

Washington University in St. Louis Washington University Open Scholarship

Neureuther Book Collection Essay Competition

Student Contests & Competitions

2010

A Deliciously Interesting Collection of Words

Maggie Gorman

Washington University in St Louis

Follow this and additional works at: <https://openscholarship.wustl.edu/nbcec>

Recommended Citation

Gorman, Maggie, "A Deliciously Interesting Collection of Words" (2010). Neureuther Book Collection Essay Competition. 5.
<https://openscholarship.wustl.edu/nbcec/5>

This Essay is brought to you for free and open access by the Student Contests & Competitions at Washington University Open Scholarship. It has been accepted for inclusion in Neureuther Book Collection Essay Competition by an authorized administrator of Washington University Open Scholarship. For more information, please contact digital@wumail.wustl.edu.

Maggie Gorman

Maggie Gorman
Neureuther Book Collection Competition
Undergraduate

A Deliciously Interesting Collection of Words

I was never really much of a reader. To be honest, the imaginative fun that I had while playing make-believe outside with my neighbors was always more stimulating (and much less limiting) than the seemingly boring stories we were required to read in school. I was an energetic tomboy who was too busy running around pretending to be a monkey to even sit long enough to crack open a novel. However, I quickly realized that even the most energetic of monkeys eventually had to refuel, and consequently discovered the one thing I enjoyed even more than living in my imagination – eating.

Food became central in my life at a very young age. Though it may have started out of necessity (having passed out on the playground one too many times) it quickly became enjoyable when I realized its creative potential. I started helping my Italian mother cook dinner by kindergarten when I still had to stand on a kitchen chair to reach the counter and was only allowed to use very dull knives. By eighth grade she trusted me with the entire operation, knowing I would have a delicious dinner prepared and waiting any night she had to work late. Though my mother was a wonderful resource, I was curious to explore what lay outside the realm of recipes that she had committed to memory (although her Penne Bolognese has never failed to impress), and started questioning how to make foods that I had tasted outside of our blue polka-dot kitchen.

I was around five years old when my collection officially started. The first book I received was rightfully titled “My First Cookbook” by Angela Wilkes, which had simple recipes for exciting a young palate and large pictures illustrating every step. I quickly outgrew this, however, for by the third grade (when my favorite foods were oysters on the half-shell and filet mignon “extra extra rare please”) I had paged through “The Joy of Cooking” in its entirety and was well versed in the art of sautéing, breading, and blanching – still curious for more.

Maggie Gorman

With technique somewhat more pinned down, I began looking for cookbooks of specialized interest. “Small Bites”, a book dedicated to tapas, was always good for a quick afternoon project, and “The Whimsical Bakehouse” helped me create numerous cakes for friends’ birthdays and was the reason I earned the vote of “Class Betty Crocker” by the time I graduated. I have books dedicated solely to Mac and Cheese, Tomatoes, Balsamic Vinegar, et al. so no matter what sort of craving I ever had after school, with a browse through my library and a quick trip to the supermarket, I was able to satisfy it to a tee.

As I grew up and began traveling the world, my collection grew as well. My first summer in France, which I spent taking cooking classes in local chefs’ houses in Provence, was probably the most influential trip for my collection. Rene Husson’s underground terracotta kitchen was the most memorable. He taught me first-hand how to make perfect profiteroles from a simple pat-a-choux, and an upside-down peach tart that was absolutely to die for. His book, “Recipes from Provence” is only a mere paperback published locally in Aix, but is still one of my favorites to date. A few years later, on a service trip to Nicaragua during my junior year of high school, I was unable to purchase an actual cookbook, but came back with notes on black bean tamales and fried plantains that were added to my binder of loose recipes that I’ve clipped from magazines (which, at this point, is the largest volume in the entire set).

