EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

During the 2003-2004 academic year, the College of Law:

- Created two new law centers: the Center for the Comparative Study of Metropolitan Government and the Center for Law, Health, and Society
 - Established environmental, land use and growth management law, and health law as priority areas of programmatic strength
- Created an Intellectual Property Task Force, comprised of graduates, to spearhead distinctive programmatic development in the IP area
 - Approved the offering of an Advanced IP Seminar and a course in Intellectual Property, Technology, and Media Licensing
- Approved the creation of a Criminal Justice Clinic to be offered in collaboration with the Georgia Justice Project
- Approved a pilot distance-education project involving our students and faculty and students and faculty at the University of Louisville School of Law
- Received approval of a joint degree program in law and health administration with the Georgia State University Robinson College of Business that offers a course of study for a joint Juris Doctor degree and either a Master of Science in Health Administration degree (MSHA) or a Master of Business Administration/Master of Health Administration (MBA/MHA) business degree
- Created two new judicial externships and added externships with the Georgia Technology Authority, the Georgia Secretary of State, and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention
- Completed a two-year review of the curriculum resulting in the approval of a program for recognition of students' pro bono work and the adoption of more stringent requirements to satisfy the Upper Level Writing Requirement
- Adopted a new Learning Outcomes Assessment Plan
- Supported the Provost's RFP Areas of Focus initiative by submitting a proposal for a Center for the Comparative Study of Metropolitan Growth and a pre-proposal for a Center for Law, Health, and Society
- Successfully recruited a new College Administrative Officer
- Hosted Dr. Raymond Young, Professor of Municipal Law, in the Faculty of Law, at the University of British Columbia, Canada, the College's first Senior Fulbright Scholar in residence
- Celebrated the 10th anniversary of the Tax Clinic with a gala event
- Inaugurated an Annual Award for "Innovation and Excellence in Teaching Professionalism"
- Received approval for a dedicated law school $20 per credit hour tuition increase to support programmatic initiatives and enhanced communications/media staff support

- Developed an activity based budget for the college's non-instructional functions and re-justified 10% of the college's non-administrative budget
 - Received approval of $272,329 in funding for five student technology fee proposals, including a smart technology upgrade for the new classroom, Room 201
 - Received $233,173 in annual fund giving from graduates (54 giving $1,000 or more) and ended the year with endowments totaling $5,606,874
 - Completed plans for the renovation of the courtroom to be equipped with state of the art technology and for the second phase of expansion on the Urban Life Building's sixth floor
 - Planned and coordinated the development of an alumni data base with various University units
 - Processed more than 3600 applications for 234 students enrolled in fall 2003
 - Increased the diversity of the fall 2003 class with minorities making up 22% of the class, up from 16% in the fall 2002 class
 - Improved applicant credentials of the entering 2003 class with median LSAT scores rising to 158 from 157 in the prior year
 - Received a first place award for the "Smart Classroom Quick Reference Guide" from the Association for Computing Machinery's Division on University Computing
- Received a $10,000 grant from the SmarterKids Foundation to implement Symposium technology that provides markup and touch control on PC monitors to capture and save any screen handwriting for future use
- Sponsored six academic seminars covering a range of topics: (1) "No Child Left Behind: Good Policy or Good Politics?"; (2) "Critical Issues in Georgia Water Law and Policy"; (3) "Rethinking the Licensing of New Attorneys: An Exploration of Alternatives to the Bar Exam"; (4) The W. Lee Burge Conference on Teaching Professionalism; (5) "Brown v. Board of Education: A Dream in the Balance" (with the Southern Regional Council); and (6) the First Annual Southeastern Symposium on "Equality: America's Struggle" (Georgia State and Emory University chapters of The Federalist Society)
- Hosted Southeastern Bankruptcy Law Institute visiting law professors, Kenneth Klee and David Epstein
 - Sponsored three Henry J. Miller Distinguished lecturers, Professor Geoffrey Hazard, Judge Kenneth Starr, and Dean Stanley Fish
 - Won the National Trial Advocacy Competition sponsored by the Michigan State University College of Law for the second time
 - Launched the Legislative Caucus of the Student Bar Association, which hosted the first Annual Legislative Symposium that featured prominent Georgia legislative leaders engaged in an open discussion of 2004 state legislative issues

NARRATIVE SECTION

OVERVIEW OF THE COLLEGE OF LAW

The 2003-04 academic year was one of progress and achievements for the College of Law. Throughout the college's history the pursuit of excellence has been a pervasive theme. The college continues to thrive with a motivated and enthusiastic student body and a faculty that values teaching, scholarship, and community service. This academic enterprise enjoys strong staff support. Although no new dean was selected as a result of the dean search process, the college welcomed Interim Dean Steven Kaminshine on July 1, 2004. He has served as Associate Dean for Academic Affairs for the past seven years and has been a member of the faculty since 1984.

College of Law faculty members have earned a well deserved reputation as excellent teachers. Our students gave the faculty rave reviews for The Princeton Review's 2005 edition of The Best Law Schools. Law students described their education as "world class" and "top of the line — one that teaches them "key critical thinking and practical skills." One student commented, "Never before in my life have I been taught to think so abstractly and creatively." Students described their professors as "vibrant, enthusiastic people, involved in various parts of the legal community as well as being law school professors."

During 2003 almost one-third of the faculty published books or book supplements. About half of the faculty concentrates on the publication of traditional law review articles. Faculty development will continue to be important. During the college's early life major attention had to be directed at accreditation issues, the creation of the college's institutional structure, curricular development, and the need to build strong external relationships with our graduates, friends, the bench, and the bar. Now more focus needs to be directed at faculty development and, in particular, the faculty's scholarly productivity.

Amendments should be made to the Reappointment, Promotion and Tenure Document to provide for additional institutional support for untenured professors' scholarly pursuits and to reflect the current tenure norm that requires the publication of three rather than "two products of legal research that are of substantial legal academic merit." With new monies made available by the dedicated tuition increase next year, an amount has been allocated to support one-to-two day visits by law faculty from other schools to speak about their scholarship. This faculty workshop series should enhance intellectual discourse and provide opportunities for our faculty to collaborate with other members of the academy.

More women are represented on our faculty than is the case for most law schools. Women constituted half of the new faculty members hired in recent years for non-chaired positions. Although an African-American faculty member was successfully recruited in 2002, continued efforts need to be undertaken to increase the representation of minorities on the faculty.

