here." The proof that these strict procedures work is in the 96 percent graduation rate in four years, Dr. Johnson said. Two of the 40 Rhodes Scholar nominees last year were scholarship athletes, she said.

After Dr. Johnson's discussion many of the participants went to the Pier area of the Tyler Haynes Commons to watch on the new giant-screen television a four-minute clip on the exciting 52-51 UR Yankee Conference win over the University of Massachusetts. ABC Sports highlighted the game in its pre-game-of-the-week show.

Dr. Randy Fitzgerald, R'63 and G'64, is director of the news bureau at the University and contributing editor of UR Magazine.

AROUND THE LAKE

NEW PROGRAM BRINGS INTERNATIONAL FLAVOR TO UR

International studies has a higher profile at the University beginning this year: an International Studies major is available beginning this spring and an Office of International Education has been established under the direction of Dr. Uliana Gabara, visiting assistant professor of Russian.

"Our major is unique," Dr. Gabara says. "It's truly international, as well as truly interdisciplinary."

Students who major in International Studies must meet three requirements: they must have at least three years of instruction in a foreign language, have an experience abroad and take the interdisciplinary international studies courses team-taught by faculty members who have long been involved in developing the major.

Beyond these requirements there are six areas in which students may specialize. Called "tracks," these six areas are the Soviet Union, Latin America, the Third World, Politics and Diplomacy, Europe, and Economic and Social Systems.

The Office of International

Dr. Uliana Gabara, visiting assistant professor of Russian, is the director of the Office of International Education.

Education also works with UR students who want to study abroad. "We need to help students make knowledgeable choices for study abroad and to suggest ones that aren't so conventional, perhaps," Gabara says. "We also look forward to establishing our own programs abroad or possibly joining consortia of universities."

A third area of concern for the Office of International Education is the foreign students who are studying at UR. Currently 23 foreign students from 12 countries are enrolled here.

"These students are a valuable resource for our community; we can learn a great deal from them, but we also need to help them become acclimated to our culture and learn more about us," Dr. Gabara says. "Assigning host families and host students to the international students are ways to help them feel welcome and to include them in campus and family life. We've asked the Alumni Office to help recruit host families."

The Office of International Studies also promotes awareness of international concerns through special exhibits and programs on campus. "We view this as part of the process of 'internationalizing' both the academic life and the out-of-class experiences," says Dr. Gabara. "We sponsored a Chinese exhibit last fall and a symposium on Japan is on the calendar for the spring. We keep in touch with a number of nationwide organizations that help us know what is happening on the international scene."

Dr. Gabara's own background is international in scope. She grew up in Russia and Poland, then came to this country and earned a B.A. degree in American literature from Bennington College. Later she taught and studied at the University of Warsaw, where she obtained an M.A. in English philology. She also was on the faculty of the University of Virginia, where she received her Ph.D. in Russian and Polish languages and literatures. Recently she returned to the Soviet Union twice when she led groups of Virginia high school teachers and administrators in seminars which began at UR and continued in Moscow, Leningrad and Tbilisi. CG

DR. NEUMANN WINS NATIONAL AWARD IN MUSICOLOGY

At age 80, Dr. Frederick Neumann, UR professor of music emeritus, is still winning awards for his contributions to the field of musicology.

In October, Dr. Neumann was named the winner of the Otto Kinkeldey Award, the most prestigious of three awards annually given by the American Musicological Society. He was recognized for his book, Ornamentation and Improvisation in Mozart (Princeton University Press, 1986), which was selected as the most outstanding scholarly book of the past year.

In December, the Music Department gave Dr. Neumann a dinner to celebrate his 80th birthday and announced the establishment of a scholarship in his name. The scholarship is designed to help a student who is a string player in the University Orchestra.

Since retiring from the University, Dr. Neumann has been a most productive scholar. His latest book and an earlier book, Ornamentation in Baroque and Post-Baroque Music: With Special Emphasis on J.S. Bach (Princeton University Press, 1978), both examine ornamentation—"the embellishment of the melodic line"—in classical music.

He has also written extensively about "performance practice," a field of musicology that focuses on how music was performed in its time. A collection of his articles has been published as Essays in Performance Practice (UMI Research Press, Ann Arbor, Mich., 1982) and another collection is planned for the near future. He also published two volumes of Contemporary Violin Technique with the late Ivan Galamian, a celebrated violin pedagogue.

To do his writing, Dr. Neumann uses a Televideo word processor which he has had since 1982. "I couldn't get along without it," he says.

Dr. Neumann's research has been supported by two fellowships from the National Endowment for the Humanities and two Guggenheim Fellowships as well as other grants.

His musicological research is at least his third career, begun in his mid-fifties when he became interested in the way classical music is interpreted.

A native of Bielitz, Austrian Silesia (now Bielsko Biala on the border of Czechoslovakia), he earned a doctoral degree in political science and economics from the University of Berlin and worked as an export market analyst in Prague. However, his first love was music and the violin he had studied since age six; at the age of 30 he changed careers to become a violinist, studying with the finest teachers in Europe. He emigrated to America in 1939, where he earned both the master's and Ph.D. degrees in music and music education from Columbia University before coming to UR as associate professor of music in 1955. He also served as the first concertmaster of the Richmond Symphony from 1957 to 1964.

