Section A. Summary of Major Accomplishments

Planning for the Future

The most important accomplishment among the many notable achievements this past year was the adoption by the faculty of a new strategic plan to guide the College of Law in the years ahead. The new plan was the result of several years of diligent effort on the part of many among the faculty and administration. The new plan integrates the college's future goals with the university's strategic plan and goals. Coupled with strategic planning was the development of a more specific plan of improvement arising out of the university's academic program review. Together these documents gives clear direction and specific goals for the college to achieve in the years ahead.

Interdisciplinary Programs

More interdisciplinary activities are an important goal in the new strategic plan. However, the College of Law already has much to be proud of in this area. This past year, for the first time, law students studied in the same classrooms with Emory's medical students and with Georgia Tech's city planning students. Professor Charity Scott collaborated with faculty members of Emory University's School of Medicine to introduce law and medical students to the interdisciplinary issues that arise from the intersection of law, medicine, and ethics. Professor Julian Juergensmeyer and Professor Chris Nelson of Georgia Tech's College of Architecture explored growth management legal and policy issues in classroom discussions among city planning students and law students.

The College of Law co-sponsored a symposium and a conference that greatly served the community and highlighted the value of interdisciplinary cooperation. With the Georgia Institute of Technology's Center for Quality Growth and Regional Development, Georgia State's College of Law jointly sponsored a symposium on impact fees, which are imposed to finance the public infrastructure costs incurred as a result of rapid urban growth and sprawl. The symposium focused on the evolving impact fee practice, the emerging legal theories surrounding impact fees, and the effect these fees have upon developers, home buyers, taxpayers, and regional economic development. Attendees included state and local government officials, developers, and academicians.

In the spring of 2002 the College of Law was pleased to participate as a supporter of the university's Heritage Preservation Conference in collaboration with the History Departments' Master of Heritage Preservation program.

Law faculty continues to teach courses for Georgia State's Colleges of Arts and Sciences, Business Administration, and Education. Correspondingly, a member of the Risk Management and Insurance faculty of the College of Business teaches insurance law to College of Law students. William Edmundson holds a joint appointment with the Department of Philosophy.

The College of Law has three joint programs with other colleges at Georgia State University where one can earn a J.D. degree and a M.A. in Philosophy, a Masters in Public Administration, or an M.B.A. degree. It is hoped that current conversations with the School of Architecture at Georgia Institute of Technology will yield a joint degree program in law and city planning.

Technology Enhancements

Technology has had a profound effect upon the practice of law, legal research, instruction, and law school administration. The College of Law at Georgia State University is proud to be recognized as a leader in embracing these new innovations. By nature technology changes rapidly, and the College of Law is changing just as rapidly with evermore integration of technology into all aspects of its academic endeavors. The college still holds its rank as the 11th “most wired” law school in the country by the National Jurist Magazine. This past spring two members of the college’s staff made presentations at the CALI (Computer Assisted Legal Instruction) conference, the most prestigious organization focused on this issue. The web-based Meta-Index for U.S. Legal Research, created and maintained by Professor Patrick Wiseman, won yet another award as an excellent source for internet legal research.

Included among the technology enhancements enacted this past year are a new CD-ROM for student recruitment, special technology sessions during new student orientation, new computers for all law and law library staff, expansion of information available on the college’s website, an on-line alumni directory, an option for students to take computer-based examinations, an on-line student and graduate resume bank for use by perspective employers, a doubling of the student computer laboratory in the Law Library, additional wired study carrels in the Library, and new computers for Law Review, Moot Court, and other student organizations.

Faculty are exploring ways to use technology to enhance their classroom instruction. To support instructional technology needs, the college engaged in a major upgrade of all classrooms by the purchase of instructor laptops, ceiling mounted computer projection systems, and multimedia equipment for every law school classroom. The installation will be completed in the fall semester of 2002. Furthermore, this past year saw the reconstruction of the college’s final large lecture hall, providing electricity and internet connections at all student work stations in the classroom.

Development and Alumni Cultivation

With the assistance of the college’s Development Director and her staff, the Dean devotes considerable time to fund raising, alumni and community cultivation. Fruits of this effort are clearly reflected in the accomplishments of the past year. The overall percentage of alumni giving during the college's annual fund drive increased. Work with the graduate leadership council has proven valuable, for it has been providing important assistance with this effort. For the second year in a row 1989 graduate Cathy Henson challenged the alumni to increase their financial support of Georgia State. During 2001-2002 she offered a $50,000 challenge grant if alumni giving exceeded $100,000. In response, graduates of the college contributed $145,902 in gifts.

