Candidates gain little in debate

by Naedine Hazell

Although poll results following Tuesday night's debate between President Jimmy Carter and Gov. Ronald Reagan are not yet in, the consensus is that neither presidential candidate gained significantly by their appearances.

Nothing new was said by either candidate and the theatrics were kept to a minimum, some commentators feel, due to the bland content of the questions.

State coordinators for the three main presidential campaigns contacted yesterday afternoon held diverse opinions of the debate and how it will affect NJ voters.

Kathy Hall, state coordinator of the John Anderson campaign, felt the League of Women Voters, did a "great disservice to the American people," by not having Anderson take part in the debate. The debate, in her estimation, could influence voters two ways: "People may think," after having seen the debate, "My god, they're both losers and vote for Anderson, which is what we're hoping for. On the other hand, they may feel that because he wasn't a part of the debate he is not running," which isn't true, she said. The media is not treating Anderson as a viable candidate for the presidency. She said NJ voters are traditionally independent and hopes they will continue to vote in this tradition.

Steve McManush, field director for the Reagan/Bush campaign said "We are very pleased with the debate. We feel that Reagan put a lot of people at ease last night." He felt however that it's difficult to say so soon just what the public's reaction to the debate would be. "It usually takes time to sink in," McManush said. He felt Carter was helped by not having Anderson there because the incumbent had at least one of his flanks protected.

Press Secretary for the NJ Carter/Mondale campaign, Jim McQueeney, said, "Reagan was as usual simplistic. He just reiterated whole segments of his standard speech." McQueeney thought the debates would lead the electorate to consider the vagueness of Reagan's speech. "He freely criticized, but never said what he would do," McQueeney charged. As to the vote in NJ, he felt since Carter is pro labor, an important issue in this state, he represented their interests. McQueeney claimed that one of the latest Eagleton polls conducted in NJ showed that of the previously undecided voters, 48 percent were now in favor of Carter and 32 percent were favoring Reagan.

According to reports in yesterday's New York Times, Carter seemed to have a slight edge during the debates, until the closing remarks when Reagan asked "Are you better off than you were four years ago? Is there more or less unemployment than there was four years ago? Is America as much respected?"

Throughout the debate Carter concentrated on criticizing nearly all of Reagan's points, calling them "dangerous" and "disturbing." In reference to Reagan's stand on the SALT II treaty he said, "There is a disturbing pattern in the attitude of governor Reagan. When a man who hopes to be President says take this treaty, discard it, do not vote, do not debate, do not explore the issues, do not finally capulize on this long negotiation-- that is a very dangerous and disturbing thing."

College to put 'bite' in tickets

by Mike Davino

Students who have been ignoring campus parking tickets may be in for a surprise when they attempt to register in the future. Efforts are underway to prevent students who have three or more unpaid tickets from registering.

Campus police and security have shifted emphasis from municipal to campus tickets in an effort to, "keep money from fines in the college," according to Sgt. Charles Paige of the campus police.

Charles Moore, assistant director of business services, said, "We're going to step up enforcement in the future.

Students who have ignored three or more tickets will probably be prevented from registering. The new policy may be in effect by the end of

Paige said, "We originally shifted from campus to municipal tickets because the campus tickets had no bite.

According to the parking rules printed in the Schedule of Courses booklet the fine for the first violation is $5 and for the second and third violations is $10. The fines may be paid within 10 days of the issue date at the Business Office.

Moore said, "Security is being sent computer printouts periodically to make them aware of who the repeating offenders are."

According to Moore, between July 1979 and July 1980, 4,669 campus parking tickets were issued. Of those, 1,723 or 39 percent went unpaid. The loss of revenue due to unpaid tickets during that period amounted to

This semester however we're again issuing more campus tickets. Around 1,000 have been issued in the past two weeks," Paige said. "We'll see how it works out. We may have to go back to municipal tickets again," he added.

"The campus tickets are Campus tickets may be appealed to the Board on Transportation Affairs BOTA, Paige said. "Students can pick up the appeal form at the Business Office. BOTA meets every Thursday to

Stockton guilty of sex bias

(POMONA, NJ)--Stockton State College/SSC was found guilty of sex discrimination when Dr. Jeanne-Andree Nelson, assistant professor of French, was denied tenure in December 1979. SSC was ordered to reconsider her for reappointment conferring tenure, The Voice of Higher Education reported.

"This award is a landmark in our nation's efforts on behalf of minorities and women," Marcoantonio Lacatena, president of the NJ Council of State College Locals, American Federation of Teachers (AFT) AFL-CIO who represented Nelson, said in an Oct. 13 Voice press release. "Stockton's affirmative action record under Dick Bjork, the college's former president, was a total disgrace," it stated.

"Arbitrator Milton Freidman ruled the college violated its own affirmative action policy when it used a tenure quota as a reason for not reappointing Nelson for the 1980-81 academic year. Nelson's reappointment would have conferred tenure," the press release reported.

Freidman found SSC's affirmative action policy, since its inception in 1972, was "wildly skewed in favor of males, and that the distribution by rank was even more gross."

Bill Leak, editor-in-chief of Argo, SSC's weekly student newspaper, said Nelson took another job in Texas and that it was not known at this time if she would return to SSC.

NSAC to hold Ali hearing

(LAS VEGAS, NV)--The Nevada State Athletic Commission said it will hold a formal hearing on whether Muhammad Ali should be retired and prohibited from boxing in the state.

Ali recently was stopped in 10 rounds by WBC Heavyweight champion Larry Holmes in Las Vegas.

A short time after that Ali blamed his defeat on taking too many thyroid pills for rapid weight loss. He was reportedly given a pain killer and an antidepressant immediately following the fight and before the mandatory urine analysis. The hearing on Ali will be held at the next meeting of the commission, no date given.

Hostage ceremony planned

(UPPER MONTCLAIR, NJ)

-- On Tue., Nov. 4, a peaceful, nonreligious service commemorating a year of captivity for the US hostages in Iran will be held at noon in the Student Center Mall. Dr. David W.D. Dickson, MSC president, Brian Cige, SGA president, and Rev. Kenneth Herbstler will discuss the hostage situation.

The service is organized by SGA legislators Meryl Yourish and Deanna Baron. Yourish said, "On election day, Americans are most concerned with the future of the nation. This year, we should also be concerned with the future of the nation, and the future of the 52 Americans." Yellow ribbons will be distributed at the service to symbolize hope for release of the hostages, Yourish explained.

Dickson, Cige, and Herbstler agreed that students should realize the impact the events have on individuals. Cige said, "As future leaders of this country, it's our responsibility to understand the hostage situation." Dickson said, "Students should see the hostage matter in a larger perspective and try to understand the Iranian cult as well." Herbstler added, "International events such as this should touch each of us in our every day lives--we are not islands."

Elephants killed in Africa

(WASHINGTON DC) -- A respected animal expert reported a shocking development in Africa: Thousands of elephants are being slaughtered each month to satisfy the demand for ivory jewelry, art objects, and even piano keys.

It's her conclusion that only 1,300,000 elephants have survived in 35 nations and they say the beasts are being killed off faster than they can reproduce.

Yearbook to cost students

(CAMDEN, NJ)--For the first time in the history of the school, seniors at Rutgers University/Camden will have to pay for their yearbooks, Frederick Wilf, of Rutgers' student newspaper Gleaner, said.

Mnene, Rutgers' yearbook, has been late for the past two years and has accumulated an $8,000 debt, Wilf explained. "It simply has not been cost efficient," he said.

A joint decision was made by the yearbook staff and the student congress to charge for each edition, but the sum is not definite yet. It will probably cost $10, Wilf said.

"I have no objection to paying for the yearbook. However, it seems too bad that we are paying off a past debt. The money should be going toward a better yearbook," Wilf said.

Carter favored in student poll

by Dennis Bloshek

A recent poll conducted by The Montclarion showed President Jimmy Carter as the marginal favorite in next week's presidential election.

The poll, conducted last week, shows of the 100 students interviewed, 38 percent chose Carter; 28 percent said they would vote for the independent candidate, John Anderson, and 20 percent favored the republican candidate, Ronald Reagan. Eleven percent of the students polled said they were undecided on who they were going to vote for.

Upon hearing the results of the poll, a spokesman for the Carter campaign in NJ said, "I'm glad we won. It's only 100 students, but it's a nice sign." The spokesman added that the people working on the Carter campaign are expecting students to support Carter.

Carter was also favored in the poll as having the best qualities to deal with foreign and domestic affairs, and the best leadership qualities.

