The College of Wooster Open Works

English Historical Library of Wallace Notestein

Special Collections

1645

The Kings Cabinet Opened: Or, Certain Packets of Secret Letters & Papers, Written with the Kings Own Hand, and Taken in His Cabinet at Nasby-Field, June 14. 1645. by Victorious SR. Thomas Fairfax Wherein Many Mysteries of State, Tending to the Justification of That Cause, for Which Sir Thomas Fairfax Joyned Battell That Memorable Day Are Clearly Laid Open; Together, with Some Annotations Thereupon. Published by Speciall Order of the Parliament

Charles I, King of England, 1600-1649

Parker, Henry, 1604-1652

Sadler, John, 1615-1674

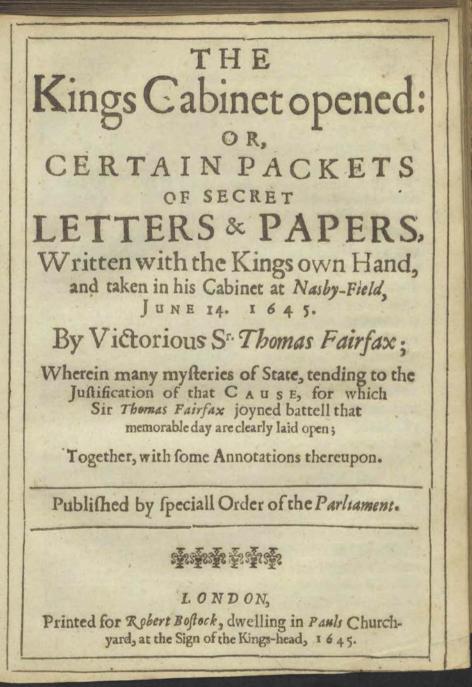

Follow this and additional works at: https://openworks.wooster.edu/notestein May, Thomas, 1595-1650

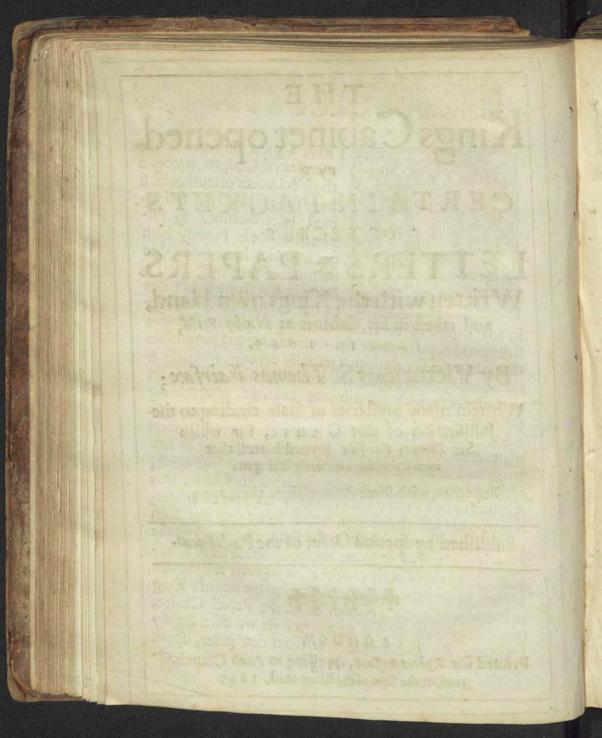

Recommended Citation

Charles I, King of England, 1600-1649; Parker, Henry, 1604-1652; Sadler, John, 1615-1674; and May, Thomas, 1595-1650, "The Kings Cabinet Opened: Or, Certain Packets of Secret Letters & Papers, Written with the Kings Own Hand, and Taken in His Cabinet at Nasby-Field, June 14. 1645. by Victorious SR. Thomas Fairfax Wherein Many Mysteries of State, Tending to the Justification of That Cause, for Which Sir Thomas Fairfax Joyned Battell That Memorable Day Are Clearly Laid Open; Together, with Some Annotations Thereupon. Published by Speciall Order of the Parliament" (1645). English Historical Library of Wallace Notestein. 50.

https://openworks.wooster.edu/notestein/50

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the Special Collections at Open Works, a service of The College of Wooster Libraries. It has been accepted for inclusion in English Historical Library of Wallace Notestein by an authorized administrator of Open Works. For more information, please contact openworks@wooster.edu.

were a great fin against the mercies of God, to conceale those evidences of truth, which hee fo graciously (and almost miraculously) by furprizall of these Papers, hath put into our hands; nor date we fmother this light under a Bushell, but freely hold it out to our feduced brethren, (for fo in the spirit of meeknesselabouring to reclaim them, we still speak) that they may see their errors, and return into the right way : For those that wilfully deviate, and make it their profession to oppose the truth, we think it below us, to revile them with opprobrious language, remembring the Apostle St. Jude, and that example which he gives us in his Epiftle. They may lee here in his privat Letters what affection the King beares to his people, what language and titles he bestowes upon his great Councell; which we return not again, but confider with forrow, that it comes from a Prince feduced out of his proper fphear; one that has left that feat in which he ought, and hath bound himselfe to fit, to fit (as the Pfalmift speaks) in the Chair of the fornfull; & to the ruine (almost) of three Kingdoms, hath walked in the counfels of the ungodly; and though in our tenents we annex no infallibity to the feat of a King in Parliament, as the Romanifis do to the Papall Chaire, (fince all men ar fubject to errour) yet we dare boldly fay, that no English King did ever from that place, speak dedestruction to his people, but fafety and honour ; nor any that abhorred that Seat and Councell, but did the contrary. Therefore, Reader, to come now to the prefent bufinesse of these Letters; thou art either a friend or enemy to our caule : If thou art well affected to that Caule of Liberty & Religion, which the two Parliaments of England and Scotland new maintain against a combination of all the Papifts in Europe almost, especially the bloody Tygers of Ireland, and some of the Prelaticall and Court Faction in England : thou wilt be abundantly fatisfied with these Let. ters here printed, and take notice therefrom, how the Court has been Caiolde, (thats the new authentick word now among ft our Cabalifficall adversaries) by the Papifts, and we the more beleeving fort of Protestants, by the Court. If thou art an enemy to Parliaments and Reformation, and made willfull in thy enmity beyond the help of miracles, or fuch revelations as these are, then tis to be expected, that thou wilt either deny these papers to have been written by the Kings own hand, or elfe that we make just conftructions and inferences out of them : Or laftly, thou wilt deny, though they be the Kings own, and beare fuch a fenfe as we underftand them in, yet that they are blameable, or unjustifiable against such rebels as we are. As to the first, know that the Parliament was never yet guilty of fuch forgery, the King yet in all the Letters of his, which have been hitherto intercepted, never objected any fuch thing, and we dare appeale to his own confcience now, knowing that he cannot difavow either his own hand writing, or the matters themfelves here written. All the Ciphers, Letters, all circumstances of time, and fact, and the very hand by which they are figned (fo generally known and now exposed to the view of all) will averte for us, that no fuch forgery could be poffible. As to our Comments and

NO NO NO NO NO

211-

Annotations, if there be not perfpicuity and modely in them, there is no common justice nor place for credit left amongft mankind : but indeed moft of the main circumfances want no illustration at all to the most vulgar capacities : and therefore we affirm nothing necessary to be beleeved, but what the printed papers will themselves utter in their own language : and yet for that which is not fo clearly warranted here, we have other Papers for their warrant, were they not too numerous, and vaft, and too much intermixed with other matter of no pertinence for publication at this time. Touching the last objection, if thou art a perfect malignant, and doft not flick to deny, that there is any thing in these letters unbeseeming a Prince, who professes himself Defender of the true Faith, a tender Father of his Countrey, and has been fo fanctimonioully ingaged with frequent, fpeciall vowes of affection, candour, fincerity, and conftancie to his particular protefant fubjects of England and Scotland: Then know, that thou art scarce worthy of any reply, or fatisfaction in this point. Our cause is now the same as it was when the King first took up Armes, and as it was when the King made most of these oathes and professions. Our three propositions concerning the abolition of Epifcopacy, the ferling the Militia of the three Kingdomes in good hands, by advice of Parliament, the vindication of the Irifh rebels, being all our main demands at the Treaty in February laft, and no other then the Propositions fent in June 1642. before any ftroke ftruck, will beare us witneffe that we have rather straitned then enlarged our complaints. But were our caufe altered, as it is not; or were we worfe rebels then formerly, as none can affirm which takes notice of our late fufferings, and our ftrange parience even now after the difcovery of these Papers, and our late extraordinary fuccesse

in

in the Field, yet fill this clandeftine proceeding againft us here, and condemning all that are in any degree Protestants at Oxford; as alfo granting a toleration of Idolatry to Papifts, indemnity to the murtherous Irifh, in a clofe trading way for meer particular advantage, cannot be defended by any, but by the falfest of men, Papists; or the falfest of Papifts, Jesuits. Hitherto the English have had commission to chaftife the Irifh, the Irifh have had the like to chaftife the English, both have spilt each others blood by the Kings warrant; yet as both have been in part owned, fo both have been in part difowned, and the King himfelfe has not appeared with an open face in the bufines, but now by Gods good providence the traverse Curtain is drawn, and the King writing to Ormond, and the Queen, what they muft not difclose, is prefented upon the stage. God grant that the drawing of this Curtain may bee as fatall to Popery, and all Antichriftian herefie here now, as the rending of the vaile was to the Jewish Ceremonies in Indea, at the expiration of our Saviour.

to new sine visition as it was when the Kill inne day entroyed ers countries nati arian tour firm in hore even any after the offi-

Oxford

Oxford Iam. 9.

(1)

Beare beart,
Ince my laß, which was by Talbat, the Scots Commiftioners have tent to defire me to fend a Commiffion to the generall. Affembly in Edinburgh, which I am refolved not to do; but to the end of making tome use of this occasion, by fending an honeit man to London, and that I may have the more time for the making a handiome negative, I have demanded a passeport for Philip Warmick, by whom to return my answer. I forgot in my former to tell thee, that Lentall the speaker brags, that Cardinall Masarin keeps a strict intelligence with him; though I will not sweare that Lentall fayes true, I am fure it is fit for thee to know. As for Sabrian, I am confident that either he or his Instructions are not right for him who is eternally thine.

Even now I am advertifed from London that there are three or four Lords, and eight Commons (bendes four Scotch Commiffioners) appointed to treat, and they have named Uxbridge for the place, though not yet the particular perfons. I am likewife newly ad ertified that General Goring profpers wel where he is, and fince Mundry laft hath taken 80. of the Rebels Horfe : and upon his advance they have quitted Peterfield and Condry.

POSTSCRIPT.

The fetling of Religion, and the Militia, are the first so be sreated on : and bee confident, that I will neither quit Episcopacy, nor that sword which God hath given into my bands.

> Copie to my wife 9. J.m. 1644. By P. A.

This is a true Copie, examined by Edm. Pride.sun.

Oxford

(2)) II

Xford, Sunday 30. March. Deare heart, fince my laft (which was but 3 dayes a go) there are no alterations hapned of moment, preparations rather then actions being yet our chief. eft bulineffe, in which we hope that we proceed faiter then the Rebels, whofe levies both of men and money (for certain) apes on very flowly; and I be eeveschey are much weaker then is thoughts even here at Oxford. For initance, A very honeit fervant of mine, and no tool, thewed me a propolition from one of the molt conliderable London Rebels, who will not let his name be known untill he have hope that his proposition will take effect, it is this, That fince the Treaty is fo broken offschat neither the rebels nor I can refume it without at least a feeming totall yeelding to the other. The Treaty flould be renewed upon thy motion, with a pre-affurance that the rebels will fubmit to reafon. The aniwer that I permitted my fervant to give, was, That thou art the much fittest perfon to be the means of fo happy & glorious a work as is the peace of this Kingdom; but that upon no terms thy name was to be prophaned, therefore he was to be faithed of the rebels willingneffe to yeeld to reasonabefore be would confent that any such intimation (bould be made to thee, and particularly concerning Religion and the Militia that nothing must be infifted upon but according to my former offers. This I beleeve will come to nothing, yet I cannot but advertife thee of any thing that comes to my knowledge of this confequence.

I must again tell thee, That most assuredly France will bee the best way for transportation of the D. of Lorraines Army, there being divers fit and safe places of landing for them upon the Western coasts, besides the Ports under my obedience, as Shelley neer Chichester and others, of which I will advertife thee when the time comes.

By my next I think to tell thee when I shall march into the Field, for which money is now his greatest want (I need say no more) who is eternally thine,

To my Wife 30. March. 1645. by Petit. This is a true Copie examined by Edmond Prideaux.

Oxforda

(3)

Oxford Thur (day 27. March.

TIT

DEar beart, I wrote to thee yelterday by Sakefield, the fubject of it was onely kindneffe to thee; which, I affure theefhall ever be vifible in all my actions: And now I come to Jermins account, given me by thy command, which is very cleare, hopefull in moft particulars, and abfolutely fatisfactory as concerning thy care & indultry. As for the main impediment in the D. of Lorrains bufineffe (which is his paffage) why may thou not procure him paffage through France? (if that of Holland be fluck at) it will much fecure and facilitate the Sea transportation in respect of landing on the Western Coaff, which I beleeve will be found the best, there being not fo many places to chufe on, any where elfe. But this an opinion, not a direction.

The generall face of my affairs me thinks begins to mend, the diffentions at London rather increating then ceating, Montroffe daily profpering, my Weltern bulineffe mending apace, and hopefull in all the reft. So that if I had reafonable fupplies of money and powder (not to exclude any other,) I am confident to be in a better condition this yeare, then I have been fince this rebellion began, and poffibly I may put faire for the whole, and fo enjoy thy company again, without which nothing can be a contentment unto me. And fo farewell dear heart.

I mend (if thou like it) to before Percies place on the M of N weaftle, to whom yet I am no wayes ingaged, nor with before I brow thy an forer. As for Jack Barclay, 1 do not remember that I gave thee any hope of making of him Mafter of the Wards: For Cottington had it long and before show went hence, and I intended is to Seer. Nich. if he then would have received it : and I am deceived if I did not tell thee of it.

I define thee to command Lo. Jer. to read to thee the Ds Letter, which goes herwith, and in it to mark well that part concerning the transfortation of the D. Lorrains Army.

To my Wife 27. M.sr. 1645. by P.A. This is a true Copy examined by Miles Corbet.