In the inauguration of a new tradition, the graduating class of 2002 honored the college by making the first class gift totaling $13,850, with most of the funds designated for much needed scholarships. Furthermore, a new endowment account was funded by Melinda Lehrer to support the Michelle Ferguson Priestly Award, and an account was established in the name of Patricia Morgan, beloved faculty member who fell ill and died this past year.

New Faculty Recruited

The college's recruitment effort was greatly successful this past year, enticing Professor Clark D. Cunningham from the Washington University School of Law and Professor Tanya Washington from the University of Maryland School of Law to join the Georgia State community. Professor Cunningham became the first W. Lee Burge Chair Holder in Law and Ethics. A graduate of Dartmouth College and the Wayne State University Law School, he is nationally recognized as an outstanding scholar. He is an expert on the applications of linguistics to law and is engaged in a study of how lawyers communicate with their clients.

Professor Washington is a graduate of James Madison University and the University of Maryland School of Law. She received a LL.M. degree from the Harvard Law School in 2001. Professor Washington served as a law clerk for Chief Judge Robert M. Bell of the Court of Appeals of Maryland and come to Georgia State from teaching at the School of Law at the University of Maryland.

Faculty Scholarship

The impressive record of scholarly research and publications by the faculty of the College of Law continues, building an ever greater professional reputation for themselves and contributing to an increasing scholarly reputation for the college and university. Legal scholarship constitutes an important part of the college's mission to provide new insights on molding the law to better serve our society. Many of the faculty engages in original and influential scholarly inquiry. The appendix indicates the productivity of the faculty in their scholarly endeavors and reflects an increase in scholarship in tune with the college's articulated goals and promotion and tenure policy. Only a portion of faculty endeavors can be mentioned in this summary.

The following represents faculty members who had published products of their scholarship this past year: Douglas Yarn, supplements to his books on alternative dispute resolution in Georgia and North Carolina, and an article in Arkansas Law Review; Eric Segall, article in Georgia State University Law Review; Charity Scott, article in Georgia State University Law Review; Natsu Saito, articles in Asian Law Review and Villanova Law Review; Mary Radford, supplement to a book on wills and administration in Georgia, and articles in Pepperdine Dispute Resolution Law Journal and Mercer Law Review; Ellen Podgor, teacher's manual for international criminal law text, supplement to her book on white collar crime, and articles in American University Law Review and Notre Dame Journal of Law, Ethics, and Public Policy; Paul Milich, new edition to his courtroom handbook on Georgia evidence, supplement to his book on Georgia rules of evidence; Michael Landau, latest release of 5 volume work on entertainment law, supplement to text on Federal administrative practice; Nancy Johnson, new edition of her book on legal research exercises; Janice Griffith, article in Georgia State University Law Review; William Gregory, new editions of his books on unincorporated business associations and law of agency and partnership; Marjorie Girth, Buffalo Women's Law Journal; Anne Emanuel, biographical sketch of Judge Elbert Tuttle in American National Biography; Mark Budnitz, a book on consumer banking and payments law, and two supplements to his book on law of lender liability; James Bross, supplements to texts on real property and water and water rights.

Student Accomplishments

The College of Law continued its success in student moot court and mock trial competitions. Numerous teams competed on the intrastate, regional, and national level. Georgia State teams won two national competitions this year. Competing against 22 teams from law schools throughout the country, our student trial lawyers team won the National Trial Advocacy Competition held in Michigan. The college's second national success occurred in Chicago at the Information Technology and Privacy Law Moot Court Competition. Our three-women team, all enrolled in the law school's part-time program of study, competed against 29 teams to win this competition. The House of Representatives of the Georgia General Assembly passed House Resolution 947 to commend the team members and their coaches for this victory.

Students achieved noteworthy success as well in the following competitions: the National Health Law Moot court competition at Southern Illinois University School of Law, the Thomas Tang National Moot Court Competition, the Annual Southern Regional Convention of Black law Students in which our mock trial team won first place, the William B. Spong, Jr. Invitational Moot Court Competition, sponsored by the Marshall-Wythe School of Law at William and Mary, and the First Amendment Moot Court Competition sponsored by the Vanderbilt University Law School.

Both as an outstanding student achievement as well as an important resource to the community, Georgia State Law Review students sponsored a symposium entitled "Ethics in a World of Mandatory Arbitration." Moderated by GSU's Professor Douglas Yarn, the event featured renowned experts on arbitration, including Georgia Supreme Court Justice Carol Hunstein, to offer different perspectives on ethical conflicts arising out of mandatory arbitration clauses in consumer contracts. Symposium speakers addressed the potential effects of third-party administrators on the arbitration process, the use of alternative dispute resolution processes, and the effect of the Revised Code of Ethics for Arbitrators. The papers presented at the symposium are being prepared for publication by the Law Review.

