Nursing Homes:

By JOSEPH F. PIRRO
 Editor-in-Chief

As liberal arts students, we have a responsibility to make ourselves familiar with a nationwide problem that modern society has helped generate. The care of the elderly in America is becoming a horrendous dilemma, which is only growing in magnitude as the members of the population over 65 years of age increases to record numbers. Advances in medical technology are allowing people to live longer. Geriatric care, rehabilitation and housing, however, must be given equal attention in society in order to combat the increase in the elderly population.

In the modern world where both husband and wife must find employment to support a family and struggle to be granted at least a "middle class" life and title, who remains to provide proper care for the older members of the family? The 2.4 children are in high schools or 2,500 miles away in college, much too preoccupied with their own young lives. Although the majority of us here at Ursinus are in the "younger generation" our grandparents and soon our own parents will be in need of special care because they will most likely not be able to live alone and will become dependent on family and friends.

One solution to this problem becomes admission into a nursing home close enough for occasional visits, but far enough away to release the burden of daily dependence, fear, and care on the part of the able family members. But are the nursing homes (private and public) in our country doing us a favor or even providing the necessary and proper care and environment for our older citizens? This three-part Grizzly investigative series will attempt to supply answers to questions that have arisen concerning poor nursing home conditions.

Society, and especially the younger generation, bears the heaviest responsibility. Our ears cannot be deaf to the feeble plea: "Please, don't put me in a nursing home." for we may be in the same position, uttering similar cries one day.

As of 1982 only 5 percent of Americans over 65 lived in institutions, and one in five Americans will eventually be relegated to a nursing home facility. It seems that about 40 percent of nursing home admissions are made for "social reasons," such as the individual could no longer live alone, the family needed a break from daily care of the individual, or the family simply could not provide the proper care themselves. Nursing homes are invading our culture very rapidly, for good or bad. But we must have the power within ourselves and families to create a different ending to our lives.

Most nursing home clinics have an outside garnished with colorful flowers and shrubs and a shiny front window with a huge listing of services and treatments. Then inside the truth is exposed: cramped, sparsely furnished and dirty rooms, especially the restrooms. Old age in America has become a wasteland. Nursing homes have become almost synonymous with death and protracted suffering and misery before death.

The AFL-CIO American Federationist in March, 1977, reported that 30 to 80 percent of nursing homes are considered to be substandard, meaning that they are in violation of one or more standards causing a life-threatening situation. A nursing home license is not always a guarantee of quality care. In Michigan reports show that pet store standards are more stringently enforced than those for many nursing homes. It also seems that only a small fraction of the regulations now in effect provide the capability to directly assess the quality of patient care in these institutions, and inspection information is not easily accessible to the public when it should be. So why must one in every five elderly Americans be placed in nursing homes only to die?

In 1976, Senator Frank Moss from Utah, chairman of the Senate Subcommittee in Long-Term Care for 14 years, posted some of the most incriminating evidence against nursing homes. Moss conducted searches into the Medicare and Medicaid programs and the shameful conditions of nursing homes. The senator painted the picture of patients being "ping-ponged" around between nurses and various kinds of doctors. Moss found that up to one-half of the drugs used in nursing homes may be prescribed in error.

This lack of care in prescribing drugs is one of the widespread hazards found in nursing homes across the country. Moss's findings also told of doctors who visited as little as possible and who gave prescriptions over the phone to nurses who were describing symptoms. Some doctors even signed death certificates beforehand so that they would not have to return after the patient's death to perform this procedure. Does your grandmother or great-aunt deserve this treatment? Senator Moss, now retired, helped to pass 48 bills tightening federal regulations regarding Medicare and Medicaid and was also successful in closing down several New York nursing homes.

Newsweek's February 22, 1982 issue reported that Stephen Serebin, administrator of a Milwaukee nursing home, became the first administrator to be sentenced to prison for the death of a patient under his care. Serebin was sentenced to six years in prison on charges of patient abuse and "homicide by reckless conduct" when Bruno Dreyer, 78-year-old patient, escaped the nursing home in 1976 and died in the bitter cold. Some may read this and shrug it off, but doesn't anyone care out there? What if your grandmother were tested with an unlicensed drug? It happens—all too frequently.

Financially, the cards do not produce a winning hand either. According to Prevention magazine in 1983, about $27 billion is being spent each year for nursing home care. Within 16 years, that figure could be $90 billion per year according to the Health Care Financing Administration.

Taxpayers, aware or not, are paying for nursing home bills long before they themselves are ever in need of such service. Expenditures from 1960 to 1973 increased almost 1,400 percent. This is quite a monetary jump. But money really is not the issue, is it? We are talking about saving human lives.

In Prevention magazine's November, 1983 issue, the editor says that the understatement of the year (See NURSING, P4)

A Solution for the Elderly? Investigation 1

Fetterolf Nears Completion

By LISA SABIA
 Staff Writer

Many changes have taken place on the Ursinus campus within the past year, but perhaps the most noticeable is the renovation of some of the houses on Main Street. Fetterolf House is currently undergoing reconstruction. The Fine Arts Department is housed there.