IIII

O'Xford, Sunday 4. May. Dear Heart, the Rebels new bratilh Generall hath refused to meddle with forrain Paffes, fo as B 2 yet yet I cannot dispatch Adrian May to thee, by the way of Lon don which if I cannot very thortly, I will fend him by the Welt, and now, if I could be affured of thy recovery, I would have but tew melancholy thoughts, for I thank God my Affairs begins to fmile upon me again, Wales being well fwept of the Rebels. Farrington having relieved it felf; and now being fecured by Gorings coming, my Nephues likewife having brought me a throng party of Horie and Foot, these Quarters are so free that I hope to be marching within three or foure dayes, and am till confident to have the flart of the Rebels this yeer : I am likewife very hopeful that my Son will (hortly be in the head of a good Army, for this Thave the cheerfull affurance of Culpeper and Hyde : Of late I have been much preffed to make Southanspton Matter of my Horie, not more for good will to him, as out offear that Hamilton might return to a capacity of recofening me; wherein if I had done no" thing, both jealoufie and difcontents were like to arife, wherefore I thought fit to put my Nephew Rupert in that place, which will both lave me charge, and flop other mens grumblings: I have now no more to fay, but praying for and impatiently expecting of good news from thee, I reft eternally thine.

Tomy wife 4 May 1645.

By Malin St. Ravy.

This is a true Copie examined by Edm. Prideaux.

V

Oxford. 2. Fan.

Dear Hearts

Aving decyphered thine which I received yesterday I was I much furprised to find thee, blame me for neglecting to write to thee, for indeed I have often complained for want, never milt any occasion of fending to thee; and I affure thee never any dispatch went from either of my Secretaries without one from me, when I knew of it.

"As for my calling those at London a Parliament, I shall re-"fer thee to Digby for particular latisfaction, this in generall; If " there had been but two (befides my Self) of my opinion, I had "not done it, and the Argument that prevailed with me, was, "shat the calling did no wayss acknowledge them, to be a Par-« liament

"liament, upon which condition and construction I did it and no "otherwayes, and accordingly it is regiltred in the Councell "books, with the Councels unanimous approbation; but thou "wilt find, that it was by misfortune, not neglect that thou haft " been no looner advertiled of it

(5)

As for the conclusion of thy Letter, it would much trouble me, if thou didk not know, thy delire granted before it was asked; yet I wonder not at it, fince that which may bear a bad constru-Etion, huch been prefented to thee in the ugliest form, not having received thet ne reation and meaning of it, the fear of fome fuch milchance made me the nore carefulls to give thee a full account by Tom Eliot, of the reasons of the D. o R. and E. of S. journey to London, which if it come foon enough I am confident will free thee from much trouble, but if those hait not the patience to forbear judging h. rhly of ny actions, before thou hearest the reafons of them, from me, thou may be often fubject to be doubly vext, firit with flanders, then with having given too much eare unto them. To conclude, effeeme me as thou findest me constant to those grounds thou lefts me withall, & so farewell Dear heart.

Copie to my wife 2 Jan. 1645: by P. A.

This is a true Copie examined by Edm. Prideaux-

VI

Xford 19. Feb. old stile. Dear heart, I cannot yet fend thee any certain word concerning the iffue of our Treaty, onely, the unreasonable stubbornnesse of the Rebels, gives daily leffe and leffe hopes, of any accommodation this way; wherefore I hope no rumors shall hinder thee from hastning all thou may, all poffible affiitance to me, and particularly that of the D. of Lorraines; concerning which I received yesterday, good news from Dr. G ffethat the P.of Orange will furnish Shipping for his transportation, and that the reft of his Negotiation goes hopefully on, by which, and many other wayes, I find thy affection fo accompanied with dexterity, as I know not whether (in their feverall kinds) to effeeme molt; but I will fay no more of this, left thou may think that I pretend to do this way, what is but possible to be done by the continued actions of my life; though I leave news to others, yet I cannot but tell thee, that even now I have received ved certain intelligence of a great defeat given to Are yle by Muntrafe; who upon furprise, totally routed those Rebels, killed 1500, upon the place. Yellerday I received thins of 27. Jan. by the Portugal Agent, the onely way (but expresses) I am confident on either to receive Letters from thee, or to fend them to thee; indeed Sabran fent me word yelterday, belides fome complements of the Inhargo of the rebels (bips in France (which I likewife put upon thy fcore of kind-Heffe) but is well enough content that the Portugall (hould be charged with thy difpatches. As for trufting the rebels either by going to London, or dif-banding my Army before a peace, do no wayes feare my hazarding to cheaply or foolifhly : for I effect the interest thou hast in me at a farre dearer rate, and pretend to have a little more wit (at least by the fympathy that is betwixt us) then to put my felfe into the reverence of perfidious rebels. So impatiently expecting the expresse thou halt promised me, I reft eternally thine

B 3

I can now affure thees that Hertogen the Irifb Agents is an arrant knave, which fhall be made manifest to thee by the first opportunity of Sending Pacquets.

To my Wife 19. Feb. 1645. by P. A.

This is a true Copy examined by Edmond Prideaux.

VII

Deare heart, the expectation of an expresse from thee (as I find by thine of the 4. Febr.) is very good newes to me, as likewise that thou art now well satisfied with my diligence in writing. As for our treaty, there is every day less hopes then other, that it will produce a peace. But I will absolutely promise thee, that if we have one, it shall be such as shall invite thy return. For I avow, that without thy company I can neither have peace nor comfort within my self. The limited dayes for treating, are now almost expired without the least agreement upon any one Article. Wherefore I have fent for enlargement of dayes, that the whole treaty may be laid open to the world. And I assure thee, that thou need st not doubt the issue of this treaty; for my Commissers are formed chosen (though I fay it) that they will neither be threatned nor diffusted (7) diffuted from the grounds I have given them; which (upon my word) is according to the little Note thou jo well remembers. And in this not onely their obediences, but their judgements concur. I confide in fome respects thou haft reason to bid me beware of going too foon to London: for indeed fome amongh us had a greater mind that way then was fit; of which perfwahon Percy is one of the chief, who is flortly like to fee thee, of whom having faid this, is enough to fhew thee how he is to be trutted, or beleeved by thee concerning our proceedings here. In floart, there is little or no appearance but that this Summer will be the bosteff for war of any that hath been yet : and be confident, that in making pesce, I fhall ever flow my confiancy in adhering to Bifbops, and all our friends, and not forget to put a floart period to this perpetual Parliament. But as thom loves me, let none perfor ade thee to flaken thine affiftance for him who is eternally shine, C. R.

Oxford 25. Feb. 1645. To my Wife 15. Feb. 1645. by P.A. This is a true Copie examined by Edmond Pride aux.

VIII

Ear heart, now is come to paffe what I fore-faw, the fruitleffe end (as to a prefent peace) of this treaty ; but I am full confident, that Ithall find very good effects of it : for belides that my Commiffioners have offered, to fay no more, full measured reason, and the rebels have fucken rigidly to their demands, which I dare lay had been too much, though they had taken me prifoner, to that affuredly the breach will light foully upon them. We have likewife at this time difcovered, and shall make it evidently appeare to the world, that the English Rebels, (whether baiely or ignorantly, will be no very great difference) have as much as in them lies, transmitted the command of Ireland from the Crown of England to the Scots, which (belides the reflection it will, have upon thefe rebels) will clearly fhew, that reformation of the Church is not the chief, much leffe the onely end of the Scotch Rebellion; but it being prelumption, & no pietie : foto trult to a good caufe, as not to use all larofull means to maintain its I bave thought of one means more to furnish thee with for my allift ances then bither to thou balt bad: It is that I give thee power to promile in my name (to whom thow thinks (most fit) that I will take any all the penall laws against the Roman Catholicks in England as foon as God (ball inable me to do it; for as by their means, or in their frours, I may have for powerfull affiftance as may deferve to great a favour, and enable me to do it. But if thou ask what I call that affiftance, Lanfiver, that when thou knowell what may be done for it, it . Will be easily feen, it is deferve to be fo effected. I need not tel thee what feerefy this bufines requires; yet this I wil fay, that this is the greateft point of confidence I can exprets to thee; for it is no thanks to me to truft thee in any thing elfe but in this which is the only thing of difference in opinion betwix us: And yet I know thom wilt make as good a bargain for me, even in this. I trufting thee, (though it concern religion) as if thou wert a proteftant, the vifible good of my affairs to much depending on it, I have to fully intruited this bearer Pooly, that I will not fay more to thee now, but that herewith I fend thee a new Cypher (affairing thee, that none hath or fhal have any copy of it but my felfe, to the end thou may tufe it, when thou fhalt find fit to write any thing which thou wilt judge worthy of thy pains to put in cypher, and to be decyphered by none but me; and fo likewife from him to thee, who is eternally thine.

To my wife the s. March 1645. by Poely.

This is a true Copie examined by Edm. Pridcaux.

The little that is here in Cypher is in that which I fent to thee by Pooly. Oxford, Wednesday 9 April. 1645. Dear Heart:

Hough it be an uncomfortable thing to write by a flow Meffenger, vet all occalions, of this (which is now the onely) way of converting with thee, is fo welcome to me as I shall be loath to loufe any; but expect neither news or publick bufines, from me, by this way of conveyance; yet judging thee by my felf even these nothings wil not be unwelcom to thee, though I should chide thee, which if I could I would do, for thy too fud. den taking Alarms; I pray thee confider, fince I love thee above all earthlthings,& that my contentment is unfeperably con'oyned with thine, muy not all my Actions tend to ferve and pleafe thee? If then knew what a lifelt lead, (I feak not in reflect of the common difractions) even in point of onve fati.n I which in my mind, is the chief joy or vexation of ones life, I date fay thom would pity, mes for some are too wile, others too foolife, some too bus e, others too referred, many fantastick. In a word when I know none better (I feak not now in relation to 'ufineffe)then 359.8. 270.55:5:7:67:18. 294:35:69: 16:54:6:38:1: 67: 68: 9: 66: those may eafily judge how my conversation pleaseth me. I confesse thy company hath perhaps made me in this, hard to be pleased, but not leffe to be pitied by thee, who art the only cure for this difeafe. The end of all is this, to defire thee to comfort me as often as thou can with thy letters, & doft not thou think, that to know particulars of thy health, & how thou Spendest the time, are pleasing subjects unto me, though thou hast no other bulineffe to write of? Beleeve me, fweet heart, thy kindneffe is as neceffary to comfort my heart, as thy affiltance is for my affairs.

To my Wife 9 April, 1645. by Binion. This is a true Copy examined by Miles Corbet. Oxford.

Oxford Thurfday 20. March.

Deare Heart :

TPon Saturday last I wrote to thee by Sabran (but this I beleeve may come as foone to thee) and I have received thine of the feventh upon Munday laft, which gave me great contentment both in prefent and expectation, (the quicke paffage being likewife a welcome circumstance) and yet I cannot but finde a fault of omiffion in most of thy latter Dispatches, there being nothing in them concerning thy health. For though I confesse, that in this no news is good news, yet I am not fo fatisfied without a more perfect affurance; & I hope thou wilt by fatisfying me confesse the justnesse of this my exception. I am now full fraught with expectation (I pray God fend me a good unlading) for I looke daily for fome blow of importance to be given about Taunton or Shrewsbury; and Iam confidently affured of a confiderable and fudden fupply of men from Ireland, likewife the refra-Gory Horfe (as the London Rebels calls them) may be reckoned in, for yet it is not knowne what fomenters they have, or whether they have none, if the latter, there is the more hope of gaining them to me; howfoever I doubt not, but if they fland out (as it is probable) good use may be made of them. Of this I beleeve to give thee a perfecter account next weeke, having fent to try their pulfes; Petit came yesterday, but he having at London thrust his Dispatches into the States Ambassadours Paquets I have not yet received them, and I would not ftay to lengthen this in answer of them, nor give thee halfe hopes of good Weft_ erne news, knowing of an opportunity for writing to thee with in these three or foure dayes; onely I congratulate with thee for the fafe arrivall of thy Tinne-adventure at Callis : and fo farewell fweet heart.

Thine of the 10. I have newly received, whereby I finde that thou much miltakes mee concerning Ir. for I defire now thing more then a Peace there, and never forbad thy commerce merse there ; onely I gave thee warning of fome Irifh in France, whom I then thought, and now know to be knaves. To my Wife 20. March 164: by P. A. This is a true Copy, examined by Edm. Prideaux.

> XT. Droit Wiche. Wednesday 14. May.

Deare beart :

Arching takes away the conveniency of fending my Letters fo fafe and quicke to thee, as when I was at Oxford, however I shall not faile to doe what I can to fend often to thee ; there is fo little news for the prefent as I wil leave that fubject for others, onely upon Saturday last I received a Dispatch from Montrofe, which affures me his condition to be fo good, that he bids me be confident that his Countrymen shall doe me no great harme this yeere ; and if I could lend him but 500. horfe, he would undertake to bring me 20000. men before the end of this Summer. For the generall state of my affaires we all here thinke to be very hopefull; this Army being of a good ftrength, well ordered, and increasing; my Somnes fuch that Fairfax will not be refused to be fought with, of which I hope thou wilt receive good fatisfaction from himfelfe. Its true that I cannot brag for fore of money, but a sharpe Sword alwaies hinders starving at least; and I beleeve the Rebels Coffers are not very full (and certainly we shall make as good a shift with empty purses as they) or they must have some greater defect; else their Leavies could not be fo backward as they are, for I affure thee that I have at this infant many more men in the Field then they. I am not very confident what their Northerne Forces are, but except they are much thronger then I am made beleeve. I may likewife include them.

Now I must make a complaint to thee of my Sonne Charles, which troubles me the more, that those mail fuffect I feeke by equivocating to hide the breach of my word, which I hate above all things, effectally to thee : It is this be bath fent to defire me, That Sir John Greenfield may be forome Gentleman of his Bedchamber, but already fo publikely ingaged in it, that the refufall would be a great differace both $0 [(11)] to my Somme and the young Gentleman, to whom it is not fit to give a just / diffaste, especially now, considering bis Fathers merits, his owne bopeful neffe, befides the great power that Family has in the West : Yet I have refuted the admitting of him untill I thall heare from thee. Wherfore I defire thee first to chide my Sonne for ingaging himselfe without one of our confents; then, not to refuse thy owne confent; and laftly, to beleeve that directly or indirectly I never knew of this while yesterday at the delivery of my Sonnes Letter. So farewell, Sweet heart, and God fend me good news from thee. Tomy Wife, May 14. 1645.

This is a true Copy, examined by Miles Corbett.

XII.