Despite the crisis in Iran, Carter is heavily favored as having the best qualities for foreign affairs by a two to one margin over Reagan and Anderson. Fifty percent felt Carter was best, while Reagan and Anderson each received 20 percent. Ten percent said they were undecided.

A spokesman for the Reagan campaign in NJ said he was "surprised" by the results. He felt Carter's foreign policy was obviously not working and that even his closest advisors were apologizing for it.

Carter also led the field for the best qualities to deal with domestic affairs with a sizeable showing of 41 percent, as compared to 28 percent for Anderson, 23 percent for Reagan, and 11 percent undecided.

However, when asked who had the best leadership qualities, students chose Carter over Reagan by a mere one percent margin. Anderson received 21 percent, while 16 percent were undecided.

Although considered unlikely to win the election, Anderson was actually favored over Reagan in several of the questions. Both candidates tied on the question dealing with qualities needed to handle foreign affairs, while a margin of 10 percent considered Reagan the better choice for leadership qualities.

A state coordinator for the Anderson campaign felt The Montclarion poll was atypical in terms of other college polls. "People are forgetting that Anderson is still running because the mass media has been telling people that he's no longer running," she said.

VP of academic affairs:

Police charged with harrassment

by Regina Brzek

Andy McCormick, SGA vice president of academic affairs, has accused two campus police officers of harrassment stemming from a report he made public last semester which revealed what he considered unprofessional conduct on the part of the campus police force.

The two officers, Sgt. John Johnston and Michael Potaski met with Jayne Rich, chief of campus police, and McCormick yesterday to discuss the allegations.

McCormick's investigation, conducted and presented to the board of trustees, for the SGA included Johnston and Potaski. In recent months, McCormick encountered the two officers in several unfavorable circumstances, one of which led to his car being towed from the faculty parking lot near Freeman Hall.

McCormick, a senior political science major, said after the meeting that Johnston promised, "never to talk to me again for the rest of my college career." Dr. Jean Armstrong, dean of students, presided on McCormick's behalf. "Nothing was substantiated in terms of unprofessional behavior on my behalf," Johnston said.

McCormick's complaint centered on three separate incidents, the first occurring Sept. 30 at 2 am. "I parked my car in Russ Hall parking lot to walk my girlfriend to Freeman Hall," McCormick explained. "As I got out of my car, flashlights were shined in my face by Potaski and Johnston. I explained I'd be right back to move my car. Officer Johnston, who recognized my face by saying 'I don't give a...who your father is, you better wise up around here.' They did not ticket my car," McCormick said. According to Rich, the officers denied using improper language.

McCormick said this next encounter with the officers was on Fri., Oct. 10, at approximately 3:40 am in the Clove Rd. parking lot. "I was on my way to the Primrose Diner when the officers flashed warning lights at me, so I pulled alongside their car. Johnston asked me if I knew it was against the law to drive with one headlight. I told him that I didn't know the headlight was out, because I didn't," McCormick said. "Johnston then said 'Get the damn thing fixed.' About an hour later I drove my date back to Freeman Hall. Potaski and Johnston saw me pull into the faculty lot, as they were pulling out. I was parked for about 45 minutes and when I returned my car was gone--they had it towed," McCormick said. He also received a ticket for that incident.

After yesterday's meeting Rich said, "There was clear indication that the officers were following regulations." Rich said she did not feel the officers were particularly harrassing McCormick.

"No one's opinion was particularly changed as a result of the meeting," Armstrong commented. "The meeting allowed for the grievance to be aired and gave an opportunity for the parties involved to begin with a clean slate."

SGA addresses Chi Alpha charter

by Mary Ann D'Urso

Last night the Constitutional Review Committee of the SGA scheduled an emergency meeting for Monday to recommend changes to the charter of Chi Alpha, a campus religious organization that has been the subject of controversy for the past two weeks.

Chi Alpha, a nondenominational religious group chartered by the SGA, was brought under review after an MSC student considered suing the organization. The suit would involve the law of separation of church and state and would ultimately be made against the SGA. Chi Alpha's present charter holds the SGA responsible for its interests in court.

"I am concerned, as is everyone, that we maintain a separation of church and state as well as allowing for the kind of help and counseling that the chaplains have historically provided," Jean Armstrong, dean of student affairs, said.

Ron Naples, vice president of the Welfare and Internal Affairs Committee of the SGA, said when the question of a religious organization abusing their privileges arises, it behooves the SGA to review its possible violations.

Phil Anter, a member of Chi Alpha, and president pro tempore of the SGA legislature, cosponsored a bill with Craig Stugart, another legislator, which asked that Chi Alpha be brought to constitutional review and be changed from a Class III to a Class IV Organization.

The Constitutional Review Committee includes Phil Anter, Dennis Bloshek, Sue Williams, John Burns, and Jo Ann Lih. The committee will recommend changes to Chi Alpha's charter which will be debated by the legislature and voted on next week. A probable date for the vote will be Nov. 5, the next SGA meeting.

In a press release, the AntiDefamation League/ADL of B'nai B'rith reported that "The encroachment of religious activities in schools was attributed to a trend toward more conservative social attitudes in the public at large, the growing strength of Christian evangelical efforts to inject religious practices into public institutions, and the willingness of judges to accommodate perceived community desires even though constitutional principles may be eroded in the process."

When asked if the ADL believed religious organizations should be kept of state property, i.e. public schools, Jeffrey Maas, NJ director for the ADL, said the league believes there should be strict separation of church and state. He said, "The constitution safeguards against the abuse of public property where public funds are used for sectarian purposes."

He went on to say the state constitution, which is incorporated with federal law, safeguards the separation of church and state and should also be adhered to.

Steve Espamer, Chi Alpha chaplain, said "I think that religious organizations have every right in the world to be on campus. I don't see why everyone has trouble tolerating things that professors say today, which might not have been accepted ten years ago, are easily accepted today, when so many other things are tolerated. For example things that professors say today which might not have been accepted ten years ago are easily accepted today. People are open minded toward the gay community and toward premarital sex, I don't understand why they are not open to Christians."

Lawsuit costly

Confusion over the meaning of the term "c.j." in blueprints for the construction of the Student Center resulted in faulty construction. That's the latest development as MSC's $182,000 lawsuit with the center's contractor and architect continues.

In the blueprints drawn up by the architect, Charles Luckman of Los Angeles, CA, the letters "c.j." were written on bricks to be placed in the center mall. The architect intended the abbreviation to mean contraction joints--joints that would permit contraction or expansion due to temperature changes. The contractor, the Thomas Construction Co. of Wayne, thought the letters stood for construction joints, a term used to divide the workload into portions. The confusion caused the contraction joints not to be installed, resulting in loose bricks, leaks in the center walls, and loose aluminum posts, among other faults.

(The confusion cost MSC $52,150 to replace loose bricks, $18,888 to repair aluminum posts, $27,800 to repair leaks, plus $83,162 in other repairs and expenses, totaling $182,000.)

"The contractor is blaming the architect, and the architect is blaming the contractor," Jerome Quinn, director of institutional planning, said. Because of the confusion behind "c.j.," MSC had to pay $182,000 to repair 15 faults in the center last spring, he said.

MSC is suing the architect, Luckman, and the contractor, Thomas. The Educational Facilities Authority/EFA is the plaintiff on MSC's behalf, represented by Marianne Manning, the NJ state deputy attorney. The first defendants to testify this week are Luckman and Thomas.

Quinn has attended the court for the past week, while the suit was heard daily since Sept. 22 in the Passaic County Courthouse by Judge Irving I. Rubin. A six person jury is deciding the case.

To date, the plaintiff has rested and the defendant is stating his case, according to a spokesperson from Rubin's office.

Surrounded by blueprints and papers, Quinn seemed optimistic that MSC will win the case. "I believe that we (at MSC) are completely right in this matter and we'll get repayment." A spokesperson for the construction company said Thomas was unavailable for comment.

According to a spokesperson, it may be another week before the suit goes before the jury. "It depends on how many witnesses are testifying for the defendant," she said.

Testifying on the state's behalf were: Leonard Donato and Edward Bambach, both of EFA, Jessie Schwartz, a construction expert, Donald Shive, an architectural engineer, Quinn, and Al Wensley, the state architect for NJ, Quinn said.

Consumer Corner

Don't rely on tampons

by Lori McDonough

"Nothing is safe anymore." This is the reaction from many consumers, especially women, to the recent news that tampon use can be linked to toxic shock syndrome. All that can be proven so far is that there is only a link. No definite statements can be made saying that tampon use causes toxic shock, until further studies have been completed.