Another challenge the faculty faces is the completion of more strategic action steps adopted by the faculty in the 2001-02 academic year. The faculty made substantial progress this year in establishing programmatic priorities called for by the college's strategic plan. It created a center for the comparative study of metropolitan growth and a health law center. Intellectual property law is another area that has been targeted for growth; the expansion of the curriculum in this area and the creation by our graduates of an Advisory IP Task Force to garner private support shows the potential for further development. A new criminal law clinic will begin operation in the fall in collaboration with the Georgia Justice Project. This clinic will further implement a strategic objective for the college to be involved in our urban community. The faculty also approved the creation of a joint degree program in health administration and law with the Robinson College of Business at Georgia State. This initiative is in keeping with the college's strategic action plans for interdisciplinary programs.

The college attracted a more highly credentialed student body in 2003 than it has in recent years. The quality of the students enrolled in the 2003 class increased in comparison to the last nine classes. The median LSAT score for the 2003 class was 158, up from 157 for the 2002 class, with 156 or 157 being the norm for a number of years. The college received a record number of applications—3,644 compared to 2,899 processed for the fall 2002 class. There were 17 students admitted in 2003 with LSATs over 163. Another striking figure was the climb in the highest score of the bottom 25% of the class. Since 1993 (a year in which the college received scholarship support from a number of law firms to help attract high quality applicants) the 25th percentile LSAT score usually has hovered between 153 and 154. For the fall 2003 class the 25th percentile LSAT score climbed to 156, up from 154 in fall 2002. These trends indicate that the college's reputation is growing. The credentials of the fall 2004 incoming students continued to rise with a median LSAT of 159 and a LSAT 25th percentile score of 157.

Despite the increase in student credentials, the college continues to struggle to attract a diversified student body. The college now has more than one million dollars in scholarship endowments, but much more is needed to enable it to attract minority students who are aggressively recruited by all law schools. There was a noticeable increase in minority enrollment in fall 2003. Minorities made up 22% of the fall 2003 entering class, compared to 16% for the fall 2002 class. For the past seven years, minorities typically have comprised 15% to 17% of the entering class.

The college's program of part-time legal study continues to attract top quality students whose maturity and motivation have a spillover effect upon the entire student body. These students enrich the intellectual growth of all students by bringing their workplace and life experiences to bear upon legal issues under discussion in the classroom or online. The bench and bar describe our students as hard workers who take ideas seriously and are eager to rise to the challenges of the legal profession.

Both bar passage rates and employment statistics indicate that graduates are well prepared for the market. All Georgia State graduates sitting for the July 2003 Georgia Bar examination achieved a pass rate of 89.9%; first time takers achieved a pass rate of 92.6%. The bar passage rate for all of our graduates sitting for the February 2004 Georgia Bar examination was 72.0%, and for first time takers, it was 81.8%. Georgia State graduates taking the February 2004 Georgia bar exam achieved a higher rate of passage for all applicants, for first time takers, and for the average Multi-state Bar Exam than did graduates of the three other accredited law schools in Georgia, Emory University, the University of Georgia, and Mercer University.

Placement statistics for College of Law 2003 graduates six months after graduation show that 94% of those responding were employed, up from 93% for the 2002 class. More of our graduates are finding employment in large law firms (51 or more lawyers). This trend indicates the market acceptability of our students. In the 2003 class, 19% found employment in large law firms. The next challenge is to place more of our graduates throughout the country. Many of our students chose to remain in the Atlanta metropolitan region due to the desirability of the area and high market demand for new law graduates. The percentage of 2003 graduates employed in Georgia is 90%, with 71% employed in the Atlanta metropolitan area. The median salary for the 2003 class was $55,000 and the mean salary was $67,049.

The college's most pressing needs are for additional funds to support the academic enterprise. With the exception of $50,000, which was added in Fiscal Year 1998 for technology equipment replacements, the college has not received any funding in at least the last decade for additional support for supplies, equipment, and photocopying. In addition, no increases in funding have been provided for technology instruction staff support even though the number of computers in the college has grown from 151 in 1996 to 215 in 2004 and classroom instruction now includes the use of technology in wired classrooms. In order to be able to continue to operate the college, one vacant faculty position line (made available due to a retirement) has been used to cover unbudgeted expenses, including technology instruction staff support. The college's budget is supplemented further by monies freed up when faculty members teach at other law schools. Fortunately, other law schools seek our talented faculty for temporary vacancies. Without this type of funding our budgetary picture would be extremely bleak.

The lack of funds for an effective communications program has hampered the college's ability to spread the word about how great it is. The dedicated law school tuition increase of $20 per credit hour, which was approved by the Board of Regents in 2004 to go into effect in Fiscal Year 2005, should enable the college to hire a staff person to make strides in increasing the visibility of the college. For Fiscal Year 2005, the college's budget was increased by $50,000 for faculty summer teaching and research. Although the Law Library's acquisition budget was increased by $112,000, bringing the total Law Library acquisitions budget up to $813,000 for Fiscal Year 2005, further progress is needed in funding the Law Library's acquisition budget, which until this year had not been increased since Fiscal Year 2000 when it was increased from $681,000 to $701,000.

The College of Law's development program has expanded enormously since 2000. Our graduates' contribution to the annual fund, in particular, has grown by leaps and bounds. Graduate giving for the 2004 fiscal year was at $233,173, up from $162,441 last year and up from $33,000 in 1999. This year the percentage of graduates who contributed to the annual fund also increased dramatically — 21%, the highest level attained in the law school's history and up from 17% last year. This support bodes well for the law school's future, one that will be increasingly dependent upon private funding due to cutbacks in state funding for higher education. Another indicator is the number of graduates who give at the $1000 level or above. For Fiscal Year 2004 the number of such graduates was 54, up from 46 last year. Once the law firm scholarship program ended in the mid-1990s, the law school was fortunate to receive scholarship funding from the Atlanta Law School (ALS) Foundation. Last year the college received $153,578 in funding for scholarships from the ALS Foundation; since August 1996 when the ALS funding began, the law school has received $1,071,638 (as of June 30, 2004) from the ALS Foundation. The Loridans and Trammel Foundations have also continued to support the law school. The Loridans Foundation made a $10,000 gift to the college's 20th anniversary scholarship fund, and the Trammel Foundation made a pledge for the same amount for this purpose, payable in the fall of 2004.

During 2003-04 plans for the expansion into the remaining half of the 6th floor were completed. It is hoped that the college can occupy this space no later than fall 2005. Additional classroom space has been made available to the college on the second and third floors in the space between the Urban Life building and the University Center building, including the addition of Room 201 this fall. This additional space has eased to some extent the college's classroom shortage, but a shortage of space for student gatherings and activities as well as adequate classroom space continues to exist. The law school can only progress to the next level of excellence with a dedicated building designed for legal education. Many law schools have modernized their facilities over the last decade creating a more competitive environment when it comes to legal education space. The college also bears the a typical situation of sharing space with other colleges in the same building. It is most unusual for a law school not to be housed in its own building. The Princeton Review in its 2005 edition describes some of our facilities as "lackluster." On the positive side, the U.S. News & World Report moved the ranking of the college up to 89 (91 last year); the college is the youngest law school in the top 100 law schools list. The college also received ranking as among the "Best Schools for Your Money" by the National Jurist magazine in its February 2004 ranking. The National Jurist placed the law school in its "very good value" category for public legal education based on tuition, bar exam passage rates, unemployment rates, and faculty/student ratios, among other factors. The college continues to hold its ranking by the National Jurist as the #1th "most wired" law school in the country.

