

University of Dayton
eCommons

The Social Practice of Human Rights: Charting the
Frontiers of Research and Advocacy

The Social Practice of Human Rights: Charting the
Frontiers of Research and Advocacy

Nov 9th, 10:30 AM

Leveling the Fields for Migrant Farmworkers: Developing Human Rights Public Policies Using Human Rights-Based Approach

Luis E. Zavala

Yale University, luiseduardozavala@gmail.com

Follow this and additional works at: http://ecommons.udayton.edu/human_rights

Zavala, Luis E., "Leveling the Fields for Migrant Farmworkers: Developing Human Rights Public Policies Using Human Rights-Based Approach" (2017). The Social Practice of Human Rights: Charting the Frontiers of Research and Advocacy. 5.
http://ecommons.udayton.edu/human_rights/2017/marginalized/5

This Event is brought to you for free and open access by the Human Rights Center at eCommons. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Social Practice of Human Rights: Charting the Frontiers of Research and Advocacy by an authorized administrator of eCommons. For more information, please contact frice1@udayton.edu, mschlengen1@udayton.edu.

The Social Practice of Human Rights: Charting the Frontiers of Research and Advocacy

2017 Conference of the University of Dayton Human Rights Center

Nov. 8-10, 2017, Dayton, Ohio

For the archive of the conference, see http://ecommons.udayton.edu/human_rights/2017/

Research Panel: The Marginalized and Minorities: Interrogating Rights

Presenter: Luis Zavala, Yale University

Title: Leveling the Fields for Migrant Farmworkers: Developing Human Rights Public Policies Using Human Rights-Based Approach

Abstract:

This paper identifies the shortfalls of United States policy regarding migrant agricultural workers and proposes several courses of action for the federal government. Analysis of current U.S. policy and practices reveals serious human rights violations toward migrant agricultural workers by various U.S. entities, including the U.S. Department of Homeland Security, the U.S. Department of Labor, and the state of Arizona. Human rights violated include freedom from discrimination, equality before the law, the right to marriage and a family, the right to work, and the right to adequate living standards, including food, shelter, and health. These breaches find ground in both the international arena through international treaties and in the domestic sphere through the U.S. Constitution and other established laws.

In order to overcome these problems, the best course of action would be to promote ratification of international treaties regarding the rights of relevant vulnerable groups, including the Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families. This would set the foundation for future U.S. policy-making standards regarding migrant workers. In addition, the federal government should focus on amending current policies based on the recommendations of the U.N. Special Rapporteur on the Rights of Migrants and the Working Group in the Universal Periodic Review.

About the presenter:

Luis Zavala is a visiting professor at Yale University and director of the migrant shelter Monarch House, providing humanitarian relief for migrants.