Alumni and friends may participate in the Neumann Scholarship by contacting the University Relations-Development Office, Maryland Hall, University of Richmond, Va. 23173. DW

STUDENTS CREATE UMBRELLA GROUP TO COORDINATE VOLUNTEER WORK

The Volunteer Action Council, known as VAC, is only a semester old, but "there's been an incredible response to an immediate need," according to David Dorsey, UR's associate chaplain. Dorsey, himself new to the campus, is serving as the staff adviser to the new student-initiated, student-led and student-operated service organization.

"VAC is UR's 'United Way,'" Dorsey says. "It's a networking agency which seeks to match already existing University organizations with already existing community needs."

VAC came into existence as a result of students' recognition that there was no organized approach to volunteerism on campus. Seniors Arrington Chambliss and Genevieve Lynch set out to change that and were instrumental in creating VAC. Now in addition to Chambliss and Lynch, who serve as VAC chairpersons, there is a board composed of Maura Wolf, W'90, program director; Stephanie Graham, W'90, secretary/treasurer; David Howie, R'90, and Jennifer Bordogna, W'90, public relations; and there are numerous volunteers helping over 15 agencies in the Richmond area.

UR students are volunteering their work, time and energy to help with such diverse activities as answering the phones at the Fan Free Clinic; serving as sisters or brothers in the Big Brother/Sister programs of Richmond; tutoring refugees with the Office of Refugee Resettlement; visiting prisoners in jail; and giving success therapy at Westport Convalescent Center. They also offer pregnancy counseling, cook meals for the indigent at Freedom House and install sheetrock in houses in the Habitat for Humanity program.

Dorsey, who became associate chaplain this fall, will be heavily involved in a three-year religious emphasis program focusing on faith and moral issues on campus. His position is new in that Dr. Linwood T. Horne, R'43, who recently retired as associate chaplain, will continue working part time in the areas of church relations, the off-campus school of Christian studies and Baptist affairs.

A native of Athens, Ga., Dorsey holds a master of divinity degree and a master of church music degree from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky.

Last summer, he rode in a cross-country bicycle tour from Seattle to Atlantic City to benefit the American Lung Association. Student leaders are now working with him to organize a bike-a-thon to benefit Habitat for Humanity this spring. CG

ECON PROFESSORS FIND INEQUITIES IN INJURY CLAIMS

When a physician is sued for malpractice in a personal injury suit, does the court award the plaintiff a higher amount for damages than if the injuries had occurred in an automobile accident?

Yes, significantly higher, according to preliminary results of studies by Dr. Robert W. Cook, associate professor of economics; and Dr. Robert C. Dolan, associate professor of economics. Based on data from 1977-79 for medical and auto injury claims, Cook and Dolan found the average awards for deaths caused by medical malpractice 10 times greater than those awarded for deaths caused by auto accidents.

Cook and Dolan presented their preliminary findings this fall at the Southern Economics Association and at the American Economics Association annual meetings and Cook has published some of the research in journals. With a grant of $5,000 from the Faculty Research Committee, the two will obtain 1986 claim data so they can update their findings to reflect changes that have occurred in state laws and see if the same trends hold.

Cook's interest in the economics of medical malpractice began five years ago when he conducted a study for the Virginia Medical Society to determine if there were inequities in the number of claims and amount of awards against physicians in Virginia.

"That study raised questions for me," Cook says. "Why should a class of defendants receive special treatment? Were courts actually awarding greater damages against one group than against another? I decided to investigate by comparing medical injury claims against auto injury claims, using closed claim data that were available."

To fund their project, Cook and Dolan have applied for a grant from the medical malpractice program of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation in Princeton, N.J., a private philanthropic organization that funds research that can lead to establishment of public policy. DW

CAMPUS EVENTS INCLUDE SPEAKERS, FOLK ART EXHIBIT, SCIENCE LECTURES

Speakers at the University this winter included an American pollster and Virginia's attorney general, while the Marsh Gallery featured an exhibit of folk art.

George Gallup Jr., president of the Gallup Poll and co-chairman of Gallup Organizations Inc., spoke to more than 500 students on Nov. 10. His speech, "The Mood of America Today," gave students insight into the latest statistical trends involving political and economic topics while also touching on his personal feelings of the moral and spiritual decline of the American people.

Gallup said that American people are optimistic about the economy, that 78 percent of the country would vote for a woman presidential candidate and that American people place more emphasis upon a strong education system than upon strong industry or military power. Gallup also said he was conducting a worldwide survey on AIDS for publication in January 1988.

He was sponsored by the Floyd D. and Elisabeth S. Gottwald Student Speakers Endowment and the UR Speakers Board.

On Nov. 6,

Virginia Attorney General Mary Sue Terry, W'69 and H'86, spoke to students from The E.

George Gallup Jr.

Claiborne Robins School of Business during the school's 10th Stanley S. Watts Memorial Lecture sponsored by the Watts family. Terry addressed the issue of rapidly escalating liability insurance costs.

A December art exhibit in the Marsh Gallery entitled "The Bench and the Benchmark" featured the folk art of Tom Gordon and Abe Criss. Displayed on the gallery walls were oil pastel drawings by Gordon, retired Virginia Supreme Court justice. Wooden figures by Abraham Lincoln Criss, grandson of a slave and a former furniture maker, filled the interior of the gallery.