SECTION A. SUMMARY OF MAJOR ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Planning for the Future, Priority Setting and the Creation of Centers

Georgia State University's strategic goals call for selected graduate programs to "reflect our distinctiveness and our stated mission as a research university in an urban setting." They further direct the College of Law "to develop programs and curricula that bridge legal theory and practice, serve constituencies in the surrounding metropolitan area, and possess interdisciplinary dimensions." To achieve these goals, the college has developed areas of programmatic strength by taking advantage of our urban location in Atlanta. As part of a year-long strategic planning process during the 2003-04 academic year, several faculty members developed proposals that led to the creation of two law centers, one for the comparative study of metropolitan growth and the other for law, health and society. Both centers also carry out the University's strategic goals to "advance a multidisciplinary approach to future complex problems and needs," and they advance the University's existing academic excellence in policy as it relates to the environment, health, transportation, and law. The centers begin operation in Fiscal Year 2005 with dedicated funds made available by a law school tuition increase approved by the Board of Regents.

The Center for the Comparative Study of Metropolitan Growth will serve as a forum for research and advanced study related to the legal and institutional arrangements that shape the built and natural environments. By performing comparative studies of modern metropolitan areas, the center will identify and articulate solutions to the impact of urban growth upon the environment. The Center for Law, Health and Society will address contemporary issues arising in areas where law, ethics, and health intersect. With the recognition of the pivotal role that law and ethical considerations play in the development of health policies, the center will encourage interdisciplinary initiatives across health related disciplines to promote healthy communities. As part of the center, the college has partnered with the Atlanta Legal Aid Society to create an on-site legal services clinic at a local hospital to serve the needs of low-income patients for access to medical, social, and legal services.

The college's strategic action steps call for it to develop priorities. Certain programmatic decisions made this year have helped to develop priorities for future years. The creation of the two centers will provide additional support for the curricular areas of health law, growth management law, environmental law, and land use law where strong faculty expertise exists. Further, the activities of both of these centers should strengthen our existing State Law, Legislation and Policy program, sometimes termed the Capital City program. The creation of a Criminal Justice Clinic in collaboration with the Georgia Justice Project, initiated by the college's Burge Chair in Law and Ethics, meets the college's strategic action step to promote professionalism and combine pedagogy with public involvement and service. Two new courses in Health Legislation and Advocacy will provide additional focus to the college's Legislation Clinic and Practicum by providing instruction in how health legislation becomes enacted into law at the state level, including drafting legislation, legislative organization and procedure, and health advocacy. These courses further the college's strategic action step of "participating in law reform initiatives and other activities involving the processes of state and local government." In addition, the Intellectual Property curriculum was expanded during the 2003-2004 academic year with the creation of two new courses, Advanced Intellectual Property Seminar and Intellectual Property, Technology, and Media Licensing.

The above actions set priorities and established law school distinctiveness; other action steps were completed as well. The faculty completed a two-year review of the curriculum. The Curriculum Committee examined required courses and programs of study at over 30 other law schools to evaluate trends and new approaches to legal education. Following extensive discussion, the faculty decided to keep the first-year curriculum as presently constituted, to retain the Litigation Workshop course, and to specify recommended courses, in addition to required courses, that form the core of a legal education. As part of its curricular review, the faculty adopted a new policy to encourage students to participate in pro bono activities. Students who complete 50 hours or more of pro bono work receive a certificate and recognition at graduation ceremonies. This year the committee explored methods to improve students' written communication skills. As a result, the faculty approved more stringent guidelines for the upper level writing requirement.

The Center for the Comparative Study of Growth Management will help fulfill another action step of "expand[ing] on-going initiatives to find solutions to pressing urban problems created by urban sprawl." Center plans call for visiting foreign scholars to provide courses and engage our faculty in comparative approaches to growth management. The college has long aspired to develop a program of visiting scholars capable of "offering enrichment courses" that prepare our students "for practice in a globalized environment."

Interdisciplinary Programs

The College of Law continues to make great strides in fulfilling the University's strategic goal to advance "a multidisciplinary approach to future complex problems and needs." A joint degree program in law and health administration with Georgia State's Robinson College of Business was created this year. This joint degree program enables students to earn jointly a Juris Doctor degree and either a Master of Science in Health Administration degree (MSHA) or a Master of Business Administration/Master of Health Administration (MBAIMHA) business degree. The college now has five joint degree programs; the other programs are in law and business administration with the Robinson College of Business, in law and public administration with Georgia State's Andrew Young School of Policy Studies, in law and philosophy with the University's College of Arts and Sciences, and in law and city and regional planning with the Georgia Institute of Technology's City and Regional Planning Program in its College of Architecture. This year, as in past years, law students studied in the same classroom with Georgia Tech's city and regional planning students. Professor Scott continued to teach Emory medical students as a faculty fellow with Emory's Center for Ethics in Public Policy and the Professions.

International Study and Fulbright Scholars

This summer, the college again provided students with the opportunity to study abroad in its Summer Academy in International Commercial Arbitration in Linz, Austria. Students further had the opportunity to visit arbitration courts in Budapest, Munich, Prague, and Vienna. The College of Law was delighted to have Dr. Ray Young, our first Fulbright Senior Scholar, in residence during the spring semester. Professor Young is a Professor of Municipal Law in the Faculty of Law at the University of British Columbia, Canada (UBC) and teaches the graduate course in Planning and Land Use Law in the School of Community and Regional Planning at UBC. During his visit he did research on the impact of NAFTA's Chapter 11 (investor protection) on growth management legislation and land use controls at the local government level. Dr. WanPyo Hong, Associate Professor in Real Estate Management at Myongji College in Seoul, Korea, who is a recipient of a 2004-05 Fulbright Scholarship award, will begin his visit at the college in February 2004. He requested affiliation with the college "because of [its] impressive work on land use law."