Maggie Gorman

Cookbooks quickly became a go-to gift that my friends and family knew I would be more than enthusiastic to receive. Some were books that I had specifically requested but others have helped give my collection its x-factor – things my friends enjoy eating and wanted me to master to make for them at a later date (ex: “Amuse-Bouche” by Rick Tramonto with a note from my sister that reads “feel free to amuse my bouche any time...”). This category also includes some international favorites from cities my friends have visited while vacationing in places such as India, and Italy, and local cities like Kansas City and Charleston. These have helped expand my culinary horizon without even stepping foot out of my kitchen – just a whiff of garam masala and I’m right on a busy street corner in New Delhi, munching on samosas and sipping on sweet chai.

Of course, every good collection needs a celebrity appearance – and mine has over fifteen. Pretty much every chef that has ever been on the Food Network, including Giada DeLaurentis, Tyler Florence, Mario Batali, Rachel Ray, Martha Stewart, Emeril Lagasse, Bobby Flay, and Ina Garden have all personally signed cookbooks that now sit on my countertop. I have even shook hands with industry greats such as Thomas Keller (my hero), Ming Tsai, and a former pastry chef from the White House, Roland Mesnier, who signed and personalized his book “Dessert University” for me when I was eleven. And while I do have my own copy of Julia Child’s “Mastering the Art of French Cooking”, I am secretly waiting for my mother to pass down her 1st edition signed copy from the 60s to me...

At the end of the day, these books are the ones that finally got me interested in reading. They may not be distinguished classics in line to win Pulitzers anytime soon, but to me, they are the most interesting pages ever to be bound by a printing press. They have allowed me to use my imagination and have inspired me to action, therefore making them just as important (if not more so) than any work of Shakespeare or Hemmingway I have ever read. I still get the same excitement from paging through a new addition, expanding my creative horizons far beyond anywhere I had traveled during my monkey days on the playground. Though I still find novels novel, the words Bon Appétit are two that I will never get tired of reading again and again, and if all goes well, I will one day read them from the pages of my own cookbook which I hope to title “My Very Tasty Life”.

Maggie Gorman

Maggie Gorman

Bibliography:

*Signed

Signed and Personalized

Appel, Jennifer, and Allysa Torey. Magnolia Bakery Cookbook. New York: Simon & Schuster, 1999. Print.

Bastianich, Lidia, and Christopher Styler. Lidia's Italian Table. New York: William Morrow, 1998. Print.

*Batali, Mario. Molto Italiano. New York: Harper Collins, 2005. Print.

Chase, Sarah Leah. Pedaling Through Provence; New York: Workman Publishing, 1995. Print.

Chase, Sarah Leah. Pedaling Through Burgundy; New York: Workman Publishing, 1995. Print.

Child, Julia. Mastering the Art of French Cooking. New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 2001. Print.

Child, Julia. The French Chef Cookbook. New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1968. Print.

Dannenberg, Linda. French Tarts – 50 Savory and Sweet Recipes. New York: Artisan, 1997. Print.

*De Laurentiis, Giada. Giada's Kitchen. New York: Clarkson Potter, 2008. Print.

Della, Croce Julia. Pasta Classica: the Art of Italian Pasta Cooking. San Francisco: Chronicle, 1987. Print.

Engelbriet, Mary. Cookies Cookbook – The Queen's Best Recipes. New York: Smallwood & Stewart, Inc., 1998. Print.

English, Todd, and Sally Sampson. The Figs Table. New York, NY: Simon & Schuster, 1998. Print.

Fieri, Guy, and Ann Volkwein. Diners, Drive-ins, and Dives: an All-American Road Trip... with Recipes! New York: William Morrow/Harper Collins, 2008. Print.

Flay, Bobby, Stephanie Banyas, Sally Jackson, and Ben Fink. Bobby Flay's Mesa Grill Cookbook. New York: Clarkson Potter, 2007. Print.

*Florence, Tyler. Eat This Book. New York: Clarkson Potter, 2005. Print.

Flynn, Jane. A Taste of Kansas City... Then and Now. Kansas City: Wimmer, 2003.