Although the disease strikes mostly women, there have been reported cases of men contracting it. The symptoms are very similar to those of the flu: high fever, vomiting, and diarrhea, followed by a rash and peeling of the skin about 10 days after onset.

According to statistics from the Los Angeles Times, "There have been 408 cases reported with 49 deaths. The incidence varies from region to region, according to how effective the region's surveillance is."

Although the connection between toxic shock and tampons has been established, the evidence is still somewhat fuzzy. The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, GA is conducting tests to determine more substantial data. What they do know now is that toxic shock is caused by staphylococcus aureus, a bacterium which secretes a toxin that gets into the bloodstream and causes the symptoms. What they are attempting to determine is if tampons contain anything which might enhance the growth of this bacterium.

Until more definite conclusions are available to the public, several actions have been taken to keep the situation under control. Store managers have removed all Rely tampons--the brand linked most to toxic shock--from their shelves. The Food and Drug Administration/FDA has decided to require a label on all tampon boxes warning women that a link has been established between these tampons and toxic shock.

The Los Angeles Times also reported that "Women can almost entirely eliminate the risk of toxic shock by not using tampons." Should they choose not to change their personal habits, it might be a wise idea to use tampons for only a part of the day, preferably in the afternoon instead of at night. If a woman develops any of the symptoms described above, she should remove the tampon and call a physician immediately.

Health fair coming

Over 50 health related campus and community organizations, including the American Cancer Society/-ACS, the NJ Mental Health Players, and the National Council on Alcoholism, will be on hand in the Student Center Wed., Nov. 5, from 9 am-5 pm for the 1980 Health Fair.

Sponsored by the Health Professions Association and the department of health professions, the fair will make available a number of valuable screenings and tests. A Sequential Multiple Analysis Computerization/SMAC blood chemistry analysis, that performs 22 different analyses on one blood sample, will be available for an $8 charge. Other tests, from tine tests for tuberculosis to urinalysis, will also be available.

For more information, contact Dr. Joan Ficke at 893-4103 or Dr. John Redd at 893-4187.

Campus Police Report

Ex-custodian threatens supervisor

by Chris Carroll

A former custodian in the Student Center allegedly threatened the supervisor of student center personnel during a telephone conversation on Oct. 24, according to officer Robert Williams. The custodian had been fired on Sept. 15 for "excessive absenteeism and insubordination" and had complained to his supervisor of his troubles with unemployment, Williams said. In the telephone conversation, the custodian allegedly said, "I'm going to get you," Williams said. No charges have been brought against the custodian, but he has been warned of his actions, Williams said.

A report of a suspicious person in Panzer Gym was filed by a graduate assistant on Oct. 21 at 8:02 pm. Officer Charles Jones spoke with the assistant, who said she was in the women's locker room on her way to the pool when she saw a person, who she believed was a male, standing behind a shower curtain. The assistant told the person he was in the wrong area of the gym; then she left the area. The lifeguard on duty was notified, and the area was checked. No one was found in the area, the report stated.

Two thefts occurred on the fourth floor of the Student Center between 5:40 and 6:30 pm on Oct. 20. The first theft occurred sometime after a member of Players left the Class I Organization's office. When the president of Players returned to the office, he found a typewriter and an adding machine missing. Officer James Fassnacht responded. Officer Debra Newcombe was dispatched to the center that same night on a second report of a theft. A member of the Latin American Student Organization/LASO was not sure if he locked the office. A duffle bag and camera were stolen, the report stated. The two thefts, which campus police said may possibly be related, are under investigation.

A theft of three typewriters and a calculator from an office in Chapin Hall occurred between Oct. 20 and 21. According to the report, the perpetrator entered Room 106 by an undetermined method and removed the missing items. The value of the stolen property is approximately $2,255. Officer Robert Williams is investigating.

A trash can fire was extinguished in the Math/Science Building by officer Joseph Pezzino on Oct. 25. Pezzino smelled smoke in the first floor hallway and discovered a trash can ablaze near Room 106. He put out the fire with an extinguisher, and, with the assistance of Sgt. Herbert Lloyd, searched the building for other fires, but none were found.

SGA News

Contract bill fails

by Susan Solomon

Last night the legislature voted down a bill which, if passed would have delegated contractual cosigning power to the office of the SGA treasurer.

The bill, which was coauthored by the Appropriations and Government and Administrations Committees and submitted at last week's SGA meeting, was presented to the SGA attorneys. The attorneys' review of the matter suggested that a conference between the president and treasurer concerning the SGA's financial status would be most helpful in determining which Class I Organization event contracts are feasible and worthy of the president's signed approval. However, they felt that the mandatory inclusion of the treasurer's signature on the document would be little more than a detriment to the processing of the contracts which are already tightly constrained by the time element of the current approval process.

During the legislative debate on the bill it was also brought up that passage of this bill would require a statute change in the SGA constitution, lessening the powers of the office of the president. It was also expressed by several legislators that such action would leave the other executive board positions open to reinterpretation, something the legislature feels is unnecessary.

Len Ricci and Phillip Karali were appointed legislators at large from the business and political science departments respectively.

A bill was passed endorsing the Welfare and Internal Affairs Committee's investigation into the possibility of MSC creating its own marching band.

For all events sponsored by Class II Organizations requiring ticket sales, it was voted that an attended sales table be operated for a minimum 50 minutes per day in the Student Center lobby until all tickets are sold.

Parking lot-- or a college?

Commuters have cars, some 8200 with decals. MSC has parking spaces, some 4400. Campus police have tickets, some 1000 in the last two weeks. And course booklets and registration forms go hand in hand. You wonder how it all ties together--simple. The administration is considering banning registration for those students who have three or more parking tickets. The move is intended to inhibit the creative parker, the one who stops due to frustration and fatigue and refuses to find two painted white lines.

This possible move by the administration will not work. The college is obligated to provide parking spaces for all decaled students. When the institution does not meet its responsibility, how can anything less than angry students be expected?

MSC is allegedly an institution of higher education. The administration is turning its back on the very principles of its existence should this plan be adopted. How can a learning facility deny its body food for thought? An empty classroom benefits no one. Does the backbone of MSC lie in parking lots or ticket happy police?

MSC is a commuter college. Parking is a very real problem for the majority of the student body. Students cannot be expected to pay for the problems of a construction happy campus. Students did not create the parking dilemma on this campus. Being locked out of classes is a high cost for not paying a parking ticket written out in very absurd conditions.

Parking in the pits has become a jungle. Commuters hunt and peck, creep and crawl, accelerate and brake all in the hopes of finding a parking space.

Why should students buy decals for nonexistent parking spots? Why should students pay for tickets they receive when they have to make their own parking areas because the administration cannot provide such areas?

The administration cutting off the education of its students is like the child who says it's my toy and you can't have it.

Have we reached the point where we will be punished for standing up for our rights and defending our beliefs?

How can an institution which breeds knowledge suffocate its students for exercising everything that institution has taught it?

How can a college grow without its vital organs: the student body?

In the end does education mean playing the parking game?

What if we had registration and nobody came?

I think we should dispense with INSIGNIFICANT ISSUES SUCH AS THE ECONOMY, THE HOSTAGES, NUCLEAR POWER, THE DRAFT, WELFARE, TAXES, AND MY FAILURE TO FULFILL PROMISES.... AND LETS SPEND THE NEXT HALF-HOUR IGNORING JOHN ANDERSON AND SPECULATING WHETHER OR NOT GOVERNOR REAGAN WILL DIE OF OLD AGE IN OFFICE.

On Second Thought/Meryl Yourish

Election '80: who cares?

"No, I won't do it. I've been trying to avoid it for weeks. I will not do it, Nora."

"You've got to do it. It's your civic duty. You just can't ignore it and hope it will go away."

"Just watch me."
"You have to write about the election."

"What election?"
"I'll forget you just said that."

"And I'll forget what you just said. Why can't I just write about the parking problem?"

"Meryl, nobody wants to hear about the parking problem," Nora said.

"Nobody wants to hear about the election, either. One-third of this nation is still undecided. If the election were held today, 'None of the Above' would win it hands down."

"Nora, just look at the choices we have. A peanut farmer, a retired actor, and a congressman. Translated, that's four more years like the last four, Bedtime for Bonzo's costar, or--well, you've read all about Abscam, I presume."

"You can't judge people by their former occupations. As I recall, you were washing dogs three years ago," Nora said.

"Bathing," I corrected, "not washing. I was a dog bather. Besides, I only held that job for a month."