Urban and Community Outreach

The college has a strong tradition of community outreach to the Atlanta region and the state of Georgia. This year the college again engaged in programmatic initiatives and activities in furtherance of its strategic goal to capitalize on its capital city, urban location and to use the metropolitan Atlanta area as a resource to invigorate teaching, scholarship, and community service. The creation of centers in growth management and in health law and ethics will help fulfill the law school's goal "to integrate itself into the local community by identifying areas in which the strengths of its faculty complement its urban, capital city environment and to improve that environment through educational initiatives and research." As an urban, public law school, it is our mission to find solutions to pressing social problems, especially those metropolitan-wide and state problems that involve the law. Examples of how the law school is meeting these goals next follow:

1. Tax Clinic: The college celebrated the tenth anniversary of the Tax Clinic on October 30, 2003 at a gala reception and dinner that brought together law faculty, students, graduates, and members of the bench and bar. Arlene Kay, Executive Director Systemic Advocacy, of the Internal Revenue Service's Taxpayer Advocate Service was the keynote speaker. Since qualifying for an I.R.S. funding program in 1999, the Tax Clinic's case load has nearly tripled. Today, the Clinic operates with the assistance of 15 to 20 students each semester and serves approximately 170 low-income taxpayers who are involved in tax disputes with the I.R.S. The Clinic has received $544,656 in I.R.S. grants since first qualifying for funding; this year's grant was $75,000. These funds have helped the college expand the Clinic's operation and have enabled the college to establish a permanent endowment fund to support the Clinic in future years.
2. Externship Program: The college's very successful Externship Program has expanded significantly in recent years. We now have 80 placements. This year the law school created two new judicial externships and added externships with the Georgia Technology Authority, the Georgia Secretary of State, and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.
3. State Law, Legislation & Policy: Students interned at the State Capitol and performed legal research for Georgia General Assembly committees again this year as part of the college's Legislation Practicum and Clinic. The students analyzed and provided legal research on such key topics as proposals to change the regime of water rights and permits, Governor Sonny Perdue's ethics proposals, MARTA financing options, and a proposal to limit liability of nursing homes. This year a health legislation track was added to the Practicum, and students provided research on proposed reforms to Medicaid and to the Medicare prescription drug program involving access by senior citizens.

4. City of Atlanta Law Department Project: Under the leadership of Atlanta's City Attorney, Linda DiSantis, a 1988 graduate of the college, collaboration has begun between the college and the City Law Department to research specific city legal issues. Students in Professor Colin Crawford's Urban Environmental Law Seminar, for example, drafted model ordinances for use by city attorneys. Future plans call for law professors to provide specialized training for city attorneys, guest lectures from city attorneys in courses related to municipal law, and joint research projects. Last year our special relationship with the city of Atlanta began when Professor Mark Kadish served on a commission that studied the City of Atlanta municipal court system. Recommendations made by the commission showed the city how to realize $10 million in savings.
5. Criminal Justice Clinic: This clinic will begin operation this fall under the supervision of Professor Clark Cunningham, the Burge Chair in Law and Ethics, in collaboration with the Georgia Justice Project, which provides legal representation to persons accused of crimes and provides post-prison release support to clients who contract with the Project to address their social service needs.
6. Consortium on Negotiation and Conflict Resolution (CNCR): CNCR is an inter-institutional, interdisciplinary program that supports theory building and practice in conflict prevention and resolution. CNCR supports three primary programs, all of which have research and service components: (1) the Conflict Resolution in Higher Education program assists the 34 institutions of higher education within the University System of Georgia to design and implement conflict management programs; (2) the Conflict Resolution in Schools Program (CRiSP) examines the institutionalization of conflict resolution education in K-12 schools; and (3) the Environmental Dispute Resolution program focuses mostly on international environmental conflict. In Fiscal Year 2004, CNCR staff intervened in several major campus conflicts and conducted numerous training workshops for the Board of Regents. As part of its CRiSP program, CNCR staff presented at several conferences, hosted a conference, and created the Conflict Management in Education Legislation Database that provides access to current and pending school conflict management legislation for school stakeholders, conflict management practitioners, and policy makers. In collaboration with the Permanent Court of Arbitration in The Hague, CNCR hosted a conference on resolving international environmental disputes. In addition, CNCR staff published a number of scholarly articles in the field and filled leadership positions on related board and associations.

The Law School as an Intellectual Hub

The number of outstanding speakers brought to campus has steadily increased. This year the college hosted the annual professionalism program that rotates among Georgia's four accredited law schools. Professor Clark Cunningham, the Burge Chair in Law and Ethics, inaugurated a national competition to recognize innovation and excellence in the teaching of professionalism by law professors. At a January 30, 2004 Conference on Teaching Professionalism and Award Ceremony, the three law school professors, who were finalists for the award, made presentations on their innovative methods of teaching professionalism. The Law Review Symposium, held the day before the professionalism program, explored "Alternatives to the Bar Exam." Various licensing models were discussed in different formats involving panel presentations, small group discussions, and open discussion sessions. Speakers, including representatives from Scotland and England, discussed international licensing models; other speakers presented alternative licensing models in the United States. The fall Henry J. Miller Distinguished lecturers, Judge Kenneth Starr and Professor Geoffrey Hazard, presented clashing views on the regulation of judicial campaign speech, and spring lecturer, Dean Stanley Fish, enlightened us on the timeliness of a study of Hobbes.

The law school offered seminars on such important policy issues as: "No Child Left Behind: Good Policy or Good Politics?", co-hosted with Georgia State's College of Education. The seminar focused on educational accountability in Georgia as a result of recently enacted federal legislation. A symposium, on January 7, 2004, brought together renowned experts and scholars to analyze critical issues left unresolved by Georgia's water law and policy. A number of law professors from around the country provided a primer on the divergent approaches to water law among the states. Experts offered their views on such diverse topics as the impacts of water markets upon the environment, the practicalities of interstate water compacts, and the challenges of water planning in large metropolitan areas. In April, the college in partnership with the Southern Regional Council, commemorated the 50th anniversary of Brown v. Board of Education and brought a number of community organizations to Georgia State to explore the impact of this landmark desegregation case and its still unfilled goal for racial equality.

The endowment established by the Southeastern Bankruptcy Law Institute (SBLI) to support visits by nationally known experts in the bankruptcy field once again supported a program in which the visitors taught classes at the law school, shared some of their research interests with faculty, met with members of the SBLI, and made a presentation on a bankruptcy related topic to bankruptcy lawyers and judges. Professor Kenneth Klee of the University of California at Los Angeles School of Law returned during the fall of 2003 for a second visit, and Professor David Epstein of the Southern Methodist University School of Law served as the SBLI visitor during the 2004 spring semester.

The college was pleased to honor Justice Robert Benham of the Supreme Court of Georgia as the 1st recipient of the Ben F. Johnson, Jr. Public Service Award. Named in honor of the college's founding dean, this award recognizes a Georgia lawyer who has made outstanding contributions to his profession and community. Justice Benham was the first African-American to serve on the Georgia Court of Appeals and on the Supreme Court of Georgia. He is a wonderful friend of the college and regularly comes to campus to provide advice and encouragement to the college's students.