Deare Heart :

Know thy affection to me fo truly grounded, that thou wilt be I in as much (if not more) trouble to finde my reputation, as my life in danger: therefore leaft the falle found of my offering a Treaty to the Rebels upon base and unsafe termes should disturbe thy thoughts, I have thought it necessary (to affure thy minde from such rumours) to tell thee the wayes I have used to come to a Treaty, and upon what grounds. I shall first shew thee my grounds, to the end thou may the better understand and approve of my wayes; Then know (as a certaine truth) that all, even my party, are strangely impatient for peace, which obliged me fo much the more (at all occasions) to shew my reall intentions to peace; And likewife I amput in very good hope (fome holds it a certainty) that if I could come to a faire Treaty, the Ring-leading Rebels could not binder me from a good Peace : First, because their owne party are mosi weary of the War, and likewise for the great distractions which at this time most affiredly are amongst themselves, as Presbyterians against Independents in Religion, and Generall against Generall in point of command : Upon these grounds a Treaty being most desirable (not without bope of good successe) the most probable meanes to procure is was to be used, which might stand with bonour and safety, amongst the reft (for I will omit all those which are unquestionably councelable) the found of my returne to London was thought to have fo much force of popular Retorique in it, that upon it a Treaty would be had, or if refu-11:07 (ed, it would bring much prejudice to them, and advantagious to me; yet least fooligh or malicious people (bould interpret this as to proceed from , feare or folly, I have joyned conditions with the Proposition (without which this found will (ignific nothing) which thou wilt finde to be maft of the chiefe ingredients of an bonounable and fafe Peace. Then obferve, if a Treaty at London with Commiffioners for both fides may be had without it, it is not to be used; nor, in cafe they will treat with no body but my Selfe, fo that the conditions faves any afpertion of diffeonour, and the Treating at London the malignity which our factions foirits here may infuse into this Treaty upon this fubject. This I hope will fecure thee from the trouble which otherwise may be caused by false malicious rumours, and though I judg my felf fecure in thy thoughts, from fulpecting me guilty of any baseneffe, yet I held this account neceffary, to the end thou may make others know, as well as thy felfe, this certaine truth, That no danger of death or milery (which I thinke much worfe) shall make me do any thing unworthy of thy love. For the flate of my present affaires I referre thee to 92. concluding (as I did in my laft to thee) by conjuring thee, as thon lovest me, that no appearance of Peace (and now I adde) nor hopefull condition of mine, make thee neglect to hafte fuccour for him who is eternally thine.

C2

Copy to my Wife, Decemb. 1644. by Tom. Elliot. This is a true Copy, examined by Edm. Prideaux.

XIII.

Oxford, 13. March, Old-Style.

Deare Heart :

WW Hat I told thee the last weeke concerning a good parting with our Lords and Commons here, was on Munday last handfomly performed, and now if I doe any thing unhandfome or difadvantagious to my felfe or friends, in order to a Treaty, it will be meerly my owne fault, for I confelfe when I wrote last, I was in feare to have been prefied to make fome meane overtures to renew the Treaty, (knowing that there were great labouring to that purpose:) But now I promise thee, If it be renewed, (which I believe will not, without fome eminent good fuccesse onmy fide) it shall be to any

(13)

my honour and advantage, I being now as well freed from the place of baje and mutinous motions (that is to fay, our Mungrell Parliament here) as of the chiefe causers, for whom I may justly expect to be chidden by thee, for having suffered there to be vexed by them, Wilmot being already there, Percy on his way, and Suffex within few dales taking his journey to thee, but that, I know, thou careft not for a little trouble to free me from great inconveniences, yet I must sell thee, that if I knew not the perfect stediness of the would rather prove a change then an end of their villanies; and I cannot deny, but my confidence in thee, was some cause of this permissive trouble to thee.

I have received thine of the third of March, by which thou puts me in hope of affiftance of men and Money, and it is no little expression of thy love to me, that (because of my businesse) Feitivals are troublefome to thee, But I fee that Affemblies in no Countries are very agreeable to thee, and it may be done a purpose to make thee weary of their companies, and excuse me to tell thee in earnest, that it is no wonder, that meere Statesmen should defire to be rid of thee, therefore I defire thee to thinke whether it would not advantage thee much to make a perfonall friendship with the Queen Regent, (without flewing any diffruit of her Minifters, though not wholly truffing to them) & to flew her, that when her Regency comes out (and poffibly before) the may have need of her friends, fo that the thall but ferve her felfe by helping of thee; and to fay no more, but certainly, if this Rebellion had not begun to oppresse me when it did, a late great Queene had ended more glorious then fhe did. In the last place I defire thee, to give me a weekly account of thy health, for I feare leaft in that alone thou takeft not care enough to expresse thy kindnesse to him who is eternally thine.

The Northerne newes is rather better then what we first heard, for what by Sir Marmaduke Langdales, and Montroffes victories, Carlile and the rest of our Northerne Garrisons are relieved, and we hope for this year fecured, and besides all this, the Northern Horse are already returned and joyned with my Nephew Rapert.

To my wife, 13. March. 164%.

By P.A.

This a true Copy examined by Edm. Prideaux. Daintrey

C3

(14) XIIII.

Daintrey, Sunday 8. June.

Deare Heart:

Xford being free, I hope this will come fooner to thee then otherwife I could have expected, which makes me believe, that my good newes will not be very stale, which in short is this, Since the taking of Leicefter my marching downe hither to relieve Oxford made the Rebels raife their fiege before I could come near them, having had their Quarters once or twice beaten up by that Garrison, and loft foure hundred men at an affault before Boftoll-Houfe ; at first I thought they would have fought with me, being marched as far as Brackley, but are fince gone afide to Brickbill, fo as I believe they are weaker then they are thought to be; whether by their diffractions, (which are certainly very great, Fairfax and Browne having been at Cudgels, and his men and Cromovell's likewife at blowes together, where a Captain was flaine, or wasting their men, I will not fay : befides Goring hath given a great defeate to the Westerne Rebels, but I doe not yet know the particulars; wherefore I may (without being too much fanguine) affirm, that (fince this Rebellion) my affaires were never in fo faire. and hopefull a way, though among our felves we want not our own follies, which is needleffe, and I am fure tedious to tell thee. but fuch as I am confident shall do no harm nor much trouble me: Yet I must tell thee, that it is thy Letter by Fitz Williams, affuring me of thy perfect recovery with thy wonted kindnesse, which makes me capable of taking contentment in these good fucceffes; For as divers men propofes feverall recompences to themfelves for their pains and is azard in this Rebellion ; fo thy company is the onely reward I expett and wife for.

To my Wife 9. June 1645.

This is a true Copy, examined by Miles Corbett.

Deare

Deare Heart :

Unday last I received three Letters from thee; one a Duplicate of the 30. Decemb. another of the 6. Jan. & the last of the 14. Jan. and even now one Petit is come with a Duplicate of the laft ; wherein, as I infinitely joy in the expressions of thy confident love of me fo I must extreamly wonder, that any who pretend to be a friend to our Caufe, (for I believe thou wouldest not mention any information from the other fide) can invent fuch lies, that thou hast had ill offices done to me by any; or that thy care for my affiltance hath been the least fulpected, it being to far from truth, that the just contrary is true. For I protest to God I never heard thee spoken of, but with the greatest expressions of estimation for thy love to me, and particularly for thy diligent care for my affistance: But I am confident that it is a branch of that root of knavery which I am now digging at, and of this I have more then a bare fufpition : And indeed, if I were to finde fault with thee, it fhould be for not taking fo much care of thine own health as of my allilance, at least not giving me to often account of it as I defire ; these three last, making no mention of thy selfe. Now as for the Treaty (which begins this day,) I defire thee to be confident, that I shall never make a peace by abandoning my friends, nor fuch a one as will not fland with my honour and fafety; of which I will fay no more, becaufe, knowing thy love, I am fure thou must believe me, and make others likewife confident of me.

I fend thee herewith my directions to my Commiffioners, but how I came to make them my felf without any others Digby will tell thee, with all the newes, as well concerning Military as Cabalifticall matters. At this time I will fay no more, but that I fhall in all things, (only not anfwering for words) truly flew my felfe to be eternally thine.

The Portugall Agent hath made me two propositions, first, concerning the release of his Masters Brother, for which I shall have 50000. l. if I can procure his liberty from the King of Spaine; the other is for a marriage betwixt my Son Charles and his Masters eldest daughter : For the first I have freely undertaken to do what I can, and for the other, I will give fuch an Answer, as shall fignific nothing.

Idefire thee not to give too much credit to Sabrons Relations, nor much countenauce to the Irifh Agents in Paris, the particular reafons thou shalt have by Pooly, (whom I intend for my next Messenger.) In the last place I recommend to thee the care of Jersey and Gernsey, it being impossible for us here to do much, though we were rich, being weake at Sea.

To my wife, 30. Jan. 1645. By LEGGE. This is a true Copysex amined by Enm. PRIDBAUX.

Ormond ;

XVI.

He impoffibility of preferving my Protestant Subjects in Ire-I land, by a continuation of the war, having moved me to give you those powers and directions; Which I have formerly done for the concluding of a Peace there, and the fame growing daily much more evident, that alone were reafon enough for me, to enlarge your powers ; and to make my Commands in the point more pasitive. But besides these considerations, it being now manifest that the English Rebels have (as far as in them lyes) given the Command of Ireland to the Scots ; that their aime is at a totall subversion of Religion and Regall Power, and that nothing leffe will content them, or purchase peace bere. I thinke my felf bound in conficience, not to let flip the meanes of fetling that Kingdome (if it may be) fully under my obedience; nor to loofe that affiftance which I may hope from my Irilb Subjects, for fach foruples as in a leffe preffing condition might reasonably be fluck at by me : For their fatisfaction , I do therefore command you to conclude a Peace with the Irifh, whatever it coft, fo that my Protesiant Subjects there may bo secured, and my Regall authority preferved ; But for all this you are to make me the best bargaine you can, and not descover your inlargement of power till you needs must. And though I leave the managing of this great and necessary worke entirely to you, y et I cannot but tell you, that if the fuffenfion of Poinings AEt for fuch Bils as (ball be agreed upon between you there, and the prefent taking away of the Penall Laws against Papists, by a law will doe it : I shall not thinke it a bard bargaine; so that freely and vigorously they engage themselves in my affiftance against my Rebels of England and Scotland, for which no conditions can be too bard, not being against Conscience or Honour.

Copieto Ormond, 27. Febr. 1645.

A True Copy, Zouch Tate.

To Ormond. Oxford 16. Febr. 1644. OR MOND, I fhould wrong my owne fervice, and this Genuleman Sir Timethy Fetherfton, if I did not recommend him and his bufineffe to you; for the particulars of which I referr you to Digby: And now again I cannot but mention to you the neceffity of the haftening of the Irifh Peace, for which I hope you are already furnifhed by me, with materials fufficient: But in cafe (againft all expectation and reafon) Peace cannot be had upon those termes, you must not by any meanes fall to a new rupture with them, but continue the Ceffation (according to a Pollifeript in a Letter by Jack Barry (a copy of which Dispatch I herewith fend you.) So I reft.

Postfcript.

In cafe upon particular mens fancies, the Irifh Peace fhould not be procured, upon powers I have already given you, I have thought good to give you this further Order (which I hope will prove needleffe) to feek to renew the Ceffation for a year, for which you fhall promife the Irifh (if you can have it no cheaper) to joyn with them against the Scots and Inchequin; for I hope by that time my condition may be fuch, as the Irifh may be glad to accept leffe, or I be able to grant more.

A true copy Zouche Tate.

XVIII

To Ormond. Oxford 7. Ian. 1644.

ORMOND, upon the great rumours and expectations which are now of Peace, I think it neceffary to tell you the true flate of it, left miftaken reports from hence might trouble my affaires there.

• The Rebels here have agreed to Treat ; and moft affuredly, one • of the first and chiefe Articles they will infiss on, will be, to continue • the Irish Warre ; which is a point not Popular for me to break on ; of • which you are to make a double use : First, to hasten (with all possi-• ble diligence) the Peace there ; the timely conclusion of which will • take off that inconvenience which otherwayes I may be subject to, • by the refusal of that Article, upon any other reason. Secondly, by • dextrous conveying to the Irish, the danger there may be of their • totall and perpetuall exclusion from those favours I intend them, in • cafe 'cafe the Rebels here clap up a peace with me, upon reafonable terms, and only exclude them; which poffibly were not conncelable for me to refule, if the Irifh peace should be the only difference betwixt us, before it were perfected there: These I hope are fufficient grounds for you to perfwade the Irifh diligently to dispatch a peace

* upon reasonable termes, affuring them that you having once fully * engaged to them my word (in the conclusion of a peace) all the earth * shall not make me break it.

⁶ But not doubting of a peace, I must again remember you to ⁶ prefie the Irifh for their speedy affistance to me here, and their ⁶ friends in Scotland: My intertion being to draw from thence into ⁶ Wales (the peace once concluded) as many as I can of my Armed ⁶ Protestant subjects, and defire that the Irifh would fend as great a ⁶ body as they can to land about Cumberland, which will put those ⁸ Northern Counties in a brave condition ; wherefore you must take ⁶ fpeedy order to provide all the shipping you may, as well Dunkeirk ⁶ as Irifh Bottomes ; and remember that after March it will be most ⁶ difficult to transport mension Ireland to England, the Rebels being ⁶ masters of the Seas: So expecting a diligent and particular account ⁶ in answer to this Letter, I rest

Your most assured constant friend,

CHARLES R.

A truecopy. Zouche Tate,

XIX

To Ormond. 15. Decemb. 1644.

ORMOND, I am forry to finde by Colonell Barry the fad condition of your particular fortune, for which I cannot finde fo good and fpeedy remedy as the peace of Ireland, it being likewife to redreffe most necessary affaires here; wherefore I command you to dispatch it out of hand, for the doing of which I hope my publique Dispatch will give you sufficient Instruction and Power; yet I have shought it necessary for your more Encouragement in this necessary work, to make this addition with my own hand. As for Poinings Act I referre you to my other Letter: and for matter of Religion, though I have not found it fit to take publique notice of the paper which Brown (19)

Brown gave you, yet I must command you to give him my L. Muskery and Plunket particular thanks for it, alluting them that without it, there could have been no peace; and that Ricking to it, their Nation in generall and they in particulat shall have comfort in what they have done, and to shew that this is more then words, I doe hereby promife them, (and command you to (ee it done) that the Penall Statutes against Roman Catholiques shall not be put in execution, the Peace being made, and they remaining in their due obedience; and further, that when the Irish gives me that affistance which they have promifed, for the Suppression of this Rebellion, and I shall be restored to my Rights, then I will confent to the Repeale of them by a Law; but all those against Appeales to Rome, and Premnnire must stand, all this in Cypher you muft impart to none, but those three already named, and that with injunction of Aricteft fecrefie : fo againe recommending to your care the fpeedy dispatch of the peace of Ireland, and my neceffary fupply from thence, as I wrote to you in my last private letter, Ireft.

> Zouche Tate. A true Copy.

XX

The Earle of Glamorgans Infrations to me, to be presented to your Majesty.

Hat (God willing) by end of May, or beginning of Inne; he will land with 6000 Irila.

That the Gentlemen of the feverall Counties of Monmouth, Glamorgan, Brecknock, and Carmarthen, will very speedily for your Majefties fervice in fecuring these Parts, raile and arms foure thouland men.