The exhibit was curated by John Morgan and Ann Oppenheimer, UR art history slide curator and president of the Folk Art Society of America, which sponsored the exhibit. Showing Jan. 14 through Feb. 5 in the gallery are 19th century paintings from the Guarisco Gallery Ltd. and archaeological photographs by Richmond photographer Taylor Dabney.

A science lecture series celebrating the 10th anniversary of the Gottwald Science Center began Dec. 7 with a biology lecture by Dr. Joseph T. Bagnara, professor of anatomy at the University of Arizona Medical Center in Tucson. His topic was "The Neural Crest: An Embryonic Cornucopia."

Continuing the series Feb. 3 was a physics lecture by Dr. J.D. Walecka, scientific director of the Continuous Electron Beam Accelerator Facility in Newport News, Va. A day-long conference March 18 sponsored by the Chemistry Department will conclude with the W. Allan Powell Lecture delivered by Dr. Gary M. Hieftje, professor of chemistry at Indiana University. RW

FOOTBALL TEAM, COACH SHEALY WIN POST-SEASON KUDOS

Picked to finish sixth in the Yankee Conference during the pre-season, the University of Richmond football team surprised many onlookers by rolling to a 6-1 league mark and a berth in the I-AA Playoffs.

Directing the Spiders' efforts was eighth-year coach Dal Shealy, who was named Yankee Conference Coach-of-the-Year by a vote of the league's eight head coaches. Joining Shealy with honors were First Team All-Conference selections Erwin Matthews, Howard Fahnestock, Brian Jordan and Pat Brown.

Richmond finished the regular season with a 7-4 record before bowing to Southern Conference champion and top-seeded Appalachian State University in the first round of the I-AA Playoffs.

Leading the list of individual honorees was sophomore defensive back Brian Jordan. An All-ECAC selection, Jordan led the Spiders with four interceptions and eight tackles for loss while recording 85 tackles. A 6'1", 195-pounder from Baltimore, Md., Jordan ranked fifth in I-AA in punt returns (10.5 yards per game) and was one of the top defensive players in the conference.

A junior outside linebacker from Homestead, Fla., Pat Brown finished the 1987 regular season with 48 tackles in nine games. A 6'4", 230-pounder, Brown also recorded five quarterback sacks, five pass break-ups, two interceptions and recovered a fumble. He was a member of The Sporting News' pre-season All-America Checklist along with Jordan.

Offensive lineman Howard Fahnestock helped spearhead a UR ground game which averaged a league-leading 195.2 yards rushing per game. A Murrysville, Pa. native, Fahnestock is a three-year letterman who began his college career as a defensive lineman.

A junior tailback from Fort Washington, Md., Erwin Matthews led the conference in rushing (112.2 yards per game) and was fourth in I-AA in all-purpose running (172.3). During the 1987 season he rushed for 1,234 yards and set or tied six UR single game, season and career rushing and scoring records.

Against Massachusetts early in the year, Matthews set a single game high with six touchdowns. TS

BASKETBALL SQUAD WINS TWO HOLIDAY TOURNAMENTS

The Richmond Spiders got off to a fast start for the 1987-88 basketball season, winning two holiday tournaments and finishing runner-up to No. 1 North Carolina in the Central Fidelity Holiday Classic in the Robins Center.

The Spiders took the 12th-annual Richmond Times-Dispatch Invitational tournament in the Richmond Coliseum held Dec. 18-19 and the Cactus Klassic in Tempe, Ariz., Dec. 4-5.

The Spiders defeated Old Dominion University, 70-63, in the finals of the TDIT. The Spiders got to the final round when Ken Atkinson canned a three-point 27-footer as time expired to beat Virginia Commonwealth University, 60-58, in the first round.

Senior Peter Woolfolk was named the tournament's most valuable player, and was joined by Atkinson on the all-tournament team.

Woolfolk also was named the most valuable player in the Kactus Klassic, which the Spiders won by beating Arizona State, 76-63, in the final, after taking Tulsa, 64-60, in the opening game. Also on the Kactus all-tournament squad were Spiders Rodney Rice and Scott Stapleton.

In the second-annual Central Fidelity Holiday Classic Nov. 27-28, the Spiders made it to the dream Robins Center matchup against North Carolina by beating Boston University, 66-61. A patented Tarheel burst with 6:03 left in the first half brought UNC from a one-point lead to a 13-point margin at half-time. The Tarheels held on to win, 87-76. Carolina guard Jeff Lebo was named most valuable player of an all-tournament team that included his teammate Scott Williams, Boston University's Frederick Irving and Spiders Woolfolk and Rice. RF

NOLAN E. RICE

Dr. Nolan E. Rice, emeritus professor of biology at the University of Richmond, died Nov. 25, 1987. He was 79.

A member of the Biology Department from 1950 to 1978, Dr. Rice served several terms as acting chairman.

Dr. Rice received his B.A. degree in zoology from the University of Kentucky and his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Duke University. Before coming to UR, Dr. Rice taught at Brenau College, the University of Tennessee and Middle Georgia College. He also was head of the culture department of the Carolina Biological Supply Co.

Dr. George M. Modlin, chancellor emeritus and president during much of Dr. Rice's tenure at UR, said of him: "Dr. Rice was an enthusiastic and inspiring professor, greatly admired by his students and highly respected by his colleagues."

A former student remembered Dr. Rice's field trips: "He was a little man, but we almost had to run to keep up with his stride. He always bought us Cokes afterwards."