Technology Enhancements

The college is proud of the technological improvements that have been made to our facilities in the past few years and our willingness to embrace new technological innovations. In fall 2002, each of the law school's classrooms was upgraded with Smart Podiums containing multimedia equipment to operate ceiling mounted LCD projections systems, PCs with DVD players, VCRs, laptops, and e-Beam dry erase recording systems. This year, a new classroom, Room 201, will be remodeled with similar technology, and the courtroom will also be completely modernized with the latest technology including a new audio system, a new projection system, a plasma display unit, a Smart Podium, a camera recording system, and video-conferencing capability. The new equipment enables faculty to enhance classroom instruction with the use of technology in a user friendly environment.

In spring 2004, new software and an interactive computer monitor were added to the Smart Podium classroom technology systems. The interactive monitor enables users to project onto a whiteboard what they handwrite with a stylus on the computer screen. In addition to functioning as an electronic whiteboard, this new technology permits professors to add additional screens when the whiteboard is filled, to annotate over a variety of documents, images, and web pages using the stylus, and to make screen captures of all handwritten material projected on the whiteboard. Gone are the days when professors wrote and made erasures on a blackboard with their backs to the class! Today they project their stylus handwriting while facing their students. But perhaps the greatest feature of this software is its capability to capture and save any screen handwriting for future use.

Student technology fee revenues in recent years helped fund a number of other improvements in addition to the ones highlighted above. The college submits proposals to a University Technology Fee Subcommittee for approval. Over the last five years (Fiscal Years 2001-2005), the college has been allocated $1,426,799 in funding from University administered student technology fees. The classroom upgrades added 375 computer ports for student use in class or for study. We have also upgraded our student computer lab, added two computer training labs, created six public e-mail computer stations in the law school's lobby area, networked 113 law library carrels with data and electricity ports, and wired study tables in two law library study group rooms providing both electricity and network access for laptop computers, with three more study rooms in the pipeline for wiring over the summer of 2004. Computer-based test taking, offered for the first time in the fall of 2001, has grown rapidly. For the 2003-04 academic year, over one third of the college's law students utilized proprietary exam software to take over 1350 exams on laptop computers. In the prior academic year, 2002-2003, 400 such exams were administered to 185 students.

Increased Funding chief

State cutbacks for higher education funding in recent years have adversely affected our academic programs and have stymied growth in areas of strategic importance. The University expects to receive a net appropriation in Fiscal Year 2005 of $4 million, an amount less than the University received in the academic year, 2002-2003. As part of its May 2002 Plan of Improvement prepared in connection with the college's accreditation review in 2000 by the American Bar Association and the Association of American Law Schools and the University's Academic Review Program, the college has sought funding for:

1. A fifth first-year writing instructor
2. Interdisciplinary and urban focused initiatives, including additional funding for the State Law, Legislation & Policy program; initiatives that address the problems of cities such as urban sprawl; interdisciplinary linkages with Georgia Tech and Emory University's Medical School; and the Consortium on Negotiation and Conflict Resolution
3. Visits and exchanges in connection with the American Bar Association's Central and East European Law Initiative (CEELI), including visits and exchanges of lawyers, judges, and students from former communist countries
4. Instruction by foreign law professors to add a comparative and international component to various parts of the curriculum
5. Exploration of a graduate program for training foreign lawyers or law students in United States law
6. More graduate research assistant appointments to improve the diversity of the student body
7. A dedicated staff position to handle administrative and academic responsibilities for the Summer Skills Program and the Academic Enrichment Program
8. A dedicated staff position to assist and foster student life activities
9. Increased support for summer research and teaching
10. Eminent scholar status for the Ben F. Johnson, Jr. Chair in Law
11. A visiting faculty member during each academic year
12. Staff support for the State Law, Legislation & Policy program and new urban focused initiatives

13. A joint faculty appointment in the college and the University's Andrew Young School of Policy Studies
14. Dedicated full and part-time staff support to provide instructional technology support to faculty using the technology now installed in college classrooms
15. Increases to the Law Library's acquisitions budget and an increase in law librarians to handle routine Law Library functions and the research needs of faculty, students, and staff; and
16. A new staff position with responsibilities for public relations and print media management and additional funds to produce competitive publications and multi-media instructions for recruitment, public relations, and development.

The University approved funding for the following Plan of Improvement action items: $100,000 for increased support for summer research and teaching - $50,000 each for Fiscal Year 2004 and Fiscal Year 2005; $50,000 + fringes for a staff person to support faculty with instructional technology in Fiscal Year 2004; and $40,000 + fringes for a non-tenured track writing instructor for Fiscal Year 2004. No funding was made available in Fiscal Year 2004 for any of these approved activities and no salary increases were made as well. In Fiscal Year 2005, which begins on July 1, 2004, the University allocated $50,000 to the college for increased summer research and teaching support. In addition, the University allocated $113,000 for Law Library acquisitions, bringing the total Law Library acquisitions budget up to $813,000 in Fiscal Year 2005; this budget had not been increased since Fiscal Year 2000 when it increased from $681,000 to $701,000.

The college was allocated $251,495 in student technology fees for expenditure during Fiscal Year 2004, of which $138,078 was designated for the courtroom modernization. For the coming year, Fiscal Year 2005, the college received an allocation of $272,329, including $205,806 for the renovation of a new classroom, Room 201.

Development and Cultivation of Graduates

With the assistance of the college's Development Director and her staff, the Dean again devoted considerable time to fund raising and alumni and community cultivation. Significant progress was made this year in increasing both the percentages of graduates who give to the annual fund and in the total amount of graduate giving. Again this year, the Dean visited a number of law firms to seek 20th anniversary scholarship funding and to encourage volunteers to increase the participation of their fellow Georgia State colleagues in the college's annual fund. Here are the figures:

|---------------------------------|----------------------------------|
| Overall graduate giving: | $233,173 (last year: $162,441) |
| Overall graduate participation: | 21% (last year: 17%) |

|---|----|----------------|
| Class years with 20% participation or better: | 14 | (last year: 6) |
| Number of law firms at 100% alumni participation: | 14 | (last year: 2) |
| Number of graduates giving $1,000 or more: | 54 | (last year 46) |

These figures are quite remarkable given the fact that graduate giving was $33,000 in the 1998-1999 academic year. It has grown as follows: $33,000 (1998-1999); $53,000 (1999-2000); $69,000 (2000-2001); $147,902 (2001-2002); $162,441 (2002-2003); and $233,173 (2003-2004).

The 20th anniversary scholarship funding initiative concluded this year with an endowment of $180,136 as of June 30, 2004. Both the Jones Day law firm and the Trammel Foundation made pledges for a substantial contribution in the next fiscal year to this fund, and Jones Day also made a gift this year to the 20th Anniversary fund. Another initiative was to increase funding of the Pat Morgan and David Maleski scholarship endowments. As of June 30, 2004, the Morgan endowed scholarship fund had reached $32,488 and the Maleski endowed scholarship account was at $93,788.

