A university education is a big investment—one that is not to be taken lightly.

The national conversation on college affordability is a big deal. Websites like collegescorecard.ed.gov and collegefactual.com have been created in response to this conversation, giving high school students and their parents numerous resources by which to compare, among other things, the cost of colleges and universities across the country.

This year Andrews is trying something new: An increase in the Andrews Partnership Scholarship (APS), which means more money for more incoming students. Andrews has also increased its matching scholarships for summer camp work, meaning that students who are employed at summer camp will receive a larger matching amount beginning summer 2016.

How do you cash in on this increased APS availability? Go to the APS webpage and enter your current GPA and your ACT and/or SAT score(s) to get your personalized APS qualification amount.*