Dr. Robert F. Smart, former provost and Biology Department chairman, said of his friend: "He was a devoted teacher who had a sincere interest in his students and who was recognized as one of the leading invertebrate biologists in the state."

Dr. Rice was a member and former chairman of the board of deacons of River Road Baptist Church. He was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha social fraternity and numerous professional societies and organizations, including the Society of the Sigma Xi, the Virginia Academy of Science, and the American Institute of Biological Science.

Survivors include three daughters, Dr. Lida Etta Matthen of Indianapolis, Ind., Jean Hodder of Stuart, Fla., and Nola Powell of Mobile, Ala.; a sister, Edith M. Rice of Richmond; and six grandchildren, Kate and Kristen Matthen of Bloomington, Ind., Becky and Laura Hodder of Stuart, Fla., and Kendall and Julie Powell of Mobile, Ala.

Dr. Rice's wife, Gladys Garnett Rice, died Feb. 27, 1987. RF

EDWARD T. CLARK

The Rev. Edward T. Clark Sr., pastor of the First Baptist Church in Winchester, Va., for 47 years, and a former member of the University Board of Trustees, died Oct. 1, 1987.

Born in 1899 in Dillwyn, Va., Clark was the son of James A. and Susie Boatwright Clark. He was the nephew of Dr. Frederic W. Boatwright, president of UR from 1895 to 1946. Clark earned degrees from both UR and Southern Baptist Theological Seminary of Louisville, Ky. He was a UR trustee from 1944 to 1971.

Fred Anderson, executive director of the Virginia Baptist Historical Society, who interviewed Clark several years ago, remarked, "He looked just like Dr. Boatwright. When you looked at him, it was as if you were looking at Dr. Boatwright."

From 1926 until his retirement in 1972, Clark was pastor of the First Baptist Church of Winchester. During that time the congregation increased from 98 to over 1,000.

Clark was a former president of the Lions Club and the Winchester-Frederick County Chapter of the American Red Cross; three-time president of the Winchester Ministerial Association; and the president and founder of the Winchester-Frederick County Tuberculosis Society, the Winchester-Frederick County Crippled Children's Society and the Northwestern Mental Health Association. He also was a founder of Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Winchester-Frederick County.

He was a former clerk of the Virginia Baptist General Association and a member and vice president of the Virginia Baptist Board of Missions and Education.

Surviving are two sons, Edward Thomas Clark Jr. of Chicago and James E. Clark of Reston, Va.; a daughter, Katharine Kersey of Portsmouth, Va.; a sister, Mattie Sibaugh of Winchester; a brother, J. Ligon Clark of Nellysford, Va.; 22 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. He married Mary Kathryn Manuel on Nov. 23, 1955. His first wife was Katharine Essex. RF

FROM THE UNDERGRADUATE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION PRESIDENTS

To: Richmond College Alumni
 From: Bob Seabolt, President of Richmond College Alumni Association

I want to take this opportunity to thank you for your continuing interest and support. Thank you, too, for the opportunity you have given me and other members of the board of directors to be closely associated with Richmond College and the University.

Your dues have provided funds to allow extra programs and activities for students and alumni. I extend my appreciation to those alumni who have made this possible through their dues payments.

Your alma mater is a vibrant and stimulating institution. I hope you will return to campus whenever possible.

To: Westhampton College Alumnae
 From: Susan Quisenberry, President of Westhampton College Alumnae Association

This year along with other members of the board, I have met with current students in the residence halls, on the playing fields as well as during special programs and projects. The thread that binds us together is one that runs through almost 75 class years. We will celebrate that anniversary in 1989-90.

The vitality of the campus exhibits itself in many ways. I invite you to participate by attending alumni functions, on campus as well as in your area. Also, remember the many theatrical productions, concerts and lectures that are available.

To: E. Claiborne Robins School of Business Alumni
 From: Fred Hall, President of The E. Claiborne Robins School of Business Alumni Association

The excellent results of the 1986 CPA exam scores place UR among the top ten in the country in theory, practice and law and first in Virginia in these categories. Congratulations to the faculty and students for these fine scores!

I particularly want to thank those who sent dues payments this year. These funds allow us to provide additional programs and projects for alumni and students.

If you have any ideas or suggestions, I and other board members would like to hear from you. We are pleased to represent the alumni of The E. Claiborne Robins School of Business.

HONORS FOR ALUMNI

Dr. John Donald Millar, R'56, delivered the 1987 Annual Lucas Lecture to the Faculty of Occupational Medicine of the Royal College of Physicians in London. The first American to present a Lucas Lecture, Dr. Millar spoke on "Attempts at Strategic Thinking in Occupational Public Health." He is director of the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, part of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Solon B. Cousins III, R'47 and H'83, received the United Way of America's 1987 National Professional Leadership Award. National executive director of the YMCA of the USA, headquartered in Chicago, Cousins received the award for decentralizing and improving the YMCA movement. He is the son of Dr. Solon B. Cousins Jr., remembered by many alumni as the chairman of the Religion Department from 1937 to 1959.

Jessica Vaughan Paarman, W'65, was named the 1988 Virginia Teacher of the Year by the Virginia Department of Education in September. She teaches fifth-grade mathematics, science and health at Spotswood Elementary School in Spotsylvania County, Va., and is described by her principal as "a highly motivated professional who loves what she is doing."