That the Ships which thall bring over the Irifh, his Lordthip defignes to block up Milford Haven, at which time he doubts not to draw these Welch Forces into Pembrook-Asiere.

That to advance these his undertakings, he hath thirty thoufand pounds ready, ten thouland Muskets, two thouland cafe of Pittols, Pistols, eight hundred barrells of Powder; befides, his own Artillery, and is afcertained of thirty thousand pound more which will bee ready upon his return.

(20)

That he hath intelligence from his Ships, that divers Hollanders and Dunkinkers come in daily to him.

In Order to this fervice, he commanded mee humbly to put your Majefty in minde of his Commission, and that hee may in fitting time have fuch command in the'e Counties as may bee intable to his imployment, and conducing to the fervice in hand : Thelebeing Counties in which (if other defignes of Landing faile) he can landin : And that your Majefty will ferioufly confider the fervices he hath done you in compofing the distractions of the Country of Monmouth: And that you will bee pleafed to countenance Sir Thomas Lumiford, and gracioufly relieve the Countrey in fuch things as without prejudicing yout fervice may eafe them,

Concerning the County of Monmouth only.

That by his Lordships meanes (who hath now raised two Regiments himselfe;) Sir Thomas Lunsfords Forces will bee one thousand eight hundred foot, and seven hundred horse, which horse is intended to bee quartred in the Forrest of Deane in places of secure quartring, as Langet attempted to have been taken by Sir Iohn Winter, a place of great concernment, both for the reducing the Forrest, and securing Monmouth-schere.

That by his Lordships intervention and endeavours, your Majefty really sees he hath much quallified the sence of the grievances of the County, and moderated their complaints by subducting the intended Petition, and therefore hopes your Majefty will so specially commend their humble sure to Prince Rupert, as it may be successful.

That though the prayer of their Petition is to reduce the contribution to the proportion fet by the Parliament at Ox-ford, yet his Lordship hath so wrought, as these Petitioners have have under their hands obliged themfelves to continue the double payment for two Months more, and doubts not but in relation to the exigence of your Majeflies fervice to prevaile for further time.

- His humble fute is, that I may carry with me into the Countrey your Majefties Order, that the Forces of Sir Thomas Lundsford may not bee removed, but upon urgent occasion, untill his returne : And that only upon your Majefties or Prince Ruperts speciall Order, otherwise it will be a great obstruction and discouragement in raising or continuing the number proposed.
- That your Majefty will be pleafed in their favour, to write your Letter to Prince Rupert, and that the Country may have the honour to prefent it, to the end, they may be eafed of Free Quarter, exactions above their contribution, and unneceffary Garrifons, that Chepfton and *Mon*mouth may be the better flrengthned.
 - That Sir Thomas Lundsford may bee qualified with Authority, to protect them according to fuch order as the Prince fhall make,

March 21. 1644. These presented by your Loyall Subject Edward Bosdon.

This a true Copy. Zouche Tate.

XXI

Colonell Fitz-William humbly prayes and propounds as followeth.

That your facred Majefty will vouchfafe to prevail with his Majafty to condificend to the just demands of his Irish subjects the Confederate Catholikes in his Majesties Kingdome of Ireland, at least in private.

That upon the confideration thereof Colonell Fitz-William humbly propounds and undergoeth (with the approbation of D 2 Mr Hardegan now employed Agent for the faye Confederate Catholikes in France) to bring an Army of ten thousand men and more of his Majesties subjects in his kingdom of ireland, for his Majesties service, into England.

That Colonell Fitz-william undertakes for the fumme of ten thousand pound sterl, to leavy, ship, and arm, the said ten thoufand men, and so proportionably for more or lesser, and that the said money may be put into such hands as may be safe for his Majesty, as well as ready for the Colonell when it shal appear the faid Army shall be in a readiness to be transported into England.

That upon the landing the faid men, there shall be advanced to the Colonell one months pay for all the Army, according to the Muster, for the present support of the Army.

That Colonell Fuz william may bee Commander in Chiefe thereof, and difpole of all the Officers, and onely be commanded by his Majetty, his Highneffe the Prince of Wales, and Prince Rupert, and qualified with fuch Commiffions as hath been formerly granted to his Majetties Generalls, that have Commanded bodies apart from his Majetties own Anny, as the Marquiffe of Newcastle, the Earle of King flone, and others, hereby the better to enable him in the Leavies as well as in the generall conduct of the bufineffe; and that in respect the Parliament gives no quarter to his Majetties Irifh Subjects, therefore that the faid Forces shall not by any Order whatfofover be devided.

That the Colonell may be supplyed with a body of horse, of at least two thousand, to be ready at the place of landing.

That the Colonell may be provided with Amunition and Artikery, or with money requisite for him/elfe to provide neceffary proportions for to bring with him.

That the Army shall be paid as other Armies of his Majesties.

Having taken these Propositions into confideration, We have thought fit to testifie our approbation and agreement thereuntounder our figne Manuall affuring what hath been defired of us therein, shall be forthwith effectually endeavoured, and not doubting to the fatisfaction of the Confederate Cather likes of his Majetties Kingdom of Ireland, and to the faid Colo-

gell

nell Fitz-William, fo that wee may justly expect an agreeable compliance and performance accordingly from all parties in these feverall concernments.

This is a true Copy of the Original fent by her Majelly to the King, May 16.1645.

A: Lowly, Secretary to the right Honourable the Lord Iermine.

A true Copy. Zouche Tate.

XXII

Tomy Wife, 14. Jan. 1641. by Choquen.

Deare Heart,

Pooly came the $\frac{1}{2}$. Jan. to whole great diffatch, though for fome dayes I cannot give a full answer, I cannot but at this opportunity reply to fomething in thy Letter, not without relating to fomething of his Discourse.

As I confesse it a mil-fortune (but deny it a fault) thy not hearing oftner from me, fo excule me to deny that it can be of to ill confequence as thou mentions, if their affections were fo reall, as they make flew of to thee; for the difficulty of fending is known to all, and the numbers of each Letter will thew my diligence, and certainly there goes no great wit to finde out wayes of fending, wherefore if any be neglected more, then our wits are faulty; but to imagine that it can enter into the thought of any flefh living, that any body here fhould hide from thee what is defired, that every one should know (excuse me to fay it) is fuch a folly, that I shall not beleeve that any can shink it though he fay it : And for my affection to thee, it will not bee the miscarrying of a Letter or two that will call it in queftion ; but take heed that these discourses be not rather the effect of their wearineffe of thy company, then the true image of their thoughts; and of this is not the propofall of thy journey 80 to Ireland, apretty infrance ? For ferioufly of it felfe, I hold it one of the most extravagant propositions that I have heard, thy giving eare to it, being most alluredly only to expretle thy love to me, and not thy judgement in my affaires: As for the bufineffeit lelfe, (I meane the peace of Ireland) to fhew thee the care I have had of it, and the fruits I hope to receive from it : I have fent thee the last dispatches, I have sent concerning it, earnestly defiring thee to keep them to thy felfe, only thou maist in generall let the Q. Regent and Ministers there understand, that I have offered my Irish Subjects to good fatisfaction, that a peace will shortly ensue, which I really beleeve. But for Gods lake, let none know the particulars of my dispatches. I cannot but tell thee, that I am much beholding to the Portugal! Agent (and little to the French) it being by his meanes that I have fent thee all my Letters, (befides expresses) fince I came hither, though I expected moft from Sabran.

* I will not trouble thee with repetitions of Newes, Digbies * difpatch which I have feene being fo full, that I can adde no-* thing; yet I cannot but paraphrafe a little upon that which * he calls his fuperflitious observation: It is this, nothing can be * more evident, then that Straffords innocent blood hath beene * one of the great caufes of Gods juft judgements upon this Na-* tion by a furious civill warre, both fides hitherto being almost * equally punifhed as being in a manner equally guilty; but now * this laft crying blood, being totally theirs; I beleeve it is no pre-* fumption hereafter to hope that his hand of juftice must be hea-* vier upon them, and lighter upon us, looking now upon ous * Caufe, having paffed by our faults.

> This is a true Copy examined by Edmand Prideaux.

XXIII. Copy to the D. of R. R Ichmond, I thank you for the accompt you feat me by this Bearer, and have nothing of new to direct you in, but only to remember you that my going to Weff. is not to be mentioned but upon probable hopes of procuring a Treaty with Com. there or there abouts, and that you mention the fecurity I aske with my comming to Weft. And I hope I need not remember you to Cajole well the Independents and Scots; this Bearer will tell you how well our Welterne and Northerne Affociations goes on to whom I refer you for other things. I reft.

This a true Copy.

Zouche Tate. -

XXIV. Oxford Feb. 1644. Memorialls for Secretary Nicholas concerning the Treaty at Vxbridge.

First for Religion and Church government I will not goe one jot further then what is offered by you already.

2. And fo for the Militia more then what ye have allowed by me, but even in that you must observe that I must have free nomination of the full halfe; as if the totall number Scots and all be thirty, I will name fifteene; yet if they (I meane the English Rebels) will be so base as to admit of ten Scots to twenty English, I am contented to name five Scots and ten English, and fo proportionably to any number that shall be agreed upon.

3. As for gaining of particular perfons befides fecurity, I give you power to promife them rewards for performed fervices, not sparing to engage for places; fo they be not of great truft, or be taken away from honeft men in possession, but as much profit as you will : with this last you are only to acquaint Richmond, Southampton, Culpeper, and Hide.

This is a true Copy. Zouche Tate.

XXV. Directions for my Vxbridge Commissioners. First concerning Religion.

IN this the governement of the Church (as I suppose) will be the chiefe question wherein two things are to be considered, Confeience and Policy. For the first, I must declare unto you that Fcannot yeeld to the change of the government by Bilhops; not only as I fully concurre with the most generall opinion of Chriftians in all ages, as being the beft, but likewife I hold my felfe particularly bound by the Oath I took at my Coronation, not to alter the government of this Church from what I found it. And as for the Churches patrimony, I cannot fuffer any diminution or alienation of it, it being without peradventure facriledge, and likewife contrary to my Coronation Oath but whatfoever shall be offered, for rectifying of abuses if any hath crept in, or yet for the cafe of tender conferences (fo that it endamage not the foundation) I am content to heare, and will be ready to give a gracious aniwer thereunto : For the fecond, as the Kings duty is to protect the Church, fo it is the Churchesto affilt the King, in the maintenance of his just authority; wherefore my Predeceffors have been alwayes carefull (and efpecially fince the Reformation) to keep the dependency of the Clergy intirely upon the Crowne; without which it will fearcely fit fait upon the Kings head; therefore you must doe nothing to change or lessen thisneceffary dependency.

Next concerning the Militia.

After confcience, this is certainly the fittelt fubject for a Kings Quarrell; for without it the Kingly power is but a fhaddow ; and therefore upon no meanes to be quitted, but to be maintained according to the ancient knowne lawes of the Land : (yet because to attaine to this so much wished peace by all good men) it is in a manner neceffary that fufficient and reall fecurity be given for the performance of what shall be agreed upon. I permit you either by leaving ftrong Townes or other Military force into the Rebels possession (untill Articles be performed) to give such affurance for performance of conditions as you shall judge necessary for to conclude a peace : provided alwayes that ye take (at least) as great care by sufficient fecurity, that conditions be performed to me : And to make fure that the peace once setled, all things shall returne into their ancient Ghannels,

Thirdly for Ireland,

I sonfeffe, they have very specious popular Arguments to preffe this point, the gaining of no article more conducing to their ends then this: And I have as much reason both in honour and policy to take care how to answer this as any : all the world knows knowes the eminent inevitable neceffity which cauled me to make the Irifh Ceflation, and there remaine yet as firong reafon for the concluding of that peace; wherefore ye mult confent to nothing to hinder me therein, untill a clear way be flowne me how my Proteftant fubjects there may probably (at leaft) defend themfelves; and that I fhall have no more need to defend my confeience and Growne from the injuries of this rebellion, A true Copy. Zouch Tate.

(27)

As Vxbridge on Wednesday the 29. of Ianuarie, 1644. the Proteflation under written was unanimously consented unto, and taken by all his Majesties Commissioners appoynted to treat there, toncheing a well-grounded peace.

XXVI.

1 A. B. being one of the Commiffieners affigned by his Majefly for this prefent Treaty at Vxbridge, doe Proteft and promife in the fight of Aknighty God, that I will not difclose nor reveale unto any perfon or perfons whatfoever (who is not a Commiffioner) any matter or thing that fhall be fpoken of during the Treaty by any one, or more of his Majefties Commiffioners in any private debate amongft our felves, concerning the faid Treaty; fo as to name or deferibe directly or indirectly the perfon or perfons that fhall speak any such matter or thing, unlefte it be by the consent of all the faid Commissioners that shall be then living.

> Memorandum, That it is by all the said Commisfioners agreed that this shall not binde where any ten of the Commissioners shall agree to certifie his Majesty the number of Assenters or Dissenters, upon any particular result, in this Treaty, not maming or ac(cribing the persons.

This is a true Coppy, examined by Zouch Tate.

E 2

The

XXVII. The Q. to the K. from Yorke, March 30. 1644. Alfo April. AY deare heart; I need not tell you from whence this bearer comes ; onely I will tell you, that the Propositions which he brings you are good, but 260. I beleeve that it is not yet time to put them into execution : therefore finde fome meanes to fend them back, which may not discontent them (and doe not tell who gave you this advise. Sr. Hugh Cholmely is come with a Troop of horfe to kiffemy hands : the reft of his people heleft at Scarborrough, with a thip laden with Arms, which the thips of the Parliament had taken and brought thither, fo fhe is ours ; the Rebellshave quitted Tadcafter upon our fending forces to Whetherby, but they are returned with twelve hundred men : we fend more forces to drive them out, though those we have already at Whetherby are sufficient, but we feare left they have all their forces there about , and left they have fome defigne ; for they have quitted Selby and Cawood, the last of which they have burnt : Bet ween this and to morow night we thall know the iffue of this bufinefic; and I will fend you an expresse: I am more carefull to advertife you of what we doe, that you and we may finde meanes to have paffe-ports, to fend : and I wonder that upon the Ceffation you have not demanded that you might fend in fafety : this fnewes my love : I understand to day from London , that they will have no Ceffation, and that they Treat at the beginning of the two first Articles, which is of the Forts, Ships, and Ammunition, and afterwards of the disbanding of the Army : certainly, I with a peace more then any, and that with greater reafon : But I would the disbanding of the perpetuall Parliament, first : and certainly, the reft will be eafily after wards : I doe not fay this of my owne head alone : for generally both those who are for you and against you in this Countrey, with an end of it; and I am certaine, that if you doe demand it at the first, in case it be not granted, Hull is ours, and all Yorkefbire, which is a thing to confider of : and for my particular, if you make a peace and disband your Army, before there is an end to this perpetuall Parliament, I am abfolutely refolved to goe into France, not being willing to fall againe into the hands of those people, being well affured, that if the power remaine with them, that it will not be well for mein England; remember what I have written to you in three precedent Letters, and be more carefull of me then you have beene, or at the least diffemble it; to the end that no notice be taken of it. Adicu: the man haftens me, so that I can fay no more.

