

Jigsaw

Volume 2015 | Issue 1

Article 24

2015

La Cicatriz

Mark J. Sutherland

The College at Brockport, msuth2@brockport.edu

Follow this and additional works at: <http://digitalcommons.brockport.edu/jigsaw>

 Part of the Poetry Commons

Repository Citation

Sutherland, Mark J. (2015) "La Cicatriz," Jigsaw: Vol. 2015 : Iss. 1 , Article 24.

Available at: <http://digitalcommons.brockport.edu/jigsaw/vol2015/iss1/24>

This Poem is brought to you for free and open access by Digital Commons @Brockport. It has been accepted for inclusion in Jigsaw by an authorized editor of Digital Commons @Brockport. For more information, please contact kmyers@brockport.edu.

La Cicatriz

By: Mark J Sutherland

Oppression never shows her teeth before she gnaws your last decade away. See how your trust drips from clever fangs finding your aorta of youth.

Her shovels are the Earth's pencil scratching
m e t a l o n m i n e r a l, rewriting crust you can't see from space
but still, she has man by the throat.

If you drew me, draw me as close as I to you—
I would dimple press into the flesh
of ground. Make me a crater,
I'm your depression.
A low shadow from a rainless cloud overhead, constant—friend.

Dry eyes wash everything We but wind ruminates and you find new ways to blow kisses

of kicks and scratch out my ears
with the manipulation of innocence.
These dust floods are my dear Pegasus losing his footing. We're hoofing it,
these souls of mine.

Dig in, dig in, dig in—

Move some earth around and all that inward diggin' leaves scars
no one sees. Found my worth in writing

la cicatriz.