Deborah D. Snaggs, W'81, won the women's division of the Richmond Newspapers Marathon in October with a time of 2:57:18. In December she placed 11th in the women's division of the Honolulu Marathon in Hawaii out of an overall field of 10,000. She is an assistant cross country and indoor and outdoor track coach at Richmond's Thomas Jefferson High School.

Lois Rogers Butler writes from Onancock, Va.: "I lived in Florida until a year ago. I came up here to be near my family. I have one daughter and she has eight children. My family lives in Towson, Md. I have five great-grandchildren. I often talk with Betsy Camp Smith in Franklin."

Martha Chappell writes: "I live at Westminster-Canterbury. One of the pleasures of my being here is my association with Westhampton College graduates."

I also enjoy the multifaceted life here at Westminster-Canterbury. Last spring the alumni secretary and the dean of Westhampton came to lunch and brought us up-to-date on developments on campus. A group of us went to the Boatwright Society Dinner, and this fall a resident invited the University chaplain and the vice president for university relations and his wife to a small supper party after which the chaplain conducted our weekly Sunday vesper service and made a very worthwhile talk.

Hilda Lawson Jeklin has made almost a complete recovery after her stroke. She is at home alone, needs a cane only when walking outside, drives her car and keeps up with most of her many activities. She had a week's trip in the fall with a niece and her husband to view the colorful foliage.

Ruth Wallerstein Thalimer enjoyed a visit with her daughter at Outer Banks, N.C., where her daughter has an art gallery. She still drives, has a graduate student staying in her home with her and is well.

Rachel Newton Dickson enjoyed her mountain summer house at Ridgecrest, C., for three months, with visits from her four children and grandchildren.

Both Rachel and sister Edith Newton Eakes are well and enjoy their church and friends. In the early fall they attended the annual Newton family reunion which was attended by most of the six sisters, brothers, their children and other relatives.

Thelma Hill Marsh stays well in the Baptist retirement home with an around-the-clock companion. She seldom goes out but still can talk and has her laugh and keen sense of humor.

Claudia Patrick attends church, interesting programs, lectures and has nice surroundings.

Eva Timberlake West enjoyed being at her summer home on the river and in the early fall a trip to the mountains for peaches and apples. She continues to sew, read and stay well.

Celia Levinson Myer, whose husband is in a nursing home, visits him often. She still drives and is well. Her musically talented granddaughter, still in Paris, is receiving more honors. She has three great-grandchildren and five grandchildren.

Elsie Payne Guthrie, in spite of her arthritic knee, leads a very busy and happy life. In September, she spoke to Red Hill D.A.R. on the Constitution 200 years ago and now. One day later every member of her family arrived to celebrate her birthday and the very next day was the Payne family reunion with only four absent. That same day at her church's homecoming she played the piano at Sunday school, taught her class and gave the special welcome at the morning service—but did not preach!

Leslie Sessoms Booker spent a week in Blowing Rock, N.C., with daughter Constance and Hannah Coker. Later, at Westminster-Canterbury where she lives, she broke her hip and was in the hospital.

She got a replacement hip and is now getting along very nicely. She is a wonder! I'm still living as usual; I have another great-grandson, a granddaughter who graduated in law then passed the bar, a grandson who graduated in business—both from UR—and another granddaughter who is marketing director at UR.

The class of 1928 will celebrate its 60th anniversary during Alumni Weekend, May 20-22, 1988.

Louise Massey Crisp is already making plans to have all of our activities on campus. Sarah Rogers visited Louise during the summer. Sarah Cudd Gaskins talked with Louise by telephone when she visited her son in the Washington area.

Louise Eubank Gray has been honored by the Rappahannock district of the Va. Retired Teachers Association for her years of successful teaching and books on the history of that area. The King and Queen Historical Society has given her recognition as historian. She and Nora Turpin Turner have also been honored at a dinner and class reunion of former students during the summer.

Ted Harris Jones has recently retired from the presidency of the Goochland Historical Society, but she is still working on genealogies.

Virginia Pleasants Robertson is gardening, reading and watching TV and thanks MCV's very fine department of eye care.

Watch your bookstore for Margaret Rudd's biography of her father, Dr. Rudd. Dr. Rudd taught Bible at Westhampton.

I. Gay Minor Nelson, have four great-granddaughters.

Our 55th reunion brought together a small but enthusiastic group. Classmates present for the celebration were: Carolyn Thompson Broadus, Helen LeGrande Butler, Helen Pollard Deck, Ann Sadler Garrett, Muriel Mae Jones, Valerie LeMasurier Jones, Mary Hodnett Mathews, Mary Lucile Saunders and Zephia Campbell Scarborough.

We attended the Boatwright Society dinner on Friday night and the Alumni Luncheon the next day. The climax of our weekend was a buffet supper at Mary Mathews' home on Saturday night. Honored guests at the party were husbands Emmett Mathews, Charles Scarborough and Robert Jones.

In August, Lucy LeGrand Furney was in Richmond visiting her daughter, Mrs. John C. Byrd, and classmate Phyllis Perkinson. Phyllis is now house-bound.

Please send news to me before Oct. 15 for the January magazine, and before April 15 for the July magazine. Even classes appear twice a year.

Virginia Watkins Ellenburg has visited Richmond for several short stays from Greenville, Tenn.

Helen Hulcher received her 15-year pin as a volunteer at Richmond Memorial Hospital, and was elected to COSCO, the Council of Senior Clubs Organization.