The project was started in July, 1985 and is scheduled for completion by February, 1986. It is not yet known if classes will be moved there immediately, or if the college will wait until the fall semester of 1986 to open the house. The building will remain the location of the Fine Arts Department and all the rooms will be used as classrooms.

In addition, there will be a darkroom on the third floor, another room that will be used for layouts, and a wing has been added to the back of the building that will serve as an art studio. Exactly what courses will be taught there remains to be seen. The college has spent an estimated $400,000 on this project.

Fetterolf is one of the oldest houses in Collegeville with the stone portions of the building dating back to 1765 and the rest of the construction to 1800. Peter Fetterolf bought the house and land in the late 1700's from Henry Hunsicker. It then became known as Fetterolf Farm and remained a private residence. In 1876 the house served as the home of President Bomberger.

During the 1880's and 1890's Fetterolf served as a boarding house for male college students. It was not until the spring of 1948 that the house officially became part of the Ursinus campus. For the next 20 years Fetterolf was used as a residence hall for men; Beta Sigma Lambda was the last fraternity to occupy the house.

In 1968, to keep up with courses being offered at rival colleges, Ursinus added two art courses to its curriculum. It was at this time that Fine Arts became a separate department located in Fetterolf Hall. When renovation is completed, Fetterolf Hall will be a positive addition to the campus.

The Grizzly was founded in 1978, replacing the previous campus newspaper, The Ursinus Weekly. It is published by students twelve weeks each semester. The Grizzly is edited entirely by students and views expressed in the paper are not necessarily those held by the administration, faculty, or a consensus of the student body. The staff of The Grizzly invites opinions from the college community and will publish them as time and space permit.

Ursinus College has allotted approximately $20,000 to the Student Publications Committee for the purchase of a Varityper 5810 electronic typesetter. This issue of the Grizzly is the first to be typeset on the new machine.

Greg Fraser, Associate Editor of the Grizzly, and Peter Perreten, Chairman of the English Department, attended a 5 day, 30 hour training session during semester break at Varityper headquarters in Malvern. As the semester progresses, Fraser and Perreten will be teaching members of the Grizzly and Lantern staffs how to operate the new machine. The typesetter works very much like a word processor, although there are many more commands that need to be memorized.

The new typesetter should save the college some publications costs in the future. Professional typesetters often make as much as $35 an hour. With students and faculty setting the type themselves, costs will be cut, and more importantly, operators will gain valuable knowledge.

Toilet tissue creates a "whole" problem

Dear Editor,
It seems apparent to me that the person who is in charge of ordering the toiletry articles (i.e. toilet paper) has recently bought stock in Preparation H. I understand that cutting costs is important, but in this case it is essential for all of us to have soft tissue. If nothing is done to remedy this problem, the students will all be walking very gingerly around campus letting out sounds of excruciating pain. I urge the administration to respond to this immediately and not to overlook the "whole" problem.

P.S. Four out of five doctors surveyed said it would be better to use "the Grizzly" than this new toilet tissue.

Sorely yours,

A George Brett Fan

Smokers and non-smokers must meet half way

By BETH MORRIS

Do you smoke? Well, many people do. Smoking raises a great argument between those who do and those who do not smoke.

Many public facilities have designated areas in which one may "light up." Colleges are also beginning to set up certain areas on campus where students are allowed to smoke. When asked about separate smoking areas, Molly Manzo said, "I think that there should be designated smoking areas because it bothers me when people smoke around me."

Another student stated, "I have nothing against smoking, but it's not fair for people who don't smoke to put up with the smell and the health hazard."

The majority of the students feel that smoking is a bad habit and should be controlled by school officials by assigning special smoking areas.

The University of Maryland developed a proposition to ban smoking in classrooms, lecture halls, libraries, hallways, a third of the dining halls, and any office where a non-smoker works. School officials are hoping that students and faculty abide by the new rules and form an "agreement" between smokers and non-smokers.

As it stands now, Ursinus College does not have enforced smoking areas in the cafeteria. The college does sponsor a Wellness Program explaining the detrimental effects of smoking. Recently, there was an "Adopt a Smoker Week," where a person who does not smoke adopts one that does. The incentive for this project was a cash prize of $50 for the group who adopted the most number of people.

Smoking is very popular. No matter how many people quit, there will still be a great number of people who smoke. It is a subject which will always be controversial. As long as people smoke, there will be arguments. Smokers and non-smokers must meet half way. Each person must respect the other.

Horrible Hunger Continues

By BRIDGET ALGEO

Our days here at Ursinus are filled to their capacities; we all have classes, tests, papers, practices, meetings, and so much more on our minds. However, there is one thing here that we never have to worry about: eating. Some of us may complain about the food that Wismer offers us, but none of us can complain about not having food at all. None of us need to worry about how we are going to get food each day. We know we won't go to bed hungry.

