CHANGE IS COMING

Embracing a New Translation of the Mass

by Emily Strand, Director of Liturgy

On November 27, 2011, English-speaking Catholics will begin using a new translation of the Mass. In 2000, Pope John Paul II issued a new edition of the Missale Romanum, the Latin book of prayers for Mass. Language scholars used an updated method to translate these ancient prayers, which resulted in a slightly different tone and style. For example, when the Presider says, "The Lord be with you," the Assembly will soon respond, "And with your Spirit," a more direct translation of the original Latin, "et cum spiritu tuo." The new translation method seeks to more faithfully capture the content of the Latin.

The new method of translation also seeks to highlight the Scriptural references in our liturgical prayers. When we are invited to the Lord's table, instead of saying "Lord, I am not worthy to receive you..." we will utter, "Lord, I am not worthy that you should come under my roof..." This points up the origin of the prayer: the words of the faithful Centurion in the Gospel of Luke, chapter 7.

The new translation also seeks to better capture the dignity of our liturgical prayer. In a world so full of words, many of them disrespectful or meaningless, these new texts will help us recognize the radical beauty and nobility of what we say and do at Mass. Join me in praying that the enhanced splendor of our words for prayer will assist us in carrying this life of dignity to which Christ invites us beyond the doors of our worship.

Sunday Readings and Reflection

Reading I: Exodus 17:8-13
Responsorial Psalm: 121:1-2, 3-4, 5-6, 7-8
Reading II: 2 Timothy 3:14-4:2
Gospel: Luke 18:1-8

*I lift up my eyes toward the mountains;
whence shall help come to me?
My help is from the LORD,
who made heaven and earth.
Psalm: 121:1-2*

A local charity which serves the poor in the Dayton area will receive 10% of every Sunday collection. The rest of the collection supports more than 100 Campus Ministry programs of all kinds, including our

Service Program of the Week:

Roots & Shoots

Our goal is to promote awareness to environmental and humanitarian issues. We distribute educational materials to local schools and participate in activities on campus and community to help improve our area.

Next week is Environmental Sustainability Week and Roots and Shoots is visiting Smaller Footprint Farm on October 23, 1-4pm for a tour and some hands on service. Smaller Footprint Farm is a local farm that employs growing and building methods that are ecologically friendly to reduce our impact on the planet. We will meet at 12:30 in front of Recplex main entrance. RSVP: to Heidi Heckel at ultimaterunner08@gmail.com