Students made many contributions to the community over the last year. Under the sponsorship of the Student Bar Association, an entire week of projects, seminars, and speakers was organized by various student groups in celebration of Law Week.

Community Outreach and Service

The Georgia State University Tax Clinic serves low-income individuals who are involved with disputes with the Internal Revenue Service. Besides this public service, it is an important laboratory for the training of law students and graduate tax students from the College of Business Administration. It remains the only such entity in the southeast. Despite the adversarial role of the Georgia State Tax Clinic, the Internal Revenue Service respects the clinic for its success in providing equitable solutions for troubled taxpayers. The Tax Clinic continues to receive support from the Internal Revenue Service to fund the clinic's activities, and this past year received $75,000 as part of a three year program of support.

With funding from the Georgia Courts Automation Commission, the College of Law directs and staffs the Electronic Court Filing Project, a project to explore the automation of Georgia's courts through the electronic filing and signing of court documents. The project's research encompasses and impacts on the areas of digital signatures, electronic records and signature legislation, and national legal and technical standards development. A pilot project conducted this last year demonstrated that courts using different filing technologies could successfully share documents and case information with each other, which is an important step for standardizing this new technology. Todd Vincent, a 1997 graduate of the college, continues to direct this project.

With the fall semester of 2001 the college initiated a Legislation Clinic and Practicum course in which law students interned at the State Capitol and performed legal research for Georgia General Assembly committees. The students analyzed and provided legal research on such key topics as natural gas deregulation in Georgia, the use of DNA evidence in paternity determinations, the revenue implications of legislation banning video poker, conflicting real property assessment methods used by county and municipal governments, and a proposed modifications of the definition of child abuse in Georgia's penal code.

As mentioned under the topic of interdisciplinary activities, the College of Law was pleased to serve as a sponsor for two public events, a symposium on reconciling impact fees, which is of interest to government officials and private industry, and a conference on historical preservation, which again serves the needs of government, private industry, and the arts community.

As part of the college's efforts in strengthening and increasing community outreach and public service, law faculty serve in leadership positions and on numerous committees for the Association of American Law Schools, the American Bar Association, the State Bar of Georgia, and for other local and regional organizations where their legal training is of value. James Bross chaired the AALS Section on Agricultural Law. Mark Budnitz was an active member of the Uniform Commercial Code Committee of the American Bar Association, chairing several work groups or task forces, and served on the editorial board of Consumer Financial Services Law Report. Andrea Curcio was the reporter for the Georgia Supreme Court Commission on Equality's study of sexual violence victims in the Georgia court system. William Edmundson continued as a member of the Committee on Philosophy and Law of the American Philosophical Association. Anne Emanuel served as Board Secretary, Georgia Center for Law in the Public Interest. Marjorie Girth served on the State Bar of Georgia's Committee on Standards of the Profession and the Georgia Supreme Court Commission on Equality. Dean Janice Griffith served on the Board of Trustees of Georgia's Institute of Continuing Legal Education, on the Board of Trustees of the Institute of Continuing Judicial Education, and on the State Bar of Georgia's Multidisciplinary Practice Committee and its Committee on Standards of the Profession. Bernadette Hartfield served on the Board of Trustees of the Law School Admissions Council. Nancy Johnson, Professor and Law Librarian, was a member of the American Library Association Task force on Accreditation and served on the editorial board of Legal Reference Services Quarterly. Julian Juergensmeyer continued to be on the Panel of Arbitrators of the International Court of Arbitration in Warsaw, Poland. Associate Dean Steven Kaminshine served as Chair and Executive Board Member of the Labor and Employment Law Section of the Atlanta Bar Association. Marjorie Knowles, had membership on the boards of the Center for Working Capital and the International Institute for Corporate Governance and Accountability, both based in Washington, D.C. E. R. Lanier was an arbitrator with the Croatian State Court of Arbitration and continues to serve on the Board of Trustees of the Institute of Continuing Legal Education in Georgia. Michael Landau was on the Board of Directors of Georgia Lawyers for the Arts. Charles Marvin served on the executive council of the Africa Law Section of the American Bar Association. Basil Mattingly was chair-elect of the AALS Agricultural Law Committee. Paul Milich was Secretary/Treasurer of the Bleckley Inn of Court. Ellen Podgor served on the Executive Committee of the Criminal Justice Section of the American Association of Law Schools. Mary Radford continued her work as State Reporter, American Bar Association Section on Real Property, Probate, & Trust Law, and as a member of the executive committee of Georgia Appellate Practice resource Center. Natsu Saito sat on the Board of Directors, Society of American Law Teachers. Charity Scott served as Chair, Biotechnology, Medical Research, and Clinical Ethics Interest Group, Health Law Section of the American Bar Association. Eric Segall was a member of the Executive committee, AALS Section on Federal Courts. Roy Sobelson served on the Georgia Supreme Court's Commission on Professionalism. Corneill Stephens was a judge in the Magistrate Court of Dekalb County. Ellen Taylor served as reporter for the State Bar of Georgia committee charged with rewriting the sections of the Georgia Code dealing with investment advisors. Patrick Wiseman served as a member of the editorial board of CALI, which is the national organization focused on computer assisted legal instruction. Douglas Yarn is on the editorial board of Conflict Resolution Quarterly.