Maggie Gorman

Print.

*Garten, Ina. Barefoot Contessa at Home. New York: Clarkson Potter, 2006. Print.

*Garten, Ina. Barefoot Contessa Back to Basics. New York: Clarkson Potter, 2008. Print.

Garten, Ina. Barefoot in Paris. New York: Clarkson Potter, 2004. Print.

Gilroy Garlic Festival Association, Inc. The Garlic Lovers' Cookbook. Berkley, Ca: Celestial Arts, 1982. Print.

*Greenspan, Dorie, and Julia Child. Baking with Julia. New York: Morrow, 1996. Print.

Habershon, Kate. Pancakes & waffles. New York: Ryland Peters & Small, Inc., 2002. Print.

Halm, Meesha. The Balsamic Vinegar Cookbook. San Francisco: Collins Publishers, 1996. Print.

Hansen, Kaye, and Liv Hansen. The Whimsical Bakehouse. New York: Clarkson Potter, 2002. Print.

Hazan, Marcella. Marcella Cucina. New York, NY: HarperCollins, 1997. Print.

*Hazan, Marcella. Marcella Says... New York: HarperCollins, 2004. Print.

Hensperger, Beth, and Chuck Williams. Bread. New York: Simon & Schuster Source, 2002. Print.

Husson, René, Philippe Galmiche, Christiane Galmiche, and Madeleine Vedel. Recipes from Provence. Saint-Affrique: Éd. Fleurines, 2002. Print.

Joyce, Jennifer. Small Bites. New York: DK, 2005. Print.

Katzman, Susan Manlin. Kids Cooking – Scrumptious Recipes for Cooks Ages 9 to 13.

China: Toppan Printing Co. (H.K.) Ltd., 1997. Print.

*Lee, Karen. The Occasional Vegetarian. New York: Warner, 1995. Print.

Mesnier, Roland, and Lauren Chattman. Dessert University. New York: Simon & Schuster, 2004. Print.

Negrin, Micol. Rustico: Regional Italian Country Cooking. New York: Clarkson Potter/Publishers, 2002. Print.

Petersen-Schepelern, Elsa. Pumpkin, Butternut & Squash. New York: Ryland Peters & Small, 2007. Print.

Maggie Gorman

Puente, Debbie. Elegantly Easy Crème Brulee. Los Angeles, Renaissance Books, 1998. Print.

Quevremont, Catherine. Tomatoes. London, UK: Hachette Illustrated, UK, Octopus Publishing Group, Ltd., 2003. Print.

Rombauer, Irma Von Starkloff, and Marion Rombauer Becker. Joy of Cooking. Indianapolis: Bobbs-Merrill, 1975. Print.

Rucker, Allen, Artie Bucco, and Michele Scicolone. The Sopranos Family Cookbook. New York: Warner, 2002. Print.

Sandoval, Richard, and David Ricketts. Modern Mexican Flavors. New York: Stewart, Tabori & Chang, 2002. Print.

Siegelman, Stephen, Bill Bettencourt, and Michele Scicolone. The Essentials of Italian Cooking. Menlo Park CA: Oxmoor House, 2007. Print.

Smith, Art. Back to the Table: the Reunion of Food and Family. New York: Hyperion, 2001. Print.

Spieler, Marlana. Macaroni and Cheese. Sacramento: Chronicle, 2006. Print.

Stewart, Martha. Martha Stewart's Baking Handbook. New York: Clarkson Potter, 2003. Print.

Tee, Susanna. Cupcakes. Bath, UK: Parragon Publishing, 2006. Print.

Tramonto, Rick. Amuse-Bouche. New York: Random House, 2002. Print.

Tsai, Ming, and Arthur Boehm. Blue Ginger: East Meets West. New York: Clarkson Potter, 1999. Print.

Wilkes, Angela. My First Cookbook. New York: Alfred A. Knopf, 1989. Print.