"What happened? Were you all washed up?" she said, breaking into hysterical laughter.

"Funny, Nor. You ought to write a humor column or something. Wit like that shouldn't be wasted."

"You're getting nasty lately. Are you still upset that you didn't get the Pulitzer last year?"

"I knew I didn't have a chance," I lied. "I just said that to see if you were awake. I just can't believe they gave it to Mailer! He couldn't write his way out of a Hemingway novel!"

"You're changing the subject," Nora said. "What about the election column?"

"I don't like serious columns! And neither do my readers. Don't you realize that I was serious for nearly two whole weeks during the strike? I almost lost my sense of humor!"

"Almost?"
"Don't push it, Nor. I made you, and I can break you," I snarled.

"You still haven't discussed the election."

"What do you want me to say?" I screamed. "I feel like we're choosing between Moe, Larry, and Curly. Do you want someone who says 'Woop, woop, woop, woop' or sticks his finger in your eye or has curly hair?"

"Now look, Meryl, I think you're going a bit too far. None of them have curly hair."

"Do you realize no one even knows what color Reagan's hair really is? Or even if it's all his own?"

"Who cares?"

"Exactly!" I cried. "Who cares? I will read the papers, and I will listen to the debates, and I will definitely vote, but I will not write a column about Huey, Dewey, and Louie. Phil's doing an excellent job tearing each of them apart. Let him do it. I refuse."

"OK, OK, I get the message," Nora said. "Let's change the subject. What did you think of the American League playoffs?"

I gave Nora one of the evilist looks I had ever given in my life, and slowly poured her pitcher of beer over her head. I had had enough.

REAGAN'S CEREBELLUM. HERE WE ENCOUNTER A MAZE OF NEURONS AND THEIR DENDRITIC SPINES, FROM WHOSE TIPS INFORMATION IS TRANSMITTED BY ELECTRICAL IMPULSES.

INTELLIGENCE IS THOUGHT TO BE RELATED TO THE COMPLEXITY OF THESE CONNECTIONS. UNHAPPILY, THE BRAIN STOPS GROWING AT AGE 20, AND THEREAFTER, NEURONS DIE OFF BY THE MILLIONS EVERY YEAR.

WHAT THIS MEANS IS THAT THE BRAIN OF RONALD REAGAN HAS BEEN SHRINKING EVER SINCE 1931, WHEREAS JIMMY CARTER'S BRAIN CELLS HAVE ONLY BEEN DYING SINCE 1944.

Carter chosen hands down

by Georgia Panagakos and Phil Lanoue

Who do you think you'll vote for in the upcoming presidential election?

"President Carter, of course. Not because I really want to, but because I'm afraid of Reagan getting in. Reagan is too aggressive and conservative for me."

Cathy Lauer
1982/psychology

"My vote is going to Carter because I think that he has gained a lot of experience in his four year term. Also, because he believes in peace and in helping the common man."

John Zur
1982/computer science

"President Carter, for the mere reason that Kennedy is backing him up. I was going to vote for Kennedy originally, but since he lost, I'll vote for Carter."

Marc Defilippis

"Anderson, because Carter has proven nothing in his term, and Reagan does not have enough experience beyond being a terrible actor."

Shirlee Arpin

Guest Spot

Karali's column questioned

by Mike Sinatra

Obviously, The Montclarion columnist Phill Karali has had little experience in political commentary, otherwise he would not have written such a trite and trivial column on President Jimmy Carter for the Oct. 2 issue of The Montclarion. Karali did not bother to examine the truly relevant factors of this election, namely the stands of individual candidates and their parties on key issues. Instead, he chose to deliver a rather halfhearted rabbit punch at the image of Carter. I am writing this rebuttal because I believe it is necessary to bring Karali out of the clouds and reveal to him the true nature of US politics.

First of all, Karali alleges that Carter's "misuse of political power" has had a harmful impact on his major opponents during this campaign. Politics is a rough game, Karali; you do not get penalized for hitting your opponent from the blind side, or for stealing his "Get out of jail free" cards. Any possible advantage must be seized, quickly and decisively, by a candidate. Besides, the scheduling of an optimistic news conference on the day of a primary hardly constitutes "misuse of political power."

Richard Nixon, a republican endorsing Ronald Reagan, was the true epitome of a president misusing his power, and no one with any political aptitude at all would even remotely consider Carter's actions analogous to Nixon's. Carter's stress on Chappaquidick and his emphasis on Reagan's ultraconservative (yes, nearly racist) background demonstrates a shrewd, incisive, politically sharp mind, and not the haphazard rambling of an inept candidate attempting to disguise a less than sparkling career behind a flurry of political counterpunching, a la Reagan.

I must also take offense to some of Karali's alleged "facts" pertaining to the Carter campaign. First, the "faithful delegate" rule, which bound each delegate elected in state primaries to the candidate chosen by the voters, has been enacted in every Democratic Party convention since the institution of the primary reform laws in the early part of this century. Such a rule is essential to a democratic process because it gives the average voter, not a convention delegate or a backroom party boss, the power of candidate selection. Karali attempted to portray this standard procedure as a Carter ploy concocted out of fear of Senator Edward Kennedy's delegate strength.

Second, a presidential debate is supposed to be a one-on-one exchange of personal and party ideals conducted in a formal, organized manner. John Anderson, a self-proclaimed Republican, does not deserve a place in a presidential debate, and his presence in a debate with Carter and Reagan would only succeed in creating a three-ringed circus, which would cause enough chaos to thoroughly confuse anyone attempting to acquire a clear understanding of the differences between the candidates.

Third, the attempted rescue of the hostages in Iran was a cold, level-headed decision made in the Oval Office when Carter perceived that rising public opinion in the US demanded some type of action to break the stalemate. That the attempt failed is tragic, but to call the rescue mission an underhanded political maneuver is a distortion of reality.

Fourth, Karali attacked the release of information pertaining to the Stealth, or invisible bomber, as a political move designed to deflect criticism away from his defense policy. There is no doubt that the leak of information was intentional; however, considering that technology of this sort has been in use for at least 10 years, a leak of some general information is not as earthshattering as Karali would have us believe. The reason why the leak occurred now is quite obvious.

Reagan has been portraying himself as a junior John Wayne splashing ashore at Normandy with guns drawn, shouting, "Okay, Carter, what have you done to strengthen the US and make it more secure?" To which Carter, sly and subtle as always, released some information about the Stealth technology, which has been and will continue to be upgraded according to the provisions of Carter's defense budgets over the past four years.

Finally, Karali asks if Carter is a man of integrity or if he is just doing anything to win. My response would be that Carter is certainly a man of integrity, who is doing everything necessary to win in November.

Reagan may rant and rave, and Anderson may insist that third party candidates espousing $.50 a gallon gasoline taxes could win, but the shrewd, honest and intelligent political talents of Carter should prevail on Nov. 4.

Point of information

Winter housing made possible in Freeman

by Brian Cige

An opportunity not available to MSC students for the past several years will be an option for many during this winter session period. That option is housing in Freeman Hall.

I initiated the idea not only for those who need an extra three credits to graduate, but also for those who find commuting is too expensive, if not impossible, and for those who have not yet experienced dorm living.

Furthermore, athletes need to be here to train for their winter sports, students have to be here to rehearse for school plays, and foreign/independent students either can't make it home, or don't have a home to make it to.

Many students have to consider their employment. On campus jobs continue, and, more importantly, it is very difficult to take a month's leave of absence from an off campus job. We should make every possible attempt to help students earn their salary when it helps them pay their way through college.

The cost for this program will lessen with the number of participants. Of primary importance is that the room, board, and tuition are covered for those who qualify for financial aid.

Meal tickets guarantee a hot lunch and dinner five days a week. Costs may seem high, but the overhead varies little in preparing food for 100 or 600 students. The room will cost less than $35 a week.

Look for more information in the Housing Office, fourth floor, Bohn Hall, or contact John Shearman, assistant director of housing at (893-5252).

Take advantage of this opportunity. Applications are available now through October 31. Contact Shearman if your interest arises after the deadline. Good luck and thanks.

Brian Cige is SGA president.

TV: impact that makes or breaks a presidential candidate

With the recent debate in Cleveland, on Tuesday night, the question arises of the impact that TV can have on a presidential election. From the 1960 election until the present, TV has aided or hindered candidates for the presidency. A closer examination shows the tremendous impact that it actually has.

The history of TV and presidential elections goes back to 1948, but its power was felt beginning with the 1960 election. It was then John F. Kennedy took advantage of this electronic media to overcome Richard M. Nixon. Although many who listened on radio felt Nixon had "won" the debates, Kennedy's appearance and confidence convinced the country to vote for him.