(28)

In

(29)

Yorke this 30. of March.

XXVIII.

His Letter should have gone by a man of Master Denedidate. who is gone, and all the beginning of this Letter was upon this fubject : and therefore by this man it fignifies nothing. but the end was to pleafing, that I doe not for beare to fend it to you : You now know by Elliot the iffue of the bulinefie of Todage fter, fince we had almost lost Scarborough, whilst Cholmly was here, Browne Buschell would have rendred it up to the Parliament: but Cholmley having had notice of it, is gone with our forces, and hath re-taken it, and hath defired to have a Lieutenant and forces of ours to put within it; for which we fhould take his; he hath also taken two Pinaces from Hotham, which brought 44. men to put within Scarborough, 10. Peeces of Canon, 4. Barrels of Powder, 4 of Bullet. This is all our newes; our Army marches to morrow to put an end to Fairfaxes Excellency. And I will make an end of this Letter, this third of April. I have had no newes of you fince Parfons,

A true Coppy.

P. W.

30. Merch. 3. April.

XXIX.

The Queen to the King from Bath. April. 21. 1644.

MY deare heart, Fred. Commalies will have told you all out woyage as farre as Adburie, and the flate of my health: fince my comming hither, I finde my felfe fo ill, as well in the ill reft that I have, as in the encreafe of my Rhume.

I hope that this dayes reft will doe mee good : I go to morrow to Bristoll, to tend you back the Carts ; many of them are already returned ; My Lord Dillon told me, not directly from you, though (30) be fayes you approve it ; that it was fit I Bould write a Letter to the Commissioners of Ireland to this effect, That they ought to defist from alfure them, that when you thall be in another condition then you are now, that you will give them consentment.

I thought it to be a matter of fo great engagement, that I dare not doe it without your command; therefore if it pleafe you that I fhould doe fo, fend me what you would have me write, that I may not doe more then what you appoynt: And alfo that it being your command, you may hold to that which I promife : for I fhould be very much grieved to write any thing which I would dent. I beleeve alfo, that to write to my Lord Muskery without the reft will be enough; for the Letter which I fhall write to miffioners, it fhall be by the Secretary. Farewell my deare heart, I cannot write any more, but that I am abfolutely

Yours.

A true Coppy.

Zouch Tate.

XXX. The Q. to the K. from Paris. Ianuary 1642.

Aris, Ianuary, I have received one of your Letters, dated from Marleborow of an old date, having received many others more fresh, to which I have made answer : I will fay nothing concerning this but only concerning the affair of (Gor.) If it be not donce it is time, being very feafonable at this time, which I did not believe before. I understand that the Commissioners are arrived at London ; I have nothing to fay, but that you have a care of your honour; and that if you have a peace, it may be fuch as may hold; and if it fall out otherwile, that you do: not abandon those who have served you, for fear they do forfake you in your need. Also I do not fee how you can be in fafety without a Regiment of Guard; for my felf I think I cannot be, seeing the malice web they have against me, and my Religion, of which I hope you will have a care of both ;but in my opinion Religion fhould be the laft thing upon which you should treat; For if you doe agree upon strictnesse against the Catholicks, it would discourage them to serve you : and if afterwards there shere should be no peace, you could never expect succours either from Ireland, or any other Catholick Prince, for they would believe you Would abandon them after you have served your selfe. I have dispatched an expression of Scotland, to Mountrosse, to know the condition he is in, and what there is to be done. This week I fend to Mr. of Lorrain and into Hold, 1 lose no time : if I had more of your newes, all would goe better. Adieu my dear heart.

6141

> A true Copy. Zonch Tate. My Wife ⁶/₂₇ Decem. Ian. 164⁵/₂.

XXXI. The 2. to the K. Paris, Ian. 27. 164⁴. Alfo March 13.

Aris lanuary ; 10 my deare heart, Tom. Elior two dayes finee hath brought me much joy, and forrow : the first, to know the good effate in which you are : the other, the fear I have that you goe to London. I cannot conceive where the wit was of those who gave you this counfell, unleffe it be to hazzard your perfon to fave theirs : but thanks be to God, to day I received one of yours by the Ambaffadour of Portugall dated in Ianuary, which comforted me much to fee that the Treaty shall be at Vxbridge : For the honour of God trult not your felfe in the hands of these people. And if you ever goe to London before the Parliament be ended, or without a good Army, you are loft. I underfand that the Propositions for the peace must begin by disbanding the Army; if you confent to this, you shall be loft, they having the whole power of the Militia, they have done and will doe what foever you will. I received yesterday Letters from the Duke of Lorraine, who fends me word if his fervice be agreeable to you, be will bring you ben thousandmen : Dr. Goffe whom I have fent into Holland Thall treat with him in his paffage upon this bufineffe; and I hope very speedily to fend good newes of this, as also of the money. Affare your file I will be wanting in nothing you shall defire; and that I will hazzard my life, that is, to dye by famine, rather then not to fend to you : fend me word alwayes by whom you receive my Letters, for I write both by the Ambaffadour of Portugal and the relident of France. Above all, have a care not to abandom those who have ferved you, as well the Bishops as the poor Catholicks. Adien, You will pardon me if I make use of another to write, not being able to doe it ; yet my felf in cyphers flew to ma

(32) my Nephew Rupert, that I intreat you to impart all that I write to you, to the end that he may know the reason why I write not so him; I know not how to fend great Packets.

My wife, 17, Ian. 1664 A true Coppy, Zouche Tate.

XXXII.

D Aris this 13 of March, My Dear heart, fince my laft, I have received one of your Letters marked 16. by which you fignis fie the receipt of my Letters by Pooly, which hath a little furprized me, feeming to me that you write as if I had in my Letter fomething which had displeased you : If that hath been, I am very innocent in my intention. I only did believe that it was neceffary you thould know all : there is one other thing in your Letter which troubles me much, where you would have me keep to my felf your dispatches, as if you believe that I should be capable to fhew them to any, only to Lord Ier. to uncypher them, my head not fuffering me to do it my felfe : but if it pleafe you I will doe it, and none in the world shall fee them ; be kinde to me or you kill me : I have already affliction enough to fear, which without you I could not doe, but your fervice furmounts all : farewell my deare heart ; behold the mark which you defire to have to know when I defire any thing in carnelt +, and I pray begin to remember what I spake to you concerning lack Barkly for Mafter of the Wards; I am not ingaged nor will not be for the places of L. Per, and others, doe you accordingly.

Meditanthe Hand the word I manine Flave tert into Mathematica and instruct of found all lines of the to have be trafe wind have forwed you, as well the Billiops as the poor Cathe licks, setting, Yea will pardon mail? make als of another to white, and being able coulde is; yet my fall in cychers fhaw er and the Thickey of Convention.

13 March 1644.

bus subb light my position might an out on 1810 an The Figel will here we one life, that is, to dyo by famine, rather class where the standard of a ward a tway of a whom when the start of the Newarke the 27. of Inne.

(33)

MY deare heart, I received just now your letter by my Lord Savile, who found me ready to goe away, staying but for one thing, for which you will well pardon 2. dayes ftopp, it is to have Hull and Lincolne, young Hotham having bin put in prifon by order of Parliament, is cleaped : and hath fent to 260. that he would calt himfelfe into his armes, and that Hull and Lincolne fould be rendred, he is gone to his Father, and 260. writes for your answer, fo that I thinke I shall goe hence Fryday or Satturday, and Ihall goe lye at Werton, and from thence to Afbby, where we will refolve what way to take, and I will ftay there a day, because that the march of the day be ore, will have bin somewhat great, and allo to know how the Enemy marches : all their forces of Nottingham, at prefent being gone to Leicester, and Darby, which makes us beleeve, that it is to intercept our paffage, affoon as we have refolved, I will fend you word : at this prefent I think it fitt to let you know the flate in which we march, and what I leave behind mee for the latety of Lincolneshire and Noteinghamsshire : I leave 2000, foote, and where withall to arme 500. more, 20. Companyes of Horfe, all this to be under (barles (avendif, whom the Gentlemen of the Cours try have defired me not to carry with me, against his will, for hee defired extreamely to goe, The Enemies have left within Nottingham 1000. I carry with me 3000. Foote, 30. Companyes of Horfe and Dragoones, 6. peeces of Cannon, and 2. Morters, Harry Germyn commands the forces which goe with mee, as Colonell of my Guarde, and Sr. Alexander Lefley the foote under him, and Gerard the Horfe, and Robin Legg the Artillery, and her thee Majeftie Generalifima, and extreamely diligent, with a 150 wagans of Baggage to governe, in cafe of Battell, have a care that no Troupe of Effex his Army incommodate us, for I hope that for the reft wee shall be ftrong enough, for at Nottingham we have had the experience, one of our Troupes having beaten 6. of theirs, and made them fly. I have received your Proclamation or Declaration, which I with had not bin made, being extreamly diladvantagious for you, for you thew too much fear, and do not what you had refolved upon Farewell my deare heart.

The Queen to the King, 27. June 1643.

Charl

(34) XXXIV. CHARLES Rex,

T is not unknowne both to the French King and his Mother, what unkindneffes and diftaftes have fallen betweene my wie and Mee, which hitherto I have borne with great patience, (as all the world knowes) ever expecting and hoping an amendment, knowing her to be but young, and perceiving it to be the ill craftie counfells of her fervants, for advanceing of their owne ends, rather then her owne inclination : for at my first meeting of her at Dover, I could not exfpect more Teltimonies of respect and love, then shee shewed, as to give one inflance, her first fuite to mee was, that fhee being young, and comeing to a ftrange Countrey, both by her yeares and ignorance of the cultomes of the place, might commit many errors, therefore that I would not be angry w th her for her faults of ignorance, before I had with my instructions learned her to efchew them, and defired mee in these cafes to use no third person, but to tell her my selfe, when I found shee did any thing amiffe, I both granted her requeft, and thanked her for it, but defired that fhee would use mee, as fhee had defired mee to use her, which thee willingly promifed mee, which promife thee never kept, for a little alter this, Madam St. George taking a diftaft because I would not let her ride with us in the Coach, when there was VVoemen of better quality to fill her room, claiming it as her due, (which in England we thinke a ltrange thing) fett my wife in fuch an humor of distaste against mee, as from that very houre to this, no man can fay that ever fhee used mee two dayes together, with fo much respect as I deferved of her, but by the contrary, has put fo many diffetpects on mee, as it were too long to fet downe all, fome I will relate : As I take it, it was at her first comming to Hampton Court, I fent fome of my Councell to her, with those Orders that were kept in the Queen my Mothers house, defiring fhee would command the Counte of Tilliers, that the fame might be kept in hers, her answer was, shee hoped that I would give her leave to order her house as shee lift her felfe, (Now if shee had said that face would speake with mee, not doubting to give mee fatilfaction in it, I could have found no fault with her, what foever face would have faid of this to my felfe, for I could only impute it to ignorance, but I could not imagine that fhee affronted me fo, as to refuse mee in fuch a thing publickly) after I heard this answer, I tooke a time (when I thought wee had both best leasure to dispute it) to tell her calmely both her fault in the publike denyall, as her miltakeing of the bufineffe it felfe, thee inftead of acknowledging her fault and miftaking, gave mee to ill an answer that I omitt, not to be tedious, the relation of that difcourfe, having to much of that nature hereafter to relate. Many little neglects I will not take the paines to fet downe, as her elchewing to be in my company, when I have any thing to fpeak to her, I mult meanes her fervant first, elfe I am fure to be denied, her neglect of the English Tongue, and of the Nation in generall, I will also omit the affront the did mee, before my going to this last unhappy affembly of Parliament, because there has been talke enough of that already, &c. the author of it is before you in France, to be fhort, omitting all other paffages, comming only to that which is most recent in memorie : I having made a commillion to make my wifes Joyncture &c.to affigne her those lands the is to live on, and it being brought to fuch a ripeneffe that it wanted but my confent to the particulars they had chosen : fhee takeing notice that it was now time to name the Officers for her Revenue, one night, when I was a bed, put a paper in my hand, telling mee it was a lift of those that fhee defired to be of her revenue, I tooke it, and faid I would read it next morning, but withall told her, that by agreement in France I had the nameing of them, fhe faid, there were both English and French in the note, I replyed, that those English I thought fitt to ferve her, I would confirme, but for the French, it was impossible for them to ferve her in that nature, then thee faid, all those in the paper had brevetts from her Mother, and her felfe, and that fhe could admit no other : Then I faid it was neither in her Mothers power, nor Hers, to admit any without my leave, & that if the flood u son that, whomfoever (hee recommended, fhould not come in ; then fhee badd me plainely take my lands to my felte, for if fhe had no power to put in whom the would in those places, thee would have neither Lands nor House of me. but bad me give her what I thought fitt in penfion ; I bad her then remember to whom fhee pake, and told her, that fhee ought not to use mee fo, then the fell into a paffionate difcourfe, how thee is miterable. in having no power to place fervants, and that bufineffes fucceeded the worte for her recommendation, which when I offered to answer, face would not fo much as heare mee; Then face went on, faying, the was not of that bale quality to be used fo ill, then I made her both hear. mee, and end that difcourfe, Thus having had fo long patience, with the diffurbance of that that fhould be one of my greatelt contentments I can no longer fuffer those that I know to be the cause and fomenters of these humors, to be about my wife any longer, which I mult doe if it were but for one action they made my wife doe, which is, to make her her goe to Tiburn in devorion, to pray, which action can have no greater invective made against it, then the relation. There'ore you shall tell my Brother the French King, as like wife his Mother, that this being an action of fo much necessity, I doubt not but he will be fatiffyed with it, etpec ally fince he hath done the like himfelfe, not flaying while he had fo much reason : And being an action that some may interpret to be of harshnesse to his Nation, I thought good to give him an accompt of it, becaufe that in all things I would preferve the good correspondency and Brotherly affection that is between us.

His Majesiyes instructions given mee at Wansteede, the 12'b of Iuly, 1626. figned 24. Atrue Copie, Zimbe Tale.

XXXV.

Oxford Ian: 1645.

Earcheart, Ir ceive it as a good Augure thus to begin this new ... yeere, having newly received thine of the 30. Decemb. which I sannos flay to decipher, for not loofing this opportunity, it likewife being a just excuse for this short accompt : This day I have dispatched Digbies Sec : fully relating the State of our affairs, therefore I shall exely now tell thee, that the Rebells are ingaged into an equall treat, without any of those disadvantages which might have beene apprehended when Tom. Elliot Went hence, and that the distractions of London were mover so greate, or so likely to bring good effect as now lastly that affifance was never more needfull, never fo likely as now to doe good to him

Copie to my wife, 1. Jun. 1644. by P. A. This is a true Copie examined by Miles Corbett.

