DAYTON, Ohio, January 19, 1970 --- The University of Dayton Art Gallery is currently featuring the work of Mrs. Lillian G. Lamden, a resident of Dayton, Ohio. The exhibit, being shown in the Kennedy Union, is a collection of works done in aluminum sculpture.

Mrs. Lamden, is presently working with the Living Arts Center as the first artist in residence. Noted for her unique sculpture techniques, Mrs. Lamden is known in the Midwest and on the East coast for her bronze sculpture created by the "lost-wax" process. She received much of her formal training at the Cleveland Art Institute, then spent many years exploring materials and developing her personal style.

Mrs. Lamden says of her work: "My new aluminum sculptures are to me an exciting search for new forms using new industrial materials. Perhaps they have to do with the outside surface and the inner world. I think they are a natural growth from my other work."