President Lyndon B. Johnson was affected by TV in a negative fashion, for the graphic pictures of the war in Vietnam were his apocalypse politically. It is ironic to note that Johnson had three sets in the Oval Office, so that he could watch all three network news programs.

Nixon also felt the power of the tube, both positively and negatively. The pictures from his 1972 trip to China portrayed him as a grand leader of the Western world. But his pitiful face across the screen Aug. 8, 1974 proved in the end that it did him in. The nation was reminded constantly of his political mistake through the Watergate hearings broadcasts, and the constant reports on the news for over a year.

The 1976 election produced the Eastern Europe gaffe of President Gerald R. Ford in a television debate. ("I don't consider Eastern Europe as a Soviet sphere of influence.") This mistake was crucial, and many considered it to be a major reason that Ford lost.

The 1980 presidential election has shown how the political campaigners have used TV as an accessible and cheap way to get exposure. Thus, the campaign strategists have their candidates hold rallies around noon or 1 pm so they will appear on the local news and possibly national news that night.

TV also lends credibility to a candidate, whether it be advertisements or reports on his campaign. Because of this, John Anderson, Ed Clark, and Barry Commoner, as well as the other candidates, lack credibility, a crucial element in an election. Yet, although a commercial may be superficial and not quite address the issues, the more commercials a candidate has aired, the better off he is. Of course, an incumbent running has the biggest advantage, for he can also call a press conference, which is almost guaranteed publicity.

Important conclusions can be drawn from the argument presented. One is that everything in a campaign revolves around the coverage that can be obtained, for every rally is staged for TV. The other unfortunate conclusion, in this writer's opinion, is that TV has more impact on people than newspapers. But the most important idea is that TV's power can not be equaled in determining an election, for it can either make or break a candidate.

LASO symbolizes brotherhood and pride

by Barbara Bonilla

The Latin American Student Organization/LASO symbolizes the brotherhood among Latin American students. Our goal is to make known the cultural roots of all the MSC Hispanics by having dances, films, speakers, lectures, concerts, art exhibits, and plays.

During the next two weeks (Oct. 27-Nov. 7), LASO will be sponsoring a clothing drive for the recent Cuban refugees in this country. LASO will be collecting clothing for them; especially needed are winter clothing and blankets, socks, shoes, gloves, jackets and or coats, and anything warm you can contribute to help these people out in these harsh winter months of NJ. Collection areas will be at LASO, fourth floor of the Student Center and Dr. Englebert, professor Janet Susi, on the fourth floor of Partridge Hall. We would greatly appreciate your donations.

We invite you to join our organization and cooperate in our goal; if you are Latin--cooperate, if you are not--unite.

Election 1980: students voice

The 1980 presidential election is drawing nearer and nearer. For many students, this is the first presidential election they are eligible to vote in. To find out what the students are thinking, we interviewed a group of them and discovered positive as well as negative reactions to the three main candidates and their campaigns.

by Linda Martelli

"Reagan is a responsible candidate, and I believe he will do a good job as president. The people in the US need a change. I like Reagan's defense policy. Our country must maintain certain standards and try to keep our defense up to that of the USSR. He also has good ideas on Salt II that I agree on."

Ida Bruno, a political science major at MSC, continued, "I am interested in politics and am working on the campaign in my home town of Westwood. When I entered college I was a history major and changed to political science after taking a course in politics. I was not interested in politics before I was able to vote. After reading literature on both of the candidates, I decided to back up Reagan. I wanted to know more about the campaign and the candidates, so I am working on the election."

Because of her interest in politics, Bruno gives up her free time and puts aside her studies to help out the campaign of the candidate of her choice. "I like talking to people and trying to persuade them to vote for the best candidate," Bruno added.

Dressed in a white ruffled blouse, Bruno continued, "Reagan has made his ideas very clear. He pointed out the problems in government and will stick by what he says. Reagan tries to show the American people what past faults have been made. A president should give character to the country it represents. Carter is a weak man, and therefore the country appears weak. The hostages have been in Iran for one year, and Carter is still not doing anything about the situation. It's possible that Carter will release the hostages now in order to get reelected. I only hope that the people will realize why he is trying harder now."

Her views on Anderson are that most people will vote for him because they are not sure of the democratic or republican parties. "The party system is not trusted by the majority of people," she added.

"We need a strong president. The Republican Party is what we need to represent our country. Carter does not deserve another try. The only way things get done is if a Republican is in office. The strong sense of responsibility of the Republicans can help our country stay strong," Bruno added with a concerned look on her face.

Bruno ended with, "I am enjoying working on the campaign and believe Reagan has a good chance of winning. Many people are wrapped up in their own life and don't get involved in elections. They should realize that who is running their country does involve them. I enjoy making people aware of their candidates. Carter has done this country wrong because he hides many things from the people. I think Reagan is capable of restoring faith in the American people, and I am behind him all the way."

pay attention to the candidates and the issues," she said.

"At the very beginning of the campaign I was very confused and possibly even leaning toward Reagan. But Reagan took care of that very quickly by selecting George Bush as his running mate. Bush seems to have such a demanding and arrogant air about him, and he even admits to beliefs which go against Reagan's campaign tactics. I think that if Reagan had chosen anyone but Bush, especially Ford, to be his running mate I would definitely think about voting for them," Kelly, who considers herself a democrat, said.

"But I honestly feel that Carter is doing a decent job, and I'll stick with him and hope that he wins. Either way the vote goes, I hope our next president will have the power and courage to keep the US safe and allow each and every one of us to be proud of our country," Kelly said as she took a deep breath.

Here is a capsule of the major issues in this year's presidential campaign along with a statement

REAGAN

Economy (Inflation)

Its basic cause is excessive government spending. It will be controlled when government spending is curbed.

Taxes

Favors income tax cuts to provide incentives to individuals and businesses to strengthen and expand the economy.

Foreign Policy

Clear policy based on national interests, with clear understanding of interrelationships of global problems and issues.

Nuclear Power

Favors it. Waste disposal problem has been overstated--can be solved.

ERA

Believes in equal rights, but amendment is not the best method. Attention should now turn to congressional and state legislation to remedy remaining problems.

ANDERSON

Ties individual tax cuts in a balanced federal budget and rejects a constitutional amendment to limit spending.

Believes our prestige, influence, and power abroad are direct functions of our domestic strength. Advocates strong armed forces, best defense is a flexible military.

Believes that it's further expansion, must be halted unless we can achieve and maintain adequate safeguards for the operation of reactors and management of nuclear wastes.

"It's all the way with Carter again," Kathy Marone shouted.

"I believe President Carter has proven himself to the American people. He hasn't backed down and apologized to the Iranians to get our hostages released. That's not the way to do it. We have to show the rest of the world that we are still number one," the petite 5 foot 2 inch sophomore said, emphasizing the point.

Pointing to a green and white Carter/Mondale button pinned to her brown leather purse, Marone continued, "I actively and openly support Carter. I go to the Democratic headquarters in my town two or three nights a week, where I telephone people in the surrounding areas to make them more aware of the issues. We also send out literature in support of Carter.

"This is all volunteer work, and I love it. On election day I will be down at the polls handing out flyers and encouraging people to vote for Carter," the pretty brunette said, as her brown eyes lit up in the afternoon sun.

Sitting on the steps outside Partridge Hall, Marone continued, "I will also be right there when they count the votes from our district. Then I'll head back to the headquarters, where we have a big celebration planned.

We're going to have several kegs of beer, and the neighborhood pizza parlor is supplying us with about 30 pizzas. Everyone who works at the headquarters will be bringing food, too. I'm making 48 brownies," the 19-year-old nutrition major said excitedly.

"I'm not worried about the party being a disaster. Carter will beat Reagan. Everyone must know by now that Reagan is for war. When he gets into office he'll be shipping our boys--including my boyfriend--off to some foreign country. People have to realize this and vote for Carter.

"This is the first time I've ever been involved with a campaign at any level. It's really very exciting and rewarding. It makes you feel like you're doing something for the country. I plan to be involved in as many campaigns as I possibly can," she concluded.

Voting does count; at least, John Stouter and Cheryl Rose agreed it does. And both will vote next month because of their belief.

"Someone has to get involved; hopefully those in college--those who are educated--can make a better choice," Stouter said. He added that voting "can eventually help."

Rose's fear of dictatorship was her main reason for voting. "If people don't vote, they're letting other people make decisions for them. We could just as well have a king for a ruler," she said.

