DAYTON, Ohio, September 18, 1972 --- More than 30 years of expertise in the art of reading will go into the University of Dayton's annual short course, "Reading Improvement," this month when Dr. Collier Powell, Sr. and his son, Collier Jr. open the two-a-week sessions on September 26. Collier Sr. has been involved in reading techniques' programs for more than 20 years while his son has assisted him over the past 10 years. The program is conducted by UD's Special Sessions department.

These fall sessions --- they are also given in the summer sessions --- will start Tuesday, September 26, with the other sessions running on Thursdays. There will be 16 class meetings from 7 P.M. to 8:15 P.M. with the two men offering individualized instruction during the course periods.

The course is designed to improve one's comprehension and speed. The course costs $60.00.