However, millions of people all over the world go to sleep each night with horrible hunger pangs. The thought that no less than 15 million children die yearly due to hunger-related causes should stir uneasiness in our consciences. Why? Because hunger is needless in this world of plenty. "Hunger is not a scourge," states Susan George, author of "How the Other Half Dies." "It is a scandal." Over 500 million people will live in abject poverty this year. They do not want to live this way. They are working very hard to combat hunger. However, they lack access to land, water, tools, credit, and training. Of course, it is not our fault that they have become this way; however, it is our crime if we allow them to continue this way. According to Miss George, we have the ability to turn this situation around: "Today's world has all the physical resources and technical skills necessary to feed the population of the planet."

How can we — seemingly helpless college students help alleviate this problem? We can each make a personal commitment to the cause for world hunger by joining the "Fast for a World Harvest," a program organized by the Oxford Committee for Famine Relief, better known as "Oxfam."

Oxfam is an international agency that funds self-help development projects and disaster relief in poor countries. It distributes educational materials for Americans on issues of development and hunger. Founded in 1942 in England, its American base is located in Boston. Oxfam America is one of six autonomous Oxfams around the world, and it is a nonsectarian, non-profit agency, to which all contributions are tax-deductible.

Oxfam's "Fast for a World Harvest" is a plan which asks those of us who have plenty to fast for a day or to forgo a meal and to donate the money which might have been spent for that meal to the cause for world hunger. Fast participants contributed more than 1.5 million dollars to help Oxfam fund these projects:

— Emergency supplies, seeds, tools, and oxen for farmers in drought-stricken Ethiopia.

— Repair and rebuilding of wells for nomadic herders in the Kidal region of Mali.

— Collection and distribution of agricultural tools and equipment for struggling farmers in Nicaragua.

— Revolving credit and training programs for women in India.

— Family relocation, community health, and food-producing programs for displaced people in El Salvador.

— Rice seed for peasants in Kampuchea affected by severe flooding in 1984.

We can help the poor of the world by supporting their efforts to grow more food, obtain better health services, and learn new economic skills. Most of all, we can aid them in their struggle for dignity and in their quest for a better life for their families.

Become more aware of the pain of hunger by fasting for one day or by missing a meal. Act by donating the cost of the food to Oxfam. Send your donations to:

Oxfam America

Your donation, however small, could mean everything.

CAMPUS MEMO

By RICHARD P. RICHTER

Many talk with me about the future of Ursinus. Yes, they say, we know you are trying to raise 20 million dollars for endowed faculty chairs, more scholarships, the "residential village" and other improvements. But what is it that you are trying to make Ursinus become?

Obviously, with even greater financial and academic strength, the College will be even "better." But what is "better"? Some with whom I talk see a better Ursinus in a social sense, a place with greater social prestige and advantage. Others see Ursinus better able to deliver its graduates handily into still higher starting places in the career market. Still others see Ursinus better able to engage students in sheer intellectual activity at the most intense and disinterested level.

I hope that students at a "better" Ursinus will study on a campus that is permeated with a sense of purpose that transcends private ambitions and satisfactions. Somehow, the concepts of leadership and service will mean more than they mean to the student body today. These concepts will pervade campus programs and give the College greater focus and drive.

So if we are leading up to some kind of new elitism at Ursinus, I hope it will be the elitism of the bright who are committed to using their fullest human potential for the living of honorable and useful lives.

I hope a "better" Ursinus does not become preoccupied with social prestige. The worth of Ursinus students of the future, I trust, will not be counted by their addresses back home or the clubs to which their parents belong. And I would be disappointed if students came here because Ursinus was merely a very efficient turnstyle leading to attractive slots in the system.

I do hope, of course, that a "better" Ursinus will be a place where the disciplined work of the mind occurs more successfully with students—where there is a still more lively intellectual exchange between teacher and student and among students themselves. In a place where the working of the mind is central, how could we hope for less?

But intellectual elitism, as an end in itself, does not seem to be any more satisfactory as a goal for Ursinus than social elitism or super-careerism. Students at a "better" Ursinus, I hope, will see even more clearly than you do that their intellectual training has a purpose, which is fundamentally the exercise of responsible leadership.

Can a Dream Become a Reality?

By M. SCOTT LANDIS, CAMPUS MINISTER

Almost twenty years ago the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. risked and eventually gave his life for what he believed in, "Liberty and justice for all." He had a dream about a day when his children, "would not be judged by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character." In 1986 we remember this noble man and his passionate desire to establish an America where all would live in mutual respect and freedom, through a holiday in honor of his birth date.

Ursinus like that exist? We are at the beginning of yet another semester. The semester is filled with academic and social possibilities which challenge the minds of each one of us, raising questions and forcing us to seek viable answers. Can you enter the arena of campus life being open to the myriad of challenges which will come your way? The challenge to the Ursinus community, from the freshman class to the president is to engage fully in the wonderful process which lies before us.

This process is not any easy one. Unity, fellowship and mutual respect involve risk. To form quality relationships with one another we engage in the process of self disclosure risking the potential of giving up some of our cherished values and ideas, risking giving up pieces of ourselves, as well as risking rejection of the ideas and values which we might offer to others. We need to be open to the possibility if we are to truly listen to the ideas of persons we relate to student, professor, and administrator.