Stouter said he's an independent--"I voted for Bill Bradley, a democrat, and Gerald Ford, a republican." Rose said she's not declared but leans toward the democratic party. Both are senior English majors, and both are not voting for Reagan.

"I'm voting for Anderson," Stouter said. "I'm leaning toward an antivote."

According to Stouter, if Anderson gets enough votes, it might make the other candidates realize that they are not representing the people. "It would be an interesting situation to startle the two major parties into realizing that they're not representing us."

He added that although it's idealistic, a third party could be started in this country. "It would be nice to get a triparty system."

On the other hand, Rose is supporting Carter. "I feel, contrary to what most people believe, Carter has done a worthwhile job, and, contrasted to the other candidates, he has had the experience in office," she said. "He's been able to understand the system and find out how it works and doesn't work."

"I look at the candidate as a person, not as a machine. The other two candidates are machines. Carter is the everyman type," she added.

"I don't want to go to war," Stouter said--this being his reason for not voting for Reagan.

Rose agreed, "Carter will go out of his way to keep peace in the world." Rose has another reason for not voting for Reagan. "I would never vote for someone like Reagan who's trying to force a certain set of ideals on us when he denies equal rights and abortion," she added, "especially when the majority of people are women."

Does either one of them feel that people are aware of the political issues at stake in this election?

"Most people, myself included, are not aware," Stouter said. Stouter watched the Anderson/Reagan debate and has read "some" material about the election. However, he admitted that he was more concerned with getting through school.

Rose, who does not consider herself politically minded, added, "People are affected when an issue hits them in the face, like Reagan and the ERA and abortion."

the presidential polls, Sharon admitted that, "I voted for Gerald Ford in the last election. Carter turned me off four years ago, and now I think that he has done a crummy job since he entered the White House."

"Reagan has some beliefs which I agree with. I don't believe in abortions. I don't think the federal government should have to pay for hundreds of thousands of abortions. I am sold on ERA. In my opinion there is nothing wrong with a man being a man and a woman being a woman," Sharon said with a note of conviction in her voice.

And with Reagan's past acting career in mind, Sharon said, "I don't really think that it should matter. I don't believe the man's marital status or his religious beliefs have anything to do with performing his job well, either. It's what he will do in office that matters. So what Reagan was, and what he is, is really immaterial."

"I'm sure about his chances of winning the election. One minute it seems like he has a good chance, and the next poll comes out and he has slipped. But, in a couple of weeks we should find out," she said.

"I think I would vote for anyone other than Carter," Sharon concluded.

CARTER

Pledges to attach the recession with a $12 billion job program, a $1 billion railroad renewal program to create jobs.

Calls for targeted cuts to stimulate job creation and business growth. Personal tax cuts would be weighted to help low and middle income families.

Believes in policy of equal rights in countries all over the world, maintains strong but stable defense.

Supports the rights of states to turn down the location of waste storage sites and would phase out nuclear plants as soon as alternate sources are available.

Commits itself to a constitution, economy and society open to women on an equal basis with men.

"I don't see any point in voting this year," Danny Toledo, a junior at MSC, said.

"What are your choices? Reagan and Carter. Voting for Anderson is just like voting for Reagan. So what does this all boil down to; a warmonger and a peanut farmer."

"If Reagan wins, there's no doubt that he will reinstate the draft or go to war. I have too much to live for to give up my life now," the 21-year-old business major said. "I plan to finish school first and hopefully get a job working with the stock market so I can make something of myself."

Looking up from The New York Times he was reading, Toledo continued, "Carter is no prize package either. He left our hostages in Iran for almost a year and has the whole world laughing at us. Since the rescue mission failed he's just sat back and waited for the Iranians to come to some conclusion about them. And I'm sure if they are released before the election he will take full credit. I just hope everyone realizes that's a lot of bull."

"Our economy is a disaster. As far as I can see, Carter has done nothing to bring down inflation. The price of gas is outrageous. Most of my friends can't even afford to fill up their tanks every week on their salaries, which are only between $50 and $60 a week. We've had to form a carpool, which sometimes proves to be an inconvenience because not all our schedules coincide. But there is no other way we would make it to school five days a week," Toledo said, with a not of annoyance in his voice.

"Besides, I think they've taken politicking to the lowest possible form--name calling. Carter calls Reagan this; Reagan calls Carter that. Are these grown men running for the office of president of the US, or are they three-year-olds fighting over a toy in a playpen?"

"What I would like to know is if there are any real issues in the campaign. I haven't heard either one of them speak about anything significant. The debate between Reagan and Anderson was a farce. Reagan very skillfully avoided answering many of the questions."

"I do believe that Carter is the lesser of two evils. At least he won't lead us to war."

Controversial comedy*Suicide worth committing

by Darrel Lippman

The Suicide, the critically acclaimed comedy which opened at the Anta Theater (245 W 52nd) on Sept. 22, might very well be one of the most satirically controversial plays to make its way to Broadway in a long while. The Suicide has had a hard time "making its way" to the US since it was banned by the Soviet government in 1932.

Russian playwright Nikolai Erdman's brilliant comedy clearly ridicules the Soviet system, thus provoking Stalin to intervene in 1931. Stalin did not have a very high opinion of the play, and his comrades considered it empty and even harmful. Still, he allowed those comrades who knew more about the arts to judge the matter. One year later, The Suicide was refused permission to open by the Central Licensing Board and remains unperformed in the USSR (except for one closed dress rehearsal). It is a mystery what then happened to Erdman, who was seemingly relegated to die in obscurity in Moscow 10 years ago at the age of 68.

The Suicide was smuggled out of the USSR and published in the US in 1975. It was never disclosed how the play made its way here, in order to protect those involved.

Nevertheless, The Suicide is here, and the directorial debut of Soviet emigre Jonas Jurasas is quite impressive. The comedy, which makes some bold comments about Soviet life, was first staged by Jurasas in Providence, RI by the Trinity Square Repertory Co.

The time is the 1920's. The place, a Moscow tenement. The plot revolves around the would-be suicide, Semyon Semyonovitch Podsekalknikov Derek Jacobi stars in his Broadway debut as Semyon, the would-be suicide, in Nikolai Erdman's lost classic, The Suicide.

(played by the star, Derek Jacobi), who has been unemployed for a year. After a last ditch effort to get rich quick by learning to play the tuba fails, Semyon contemplates suicide. When it is learned that he is going to commit suicide, Podsekalknikov's comrades come out of the woodwork to convince him not to die a rebel without a cause. For example, an intellectual (John Heffernan) tells Semyon to leave a note saying that he died on behalf of the abused intelligentsia. Others, from a Marxist to a butcher, also suggest that Semyon leave behind a note on their behalf. The living think that through a dead man's note they will be able to lodge their complaints to the government.

The controversy surrounding The Suicide erupts when Semyon realizes the power that comes with the moments right before the act of suicide. He decides to phone the Kremlin and voice his opinion of the "system." What could they do if he were to die in an hour? Jacobi then races up some side stairs to a platform extending over the audience, where there is a phone. "Hello?" he says, "I want to speak to someone at the top. What? There's no one there?" The audience laughs heartily as Semyon continues his conversation.

Everyone scatters when they hear Podsekalknikov tell the person on the other end of the line that he doesn't even like Karl Marx ("They hung up on me" he says). "Shoot him!" they exclaim. The comedy takes a serious turn as Erdman has Semyon again voice a comment towards the government, "While they're recreating socialism, why can't they let us whisper," Semyon wonders to himself. Quite a suggestion to make about the Soviet government, especially during that time period (the 1920's).

The play was deliciously crazy at times, sending the sold out audience into raucous laughter. Semyon's comrades give him a feast before his designated noon suicide time, and he becomes a bit drunk. It is now 2 pm, and Semyon yells, "I'm two hours late to die!"

"Take that gun out of your hand, you're in no condition to kill yourself," shouts his mother-in-law (Grayson Hall).

Jacobi then loses all control as anxiety strikes. How shall he kill himself? A hilarious scene ensues. Semyon sticks the gun in his mouth, but decides against it. "Don't want to mess up the face. No, I'll count to five," he says, holding the gun to his chest now. "One...two...three, four, five!" No shot. "I think I'll forget about the counting. If I do that I might as well put the gun back in my mouth," he exclaims. And on it goes, Jacobi's performance winning over the audience minute by minute.