Each of this year's reunion classes (1988, 1993, 1998) undertook special initiatives last year. While the 1988 and 1998 classes sought to increase class giving and participation, the class of 1993, with a challenge gift from classmate Alan Rosenberg's family foundation, raised funds for an endowed scholarship in memory of Johans Droogmans, a 1993 graduate, who was killed in an automobile accident in September 2003. Graduates at the Alston & Bird law firm, at which Mr. Droogmans practiced law as head of the International Group, also raised funds for this endowment. At the end of the 2004 Fiscal Year, $39,912 had been donated to this fund.

Another new fund raising initiative involved the activities of a group of graduates who created an advisory task force to support Intellectual Property Law developments at the law school. The task force raised over $28,000 as of June 30th and secured an additional $42,800 in pledges.

The Board of Visitors continued to support the endowed scholarship they have created. As of June 30, 2004, the fund had reached $159,345 with $40,375 in additional outstanding pledges. The Atlanta Law School Foundation provided $153,578 in scholarship funding during Fiscal Year 2004.

This year the first installment on a pledge to establish a $10,000 endowment to support the Ben F. Johnson, Jr. Public Service Award ceremony was also received.

As of June 30, 2004 the college's endowment was $5,606,874, up from $431,893 at the end of the 1995-1996 Fiscal Year, and the college's 14 endowed scholarship funds had reached $1,146,162.

Law Library Accomplishments

As reported to the American Bar Association in Fall 2003, the Law Library recorded a net gain of 1738 hardcopy titles (added 2,123 titles and withdrew 385 titles), 5 microform titles, and 46 audiovisual titles. The total volume count (including volume equivalents) is 330,727 volumes of which 147,995 volumes are hard copies and 182,732 volumes are microform. The attendance record in our Law Library has remained fairly constant over time. The total number of patron entries and exits to the Law Library totaled 315,472 during the 2003-2004 academic year.

In recent years the Law Library's electronic services have expanded. Our Electronic Service Librarian creates and manages information including databases, integrated library systems, client-server applications, hardware, software, networks, and electronic information resources. He provides students, faculty, and librarians with training on reference and research technologies, educates them in the use of law library information systems, and coordinates Westlaw and LexisNexis training for law students and faculty. In addition, he develops and maintains the Law Library's web site. Students have access to both a computer lab and a computer training lab in the Law Library.

For equipment funds, the Law Library continues to rely on the law school's ability to obtain one-time funding during the year. As reported to the American Bar Association in Fall 2003, the base acquisitions budget was $701,000 and the University made an additional $131,433 available during the year for library acquisitions, equipment, supplies, and other needs. In Fiscal Year 2005, the University allocated an additional $113,000 for Law Library acquisitions, bringing the total acquisitions base budget up to $813,000. Again this year the Law Library hopes that the University will allocate money during the year to realize a total budget of at least $850,000. While the base budget for each year is more substantial than the continuing funding, it is extremely difficult to plan purchases wisely when such a significant proportion of each year's library acquisitions budget is subject to supplementary, one-time funding during the academic year.

The renovation and expansion of the Law Library in 2002 added 7,500 gross square feet. In this space wired seating for 50 library users and shelving for 20,000 books now exists. The number of wired carrels throughout the Law Library presently totals 113. The Law Library now contains 32,486 feet of shelving capacity for library materials, a capacity, however, that is below the median shelving capacity of 41,583 for southeastern libraries. The new shelving space should provide about eight to ten years of growth space. In addition, the new space houses an expanded microforms room and a copy/printing room. Various other enhancements have improved the look of the library. The teal green carpet, well worn with age, has been replaced throughout the second floor. A light colored carpet and better lighting give the Law Library a brighter look.

Faculty Scholarship

The impressive record of scholarly research and publications by faculty members continues to build ever greater professional reputation for themselves, the College of Law, and the University. Legal scholarship constitutes an important part of the college's mission to provide new knowledge on molding the law to better serve our society as well as fulfilling the University's overarching goal to become one of the nation's premiere research universities located in an urban setting. Many faculty members engage in original and influential scholarly inquiry. The appendix indicates the productivity of the faculty in their scholarly endeavors. Only a portion of faculty endeavors can be mentioned in this summary.

The following represents faculty members who had published products of their scholarship this past year: Ronald Blasi, 2003 Bank Tax Guide; Colin Crawford, articles in the Tulane Environmental Law Journal and the Temple Law Review; Clark Cunningham, articles in Clinical Law Review, South Carolina Law Review, A Journal of South Asian American Political Identity, Emory Law Journal, and a book chapter in Liberty, Equality and Justice: Struggles for a New Social Order; William Edmundson, Locke and Load, 22 Law and Philosophy; Janice Griffith, an article in The University of Toledo Law Review; Lynn Hogue, National Security and Military Law in a Nutshell (co-authored); Nancy Johnson, Legal Research Exercises (co-authored); Julian Juergensmeyer, Property: Quick Review Sum & Substance and an article in Natural Resources Journal (co-authored); Michael Landau, a book chapter in Understanding Computer Ethics; Paul Milich, Courtroom Handbook on Georgia Evidence; Ellen Podgor, White Collar Crime: Law and Practice (with two other authors) and an article in Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law; Mary Radford, an article in Mercer Law Review and in National College of Probate Judges Life and Times; Natsu Saito, articles in Asian Law Journal and the Third World Legal Studies-2000-2003 Into the 21st Century: Reconstruction and Reparations in International Law; Kelly Timmons, an article in the Nebraska Law Review; Jack Williams, an essay in Courting the Yankees: Legal Essays on the Bronx Bombers; Douglas Yarn, articles in Vanderbilt Law Review (co-authored) and Judicature (co-authored).