If we can learn to respect one another and one another's ideas on the content of their character we can move to greater horizons. The message of Desmond Tutu echoes the words of the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. of freedom, justice and community. Though his message is spoken in the context of South Africa, the message is a global dream toward which we all must strive. However, the dream begins with you and me individually as we engage in the task of learning more about one another as well as the academic disciplines we pursue. As we begin a new semester, let us afford one another the privilege of individual personhood as we seek to become members of the Ursinus family

Two weeks ago, I had the wonderful opportunity of hearing words that were strangely reminiscent of King in a setting which lacked the passion of the march on Washington, yet had the captivating power of focusing on another injustice prevailing in our world today. Bishop Desmond Tutu, upon receiving his honorary degree Doctor of Laws, from Temple University, decried the apartheid government of the white minority in his native South Africa. To quote this outspoken yet gentle man, "No one will be free until South Africa is free, no one will be free until the whole world is free."

Tutu, using the style of a preacher spoke of standing on top a mountain and looking into the promised land. He likens his pilgrimage and mission to that of Moses who led his people for forty years through the wilderness and finally to the promised land. Tutu cannot and will not rest until his people and all the people of the world can dwell in unity; where all persons can be themselves and be respected for their individuality. Bishop Tutu is challenging the world to live with one another in community, a fellowship of peace.

Can a world like that exist? Or in a more limited focus, can an

A look at a "better" Ursinus

The Limelight shines on Lynne Edwards

By C. NITSCHMANN Staff Writer

Miss Lynne Edwards is in the Ursinus limelight once again. After being president of Girls High and of her freshman class here at Ursinus, on the Dean's List, and a sophomore RA, to name a few of her accomplishments, she has been named a semifinalist from the state of Pennsylvania for the annual Truman Scholarship.

The scholarship is sponsored by the Harry S. Truman Scholarship Foundation. It is open to college students interested in a career in government and/or public service. An emphasis is also placed on excellent academic standings and leadership abilities. Applicants for the scholarship must be nominated by their school to apply. Jeanne Radwanski was also nominated by Ursinus to submit an application.

The recipient of the scholarship will receive a $7,500 scholarship for four years—two years of undergraduate work and two years of graduate school.

Besides listing Lynne's achievements back through high school, the application requires an essay on any public policy issue. Lynne chose to write about press coverage and terrorism. She is scheduled for an interview in Philadelphia on February 3. The interview will focus primarily on the essay and her career plans.

Lynne is an Economics major with an accounting emphasis and a Communication Arts minor. She hasn't given much thought to graduate school until now, but would like to pursue a career in personnel management and labor relations. She is presently employed by the Department of the Navy under the Federal Junior Fellowship Program.

Profile: John French adds a musical twist

By MELORA MCMULLEN

Mr. John French, chairperson of the Ursinus Music Department, was elected last semester to be vice president of the Pennsylvania Collegiate Choral Association. Each year the association produces a choral festival for the students, and work-shops for the choral directors of about 30 Pennsylvania Colleges and Universities. Mr. French will have a major part in the organization of this festival for the next two years.

The Ursinus Music Department also benefits from Mr. French's knowledge of music and his ability to teach it to his students, both in the classroom and at rehearsals. He finds his work at Ursinus "more challenging" because he is "turning people on to an art form even though their major interest lies in chemistry or physical education." By working with students from Ursinus, he demonstrates that "non-music" majors can reach a certain quality of achievement in music and performance."

Mr. French has reached his goal of "good music done well." Both he and his singers, which include College Choir, Meistersingers, and Chamber Singers, enjoy performing high quality music and take pride in their repertoire. The annual performance of Handel's Messiah in December gives Mr. French an opportunity to exhibit his work.

Along with being a wonderful teacher, Mr. French is a very special friend to his students and receives the respect he deserves.

• Nursing

is that a nursing home is not the best place to play out the last acts of one's life. Fear of growing old, losing control and being placed in a nursing home are major phobias in our country. The impact on the family as a whole is enormous.

"Institutionalization" is a nasty word that conjures up images of maltreatment and neglect. The problem is that those images are correct for the most part. One of the coldest and most depressing feelings in the world is to walk down a nursing home hall, looking into the eyes of elderly patients lined up in wheelchairs along the walls. Their lives have become restricted to a small room or even just a bed with guardrails. The elderly person gives up control, possessions, autonomy, and sometimes his family.

In a New York Times Magazine article, Patricia M. Belanger, the director of the New York City Long-Term Care Ombudsman program spares the scenery and gets to the point: "Most people leave nursing homes horizontally." For many elderly, a nursing home is a human junkyard, a type of purgatory or prison. The average patient is 82, female, alone and only remains a nursing home "guest" for about two years.

Senator Frank Moss has said that "the sick and the aged are an embarrassment; they remind us of our own mortality and therefore should be removed from our view." Certainly one problem overlooked is that young doctors seem to have little training in geriatric care and little practical experience with such patients. Frank Moss also believes that the protection that should be coming from physicians, pharmacists, nurses, administrators and Government is simply nonexistent.