Virginia McIntosh Puckett and husband Charlie visited their two daughters in Texas, and a third daughter came from California. Virginia and Helen Hulcher traveled with two cousins to the Canadian Rockies in June.

Billie Allan Geoghegan has moved to Richmond.

Gene Newton West is living in Asheville, N.C.

My son Bill who lives in Los Angeles, Calif., was married in July. Ed, Scott and I went out for the wedding.

Sarah Covey Hurst is active in the hospice program in Mount Dora, Fla.

Mary Burfoot Hill set out almost 1,000 white pine seedlings on her twenty acres—her effort to preserve the ozone layer.

Florence Marston Harvey and Bob live in York, Pa., near their daughter. She belongs to the York County Quilters Guild. Her son Bobby has been promoted to manager of the Real Estate Development of the Norfolk Southern Railroad.

Boo Owens Page and Sidney saw points of interest in France new to them: Brittany, the Perigord region and Mont-Saint-Michel. Later in the summer they spent a week in Chautauque, N.Y.

Marijorie Pugh Tabb moved to Imperial Plaza in September.

Helen Falls spoke at the Founders Day Celebration in October at New Orleans Baptist Seminary where she taught for 37 years. She says that she spent more than half of her life there and half of the age of the seminary. Falls was elected to the board of the Boatwright Society in June. She has reviewed Catherine Allen's A Century to Celebrate: History of Women's Missionary Union locally and in four states.

Mary Ellen Stephenson took a trip to Alaska in June. Busy as usual, she does hospice work and serves as community educator of the great need. She is active in her church, tutors in the literacy program and participates in AAUW.

Ester Figuly, who worked in Norfolk and Richmond as a bacteriologist, retired in 1983 from the Diagnostic Lab of the state here, serving as supervisor of the bacteriology department at that time. She is busy now as she aids her family in their produce business, does volunteer work at senior citizen centers and serves as a lay speaker and a Sunday School teacher in her church.

Alice Pugh Bartz and Warren vacationed in Maine. Alice Turner Schaffer traveled in both Africa and China, and Eleanor Whitehead Straffin went to Russia. Jinny Kirk Lennox went to Nova Scotia; she with a friend joined Monny Bowers Gill and Wilfred at the Halifax Hotel in September. Monny was elected to the board of the Boatwright Society in June.

Ethel Denny White, mother of the late Lou White Winfree, died Sept. 29, 1987, age 96. She was a pillar of the United Methodist Church and of Church Women United and was active in community services. Lou had been honored in 1980 as a Valiant Woman by Church Women United for the same kind of involvement.

Martha Byers Beall of Upper Marlboro, Md., visited Mildred Harvey Clark and Helen Gray in Richmond this past September.

Last May, Henrietta Harrell Smith, Martha Ellis Ross and Allie Martin Holibe visited to Waynesboro for a visit with Gene Austin Hall. Gene's older son Tommy and family returned to the U.S. after three years with NATO in Brussels. He will be working at the Pentagon. Son Bill and family visited her prior to their departure for three years in England; he is in the Air Force. Gene's daughter Marianne, W74, and husband now live with her in Waynesboro.

Jane Thorpe, newly appointed executive director of alumni affairs, invited all the Richmond area members of our class to lunch at the Deaneary in September so we could get started on plans for our 50th reunion in '88. Jo Mallory Cosby, Helen Gray, Jean Bobbitt Grubbs, Hennie Harrell Smith and Peggy Lockwood Nolting were present and enjoyed a delicious luncheon on the Deaneary porch. All of us agreed to serve as the Reunion Committee along with our other class secretary, Anne Walker, who couldn't be with us. You'll be hearing more from us during these next few months.

If you have not already sent your scrapbook items and information to Jo Cosby or Doug Baldwin, please take time to do so right away. Jo Cosby's address is: 601 Branway Drive, Richmond, Va. 23229.

Since Aug. 1, Lucy Baird has been happily settled at Westminster-Canterbury in Richmond. Charlotte Ann Dickinson Moore and John were in Richmond and visited the Va. Museum with her. The Moores went on to take classes in Elderhostels in North Carolina in the early summer.

Millie Gustafson Donohue reports a new grandson. She told of attending the wonderful 50th high school reunion for Thomas Jefferson that was held in 1986 at the Marriott Hotel in Richmond.

Jane Davenport Reid continues in her work at the Va. Museum where she is a docent and works with shows on loan. Emmet still rides his bike daily. Son Kendall now lives in Hampton, Va., where he is a reference librarian. Granddaughter, Cassandra Williamson, attends U.Va.

Saddy Sykes Williams and Harry enjoyed a tour in July to places of interest in Delaware for four days and in June a trip to Nags Head. For the third year they are helping on Fridays to serve dessert and coffee to those attending the Free University classes at Grace Covenant Presbyterian Church. Saddy has joined the Tuckahoe Woman's Club.

Elsie Mattingly Dickinson and Al's oldest son Al IV teaches English in a university in Kyoto, Japan. Three married children live in Richmond and eight grandchildren are within visiting distance.

Eleanor Parsons Fish and Bob moved into their new home in the Sierras in July.

Pauline Cortopassi enjoyed a week in Bermuda in June. She has had some problems with arterial blockage.

Janet Gresham Manson has both a daughter and a daughter-in-law who have done their master's degree work at UR.