XXXVI.

Oxford, thursday 24. Aprill.

I Arry lest my wife (bould not yet be fit for any busines, 1 wrise this so I you; not to excuse my paines but case hers, and that shee may know but not be troubled with my kindnes, I referr to your diferetion, how far so impart my letter to ber or any other busines, that is her health in the for St place be eared for, then my affaires : And now I must tell you that undoubtedly if you had not trusted to Digbic's sanguine Complexion (not so be robated from (ending good news) rom would not have found fault this with 37. and like wife I now begin the same with you: soe farewell. In your next let meknow particularly how my wife is which though it be not as I would baveit, yet the perfect knowledge, will binder mee to imagine ber wirse ihen she is, if well then every word will please mee. I have Commanied Digby to write to you freely conversing VVill MERTY, which I hold to be necessary as concerning Muntrolle busines.

2008/0

To the L. Jermin 24. Aprill, 1645. concerning France. A true Coppie, Zeushe Tate.

F 3

In the last place I will impose that upon you, that is not reasonable to expett from my wife, which is to give me a continuall accompt, what letters Spee receives from more and what milcarries or comes flowly, to which end take motice, that all my letters to her are numerarily marked on the top as

For matter fnewes and prefent State of my affaires I referre you to Digby only this in generall that if is shall please God to affilt us this yeare but halfe joe miraculoufly as bee did the last (my presen State compared with what it was this time twelv month) I am viry hopefull to Jee a jouful harvest before next Winter; nor do I thinke this in any humane probability, possible; except my wife can procure me considerable assistance both of men and money; of which I conceive litt's reason to dispaire, your last giving mee good hope, concerning Loraine, an i though I fay not, that, for the other, I have so good an Author as 196. yet I hope you will not much blame. my confidence, when 149. in hers the 10. of March, faies, jay une Af. faire affures que vous donnere 40000 Pistols que Je vous cusi envoyé with him for sending mistaken intelligence, for if hee frond strilly tye bimsfelfe to ceriaine truths in this kinde you must have nothing from him but my Proclamations or Ordinances from the pretended bouss, but rell me can you not distinguis betweene what we send you mpon certaintie and what mpon uncertaine reports without making an oath the marks of diffinition, and are you obliged to publish all the newes wee Sendyon : Scrioufly I thinke newes may be some times too good to be told: in the French Courte: and certainly there is as much desterity in publi-Shing of newes, as in matters which at first fight, may seeme of greater abficulty : for as I would not have them thinke that all affistance bestowed upon me were in wain foe I won id not have them beleeve that I needed noe helpe, lest they should underhand affist any Rebelli to keepe the ballance of her goe to Tiburn in devotion, to pray, which action can have no greater invective made against it, then the relation. Therefore you shal tell my Brother the French King, as like wife his Mother, that this being an action of fo much necessary, I doubt not but he will be fatiffyed with it, espec ally fince he hath done the like himselfe, not staying while he had fo much reason : And being an action that fome may interpret to be of harshnesse to his Nation, I thought good to give him an accompt of it, because that in all things I would preferve the good correspondency and Brotherly affection that is between us.

His Majesiyes instructions given mee at Wansteede, the 12b of Inly, 1626. figned 24. A true Copie, Zouche Tate.

XXXV.

Oxford Ian: 1645.

D Earcheart, Irceive it as a good Augure thus to begin this new. yeere, having newly received thine of the 30. Decemb. Which I cannot flay to decipher, for not loofing this opportunity, it likewife being a just excuse for this short accompt: This day I have dispatched Digbues Sec: sully relating the State of our affairs, therefore I shall excly now tell thee, that the Rebells are ingaged into an equall treat, mithout any of those disadvantages which might have beene apprehended when Tom. Elliot went hence, and that the distractions of London were never so greate, or so likely to bring good effect as now lastly that affifrance was never more needfull, never so likely as now to doe good to him who is eternally thime.

Copie to my wife, 1. Jan. 1644. by P. A. This is a true Copie examined by Miles Corbett.

XXXVI.

Oxford, thursday 24. Aprill.

H Arry lest my wife (hould not yet be fit for any busines, I write this to you; not to excuse my paines but ease hers, and that shee may know but not be troubled with my kindnes, I referr to your discretion, how far so impart my letter to her or any other busines, that so her bealth in the first place be eared for, then my affaires: And now I must tell you that and aubtedly if you had not trusted to Digbic's sanguine Complexion (not to be robated from sending good most) to would not have found fault

mish

(37) with him for fending miltaken intelligence, for if bee fromld firstly tye himsfelfe to ceriaine truths in this kinde you must have nothing from him but my Proclamations or Ordinances from the pretended boufes, but tell me can you not distinguis betweene what wee fend you upon certaintie and what upon uncertaine reports without making an oath the marke of distinction, and are you obliged to publish all the newes wee fend you: foriously I thinke news may be some times too good to be tolde in the French Courte: and certainly there is a smuch dexterity in publishing of news, as in matters Which at first fight, may seeme of greater aifficulty: for as I woula not have them thinke that all affistance bestowed upon me were in wain so I would not have them beleeve that I meded noe belpe, lest they should underhand affist any Rebelli to keepe the ballance of diffention amongs used.

For matter fnewes and present State of my affaires I referre you to Digby only this in generall that if is shall please God to affilt us this yeare but halfe joe miraculously as bee did the last (my present State compared with what it was this time twelve month) I am very hopefull to see a journal harvest before next Winter; nor do I thinke this in any humane probability, possible; except my wise can procure me considerable affissance both of menand money; of which I conceive little reason to dispaire, your last giving mee good hope, concerning Loraine, an ithough I say not, that, for the other, I have so good an Author as 196. yet I hope you will not much blame my confidence, when 149. in hers the 10. of March, saies, jay une Affaire assure que vous donnere 40000 Pistols que Je vous custi envoyé si J'custi lu mon navi r revenu avec l'estain.

In the last place I will impose that upon you, that is not reasonable to expect from my wife, which is to give me a continuall accompt, what letters shee receives from mee and what miscarries or comes slowly, to which end take notice, that all my letters to her are numerarily marked on the top as this with 37, and like wife I now begin the same with you: so farewell.

In your next let me know particularly how my wife is which though it be not as I would have it, yet the perfect knowledge, will hinder mee so imagine her worfe then she is, if well then every word will please mee. I have Comman led Digby to write to you freely conserving VVill Murry, which I hold to be necessary as concerning Muntrosse busines.

To the L. Fermin 24. Aprill, 1645. concerning France.

A true Coppie, Zeuste Tase,

Dears

F 3

XXXVII.

Earcheart, Since my last by Shoquen I have had no meanes of write) ting, and as listle new matter : that which is now, is the Progresse of the treaty, of which these encloses papers will give thee a full accompt : but if thou have them coner from London then mee, thou hast no reason to wonder, confidering the length and uncertainty of the way, I am forced to (and by , in respect of the other : for the businesse it selfe, I believe thom wilt approve of my choice of Treaters, and for my propositions, they differ nothing in substance (very little in words) from those which were last: Wherefore I need to say nothing of them, and for my instructions they are not yet made, but by the next I hope to fend them : Now upon the whole matter I d fire thee to how the Q and Ministers there, the improbability that this present Treaty should produce a peace, confidering the great strange difference (if not contrariesy) of grounds that are betwixt the Rebells propositions and mine, and that I cannot alter mine, nor will they ever theirs, untill they be out of hope to prevaile by force; which a little affi france, by thy meanes, will foon make them fo ; for I am confident, if ever I could put them to a defensive (which a reasonable some of money would doe) they would be cafily brought to reason. Concerning our interferings here at Oxford I d fire thee to fufpend thy judgment, (for I beleeve few but partiall relations Will come to thee) until I shall (end some whom I may trust by word of mouth; it being too much trouble to us bosh to fet them do Won in Paper.

> Copie to my wife. 22. Ian. 1644. This is a true Coppy examined by Miles Corbett.

XXXVIII.

D Earcheart, I never till now knew the good of ignorance, for I did not know the danger that thou wert in by the florme, before I had certaine affurance of thy happy efcape; wee having had a pleafing falle reporte, of thy fafe landing at Zlewcaftle which thine of the 19. Ian. to confirmed us in, that wee, at leaft were not undeceived of that hope, till wee knew certainely how great a danger thou haft par, of which I thall not be out of apprehension, untill I may have the happines of thy Company, for indeed I think it not the leaft of my miffortunes, that for my fake thou haft run fo much hazard; in which thou haft expressed for much love to mee that I confesse it is impossible to repay, by any thing I can doe, much leffe by words; but my heart being

(39) full of affection for thee, admiration of thee, and impatient paffion of gratitude to thee, I could not but fay fome thing , leaving the reft to bee read by thee, out of thine owne noble heart. The intercepting of mine to thee, of the 23 Feb. has bred great discourse in feverall perfons, and of feverall kinds as my faying I was perfecuted for places, is applied to all and only those that I there name to bee Sutors whereas the truth is : I meant thereby the importunity of others, whom at that time, I had not time to name af well as fome there mentioned, for I confeffe 174. and 133. are not guilty of that fault, fome finds fault as too much kindneffe to thee (thou may eafily voate from what constellation that comes) but I affure fuch that I want expression, not will, to doe it tenn times more to thee on all occasions, others prefie mee as being brought upon the Stage, but I answer that having profest to havethy advice it were a wrong to thee to doe any thing before I had it. As for our Treaty (leaving the particulars to this inclosed) I am confident theu wilt be content with it, as concerning my part in it, for all the Souldiers are welpleafed with what I have done, but expect no ceffation of Arms, for the lower house will have none without a disbanding and I will not difband till all bee agreed, laftly for our Military affaires, I thank God that here and in the Welt they profper well as for the North I referre thee to 226. 140. information to dayly expecting and praying for good news from thee. &c.

Copie to my Wife, 13. Feb. 1643.

Oxford 13. Feb. 1643.

a true Copie Zouche Tase.

XXXIX.

Instructions to Colonell Cookran to be parsued in his megotiation to the King of Denmarke.

Y Ou are to informe the King of Denmarke, that by his Majefties command, as to the nearest Allye of his Crowne, his Vncle, and whom he beleeves will not be unconcerned in his affaires, as well in Interests as affection, you are sent to give a particular accompt of the State of his Majesties affairs, to renew the ancient League and Amitie that hath been between the two Kingdomes, and Families Royall, and to reduce it to more eract particulars, such as might be usefull to the prefent preferst affaires of England, and all occurrences in the future of those of Denmarke.

(40)

That t'e prefent affair of your negotiation, is to demand an affiltance from his Matic. fuch a one as the prefent State of the affaires of England requires, against a dangerous combination of his Maties subjects, who have not only invaded his Matie in his particular rites, but have laid a defigue to diffelve the Monarchie and frame of Government, under pretences of Libertie and Religion, becoming a dangerous precedent to all the Monarchies of Christendome to be looked upon with successfue in their defigue.

That the nature of their proceedings hath been fuch as hath not admitted any forraigne treaty to be intereffed in fuppreffing their defigne, without giving them advantage of fcandalling his Maties intentions, and drawing away Vniverfally the hearts of his people, whom they had infinuated under pretence of reformation of particular abufes of Gevernment, and Minifters of Effate, to concurre generally with approbation of their proceedings, and in which (though the dangerous confequence and defigne were vifible to his Matie) a prefent complyance was neaeffary leaft any publique opposition on his Maties part, that mightsfeeme to defeate the greate expectations which they had raifed in the Commons in those plausible particulars might have occasioned a generall revolte, throughout the Kingdomes, great jealousies bein g difperfed and fomented amongst them of his Maties forraigne treaties and force, to be used to oppose and supprefie those their defires and the moovers therein.

Vpon the credit they had herewith built on the peoples opinions, they proceeded under pretence of Reformation of Religion to diffolve the Government of the Church, according to its conftitution in England a chiefe columne and fupport to that Monarchy and Crowne.

They laftly invaded his Matie in all the Prerogatives of his Crowne, and under pretence of ill Minifters and Councellours of Effate, whom they pretended to remoove endeavoured to inveft in themfelves in all times for the tuture the Domination of all Miniftries of Effate, and of his Maties family; withdrew all his revenues into their own hands, and to confirme themfelves in an abfolute power of difpofing his effate, entred upon poffeffing themfelves of the Militia of the Kingdome, his Navy and Magazins, in which his Matie. being forced to appeare in oppofition, dangerous tumults were raifed againft him, fo that hee was forced to forfake London, for prefervation of his Perfon, his Queene and Children. That fince for the fafety of the Queen he hath been forced to fend her into Holland, to retire himfelfe to the beft affected party of his Subjects, from whence by declarations fetting forth the finifter proceedings of that faction, difcovering their defignes of innovating the government, and falfifying the fcandals they had imputed to him, he hath had the advantage generally to undeceive his people, to draw to him univerfally the Nobility and Gentry of the Kingdom. But the other faction ftill keeping up fome intereft and credit with the Commons, in the defperate eftate they finde themfelves begin to make head against him, have appointed a General, and are leavying Forces to maintaine their party, committing divers acts of hostility, violence and rebellion.

(41)

That his Majestie having great encouragements given him by the exceeding numbers of Gentry and Noblemen that refort to him, is already advanced neere them with 6000. Horfe, and 10000. Foot.

That the States of Holland have condescended to give her Majestie the Queen a convoy of the greatest part of their Fleet now at Sea, for her returne into England.

That divers Forts and Counties upon his Majefties perfonall appearance, have declared for him, fo that his affaires at home grow daily into a better eftate, as he likewife expects and hopes, that all his neighbour Princes and Allies, will not looke upon fo dangerous a precedent to their own Crowns and Monarchies, without contributing to fuppreffe this fo pernitious a defigne, begun within his Kingdom.

That to give his Majesty the juster ground to reflect upon the dangerous confequences, in relation to his own interest, of their success. It hath been by them publikely moved in the Commons House long since, to interpose in the accommodation of the Dutch and to set out a Fleete, to take away his Customes of the Sound.

That they have fince imputed to his Mtic as a ground to fcandal him with his people, that he did negotiate, the introducing by his Uncle the King of Denmarke a forraigne power to fettle his affaires, and under that pretext have given large Commiffion, and particular inftractions to the Fleete, to vifite, fearch, and intercept all fuch Danifs thips, as they fhould meete, and to fight with, finke or deftroy, all fuch as fhould refift them, not permitting the fame, or to take and detaine them, having any Armes or Ammunition on board; according to which they have fearched, vifited, and detained divers, to the great prejudice and interruption of the Norway trade driven commonly in this Kingdome, in their owne bottomes : And that they did prepare force against others, whom they permitted not to water, nor any other accommodation being bound for the Weff-Indias, and put in by streffe of weather in the West of England.