One of the worst parts about this whole situation is that a patient must wait up to a year or more to get into this environment. Waiting lists are only a matter of time—until beds are freed—by death. So, there are elderly people waiting for fellow patients to die, so that they may be admitted, last an average of two years, and then also die. Nursing home care has, of course, turned into an industry. In addition, families say the more they complain about the care, the more the staff makes it difficult for the family and the patient.

Most admission candidates are poor and sick upon entrance, and in a few months they find themselves even poorer and sicker. After admission, it does not take long for a patient to be moved from a custodial or intermediate bed to a skilled nursing floor perhaps because more care is needed, but mostly because the proprietor gets more money from the government for the skilled beds. After the shift to the skilled bed, it doesn't take much time before the patient slips into senility. Just about the only stimulation a patient receives in a skilled ward is the moaning and senseless chatter of the other senile patients.

Despite great improvement in geriatric care in the past ten years, scandals of fraud, negligence, and mistreatment have been revealed in establishments professing to help the aged. Nurses and aides are among the lowest paid, and they have few benefits.

Their turnover rate is high. As of 1978, 75 percent of aides and orderlies were leaving their jobs annually, only to leave their positions open for inexperienced workers. U.S. News and World Report told of one elderly woman in a Houston home who was so neglected that her death was not discovered until signs of rigor mortis set in, and another woman who had to be hospitalized for rat bites. Some nursing homes are absolutely frightening. One reads news reports of cockroaches, peeling wallpaper, and falling plaster in the homes. Residents are tranquilized with drugs. For the most part medical and psychiatric care are minimal, while diets are inadequate. Assaults from hoodlums are also a constant threat in some areas such as New York. The most frightening fact is that geriatric specialists say that 20 to 40 percent of such patients could get along in the community if they had housekeeping, personal care, and transportation. So the impending hell of old age spent in an institution should not really be necessary. Consider that trembling plea once again: "Don't put me in a nursing home."

GERIATRIC CARE IN ROYERSFORD

The closest nursing home to Ursinus is the Montgomery County Geriatric and Rehabilitation Center in Royersford. The facility is modern and not nearly as horrendous a "graveyard" as other homes depicted from promotional material about M.C.G.R.C. This is just another example of those shiny windows with long listings of services.

The center was first proposed by Montgomery County in 1801, just 17 years after the creation of the county. In 1806 an act was passed stating that the facility was to be "a house for the employment and support of the poor." The doors were first opened to paupers on June 7, 1808.

The surrounding property of the Geriatric Center consists of 297 acres of farmland. A hospital wing was constructed in the 1940's and expanded in the late 1950's. In November, 1952, the county facility was named the Charles Johnson Home in memory of the longtime local, county and state official who died in 1937. Many area residents still know the center by this name. However, the center was given its present name in 1972 after the addition of an eight-story complex with a full range of patient care and recreational services and activities. This addition increased the bed capacity from 400 to nearly 600 patients.

The Montgomery County Commissioners have held responsibility for the center's operation since 1980. M.C.G.R.C. is fully licensed by the Department of Health for 150 skilled care and 441 intermediate care facility beds. The center also participates in federal and state reimbursement programs of Medicare and Medicaid Assistance.

The daily operation of M.C.G.R.C. is the direct responsibility of Nursing Home Administrator, Mrs. Jean John, who was appointed retroactive to October, 1985. Mr. Gus Arapolu had been official director from April, 1978 until his death in September, 1985. Arapolu took over when Mr. Rodney L. Plano, director since 1964, resigned. Mrs. John has two assistant administrators, 15 department heads, and a medical director, John Maron, M.D. There are also five attending physicians who see patients daily.

The Center includes such advantages as physical therapy rooms with modern equipment, beauty and barber shops, occupational therapy, religious services for all faiths, a regular program of activities, gift shop, and hundreds of dedicated volunteers. The philosophy of the center is expressed in their motto: "Quality Care is Our Primary Concern," which echoes the words of former director, Rodney Plano, who said on the completion of the new wing that he wanted to change the image of the center from that of a "home" to a "bona fide health industry."

The above information is taken directly from promotional material about M.C.G.R.C. Perhaps this is just another example of those shiny windows with long listings of services.

It is fairly obvious that this article was not written for the promotion of the Montgomery County facility. It only serves as a starting point to familiarize readers with the closest geriatric center in the area. Through this Grizzly three-part investigative series, the doors of the Montgomery County Geriatric Center will be opened to the public eye. It is a place with many good things, but there is a flip side to every coin.

Pain Brings Gain for the Swimmn' Women

By: HEATHER CAMP
Entertainment Editor and AMY DAVID

This past weekend, the swimmers braved rough roads and waves in their first meet after two weeks of quality workouts. Overall, the women's team produced great time improvements over last semester. Although they lost to the 1985 MAC champs, Gettysburg, the "mer" chicks scored an impressive victory over Widener in the tri-meet. Leading the women with her best this season, Heidi Camp secures valuable points in the 200 and 100 frees. Two other essential performances came from divers Helen LeClair and Janine Jones, who captured first and second place points against Widener and were right on the heels of Gettysburg divers. Brenda Lech rounded out the effort by the divers, but her head wasn't spinning from the high scores she received. Not in attendance was Lynn Messier who is recovering from a neck injury. We hope to have her back soon.

