Genesee Valley Historical Reprint Series: National Telephone Directory

To regard this early edition of AT&T's National Telephone Directory as quaint, from our cell phone-crazy vantage 130 years later, is to discount the significance of the technology at the time. But still, it is pretty cute, starting with the iconic blue bell on the cover and the introductory General Information, which includes some very useful instructions for those millions who didn't know how to handle the horn back in 1894. One needed to "give the bell crank one sharp turn" to get the operator's attention, take the hand telephone from the hook and "place it firmly against the ear," then "speak into the transmitter, with lips as close as possible to the mouthpiece." We smart (phone) alecs may be thinking "Well, duh!," but 19th-century early adopters probably struggled as hard to master that pesky crank as we do one-handed texting.

When this directory was published, a little less than 20 years after the invention of the telephone, long distance service extended from New York City as far west as Wisconsin, south to Washington DC, and north through coastal Maine. A map on the back cover depicts the network in a web of red lines, many of which end abruptly, suggesting that a single call may require some pretty fancy routing by the operators staffing the switchboards. No wonder AT&T bragged that "long distance telephone is instantaneous ... 1000 miles and return in 5 minutes!" Don't laugh – satellites were a long way off then.

That a national phone directory can be contained in 336 pages (including index) shows how few telephones there were at the close of the 19th century, especially in residences. Who were these folks with telephones in their homes – were they the technophiles of their day? Status seekers? Or ordinary folks just trying to stay connected in a modern way with far-flung family and friends? The great majority of listings are commercial, very often simply the name of an individual followed by his line of business (preserving house, picture shipper, tallow grease broker, ...). What fun to see a city or town this way, and what interesting possibilities for amateur cartographers and genealogists!

The Genesee Valley Historical Reprint Series is an effort of Milne Library, SUNY Geneseo.

This publication is intended to furnish a List of the Telephone Stations connected by Metallic-Circuit Lines with the “LONG DISTANCE” System of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Stations designated thus * are equipped with instruments suitable for service between points not more than 200 miles apart; all other stations are equipped with instruments suitable for service between all points included within the system.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company assumes no responsibility for errors or omissions that may occur in the publication of this book; nor does it guarantee the permanency of the telephone numbers assigned, or to be assigned, to stations. Please report in writing any errors or omissions that may occur, to the General Office of the Company, No. 18 Cortlandt Street, New York.

General Information.

For the convenience of persons not subscribers to local exchanges, telephones have been located at the various telephone offices and toll stations established at all points connected with this system. If it be desired to reach any particular person at any station, such person should be specifically called for. If the person so called for be not found, and no communication sent over the lines, no charge will be made. Messages can be sent collect if satisfactory to the receiver.

Customers desiring to communicate with persons not connected directly with this system can arrange to have appointments made by the Central Office.

A careful observance of the following will aid materially in securing good service :

To call Central Office, give the bell crank one sharp turn ; then take the hand telephone from the hook ; place it firmly against the ear and listen for the operator, who should answer, " What number ? " Give the operator the number of the station desired and the exchange within which such station is located. For example : " NEW YORK : Cortlandt 1520 ; " " CHICAGO : Main 52. " The operator will then repeat back your order, and may, to avoid errors and to expedite the service, ask for further information in relation to the station called for.

In talking, speak directly into the transmitter, with lips as close as possible to the mouth-piece. When you are through talking, return the hand telephone to the hook ; give the bell crank one sharp turn, to notify the operator that you have completed your conversation.

Answer your calls promptly. It is impossible to give quick service unless this is done.

Rates for Private wire or Special service will be furnished upon application to the general office of the Company.

Customers will confer a favor by reporting, in writing, any lack of courtesy, overcharge or unsatisfactory service, to Edward J. Hall, General Manager, No. 18 Cortlandt Street, New York.