The 41-year-old Jacobi (of I Claudius) is simply sparkling as Semyon, and the 18 member cast is just as satisfying, from Semyon's wife (Angela Pietropinto) to the gypsies, three men and three women who provide background music. The gypsies are seen by the audience, but are invisible to the players. They represent a desire for life to Semyon, trying to convince him that his thoughts of suicide are a mistake.

Santo Loquasto's vivid setting and costumes are equally delightful. The set had a background of many doors (120 in all) of different styles, making up two floors. The constant opening of doors penetrated Semyon's privacy. This $800,000 production is surely as lavish as the cost suggests. The set of doors also rolled back to form a spacious area for scenes that called for it. For Semyon's suicide feast, a table rose from the floor, the cloth, which was laid like a rug, enveloping the rising table for a tablecloth. A coffin for Semyon was lowered from the rafters of the stage. All of this accounted for the production cost.

For director Jurasas, to stage a controversial play as satirically, and at times movingly, as he did, is a triumph. At the play's end, I heard nothing but adjectives of praise for The Suicide, which goes to show that this kind of suicide can be fun.

Christopher shines; movie fades

by Darrel Lippman

Fade to Black

Starring Dennis Christopher, Tim Thomerson, Gwynne Gilford and introducing Linda Kerridge.

Written and directed by Vernon Zimmerman

What is Dennis Christopher, that marvelous actor who handed in a brilliant performance as a bicycling champ in last year's Breaking Away, doing in this new thriller, Fade to Black?

Once again Christopher proves to be an adept actor, this time in the role of Eric Binford, a deranged movie fanatic. But Christopher's acting is the only thing that keeps this shock shlock on its feet. Once you get past his fascinating performance (he gets to assume the roles of movie greats), all that is left is a silly suspense flick with little substance.

Eric Binford's life is dreary at best. First, he lives in Venice, CA. with his crippled stepmother, who is always nagging him to pick up his movie cluttered room. Secondly, down at the film rental company where he works (where else?), his boss is always about to fire him for his incompetence. Thirdly, the guys he works with push poor Binford around endlessly. A hooker even turns him down when he offers her money.

When Binford gets a date with a clone of Marilyn Monroe (Linda Kerridge), one of his movie idols, she stands him up. That was the clincher. I've heard of bad streaks, but this guy is a real loser. Playing Binford, Christopher is a real sight. You can't help but feel sorry for the pathetic looking Binford. Christopher steps right into the part perfectly.

Many scenes are too predictable to be scary. For example, after Binford watches Richard Widmark push a crippled woman down a flight of stairs in Kiss of Evil, you know that his stepmother (Eve Brent Ashe) is headed for a one way trip down the back stairs after she knocks over his movie projector (Binford's only form of escape from the real world).

Binford then goes on a murder spree, recreating scenes from old movies to claim his victims. Dressed as The Mummy, Binford scares his boss to death, literally (he suffered a heart attack). As Hopalong Cassidy, he confronts one of his work nemesis' at a carnival and challenges him to a duel. Thinking the whole thing a joke, Binford's work partner accepts, only to get riddled with bullets by Hopalong.

Binford continues to knock them dead with every performance.

A detective (Tim Thomerson) feels sorry for poor Binford and tries to figure out the "misshapen product of the environment's" next move before he strikes again. At this point of the movie, the supporting cast flops, overacting to the point of being ludicrous. The detective gets shot in the leg, but pushes on valiantly to stop the crazed Binford, "I'll be fine," he says. Sure, he'll bleed all over town, but don't worry folks, he'll be fine.

Also, much of Eric's supposedly scary moments get responses of unintentional laughter rather than screams. Binford, in his Dracula threads, descends upon the hooker. Needless to say, it was quite amusing to see him chase her down an alley to her death.

Fade to Black, rated R, contains some bloody gore and strong language. It would be worth seeing, however, just for Christopher's interesting performance--you'll laugh a little too.

The Joffrey Ballet experience

by Deborah J. Johnson

The New York Yankees have their Columbus farm club. The highly acclaimed Joffrey Dance Company has the Joffrey II Dancers. Last Friday night this talented troupe of 12 performed before a sold out crowd at MSC's Memorial Auditorium. Judging from the warm reception they received, it is clear Joffrey II has established a reputation and following of its own.

Joffrey II, which will celebrate its 11th birthday in November, is the training ground for the NYC-based Joffrey Ballet. This second company grew out of the Joffrey affiliated American Ballet Center's scholarship program. It is a way of giving promising new dancers performing experience.

The group, whose alumni comprise three-fourths of the present first company personnel, performed four ballets to music piped in over the auditorium's PA system.

While lack of a live orchestra may seem disconcerting to some, for Joffrey II it is a practical way of dealing with a season made up of one-night stands across the country.

One of the best pieces of Friday night's program was Fredrick Ashton's Monotones II (a Pas de Trois). Three dancers, dressed simply in white leotards and caps, performed graceful classical ballet to the music of Eric Satie's Trois Gymnopedies. Unlike the opening piece (Stanley Zompako's Septet), which also featured classical ballet, the choreography here seemed to flow more easily with the music.

Emily Keeler's Rainmaker was also memorable. Adapted from selections of Aaron Copland's The Red Pony, it spotlighted an energetic Lael Evans as Starbuck, who comes to the plains to dance for rain for an otherwise scorched land. Ron Reagan, son of presidential candidate Ronald Reagan, also danced in this piece, provoking soft murmurs among members of the audience.

The backdrop and lighting for Rainmaker were appropriately done in dry, subdued shades of orange, yellow, and brown. The dancers were costumed in frontier dress.

common to the early 1900's--the women in long granny dresses, and the men in britches and cowboy hats. The Rainmaker indeed ends with rainfall--a sun shower--characterized by bright lighting and an exuberant Starbuck highkicking and tossing his hat into the air.

The most entertaining ballet of the evening was the "Hubba Hubba Ding Ding" lightness of Threads from a String of Swing, by Daryl Gray. The setting was a high school dance of the '40's, complete with crepe paper streamers, a punch table, argyle socks, and saddle shoes. Couples enthusiastically "jitterbugged," "frugged," and "monkeyed" the carefree night away to music by The Glenn Miller Orchestra. More of a dance piece than a ballet, this scenario seemed to bring back a rush of memories to the primarily middle aged audience.

For all those in attendance--old or young--Joffrey II was a totally enjoyable experience from beginning to end. The metropolitan area is fortunate to have such a winning farm club.

Elephant man in a word--touching

by Donna Marino

Beautiful and realistic black and white photography, combined with incredible acting, made The Elephant Man a poignant and touching film.

As the camera shows up steamy cobblestoned streets, teeming with shabbily dressed laborers and merchants, we are transported to London in the late 1880's. We follow these streets to the seedy, crude environment of a circus side show, where people are flocking in morbid curiosity. The great attraction is a horribly deformed young man, a freak called "The Elephant Man." "This man is a degradation to himself and everyone who sees him," cries an inspector who wants to close down the act. But the people pay no attention; they are too busy gaping at the creature they paid to see.

The scene soon changes, and we see a doctor who has heard of this horribly deformed young man and is interested in seeing him.

Frederick Treves, played by Anthony Hopkins, pays a visit to the 'owner' of the attraction and learns that he can have a private viewing--for a special price. Bytes, the owner, played by Freddie Jones, leads him to a dark, damp room with crumbling walls; adorned with a single circus banner proclaiming in large letters, "The Elephant Man."

Bytes explains that when this man's mother was four months pregnant, she was trampled by an elephant, hence the name and the deformity.

At this point, the movie had the potential to be a horror film. Bytes slowly raises the curtain to reveal the attraction he has made so much money from, as pulsating music pounds in the background. But the movie is not after shock effect; all we see is Treves' face as he looks first in horror and then in pity at this man. Slowly, his eyes fill with tears.

After learning that this man's name is John Merrick and he is 21 years old, Treves make a deal with Bytes to "lend" him out for the day so that he can be examined.

Merrick arrives at the hospital the next day dressed in a floor length black cape. His head is covered with a burlap sack with one eye hole, topped off with a black cap. Using a cane, he walks with some difficulty and breathes loudly, making growling, raspy sounds, as if he's out of breath.

That night, Merrick is beaten by his owner and must be taken back to the hospital. Treves puts him in the isolation ward, so that no other patients can see him. It is here that the audience finally sees Merrick, first through a blurry, faraway lens, and finally up close.

It was as if the audience was being prepared for his image, which was a head twice as large as normal with huge bumps on the front; a badly curved spine and one half-closed eye. By introducing us to him in a slow, tasteful manner, we saw him as a person who has met with a bad fate, rather than a grotesque, B-movie monster. Because of this, the audience seemed to empathize, rather than be revolted, with Merrick.