Even though Jen Hoeberg has been hobbling around on crutches for two weeks, she endured the pain and secured the win over Widener with her second place finish in the 100 back. Jen also gave a strong showing in the 50 free as did Lynne Lawson in the grueling 500 and 1000 frees. Cindy Hoyt budded a fine effort in the 50 and 100 frees, as did Heather Camp in the 200 free. Camp also improved her 100 fly time by cutting off four seconds. Next, afflicted by "senioritis," Amy David may have taken the slow boat to China in her 400 I.M., but she redeemed herself by winning the 100 backstroke competition.

Perhaps the most praise should go to senior Riki Horn, who qualified for MAC's with her best times in the 100 breast and 50 free. Getting through double session workouts over Christmas break was no easy feat, but the team maintained a positive attitude throughout and it was reflected in Saturday's performances.

If you notice that Gettysburg has had little mention, it is because they showed no mercy. Farmer Ted was so impressed by Gettysburg that he tried to blend in with them by wearing a G-berg t-shirt. Good move Ted. Sorry it didn't work.

And the famous Coach Bob quote for this week is "Could be?"

Gymnasts Vaulting into a new season

By JILL THURER
Staff Writer

Filling Coach Morrison's position at this time is Ildiko Zudor. Captain Peg Kelly remarked, "Coach Zudor is doing a good job and, being a gymnast once herself, she is very easy to relate to."

So far this season, the highest scores are Mary Sabol with 28.9 all-around, 8.35 in vault, 7.3 in balance beam, and 7.5 in floor. Michelle Amstutz has posted a 6.55 in uneven bars.

During break, Ursinus took on West Point and lost by just two-tenths of a point. The final score was 120.2 to 120.0.

Upcoming meets for UC include Hofstra which is away tonight and Bryn Mawr which will be home on February 3.

Recently the Ursinus Women's gymnastics team picked up a big win in a tri-meet against Swarthmore and Lock Haven scoring 130.35 points. Mary Sabol took first place in both vault and in the floor exercise while teammate Noelle Rotundo took first in balance beam and uneven bars. Lock Haven took second place overall with a final score of 112.4 points and Swarthmore trailed them with 106.25 points.

Since returning from winter break, the team has also had a few other meets. On January 22, the group traveled to UMBC in Maryland only to be handed a defeat by a score of 153.45 to 112.35. Ursinus suffered the loss without Debbie Benner, sophomore and Tricia Curry, freshman. Ursinus also had to face their opponents without Coach Angela Morrison, who has been out for several weeks with a back injury.

Track Season Starts at the Gun

By DEAN LENT

The Men's indoor track season got into full swing this past Saturday at Lehigh University. Not even bad weather or a traffic accident could halt their progress.

The highlight of the meet was the spectacular performance of shot putter John Wood. John not only won with a toss of 51 feet, 2 1/4 inches, he also qualified for the Division III Indoor Nationals, defeating his opponent by over 8 inches.

Other participants in the meet were Zack Robinson (6.92), Eugene Seymor (7.4) and Dean Condodina (disqualified on a questionable call) in the 60 yard dash. Abdul Foad competed in the 440 yard dash in a time of :56. The distance team was represented by Dean Lent and Steve Pote. Pote ran the 880 in 2:10 and Lent ran the 1000 yard run in 2:23. Transfer Rick Lowe started the year off well with a leap of 6 feet 4 inches in the high jump.

The team's next meet is this Saturday at Widener.

Basketball Hall of Fame cites Women's team as second in all-time victories

The women's basketball team at Ursinus College ranks second in the nation in all-time victories, according to the findings of a research project just released by the Basketball Hall of Fame.

With 412 wins entering the current season, the Ursinus women are second among all clubs, including Divisions I, II and III. Only Elizabethtown, with 473 victories entering the season, has more all-time wins. Bridgewater (Va.), with 403 wins, is close behind Ursinus in third.

Ursinus, Elizabethtown and Bridgewater all play Division III basketball. The next highest in Division III is Wisconsin-White-water with 257 victories.

The Division I leader is Long

WOMEN'S

Beach State (365 wins going into the season), and the top clubs in Division II are Central Missouri with 283 and Cal Poly-Pomona with 282.

The Basketball Hall of Fame, located in Springfield, Mass., conducted the research in order to pull together scattered records for women's teams at colleges around the nation.

The women's program at Ursinus began in 1905-06, when the Bears played a one-game season and lost to Schuylkill Seminary, 8-7. They did not play again until 1918-19.

The Bears are 6-7 so far this season, giving them 418 all-time wins to date. Their MAC record is 6-2, placing them second in the conference standings.

Wellness Bear Spotted!

By, JILL UREY
Staff Writer

The Wellness Bear has been spotted quite frequently at Ursinus during the last semester. For those who are unfamiliar, the Wellness Bear is the logo for the new Wellness Program. Funded by the United Church of Christ, the Wellness Program, which began in the fall, has since sponsored new and various activities.

According to program coordinator Beverly Oehlert, Wellness is a "positive way of getting education on a variety of topics." Campus participation so far in the Wellness events has been varied but generally positive. Mrs. Oehlert also added that the staff and faculty have been "extremely receptive."