Helen Smith Moss teaches six classes in Lichfield. Helen has a daughter in Richmond, one in Raleigh, one in Annapolis and a son in Virginia Beach and an 11-year-old grandaughter in Richmond. Her daughter in Raleigh is involved in cancer research and the one in Annapolis is administrative assistant to a senator.

Margaret Brinson Reed, our chairman for the 50th anniversary scholarship fund, tells us that everyone's participation is needed to make this a 100 percent success. She would like help in locating "lost" classmates.

Marge and Jack took a trip to Florida this year and a trip to Denver to a reunion of the OSI organization that Jack served with. Jack had successful cataract surgery this year.

Fred and I moved to our present address last January. We are very happy here in the Woodstock area. We continue to be busy with volunteer work in the community, church and school. I'm learning to ring handbells but am sensitive about being called a "ding-dong." We're taking a conversational German class in preparation for a trip to the area from which Fred's German ancestors migrated.

Mary Grace Scherer Taylor called us the "last of the innocent" and we were. We had entered college toward the end of the Depression and graduated in the height of a great war. The only drug we knew was aspirin and rather than worrying about "safe sex" we were still naively wondering if we should kiss on the first date. (At least some of us were.) Evelyn McAuley Harris and I were a winning debate team. Our subject? The United States should be an isolationist country.

So now, 45 years later, we are world travelers. We are achievers and our children are even more so. So much for isolationism.

At the Class of '42 reunion we decided to raise funds for a scholarship to West-hampton as our 50th reunion gift in 1992, in memory of our deceased class members. Class of '42 alumnae will be hearing about this over the next five years from class fund-raiser Ada Moss Harlow of Richmond.

Jean Simone Grant Andrews of Largo, Fla., had earned her private pilot's license while still at Westhampton and has been traveling ever since. She has seen Europe, Russia, China and Australia.

Kay Gillelan Crutchfield of Virginia Beach, Va., wife of a retired rear admiral, has traveled the world. This year, they started a high school graduation gift of taking each grandchild wherever she/he wants to go. "Sadly," she missed the reunion; she was on the Riviera. Next, she took a cruise from Nice to Venice.

Frances Calish Rothberg of Richmond says she and husband William have circled the globe by unusual routes—China, Mongolia, Siberia, Western Russia and Finland. They watched Halley's Comet in rural Venezuela.

Several class members have traveled by canal barge. Among them is Anne Shafer Carey of Farmington, Conn., who was widowed in 1974. She says, "Pete and I saw Ireland, England, Holland, Southern France and Northern Germany from the decks of small boats chugging slowly along canals."

On our reunion weekend, the Richmond Times-Dispatch published a story about the daughter of classmate Ann Robey Gauding of Midlothian, Va., who owns a barge which travels a canal in France's Alsace-Lorraine. Two weeks later, my husband and I were barging in the Alsace and passed that same barge, the Esprit. It was our second large trip in France.

Louise Hall Moser of Richmond can claim a far-flung son, Thomas, who is a tenor with the Vienna State Opera. He returned home in September to present the opening recital in the 1987-88 concert series of the Seventh Street Christian Church (Disciples of Christ). Mom sings in the choir.

Next: some class achievements. Please keep me up-to-date.

Boo Kolkutian Cowles and Sidney Boo's sister Rose, W'43, and husband spent a week in Montevideo, Uruguay, visiting three first cousins they had never met. Boo's son Jim married in August. Boo and Sidney have recently been to Colorado, Kentucky, New Jersey, Richmond and Atlanta visiting relatives.

Alice Goodman has retired after 39 years as research assistant and laboratory specialist in cardiology at the Medical College of Va. She worked with numerous heart transplant patients following surgery and was instrumental in the establishment of several diagnostic labs.

Peggy Stone Cunningham and Jerry remain active on the sports scene with their miniature golf course in Richmond during the summers; while they winter in Fla., they are racing greyhounds.

Our sympathy goes to Faye Hines Kilpatrick whose mother died.

Millicent Hutcherson Taylor and Sim have relocated following Sim's retirement from the National Education Association and now live across the street from Doris Moore Ennis in Hampton, Va. Doris, Millicent and Sim have been to Los Angeles and Seattle, then on a cruise ship to Alaska, accompanied by Doris's son Dale, now a Richmond College student. Her other son is a manufacturer's representative in the Northwest and Canada.

Jean Brumsey Biscoe, Betty Hickerson Butterfield and I toured several of the James River plantations during Garden Week. We stopped for a short visit with Emily Smith Powers and Jack the next day as we returned to Richmond. We had an opportunity to visit Faye Hines Kilpatrick and Bob at their beautiful farm in Goodland County.

Start getting excited about our Reunion May 20-22, 1988. Tentative plans include a "gals only" dinner on Friday, a social with '48 men on Saturday preceding the alumni dance and a brunch on Sunday. Mark your calendars now!

Next news deadline is April 1, 1988. Bring us up-to-date prior to reunion!

Plans are underway for our 30th reunion. It sounds wonderful, so mark your calendars for the weekend of May 20, 1988.

Dot Wiltshire Butler began working full-time about a year ago. After 20 years of being a homemaker, she is a secretary for Ethyl Corp. Her "baby" is a high school senior.

Likewise, others of us in the Richmond area are working women, including:

Connie Booker Moe moved to Richmond in the summer of 1985 when husband Don retired from an army career. She began working part-time for the YMCA and her job expanded to full-time.