That

That in purfumce of their great deligne of extirpating the Royall bloud, and Monarchie of England, they have endeavoured likewife to lay a great blemish upon his royall family, endeavouring to illegitimate all derived from his Sifter, at once to cut off the interest and pretentions of the whole Race, which their most detestable and fcandalous deligne they have purfued, examining witness, and conferring circumstances, and times to colour their pretensions in fo great a fault : and which as his facred Majestie of England in the true sence of honor of his Mother, doth abhor, and will punish, so he expects his concurrence, in vindicating a Sister of so happy memory, and by whom so neare an union, and continued league of amity, hath been produced between the Families and Kingdoms.

(42)

That the particulars in which his Majeftie doth defire his affiltance, are, in the loane, and raifing of men, money, armes, and Ships, all or fuch of them as may confift beft with the convenience of his own affaires : And of fuch in the first place as may be most requisite and a wanting to his Majefty.

That to fet his leavies on foot, and put him in a pofture to protect his fubjects in all places that adheare to him, and receive their contribution; 100000. li. will be neceffary for him, which his Majefty defires by way of loane. And for the reftitution of it, befides his Kingly word, and folemne engagement upon this treaty, he is contented of fuch his Crowne Jewels as are in his difpofure, to leave his royal pledge, if it fhall be defired.

The particulars of Armes that he defires, are 6000. Musquets, 1500. Horse-armes, and 20. pieces of field Artillery mounted.

Affiftance of men, he defires onely in Horfemen, and to know in what time they may be ready, and how many.

That the Holy Iland, or New-Caftle are defigned for the landing of the faid Horfe, and Magazin of the faid provifions, for reception likewife, and protection of fuch his Ships as he fhall thinke fit to employ for the countenance and fecurity of those his Subjects that shall trade upon thefe Coafts; and for alcertaining the correspondence, and intelligence between the two Kingdomes; in which the number is left to be proportioned as may beft fort and agree with his owne affaires. And for which the Holy Iland is conceived one of the aptest Harbours in his Majesties Dominions, being capeable of any Ships whatfoever, in a very great proportion, an excellent roade at the entrance, a ready out lett, and a ftrong fort under his Majesties command.

That in Lieu of this affiftance contributed by the King of Denmarke, his Majeftie will obliege himfelfe, and ratifie in expresse articles to reftore into the Magazines of Denmarke, a like proportion of armes and ammunition, to repay and defray the charges of the money lent, and leavies of Horse, and so soon as his affaires shall be settled, and himselfe in a condition to doe it upon all occasions to contribute the affiltance of his Fleet, in maintaining his right and Title to the Customes of the Sound, against all perfons whatfoever; and to ratifie the Treaty that was made last by Sir Thomas Roe, to enter into a league offensive and defensive, against intestine rebellions. In pursuance of which Treaty, while the negotiations and articles may be feverally perfected, his Majestie doth expect this first supply of moneys, and armes, prefent affaires, not admitting a delay in the fame.

(43)

That in cafe the King of Denmarke will lend money upon Jewells, there is in Holland a great Collar of Rubies, and another of Rubies and Pearke, that may be fent to him or delivered to his Agent here : Who may have order to pay the money here : or any other Jewells.

That there have beene in Difcourfes, feverall Propositions of Accomodation made by them to the King, to which the King hath at all times made more advances on his part, then in reason could have beene expected from him, and the difficulties have still rifen on theirs.

And that wheras his Majefty doth underftand, that a Perfon is addreffed to the K. of Denmarke from his Parliament, to infinuate mifunderftandings abroade with his Majefties Allies, as they have done at home among his People, his Majefty expects that he be neither received, nor permitted to remaine within his Dominions, to become an Intelligencer and Spye upon the Treaty and Negotiations betweene their Majeftyes, but that he be difmift and fent away fo foone as ever he fhall arrive.

Note this Paper concerning Cockram was not intercepted among ft the Kings Letters, but is etherwife attejted.

ANNOTATIONS.

Much use may be now made of these precedent Papers, & many things therein will appear very worthy of our Notice. For,

1. It is plaine, here, first, that the Kings Counfels are wholly managed by the Queen; though she be of the weaker sexe, borne an Alien, bred up in a contrary Religion, yet nothing great or small is transacted without her privity & confent. See Pap. 38. If the Prince make suite to bestow a place in his own Bedchamber upon a Gentleman of extraordinary merit. The King cannot grant it, to save his Sons reputation, already ingaged by promise, till He hath sent into France, and beg'd the Queens confent. See pap. 11.

2. The Queens Countels are as powerfull as commands. The King profeffes to preferre her health before the exigence, and importance of his owne publick affaires. See pap 14, &c.)

He

He avows constancy to her grounds and documents, See pap.5, &c.

(44)

3. The Queen appeares to have been as harfh, and imperious towards the King, pap. 34. as the is implacable to our Religion, Nation, and Government. She doth the offices of a Refident in France, to procure imbargoes of our Ships, to rayfe forreigne Forces against us, and in this she is restlesse to the neglect of her owne health, She vowes to die by famine, rather then to faile the King in luch like negotiations, See pap. 31. She confines not her agency to France, but follicits Lorrain for Men, the Prince of Orange for Shipping. She fends Armes for Scotland to Montros, speeds Colonell Fitz Williams his Commission for Ireland, pap 20.21. The Counfels also in England which the gives the King are of very pernitious confequence, thereby the Parliament must be disbanded, pap. 27. Treaties must be fuspected, great care must be had in them of Her, and Her Religion, pap. 39. Bishops and Catholicks must be specially provided for, pap.31. The King must be forwarned, that He cannot be fafe longer, then he defends all that have ferved Him, pap.31. That peace cannot be fafe to Him without a Regiment for his Guard (ala mode du France. pap. 30. She interpofes fo in the bufineffe of Ireland, that the King is not feene therein, nor oblieged to any thing immediately, pap.29.

4. The King doth yet in many things furpaffe the Queene for acts of hostility, and covering them over with deeper and darker fecrecy. He imployes Collonell Coockrayn to follicite the King of Denmarke, making not onely Papifts our enemies for religions lake, but all Princes though Protestants for Monarchies fake, rather then faile of ayde from thence, He stirres rumours about his Mothers chassive, He promifes to difobliege the Hollander in the business of the Sound; He pawness the Jewels of the Crowne, pap.39. He preffes the Queen beyond her own fiery propension, urges her to make personall Friendship with the Queen Regent, furnishes her with dextrous policies, and arguments to worke upon the Ministers of State

in

(45) in France. Of his owne accord, without intreaty He propoles to the Queene the taking away all penall Statutes against Reculants in England. Tistrue, He doth all by way of bargaine tor his owne particular advantage : but the Papift's conditions are better then ours, in regard that the Queen her felf is trufted with that merchandife, pap.8. He profitutes his pardon and grace to the Irifh Rebels, importuning Ormonde, to ule importunity to them, that they will accept of indemnity, and free ule of Popery, and defires nothing in lieu thereof, but that they will transport fixe thouland men into England, and some other supplies into Scotland. For this purpose He sends Posts after Pofts, and haftens the bufineffe the rather becaufe being in Treaty with the two Parliaments of England and Scotland, about profecution of the Irifh, He may be prevented therein. and preingaged not to confent, See pap. 16. 17,18,19. He onely excepts against Appeales to Rome, and Premunires. All other things He thinkes cheape enough for the Irifh. He must not now ftand upon fcruples (tis his owne word) all things not difagreeable to confcience and Honor are to be admitted, & fo to grant free exercife of idolatry, though abjurd formerly, to the most odious, flagitious murderers in the world, is but a scruple not difagreeable either to confeience or honour. To bargaine away our Acts of Parliament by fuch clandestine ingagements, as passe onely by papers, and dare not looke upon the light, efpecially fuch Acts as concerne our greateft interrefts, even those of Religion, supposes us to be flaves of the baseft aloye: and tis strange that the Irish and Papists should at all reft upon the ftrength of fuch affurances, when they fee Records and Parliament Rolls are of no vertue at all, either to the English, or Protestants, See pap. 16.17, 18, 19. He calls us a Parliament publikely, yet acknowledges us not a Parliament fecretly. He suppresses still his not acknowledgement, onely He enters it in the Councell Book at Oxford, and fo though it be fmother'd to us, whom it most concernes, yet tis registred for our enemies use, upon all occasions of advantage. This favour

3.3

we

(46) we found from the Councell at Oxford, that the Name, though not the Thing, thould be imparted to us : but even this was not willingly and freely allowed by the King, had but two of his Advifers fided with him, all the reft fhould have ballanced nothing at all in this cafe. This is a figne they fit there to great purpose, for though they are more worthy to be confulted with then Parliaments : yet their votes are but indifferent things, meere formalities, especially if there be any diffent at all amongst them, See pap. 5. He in shew feekes Treaties, and wins upon the People by that fhew, yet chufeth fuch Commiffioners, and bindes them up with fuch instructions, that all accommodation is impossible. His aime is to winne upon our Commissioners, and for this purpose gives authority to propole rewards and other allurements, pap. 24. gives aviloes to Caiole the Scots and Independents; as to the Duke of Richmond, pap. 23. preffes for forraigne Auxiliaries the more eagerly, pap. 12.35. hopes to cast the odium of the breaking of the Treaty upon our fide, pap. 1. 7, 12, 15, 25, 37. He feems more zealous for Bishops and Papists (cal'd his, and the Queens friends) then the Queene her felfe, and therefore affures her of his refolution therein, without any request of hers, pap.7. He doth not thinke fit to treat with the Rebels, onely by the Interposition of the Queen or of ormonde, but he sends particular thankes to Browne, Muskery, Plunket, pap. 19. He pretends fomctimes to have the hearts of the major and better part of his Protestant subjects firm to him in this caule, yet trusts none but Papists, and therefore is advised by the Queene, pap. 31. by no meanes to disband for this reason, because all the Militia is generally in the Parliaments hands. We lee what opinion the King hath of Wilmot, Percy, Suffex. We fee what opinion he hath of the Lords and Commons at Oxford, who have defcerted their trust here, out of confidence in him : the 13. paper here tells us plainely what use the King makes of them.

The King will declare nothing in favour of his Parliament, fo long as he can finde a party to maitaine him in this oppofi-

tion

(47) tion; nor performe any thing which he hath declared, fo long as he can finde a fufficient party to excuse him from st.

And indeede it is a fad confideration to thinke what unhappy use the King hath ever made of the obedience, and patient loyalty of this Nation; finding alwaies that he might without any opposition or danger at least deny their just liberties, laws, and the very use of Parliaments; or if some urgency, or hisown neceffities, or advantages had cauled him to call a Parliament he might afterwards with as little opposition, deny whatfoever he granted under his owne hand; as the Petition of Right obtained with some difficulty, and broken immediately after without any fcruple may fufficiently teftifie. The Pacification with Scotland was not affented to, until the English people shewed fome averfeneffe to that wicked warre ; and were loath any longer to fight for their owne flavery, nor was that Pacification any longer kept; then till a Party ftrong enough was found to maintaine the breach of it. But without other instances, this Parliament had beene happie, the King glorious, and bis people flourishing, if the King had found none to fide with him against all these; and it is strange that so long experience had not taught them more wifedome. But they are now justly rewarded, and if they will but view the Kings Letter dated March 13. 1644. There it will be apparent to them he calls those, who have deferted their trust in Parliament, and given up their fortunes and confciences to a compliance with his will, by the name of a bafe, mutinous, and mungrell Parliament, and despises them for retaining some little confcience to Religion, and this Parliament. Lords and Gentlemen, make the right use of this; and if you be not wicked enough to serve that purpose fully, to which you are defigned : endeavour to repent, and learne fo much goodneffe, as may bring you back to the right fide. There will shortly be no Medium left you : whatfoever you thought in the begining (as our charity may thinke you were deceived) you will finde at last, that unlesse you thinke and act the fame things, which those unhumane Irish Rebells, or the worst forraigne enemies to our Religion

(48) and State could with to fee done, you are no fit Instruments for that caufe, which you have unhappily chosen, unleffe you returne to the right way, you must goe as farre in the wrong one, as that will leade you. The Chronicles tell us that Henry Duke of Buckingham was deare to Richard the third, whiles he had fo much wickednesse as to further the deposing or difinheriting of his two Nephewes: but when he was not bad enough to consent to the murder of those Princes, he was rejected by that King, and afterwards beheaded, if you cannot learne how to goe through with wickedneffe : learne a better leffon to returne to goodneffe ; or elfe perhaps the wrong which you have done your Country in betraying her truft, and by confequence fhedding fo much innocent bloud, may be at last revenged upon you, by them, for whom you did it. The King, who defpifeth you by the name of Mungrells, as not altogether firme enough to his owne defigne, in another late letter to the Earle of Ormond, gives thankes to Muskery, Plunket, and Browne, the cheife Actors in that horrid Maffacre of Ireland. Which may teach the world what kind of men he confides truly in, and who they are that must reape the benefit of his Conquest, if God (for the finnes of our English Protestants) should permit it : if Muskery had beene at Oxford, the King had had one man more of his owne opinion, in not acknowledging the Parliament of England, for want of fuch, he is forced to complaine. And you may plainely fee what a difhonourable use is made of your persons there, as men meerely operis secundi, a number onely that ferve to give countenance and credit to the defigne of a dearer Partie, and to perfecute your Countrey, not for your owne behoofes. What is faid to you, may be faid to all, that are leade by you, to all those thousands which have followed the King as your Traine; for the fame opinions which render you now contemptible to the King : render you acceptable to the major part of Protestants, which fides with you, and did at first make the Kings Power fo confiderable, as it is. If there be any thing of Protestants, of English men, of men remayning in you, relume that, what loever it be, either acknowledge your selves such, as the King calls you (49)

under the Role, when he opens his breaft to the only partaker of his thoughts; or declare your felves fuch Patriots, fuch true fonnes of the Church as the King pretends you to be, when he fpreads his Oratory before the people. If we be Rebels at London, because we are not so fervile as you are, and you are mutineers at Oxford, becaule you are not fo fervile as the King would have you. Let us know by what definition either you or we are measured, and how we are diffinguisht, and let us fee that other third remaining party which the King ownes as his loyall faithfull party indeed. It concerns you to look both forward and backward, and having now taken the dimention of the Kings minde by his fecret Letters, turne about awhile and looke upon the fame in his publike Declarations. See if you can reconcile his former promifes to his prefent defignes; for as you have had fome reprefentation of the latter in the former part, you shall now be made Spectators and Judges of the former in this latter part. The King (according to Digbies superflitious observation) in his Letter of Jan. 14. laft, takes it as evident, that Straffords innocent blood has brought the judgement of this civill war equally upon both fides, both being equally guilty thereof. The Kingsmeaning is, That he and his fide was as guilty in permitting as the Parliament was in profecuting. But now for Canterbusies blood, that being totally put upon the Parliaments score, he doubts not but the hand of Justice will from henceforth totally lay the weight of this guilt upon the Parliaments fide. The truth is, Straffind and Camerbury were the chiefe firebrands of this war, the two ill Councellors that chiefly incenfed the King against the Scots, and endeavoured to subject all these three Kingdoms to a new arbitrary Government, & were justly executed for attempting that fubvertion of Law which the King has almost perfected fince. The King and Digby both adjudged Str ffrd worthy of death, yet not for Trealon, as it was charged, but not being able to fave his life, without using torce, and finding force very dangerous they left him to the blocke, against conficience, as is now alleadged. Canterbury remains in the fame cafe, and now remorfe of Conscience (or rather the old project of altering Law) fuggefts to the King. hTat if no reliftance be uled, Straffords prefident will caft