Faculty Community Service

One of the college's goals is "to have a notable presence. . . in the geographical, professional, public service, and university communities in which the College operates." Law faculty members serve in leadership positions and on numerous committees for the Association of American Law Schools (AALS), the American Bar Association (ABA), the State Bar of Georgia (Georgia Bar), and for other local and regional organizations where their legal expertise is of value. The appendix indicates faculty community service. Only a portion of faculty endeavors can be mentioned in this summary. Marjorie Girth served on the Professional Development Committee of the AALS; Janice Griffith served on the

Executive Committee and as Treasurer of the AALS Section on State and Local Government Law and was the liaison to the AALS for the ABA Section of State and Local Government Law; Bernadette Hartfield served on the AALS Committee on Sections and Programs; Charles Marvin served as a Board Member of the AALS Law and Africa Interest Group and the AALS Law and Religion Interest Group; Mary Radford was the Chair-Elect of the AALS Section on Donative Transfers, Fiduciaries and Estate Planning; Charity Scott served as Chair, Medical Research, Biotechnology, and Clinical Ethics Interest Group of the AALS Section on Health Law; Ron Blasi served as chair of the Commercial Bank Subcommittee of the ABA Taxation Section's Committee on Banking and Savings Institutions and was a member of the editorial advisory board of the Journal of Taxation of Financial Institutions; Marjorie Fine Knowles served as a member of the ABA's Subcommittee on International Developments in Corporate Governance; Charles Marvin served as Co-Chair of the ABA's Central and East European Law Committee of the International Law and Practice Section; Douglas Yarn served on the Committee on Ethics of the ABA's Section on Dispute Resolution; Clark Cunningham served on the State Bar of Georgia Committee on Indigent Defense; Anne Emanuel was a member of the Georgia Bar's Formal Advisory Opinion Board; Marjorie Girth and Janice Griffith served as members of the Georgia Bar's Standards of the Profession Committee, which continues to develop a Transition into Practice program for newly admitted Georgia lawyers; Janice Griffith served on the Georgia Bar's Institute of Continuing Judicial Education and its Institute of Continuing Legal Education; Mary Radford served as a Reporter for the Georgia Bar's Trust Code Revision Committee and for the Georgia Bar's Guardianship Code Revision Committee; Natsu Saito served on the Georgia Bar's Access to Justice Committee; Clark Cunningham and Roy Sobelson served on the Georgia Chief Justice's Commission on Professionalism; Andrea Curcio served as a Reporter for the Georgia Supreme Court Commission on Equality and as a member of the Society of American Law Teachers subcommittee on state bar examinations; Anne Emanuel served as Secretary of the Board of the Georgia Center for Law in the Public Interest; Majorie Girth served as a member of the Georgia Supreme Court's Commission on Equality and of the Law School Admission Council's Audit Committee; Bernadette Hartfield served on the Board of Trustees of the Law School Admission Council and chaired its Minority Affairs Committee; Wendy Hensel served as the College of Law's liaison to the National Women Lawyer's Association; Nancy Johnson served as Chair of the CALI Legal Research Authoring Project and is an Editorial Board Member of the Legal Reference Services Quarterly; Majorie Fine Knowles served as a Member of the Atlanta Women's Foundation's Investment Committee, as a Board Member of the Center for Working Capital, as a Board Member of the International Institute for Corporate Governance and Accountability, and as a Member of the Investment Committee of the Rockdale Foundation; Paul Milich was appointed as the Official Reporter for the Georgia State Bar Evidence Study Committee; Mary Radford served on the American College of Trust & Estate Counsel; Natsu Saito was Co-Director of the Human Rights Research Fund, served on the Board of Directors of the Conference of Asian Pacific American Law Faculty, and was elected to the Board of Directors of the Society of American Law Teachers; Roy Sobelson served as Special Master of the Georgia Supreme Court (to hear disciplinary cases) and was a member of the Georgia Bar's Committee on Professionalism; Kelly Timmons served as a Master of the Bleckley Inn of Court; Jack Williams chaired the Bankruptcy Taxation Committee of the American Bankruptcy Institute; Mark Budnitz served on the Board of Directors of the Atlanta Legal Aid Society and on the Board of Directors of the National Consumer Law Center, and as a member of the editorial board of Consumer Financial Services Law Report; Colin Crawford was a member of the Georgia Water Pollution Control Association; Michael Landau served on the editorial boards of GigaLaw.com and the Journal of Digital Content and was a member of the Board of Directors of the Georgia Lawyers for the Arts; Patrick Wiseman served as a member of the CALI Editorial Board; Douglas Yarn served on the Editorial Board of the Conflict Resolution Quarterly; Lynn Hogue served as a member of the Board of Directors of the Georgia Legal History Foundation; Charity Scott was a member of the Georgia Collaborative to Improve End-of-Life Care; Jack Williams served on the Board of Advisors of the American Bankruptcy Institute Bankruptcy Law Journal.

Student Accomplishments

Competing in over 15 moot court and mock trial competitions, our teams left an impressive record this year. A Georgia State team won the Fourth Annual National Trial Advocacy Competition sponsored by the Michigan State University College of Law for the second time. Other Georgia State teams: (1) advanced to the semi-finals, competing against 26 law student teams, in the 2003 Sixth Annual National Entertainment Law Moot Court Competition at Pepperdine University School of Law; (2) advanced to the semi-finals in the Southeastern Regional (Region V) Competition of the ABA National Appellate Advocacy Competition; (3) advanced to the quarter-finals in the William B. Sponge, Jr. Invitational Moot Court Tournament at the College of William and Mary's Marshall-Wythe School of Law; (4) advanced to the quarter-finals, competing against 36 law schools, in the 19th Annual Dean Jerome Prince Memorial Evidence Competition hosted by the Brooklyn Law School; and (5) took fourth place in the 19th Annual William E. McGee National Civil Rights Competition hosted by the University of Minnesota Law School with Georgia State student, Petrina Hall, receiving recognition as the Best Oral Advocate in the competition.

A newly formed student group, the Legislative Caucus of the Student Bar Association, promoted the law school's developing relationship with the Georgia General Assembly. The caucus hosted on campus the first Annual Legislative Symposium that featured a panel of prominent Georgia state legislative leaders who made remarks and engaged in an open discussion of issues under consideration at the 2004 session of the Georgia legislature. The caucus also hosted Senator Bill Stephens, Majority Leader of the Georgia State Senate, who discussed the future of Georgia's HOPE scholarship program before a large student audience.

Student organizations brought a number of outstanding speakers to campus throughout the year. Atlanta's City Attorney, Linda DiSantis, kicked off the Student Bar Association's annual Law Week with her keynote address. Over 10 speakers came to campus during Law Week addressing such topics as professional ethics, the importance of pro bono work, public interest law practice, tobacco litigation, the work of a lobbyist during Georgia's 2004 Session of the General Assembly, same sex marriage, and challenges faced by minorities in the practice of law. Georgia State's Chapter of the Federalist Society, in collaboration with the Chapter at the Emory University School of Law, inaugurated the First Annual Southeastern Symposium on "Equality: America's Struggle." During Law Week, the Federalist Society also hosted Professor Randy Barnett of the Boston University School of Law who spoke about his new book Restoring the Lost Constitution. The Black Law Student Association's alumni brunch included guest speakers, Linda Chastang, the first black professor at the College of Law, and A.J. Cooper, founder of the National Black Law Students Association. In March, Richard Jaffe, defense counsel to Eric Rudolph, the accused bomber of Centennial Olympic Park and abortion clinics, addressed our students.