International Relationships

The principal on-going international relationship of the College of Law is the Summer Academy in International Commercial Arbitration, which takes upward of 50 students to Europe each spring. The program brings the college in contact with distinguished European experts in commercial arbitration who, in turn, visit the university during the regular academic year. One such visitor was Professor Jerzey Mlynarczyk, host of GSU students in Gdansk, Poland. While here, Professor Mlynarczyk spoke to members of the International and Comparative Law Society at Georgia State, consulted with members of the bench and bar, and visited the Georgia Ports Authority in Savannah. Also visiting on campus were Professor Werner von Trutzschler, Director of the Thuringian State Office for the Preservation of Monuments, who spoke on heritage preservation in Germany, and Professor Gideon Koren, Faculty of Law at Hebrew University, who also presented at the heritage preservation conference. Professor Koren is the legal advisor to the Israeli Council for the Preservation and Protection of Monuments.

Section B. Progress in Institutional Strategic Planning

See Section A, "Planning for the Future".

Section C. Progress in Assessing Institutional Effectiveness

A goal of the College of Law for the coming year is the evaluation of measurements for assessing learning outcomes. Although new measurements may be identified, the college still believes that several traditional benchmarks used in the past provide valuable information on the effectiveness of instruction and the subsequent success of our students. These include success of student competition teams, bar passage rates, employment statistics of graduates, placement in judicial clerkships, and success in obtaining partnerships in prestigious regional and national law firms.

Success of student teams in moot court and mock trial competitions reflect the rigorous intellectual preparation and practical lawyer skills that students receive in class. The College of Law has a long record of student achievement, and the past year proved no different with two national championship victories.

A valuable tool for measuring institutional effectiveness for the College of Law is the success rate of students sitting for the Georgia Bar examinations. Successful passage of such examinations is a requirement for entry into the legal profession. From its inception, the College of Law at Georgia State has built an impressive record of success on bar examinations. The principle date for taking the exam is in July after the spring commencement. Another testing is done in February for the few who graduate in December or who are repeating the test. For the July 2001 administration of the Georgia Bar Exam all participants trained at Georgia State University had a 93.3% pass rate, and those taking the test for the first time had a passage rate of 93%. For the February 2002 administration of the test all takers affiliated with Georgia State had a rate of 73.5% and first time takers had a rate of 83.3%.

Employment statistics six months after graduation are a standard measure used for assessing legal education and are annually collected by the college's accrediting agency, the American Bar Association, and by U.S. News and World Report for its edition on rating graduate and professional schools in America. The figures for the class of 2001 show an employment rate of 92.95%. The percentage of graduates obtaining judicial clerkships at the local, state or federal level was 8.28%. Employment in large (51 to 100 lawyers) and very large (over 100) firms is prized and highly competitive. The percentage of Georgia State graduates employed in this category represents 25.52% of the 2001 class. This means that our chosen graduates were picked from regional and national pools of graduates representing some of the most prestigious law schools in the country.

Another measure of the effectiveness of legal instruction received as a student at Georgia State's College of Law is the success of graduates in achieving partner in prestigious law firms, appointment of election to the bench, and service as legal counsel for major corporations. Georgia State graduates are now partners in Alston & Bird; Arnall, Golden & Gregory; Holland & Knight; Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue; Kilpatrick & Stockton; Powell, Goldstein, Frazier & Murphy; Long, Aldridge & Norman and others. A number of Georgia State College of Law graduates serve as assistant district attorneys and magistrate judges, and several hold State Court and Superior Court judgeships. Numerous corporate legal offices employ College of Law graduates including AT&T, BellSouth, Cox Enterprises, Equifax, Federal Reserve Bank, Georgia Power, and Georgia-Pacific.

Section D. Improvement of Student Retention and Graduation

The summer skills program and the academic enrichment program are two valuable activities at Georgia State University College of Law to assist with student retention and graduation. Both of these entities are intended to improve the success rate of students who are deemed to be at risk of experiencing academic difficulty in law school. The summer skills program is a pre-start program that takes place prior to the beginning of the academic year for first year students. The academic enrichment program takes place during the regular school year and consists of tutorials offered by upper level students under the direction of a faculty committee.