Canterbury, and Canterburies all the reft of the Confpirators, and fo the people will make good their ancient freedom ftill. Hereupon discontents break out, the King withdrawes into Scotland, during his abode there the Rebellion in Ireland, some attempts against Marquesse Hamilton and others in Scotland, and fome other dangerous machinations in England put us into ftrange terrors and apprehenfions. The King at his returne, Decemb. 2. 1641. complains of these Jealoulies, Frights, and Alarms, with this profession, I am to farre from repenting of any Act done this Sellion for the good of my people, that if it were to doe againe I would doe it, and will yet grant what elfe can be justly defired. He concludes with a recommendation of the bufinefic of Ireland, and finding the preparations for the same flow, againe on the 14. of Decemb. he is patheticall in quickning them thereunto. All this notwith-Randing the Parliament findes the old faction at Court to grow firong, and daily to attaine to more prevalence with the King, which befides other caufes of jealoufie makes them lay open the indifposition of the whole State in a plain and tharp Remonstrance, Decemb. 15. with the Remedies thereof proposed. The King as to the businesse of Religion answers, For preserving of the peace and safety of the Kingdome from the designes of a Popish Party, we have and will concur with all just defires of our people in a Parliamentary way. For Ireland wee thanke you for your care and cheerfull ingagement for the speedy suppression of that Rebellion, the glory of God in the Protestant Profession, the fafety of the Brittish there, our Honour, and abis Nations fo much depending thereupon, G.c. Your promife to apply your felves to fuch courses as may support our Royall eftate with honour and plenty at home, and with power and reputation abroad, is that which we have ever promifed our selfe, both from your loyalties and affections. Here are words that found nothing but grace, and here is a cleare teltimony from the Kings owne mouth, concerning the merit of this Nation to this day; But notwithstanding these promises and testimonies, the King discovers daily more and more regret for straffords execution, flicks clo-

fer

(50)

(51)

fer to the counfels of the fame faction, and inftead of hearkening to his Parliament, he commands a charge of Treafon to be framed against fix Members, the most eminent and active in both Houfes. Also upon the fourth of Jan. the King comes in perfon with a great Traine armed into the House, and miffing the five Members there, tels the reft that he must have them wherefoever he findes them. Here was the fatall commencement of the war, for the next day the House declares, that they cannot fit in fafety any longer at Westminster, and therefore they adjourne for some daies, and retire into the City. Dec. 31. they had petitioned for a Guard out of the City, under command of the Kings Lord Chamberlaine the Earle of Effex, which was denyed, vet with these expressions: We are ignorant of the grounds of your apprehensions, but protest before Almighty God, had we any knowledge, or beliefe of the least designe in any of violence, either formerly, or at this time against you, we would purfue them to condigne punishment, with the same severity and detestation as we would the greatest attempt upon our Crowne ; and we do ingage folemnly the word of a King , that the security of everyone of you from violence, is, and shall be ever as much our cure, as the prefervation of us and our Children. These words were fweetly tempered, but wonne no beliefe, nor could over-power contrary actions, wherefore the Major, Aldermen, and Common-Councell of London, feeing nothing but fymptomes of war in the Court, frame a Petition, praying the King that the Tower of Lindon may be put into the hands of perfons of truft, that by removall of doubtfull and unknowne perfons from about Whitehall and Westminster, a knowne and approved guard may be appointed for the fafety of the Parliament, and that the accused Members may not be reftrayned or proceeded against, otherwise then according to the Priviledges of Parliament. The King grants nothing, but anfwers, That his reception of such an unufuall request, is a sufficient instance instance of the singular cstimation he hath of the good affe-Gions of the City, which he believes in gratitude will never be wanting to his just commands and service. Hitherto the King speaks nothing, but in justification both of the Cities, Parliaments, and Peoples loyalty. The tumults about Whitehall, Orc. amounted to no war, are imputed by the King to the Rabble, and by us to the Kings Partysthe Parliament is acquitted except the fixe Members, and the profecution of them alfo is after declined by the King, yet the King departs from the City, as unfafe, feeing plainly it could not be everted from the Parliament. Upon the 20. of Jan. the King fends a Meffage to the Parliament, to state the differences on both fides, promifing that when they are digested into a body, fit to be judged of, it shall appeare what he will do. In anfwer hereunto, the Commons Houfe (the Lords refufing to joine) onely petition for the raifing up unto them and the State a fure ground of fafety and confidence, that the Tower of London and the Militia of the Kingdome may be put into fuch perfons hands as they fhould recommend. The King replies; That the Militia by Law is subject to no command but his owne, which he will referve to himselfe, as a principall and inseparable flower of his Crowne, profess to take care of Peace, and the rights of the Subject, equally with his life, or the lives of his dearest Children : He further also conjures them by all acts of duty and favour received, by hopes of future mutuall happineffe, by their love of Religion, the Peace both of this Kingdome, and Ireland not to be transported with feares and jealousies. The Parliament could not believe themfelves fecured by thefe professions or affeverations, & the King would not understand, that the feiling the Militia at this time in confiding hands, to prevent civill war, was any other, then the taking the Crowne from his head. Hine ille lacbryme ; the King nevertheleffe perfifts to declare his abhorrence of the Irifh Rebellion, frequently inciting the Parliament to fend fuccors. He allo ftrangely abjures any privity to plots or defignes against the:

(52)

(53)the Lawes, &c. and further makes frict Proclamation, Marab 16. for putting Lawes in execution against the Papists. The Parliament feeing caufe to fuspect that the King and Queene did ftill favour Digby & others flying from the justice of Parliament, and appearing to be incendiaries by Letters intercepted, knowing also that the Queen was going into Holland to pawne the jewels of the Crowne for Armes; and having divers other grounds of further apprehenfions, againe Petition concerning the fetling of the Militia, and the Kings returne, but are denyed in both. Thoughts of Peace are now laid afide, and Hull being a ftrong Towne; and a Magazine of Armes, as also Newsafile being the publike Magazine of fuell, and a rich place, are looked upon with follicitous eyes; but as the Parliament prevents the King in Hull, the King prevents the Parliament in Newcalle : Yet the war being to far advanced, is fcarcely avowed on either fide, nor is it agreed which part was put to the defensive, and therefore on the 2. of june, 1642. before any blood shed, another aflay is made for Peace, and the Parliaments Caufe stated fully in 19. Propositions; are dispatched to the King; the maine things defired were Reformation in Church Government, that power military and civill might be put into confiding hands; That justice of Parliament might paffe upon Delinguents, but the Aniwer returned is, That if theje things were granted the King (hould remaine but the out fide, but the picture, but the figne of a King. This, though it was the Trumpet of war and the found of defiance in effect, yet was not to owned, for still the King fajes, He imends not to fixe any difloyall defigne upon both or either House of Parliament, be is rather most confident of the layalty, good affections, and integrity of that great bodies good intentions : but the malignity of the defigue (he faies) hath proceeded from the subtill informations, mischievous practices, and evill Councels of ambitious turbulent fpirits, not without a ftrong influence upon the very actions of both Houfer. This was the utmoft charge of Treafon, that could be then brought again & the Parliament, and the Propositions of the Parliament treated lately at Uxbridge, in Febr. 1644. being no other in effect, then these of June, 1642. this inference may be truly made, that the King hath no caule to looke upon us now, otherwife then as he did then ; and if he have varied fince from those Vows and Affeverations which he made then, the blame will not remaine on this fide, but on his; fo that the very calling to minde what hath been faid by the King, will be now fufficient for our purpose.

H3

not

1. Wherefore, as to the waging of warre at all, the third of June 1642 the King in his Declaration to the Freeholders of I orkesbire, renounces any intention of warre, his words are, To the end this prefent posture, wherein we meet, (hould not affright you with the distempers of the times, we will you to looke into the composition and confirmiton of our Guard, and you will finde it fo far from the face or fear of war, that it ferves to fecure you as well as us from it, &c. Allo June 16. in his Declaration at I ork, he uleth these words; Wee againe, in the prefence of Alwsighty God our Maker and Redeemer, affire the world, we have no more thought of making war against our Parliament, then against our owne Children. To the lame purpose he made all his Lords figne a teftimoniall with their own hands, in affirmance of his profession. Tis true, after wards when he tooke the field with his increased Guard and became the Affaylant at Hull, (having also poffeft himfelfe of Newcastle) he was driven to fave himfelf by diffinctions, for he had not difclaymed all war in generall, but all invafive war, and if the fiege of Hull had fome fhew of invation, yet indeed it was but in order to his defence, and this was a subtility that all the subligning Lords and others, it is thought, had not forescene till now.

2. As to the waging war against the Parliament, June 16. The King disclaimes all thoughts of war against his Parliament, and in July, after the date of the Earle of Effer his Commiftion, he abhors the like, Desiring no longer the protection and bleffing of Almighty God upon himselfe and his posterity, then he and they (hall solemnly observe the Lawes in defence of Parliaments. Also on Aug. 12. after He acknowledges that the King and Parliament are like the twins of Hyppocrates, which must laugh and cryslive and dye together. So this guides us to more diffinctions, that the King may defend himfelfe against a Parliament, yet not fight against it, or he may aflaile a Malignant party in Parliament, yet not touch the Parliament it selfe: These distinctions hold good on that fide, not on this : but by what diffinction will the King put a fhort period to this perpetuall Parliament without violence? or how can he deny it the name of a Parliament without hofillity? Examine the Letters further about this.

(55)

3 As to the waging of War by Papifts. The King August 4. when the Earle of Effex his Army was in forming in his Speech to the Gentry of Yorkfhire avers, That be had taken order that the power of the Sword fould not come into the bunds of Papifts. And Aug. 10. He makes firiet Proclamation, That all Papifts prefuming to lift themselves under bim as Officers or Souldiers should be punished, and a way by Oath was preforibed for diferimination of them. Alfo Aug. 29. The King gives Infructions to his Commissioners for Arrays to difarm all Papisis. So Octob. 27. after the battell at Edge-hill the King thinks it worth his excuse, That he had some few Popish Commanders in his Army, taken in of great necessity, he concludes thus ; We shall nover forget our feverall Oathes in our feverall Declarations, we are too much a Christian to believe that we can breake those Promises and avoid the justice of Heaven. Tis true, afterwards a new diffinction came to light, for upon a Petition from the Lancashire Papifts, the King did avow, That Papifts were by Lam probibited Armes in time of Peace, not in time of Warre ; and therefore be did not onely authorize but require them to arme them felves, fervants, tenants, and use the fame Armes, Oc. This diffinction bore date long after the war begun, but that was want of invention only.

4. As to managing the Warre by Irifh Papifts, be bad never before named them but with a bleeding beart : His words once were, We hope the lamentable condition of Ireland will invite us to a faire intelligence and unity, that we may with one beart intend the relieving and recovering of that unbappy Kingdome, where these barbarous Rebels practife fuch inhumane and unheard of Outrages upon our miferable people, that no Christian eare can beare mithout borour, nor fory parallel. At an other time thus : We conjure all our Subjects, by all the bonds of love, duty, or obedience that are precious to good men to joyne with us for recovery of that Kingdome. In July, at the Siege of Hull. he conjures both Houfes as they will answer the contrary to Almighty God, to unite their force for recovery of Ireland. In October, from Ayno, in his Proclamation, he excuses the taking of Clothes and some Draughthories fent for Ireland, as done of necessity and against his will. In December the King answers fome Irith Protestants thus : Since the beginning of that monftrous Rebellion I have had no greater forrow then for the bleeding condition of that Kingdome. Nay, fince the Treaty at Uxbridge, the King in publike washes his hands of all countenance given to the Rebels, and turnes the blame upon the Parliament, though in private he had beene (as it were) a fuiter to them for Peace, and some assistance from them by private Letters Letters to Ormund. Quere how this may be reconcileable, &c. 5 As to the granting of a toleration. The King March 9. 1641, in answer to the Parliaments Declaration, uses these words, Unr faithfull and zealous affection to the true Protestant Profession, and our refolution is to concurre with our Parliament in any possible course for the propagation of it and suppression of Popery. In April 1642. he calls God to witneffe, with this affurance, That he will never confent (upon what foever pretence) to a toleration of the Popifs Profession, or abolition of Lans now in force against Recufants. Also April 25. He has no other end but to defend the true Protestant Profession, Gec. God so deale with us, as we continue in thefe Professions. So in his Speech in the head of his Army, Sept. 19. So in his Proclamation of pardon to London, October 29. All the professions we have made in our severall Declarations for Suppression of Popery and maintenance of Religion, the Laws, Grc. Shall be as inviolably observed by Us, as we expect a bleffing from Almighty God, and obedience from our Subjects. Quere then how this may be confiftent with taking away Statutes in England and Ireland made for fuppreision of Popery, and that by the Armes of Papifts.

6 As to the bringing in of forraign Force, The King March 9. 1641. in his Declaration from Newmarket, fatth, Whatfever you are advertifed from Rome, Venice, Paris, of the Popes Nuncio's foliciting, Spain, France, &c. for forraign Aids, We are confident no fober honeft man can beloeve Us fo desperate or sencelesse to entertaine such designes as would not onely bury this our Kingdome in fudden destruction and ruine, but our Name and Posterity in perpetuall scorne and infamy. Also March 26. 1642. about folicitation fuspected of the King of Denmarke, his words are, We have neither fo ill an opinion of our owne merits, or the affections of our Subjects, as to thinke our felfe in need of forraigne Force. Allo August. 4. the King in his Speech to the Gentry of Yorkshire acknowledges, He is wholly cast upon the affections of his people, having no hope but in God, bis just cause, and the love of his Subjects. What diffinction can now fatisfie us, that neither Irifh, French, Lorrainers, Dutch, Danes, are forreiners? The concealing of this by fealing up the lips of the Queene and Ormond, and Cockram must fupply all di-

FINIS.

(56)