Students engaged in pro bono work and participated in many community activities throughout the year. Students collected donations for "My House," a non-profit organization that cares for medically fragile abandoned babies, and for the Georgia Law Center for the Homeless. Students ran several clothing and food drives and planted trees in the Atlanta community of Reynoldstown under the auspices of Trees Atlanta. The Public Interest Law Association's annual auction was a huge success again this year. Proceeds from the auction support students working in an area of public interest during the summer.

The mentoring program for Morehouse and Spelman college students continued again this year. Black Law Student Association (BLSA) students met with pre-law Morehouse and Spelman students to give them insights into what it is like to be a law student. In February, students from these colleges toured the law school's facilities and sat in on one of Professor Corneill Stephens's classes. Professor Neil Kinkopf served as a guest lecturer in Dr. Abraham Davis's survey course on Constitutional Law at Morehouse College.

SECTION B. PROGRESS IN INSTITUTIONAL STRATEGIC PLANNING (done centrally)

SECTION C. PROGRESS IN ASSESSING INSTITUTIONAL EFFECTIVENESS

In April 2004, the faculty approved a new Learning Outcomes Assessment Plan. It provides for expected learning outcomes in the following areas: communication skills, legal research, analysis and critical thinking, knowledge of legal doctrine, lawyering skills, professionalism and ethics, and preparation for a legal career or a career in a non-legal area that is related to graduate law study. The Plan then outlines the assessment methods to obtain each of the above outcomes. For example, the outcome of effective oral and written communication should be obtained by the following assessment methods: the first-year research, writing, and advocacy program; the upper level writing requirement; and litigation and moot court programs including completion of the required Litigation Workshop course and participation in mock trial and moot court competitions.

The Learning Outcomes Assessment Plan calls for the Associate Dean for Academic Affairs to have overall responsibility for the collection of data and the dissemination of reports on the various assessment results. The Curriculum Committee will be responsible for recommending curricular changes in response to assessment findings. Implementation of the plan is further buttressed by the requirement that reports and data be regularly prepared on the assessment methods; these include a report on overall student legal writing performance in the research, writing and advocacy course prepared by the Legal Writing faculty; a grade analysis report for all courses, showing mean and median grade distribution; a report on student attrition and probation; a report on State Bar of Georgia examination results; exit surveys; the development of surveys to be used in the preparation of a self-study to be completed in connection with accreditation review every seven years; and a report prepared by the directors of the Externship Program summarizing feedback from externship supervisors.

Although the new Learning Outcomes Assessment Plan should assist in the identification of student learning outcomes and non-academic outcomes, the college will continue to rely upon several traditional benchmarks (some of which are incorporated in the Plan) used in the past that provide valuable information on the effectiveness of instruction and the subsequent success of our students. These include student participation in moot court and mock trial competitions, bar passage rates, employment statistics of graduates, placement of graduates in judicial clerkships, and the success of our graduates in obtaining employment and partnerships in prestigious regional and national law firms.

The college enjoys a long record of student achievement, and the past year proved no different with one national championship victory, advancement to the semi-finals in two competitions, advancement to the quarter-finals in two other competitions, and one fourth place position in which a Georgia State student was recognized as the Best Oral Advocate in the competition. Students continued to exercise leadership in a number of areas; they hosted symposia, created a Legislative Caucus to develop a stronger relationship with members of the Georgia General Assembly, mentored Morehouse and Spelman college students, and engaged in pro bono work throughout the year.

A valuable tool for measuring institutional effectiveness for the college is the success rate of students sitting for the State Bar of Georgia examinations. Entry into the legal profession is conditioned upon successful passage of a state bar examination. From its inception, the college has built an impressive record of success on state bar examinations. July is the principal date for taking the Georgia Bar exam, and another testing is done in February for December graduates and those who are repeating the exam. For the July 2003 administration of the Georgia Bar exam all Georgia State University graduates had a 89.9% pass rate, and those taking the test for the first time had a passage rate of 92.6%. Georgia State graduates taking the February 2004 bar exam exceeded all of the other Georgia law schools in passage rates. For this exam, the college was number one in the overall bar passage rate (72.0%), the first timer pass rate (81.8%), and the Multi-state bar exam average (141.5%).

Employment statistics six months after graduation are a standard measure used for assessing legal education and are annually collected by the college's accrediting agency, the American Bar Association, and by U.S. News and World Report. The figures for the class of 2003 show an employment rate of 94%. The percentage of graduates obtaining judicial clerkships at the local, state, or federal level was 8%, up from 6% for 2002 graduates. Employment in large firms (over 50 lawyers) is an indication of law school graduates' competitiveness; 19% of the college's 2003 graduates were so employed. This means that our chosen graduates were picked from regional and national pools of graduates representing some of the most prestigious law schools in the country.

Another measure of the effectiveness of Georgia State's program of legal education is the success of graduates in achieving partner in prestigious law firms, appointment or election to the bench, and service as legal counsel for major corporations. The March edition of Super Lawyers Magazine recognized 13 of our graduates as top lawyers in Georgia. Georgia State graduates are now partners in Alston & Bird; Arnall, Golden & Gregory; Balch & Bingham; Drew Eckl & Farnham; Fisher & Phillips; Holland & Knight; Jones Day; Kilpatrick Stockton; King & Spalding; McKenna Long & Aldridge; Needle & Rosenberg; Powell, Goldstein, Frazer & Murphy; Seyfarth Shaw; Sutherland Asbill & Brennan; Swift, Currie, McGhee & Hiers; Troutman Sanders; Thomas, Kayden, Horstemeyer & Risley; and others. A number of Georgia State College of Law graduates serve as assistant district attorneys, solicitor generals, and magistrate judges. Several graduates hold State Court and Superior Court judgeships. Numerous corporate and governmental legal offices employ college graduates including AT&T, BellSouth, Cox Enterprises, Equifax, Federal Reserve Bank, Georgia Power, and Georgia-Pacific. Several of our graduates are serving in the Georgia General Assembly as well; Representative Glenn Richardson, class of 1984, serves as Minority Leader of the Georgia House of Representatives.

Susan Colussy, a 1986 law graduate, received the 2004 Sam Williamson Mentor Award from the American Immigration Lawyers Association in recognition for her service as a mentor to law students with an interest in immigration law and to Atlanta immigration lawyers.

SECTION D. IMPROVEMENT OF STUDENT RETENTION AND GRADUATION

The summer skills program and the academic enrichment program serve as two valuable types of activities at the Georgia State University College of Law that assist with retention and graduation. Both of these programs were designed to improve the success rate of students who are deemed to be at risk of experiencing academic difficulty in law school. The summer skills program is a pre-start program that takes place prior to the beginning of the academic year for first-year students. The academic enrichment program takes place during the regular school year and consists of tutorials offered by upper level students under the direction of a faculty committee. Law professors participate in both programs and provide guidance on the development of fundamental skills such as reading law cases and developing course outlines.