Kay Crawford Trimble is sculpting full-time. Her son Linc graduated from U.Va. and is working for Chubb Insurance in Philadelphia.

Katheryn Smith Ford teaches Latin at St. Christopher's and St. Catherine's Schools.

Susie Prillaman Wiltshire is head of the Lower School of St. Catherine's School. Her family had an exciting experience last summer. A former French pupil of Susie's invited them to the house-sit for three weeks in Paris. When not in Paris, daughter Beth works for the Richmond Public Library and husband Charlie is at the Collegiate Schools.

Susie sees Emily Damerl King and Genie Borum at church practices for CAFUR (friends and alumni of the University) and the Richmond Symphony Chorus. Genie works in research at the Medical College of Va.

Jean Hudgins Frederick works part-time as a travel agent, specializing in Bermuda, where she and husband Arnold have visited many times. Their son Ricky is studying medicine at the Medical College of Va.

Jane Stockman Thorpe is now executive director of alumni affairs of the University. Congratulations!

Sue Hudson Parsons has worked for the Va. Department of Education for six years. She is the coordinator of professional development and beginning teacher program.

Peggy Ware also works for the state of Virginia. She is a senior tax policy analyst.

Next issue we want to have news of you who live outside Richmond. Let me hear from you. Again, please mark your calendars for the Reunion!

Our 35th reunion, during the weekend of May 30, was an enjoyable occasion for the 25 of us who attended. We owe Betty Edmonds Dunn a great deal of thanks for carrying out the wishes of the planning committee which met in December '86 at the home of Diane Evans Glenn. Diane was unable to attend the reunion due to a previously scheduled trip to Europe. She has served us ably the past years not only as our president, but fund drive chair, for which we are doubly appreciative. Thank you, Diane!

On Saturday, we met for the Alumni Luncheon at the Robins Center. Those present were Nina Landolina Byrd and Ray, Claire Carleton, Joyce Bell Cody, Betty Edmonds Dunn and Elmer, Mary Ann Coates Edell, Charlotte Babb Edmonds and Tom, Nancy Clement Edmonds and John, Jane Ozlin Given and Fred, Susan Peters Hall, Eleanor Lee Persons and Bob, Frances McEver Hutcheson and Buddy, Marianne Shumate Jensen, Bertha Cosby King and Hobson, Jackie Gerson Lowenstein and Murray, Helen Want Miller and Stanley, Kathleen Cooke O'Brien, Marilyn McMurray Rishell, Joy Selby Scollon, Janie Tane Sease, Betty Hurt Shipp, Jeanne Hootman Taylor and Sarah Barlow Wright. Sarah was escorting her mother, Gladys Holleman Barlow, W'17, who was honored at the luncheon on the occasion of her 70th reunion.

After lunch we gathered for a brief business meeting to elect officers for the next five-year term, Sue Peters Hall presiding. We were pleased to have Dr. Frances Gregory, professor of history emerita, join us for part of this meeting. Our new officers are Jackie Gerson Lowenstein, president; Bertha Cosby King, alumnae fund

Polly Newman Smith and John Ran's son John Randolph Smith Jr. was married to Stacey Sternheimer in Richmond in the spring. Polly suffered the loss of her father some weeks later.

Jo Sue Leonard Simpson and Rem have bought a new summer home on the Miles River on Maryland's Eastern Shore, near Rem's hometown. Other Shore inhabitants, Barbara Bull Tull and Dick went to the Caribbean, Peru and Ecuador in the spring.

Winston, Edie Jackson Jones' husband, has begun building houses again, this time near Greensboro, N.C. They're enjoying being grandparents, as are Cos Washburn Barnes and Harry, who had a visit from their daughter and granddaughter in the summer while their son-in-law was sent to Korea by the Army.

Sue Perry Downing and Tom joined the Simpsons, Tulls, BARNeses, Joneses, my sister Dottie, her husband and me for a short visit at Smith Mountain Lake in July. I also had a chance to see Barbara Cronin Lovell, Nancy Lay, and Mary Jane Miller at Sebago Lake in Maine.

Needless to say, news will be welcome—from all of you.

Wonderous applause for everyone who participated in our Fifth-Year Reunion held in May. Everyone had a great time at the dance and at the cocktail party held at Dr. Bogal's home. Keep in mind that the Tenth-Year Reunion is just around the corner, in May 1992, and we want it to be "ten" times better than our fifth.

During the reunion weekend we did elect new class officers to serve for the next five years. They are: president, Terry Atkins; secretaries, Ruth Granger Travis and Margaret E. Wolfensberger; fund chairmen, Michelle Tait and Paige Browder. Many thanks go to the past officers who made reunion weekend so special: Jennifer Decker, Ruth Granger Travis, Renee Trump-Caudill, and Michelle Tait.

To catch up on some class news: Cathy A. Lessieu is a stockbroker for Johnson-Lane-Smith & Co. in Charlotte, N.C.; Margaret E. Wolfensberger is in her third year of practice as a trust and estate lawyer with Duane Morris & Heckscher in Philadelphia; Carolyn Nicander is a tax lawyer in Tampa, Fla.; and Ruth Granger Travis is the manager of Milby's Just Kids clothing store at the Shops of Willow Lane in Richmond.

Keep those cards and letters coming to either Margaret or me so that all the class news can be reported. Thanks!