The most recent development in the Wellness Program is the arrival of a wellness intern nurse on campus, Ann Schoemaker. She holds a B.S. and Masters in biology. Schoemaker's main job will be to establish a peer education sexuality training course. Those who are trained as peer educators will then be available to discuss sexuality problems with fellow students.

In addition, there are many other upcoming events for the spring semester that will be sponsored by the Wellness Program. For the first two weeks of February, the concentration will be on "Spiritual Wellness." Campus minister, Scott Landis, will coordinate most of the programs. An open dialogue will be held to discuss women as priests and ministers. A prayer vigil is slated for Ash Wednesday. Trinity United Church of Christ on Main Street is planning to hold a special church service for Ursinus students. Also, an information day for campus religious organizations will be held in Wismer Lobby.

The last two weeks of a February will revolve around a "Work and Leisure" theme. A forum speaker, Mr. Richard Irish, is scheduled to be at Ursinus on February 26, to present "Go Hire Yourself an Employer." The student activities board is also developing a program where students and faculty will be able to share new crafts and skills with the campus community.

March is National Nutrition Month. Various aspects of nutrition will be stressed at meals along with calorie-counting. Some type of weight loss program is being looked into for the campus as a whole.

The first half of April will focus on "Group Living." The end of the month will feature "Skills to Save Lives." More activities will be announced as they are planned.

Overall, The Wellness Program has brought to Ursinus many new educational events with promise of even more to come. Stay on the look-out for the Wellness Bear to announce upcoming activities for your benefit.

Women's Studies Program Seeks Campus Wide Interest

By A. M. SALAS
Staff Writer

The Women's Studies Program is still alive and kicking in the Ursinus community. The program will reach a bit more deeply into the campus consciousness as the spring semester progresses, and those people who found it to be an interesting, yet remote concept, will now find it to be much more accessible and relevant to their lives, be they female, male, student, teacher or staff members.

Dr. Colette Hall and other members of the Women's Studies Program are preparing a grant proposal to present to the United Church of Christ (UCC) later this year. They need data, however, in order to determine how the program can best serve the Ursinus community as a whole. With that in mind, a questionnaire is being put together with distribution to the entire campus scheduled for the first week in February. It is hoped that everyone will take the time to answer the questions presented, regardless of their gender, or feelings about the relevance of the questions to their own lives.

The first week in February is also Women's Week in the UCC, so the first Open Dialog of the semester, which will be held February 6, at 12:30 in the Parents' Lounge at Wismer, will focus on the role of women in the clergy.

The Women's Studies groups are meeting this month to discuss their readings on the construction of knowledge. All reading assignments are on reserve at the library. Drs. Henry, Visser and Schroeder act as hosts for the meetings. Anyone interested in joining a group should contact one of these people for details about days, times and directions.

Applications being taken for St. Andrew's Scholarship

Professor H. Lloyd Jones of the English Department has announced that the St. Andrew's Society of Philadelphia, for the 29th year, is awarding scholarships to outstanding college sophomores who wish to spend the junior year at a Scottish University. During that time 68 students from 14 colleges and universities have been selected.

Ursinus has been fortunate enough to have had 16 winners, more than any other participating college or university including Pennsylvania State University, the University of Pennsylvania, Temple, Bucknell, Haverford, Swarthmore and Dickinson.

Applicants will be interviewed by the Ursinus College Committee on Scholarships, and the winning candidate will then be interviewed by the Scholarship Committee of the St. Andrew's Society together with candidates from other colleges and universities.

The most recent winner from Ursinus is James Tursi, who is now completing his senior year after a year at the University of Aberdeen.

Professor Jones has expressed the hope of the Ursinus community that we shall have this year yet another winner of this coveted honor and opportunity.

There will be three Scholarship awards, providing for a year at either the University of St. Andrews, the University of Edinburgh, or the University of Aberdeen. The amount of each award will be $7,500 and should be adequate to cover most of the expenses incurred.

The competition is open to male and female sophomores who are outstanding students and are "held in high regard by their contemporaries." Anyone who is interested in applying should see Professor Jones in the English Department, Room 106 before February 10.

URSINUS PROFESSOR PUBLISHES BOOKS ON PENNSYLVANIA DUTCH
Who are the Pennsylvania Dutch? What is different about them? If you are a new resident of the Pennsylvania Dutch country or an area native who would like to know more about local history and heritage, two books have just been published that will answer these questions.
Pennsylvania Germans: A

Persistent Minority was written by William T. Parsons, Ph.D., professor of history, director of the Pennsylvania German Studies Program and archivist at Ursinus. It is reprint of a volume originally issued in 1976. Beginning with the migration of the original Pennsylvania Dutch settlers to the new world, the book traces their conflicts and contributions to American life from pioneer days to the present. Informative chapters on the Pennsylvania Dutch family, its home life and its artistic expressions add to the understanding of the Pennsylvania Dutch heritage.

Pennsylvania German Pioneer Life was edited by Dr. Parsons. Including material printed with permission of The Pennsylvania German Society and Folklife Magazine, the book focuses on details of pioneer daily life.

Dr. Parsons is also visiting research professor at Juniata College, Huntingdon, Pa. A graduate of Ursinus College, he took his graduate degrees at The University of Pennsylvania. Parsons speaks the dialect, writes poetry in Pennsylvaniafaanisch Deitsch, and has composed settings for dialect verse in both idioms. Additional titles are scheduled for January 1986 release. They include Pennsylvania Soldier's Life 1861-65 and Cometen (About Comets). For information on current and future publications or to order books, contact Dr. William T. Parsons at P.O. Box 712, Colledgeville, Pa. 19426, or at Ursinus College, Colledgeville Pa. 19426.

Profile: Mr. Rue keeps records straight

By DAVID M. KANE
Staff Writer

Throughout the past 62 years, Ursinus College has been aided by the services of Mr. James Rue. Originally from Trenton, New Jersey, Mr Rue moved with his family to Norristown in 1923. With a recommendation from his previous employer in Trenton, he came to Ursinus looking for work. Mr. Rue was given a position in the treasurer's office as manager and chief accountant.

During a recent interview, Mr. Rue talked about life at Ursinus College during World War II. The Navy V12 program used this campus as an officer training school.

Brodbeck and Wilkinson dorms were used for the officer candidates' living quarters.

Mr. Rue noted that a balance had to be made between military training and an academic schedule. Civilian students also attended Ursinus while the Navy carried out its programs. The Navy officers set up their own offices in Bomberger Hall.

Another memorable occasion for Mr. Rue was the "bookwalk" of 1970. After Myrin Library was built and ready to hold books, both students and faculty participated in the move by carrying books from the then Alumni Library (now the College Union) to Myrin Library. The move took place in one day. Then the task of sorting and shelving began.

Because he has been at Ursinus longer than anyone, Mr. Rue was the most likely choice to take over the care of the archives in Myrin's Ursinusiana Room. "Well, I can remember many of the events that are recorded here," said Mr. Rue speaking of the archives. Consequently, when he retired from the treasurer's office at the age of 68, he seemed to make a smooth adjustment to his position as archive director. Mr. Rue's work in the archives is an invaluable aid to preserving the history of Ursinus College.

URSINUS PROFESSOR'S PHILOSOPHY TEXT PUBLISHED

Decisions in Philosophy of Religion by Ursinus professor William B. Williamson, has recently been published in a paperback edition by Prometheus Books.

A unique work, the book takes an impartial, balanced approach toward the difficult issues facing the philosophy of religion in today's fluid society. The 407-page text urges students to participate in ongoing debates and formulate opinions based on rational and reflective discussion. This takes the form of student research and weekly panel discussions. An introduction to the philosophy of religion, the book provides comprehensive view of problems facing a philosopher dealing with religious questions.

It also includes various answers different thinkers have given to these questions, and gives a brief suggestive criticism of the position taken.

No one answer is favored or recommended, but many answers are explored and discussed to encourage student involvement, and the ultimate decision is left to the individual student.

Among the chapters in the book are those on religious beliefs, knowing, miracles, man, morality, and immortality. Decisions in Philosophy of Religion originally was published by Charles E. Merrill, Columbus, Ohio, in 1976 and has been well-received in the field.

Dr. Williamson has been a member of the Ursinus faculty since 1968 and is head of the college's Philosophy and Religion department. He has won both the Lindback Award for distinguished teaching and the Professional Achievement Award for scholarly achievement. He holds B.S., S.T.B. and Ed.D. degrees from Temple University and an S.T.M. in theology and Christian education from Lutheran Seminary, Philadelphia.

SOMETIMES IT TAKES AN ARMY TO PAY BACK YOUR COLLEGE LOAN.

Paying back your college loan can be a long, uphill battle. But the Army's Loan Repayment Program makes it easy.

Each year you serve as a soldier, the Army will reduce your college debt by 1/3 or $1,500, whichever amount is greater. So after serving just 3 years, your college loan will be completely paid off.

You're eligible for this program with a National Direct Student Loan or a Guaranteed Student Loan or a Federally Insured Student Loan made after October 1, 1975. And the loan can't be in default.

And just because you've left college, don't think you'll stop learning in the Army. Our skill training offers a wealth of valuable high-tech, career-oriented skills. Call your local Army Recruiter to find out more.

U C ONE OF AMERICA'S BEST

In an exclusive nationwide survey of college presidents conducted by U.S. News and World Report, Ursinus College was selected as one of America's best colleges. The article, entitled "The Best Colleges in America," named 90 national colleges as the most selective schools emphasizing the liberal arts program.

Ursinus was also selected as one of only 200 nationwide colleges in The Best Buys in College Education by Edward B. Fiske, education editor of The New York Times as was reported in last semester's newspaper. The editors examined data on costs and academic quality on approximately 2000 colleges and universities across the nation. Their intent was to identify those institutions that are, in this era of escalating education costs, relative "bargains."

In Pennsylvania, which is home to over 113 colleges and universities, Ursinus was one of twelve to be selected for inclusion in the Best Buys.