As he recovers from his beating, Treves makes friends with him and learns that he can speak. He teaches Merrick his name and the first lines of the 23rd Psalm in preparation for a visit from the chief of hospital, Carr Gomm, played by John Gielgud. Treves asks him to see Merrick in an effort to convince him that he needs to live at the hospital, because there is hope for him to make improvements.

The interview goes well, but Gomm concludes that Merrick has no real intellect. "He's only repeating words you've told him," he argues to Treves. But as they stand outside his door, they overhear him fervently reciting the 23d Psalm and Treves says in amazement, "How does he know that part? I never taught him that!" When they confront him, he admits that he can read. "It's my favorite prayer," he says in a timid voice.

The doctors soon discover that Merrick has outstanding intellect and intelligence and decide to make him a permanent resident of the hospital, much to his great joy. As a welcome gift, they give him a dressing case and he reacts as if he's been given a treasure. When he's left alone in his tiny attic room, he examines the contents like an enchanted child, running his fingers over the combs and brushes as if they were jewels.

In time, Merrick becomes famous and makes Treves an admired doctor. Merrick becomes somewhat of a celebrity and is visited by society people and an actress named Mrs. Kendal, played by Anne Bancroft. They recite lines from Shakespeare to each other, and when they finish, she kisses him on the cheek, exclaiming, "Why you're not an elephant man at all--you're Romeo," and a single tear falls down his cheek.

But this peaceful life does not last; a selfish hospital porter sees an easy way to make money by selling tickets to his friends who want to get a glimpse of Merrick. One night, about 25 people storm into his room and toss him around like a rag doll. They force the women to kiss him; they pour liquor down his throat, and as a final degradation force him to look into a mirror at a face he's never seen, until he screams in terror. In the background, circus music plays and coarse laughter fills the room.

At this time, Bytes, his former owner, kidnaps him and drags him back to the life of a side show freak. Merrick, however, cannot face the physical or mental humiliation again, and he collapses. With the help of some friends in the show, he is sent on a ship back to the hospital.

In one particularly cruel scene, Merrick is chased by three young punks who make fun of his strange dress. Soon, a mob forms and corners him against a wall, pulling off his mask. He screams at them in desperation to leave him alone. "I am not an animal. I am a man," he shrieks as the crowd stares in wonder at his deformed face.

In this scene, especially, the theme of the movie is intensified. People cannot and will not accept someone who is different, whether it be in appearance or manner. No matter how hard Merrick tries to live in peace, it seems that there are always people there to remind him that he is a 'freak' and therefore unacceptable to the world.

Although fine performances were given by Hopkins, Gielgud, and Bancroft, the best one came from John Hurt who played Merrick. In one gesture or expression, he could carry over the pain, enduring will, and gentle nature of his character. Hurt portrayed the mild mannered, accepting Merrick with such a human quality that it was difficult not to be moved.

Other fine performances were given by Wendy Hiller as the crusty Head Nurse, and by Freddie Jones as the money hungry Bytes.

All in all, The Elephant Man was a film so engrossing and emotional, words can hardly describe it. It must be seen to be believed.

You Can Still Make A Difference

While careers in public service may not be as fashionable as they were a decade ago, such careers can be very rewarding and personally satisfying.

After just three months of intensive training at The Institute for Paralegal Training, you will be prepared to work in government agencies, public service organizations and law firms as a Legal Assistant in the fields of Administrative and Public Law or Criminal Law. You will do work traditionally performed by attorneys. You will work in the dynamic field of government legislation and regulation and be involved in such areas as: Environmental Law, Food Drug and Health Law, Criminal Justice, Equal Opportunity, Welfare, Energy, and Product Safety Law.

Furthermore, you will earn graduate credit towards a Master of Arts in Legal Studies through Antioch School of Law for all course work completed at The Institute.

We are the nation's first and most respected school for paralegal training, and since 1970, have trained more than 4,000 college graduates from across the country.

If you are a senior of high academic standing and looking for a meaningful career, contact your Placement Office for an interview with our representative.

We will visit your campus on: Thursday, December 4

Corpora, Zurichin lead Eastsiders to men's title

The men's football league ended last week with one of the most exciting games of the year. Mickey Corpora hit Bob Zurichin with 23 seconds on the clock to give the Eastsiders/ES a 13-12 victory over the Vegetables/VEG. This is their first title losing the previous two years in the finals.

ES started the scoring when Corpora hit Jim Mazerowski with a 15 yard touchdown pass. Minutes later Steve Luongo of the VEG hit Perry Brosh with a seven yard touchdown pass. ES were forced to quick kick on their next possession. The kick only went 15 yards leaving the VEG in good field position.

Five plays later, the drive was stopped on an interception by Randy Miers. But the VEG got the ball back late in the first half and scored on a 30 yard touchdown pass from Luongo to Phil Tintle. The score at halftime was 12-7.

ES held the VEG on their first possession of the second half. ES drove the length of the field only to be stopped by a Tim LaPointe interception. The game then turned into a defensive struggle. ES got the ball with less than two minutes left on the clock.

They again drove the length of the field on three key catches by Bob Wood. On third and four, Corpora hit Zurichin with the winner. The VEG got the ball back, but failed to advance it.

The coed final was a much different game than that of the men's. From the first couple of series of downs, the outcome was predictable. With effective use of their women the Bohners jumped out to a quick 18 point lead and never looked back, defeating the Shore Boys Plus, 37-0.

All the Bohners touchdowns were scored by their women. Fran Klak had two touchdowns of 10 and 15 yards. Jill Alexander and Lisa DiBisiglie both had touchdowns of 10 yards.

The Shore Boys Plus' offense could not do anything all night. Their closest penetration was to the Bohners' 15 before being stopped. The Bohners were the stingiest defense all year, allowing less than three points a game en route to their second straight title.

The Geeks still lead all teams with a 33-9 record in the fall bowling league. Brian's Bunch is in second at 31-11 and the Oldtimers are in third at 26-16. John Dworak and Cynthia Jancz lead all scoring categories for the fourth straight week.

COMING EVENTS:

Billiards tournament will be held on Wed., Nov. 5 in the Student Center Gameroom.

MSC close second in conference final

by Daniel Wiggins

The MSC cross country team competed in two meets this past week. On Oct. 21, they ran in the combined all-state, New Jersey State College Athletic Conference/NJSCAC conference meet. On Saturday, the team raced a very tough Rider College/Rider squad.

In the state meet, held at Holmdel park, MSC placed third to Glassboro State College/GSC (35) and Rutgers University (38). This was MSC's finest showing all year considering the injuries they have sustained.

In the conference scoring, the MSC Harriers were second only to GSC--regional powerhouse and national qualifiers of a year ago.

In the race, Ian Gordon--the top runner on the team--placed fourth overall and second in the conference behind Ringo Adamson of GSC, with a time of 26:05. Following Gordon for the Harriers were Dan Wiggins (27:10), Peter Guthrie (27:19), Charles Cilwik, and Frank Nelson rounding out the top five. Others finishing in the top seven were Tom Schwarz and Pete Smith.

This Saturday, while many of MSC's students were enjoying the indoors, the Harriers were running in a torrential downpour and three inches of mud and water. The team was defeated by Rider 20-39 on a flooded Garret Mtn. in West Paterson, NJ. It was truly an experience for the rain or shine Harriers.

MSC was led by Gordon (second place), in a time of 25:57. Following Gordon were Wiggins (sixth place), Cilwik, and Julius Muinde. All of the team's losses have come from the same teams they were defeated by last year, and their record ends at a very respectable 12-3.

On Sun. Nov. 9, the team will be at Van Cortlandt Park in NYC for the CTC meet.

MSC is gladly looking forward to the return of Steve Boyle and Kevin Leonard, who were beset with injuries a few weeks ago. These two will help in filling the gaps on the team and improve the chances of doing well in the meets to come.

Could Shula revive Giants?

After this National Football League/NFL season, Don Shula, head coach of the Miami Dolphins, will end his current contract with that organization. It's no secret that Shula has had consistently poor relations with general manager Joe Robbie, and unless there is a sudden turn of events his tenure with the team will end.

The good news concerning the Shula situation deals with the Giants. It's time the team openly got busy in figuring out a way to seek a qualified coach. It's also no secret that over the last few years the Giants have gone through coaches like Italy has gone through governments. Apparently Ray Perkins is in above his head as coach. The team has done nothing since his arrival, and without much hope for the future, the Giants are indeed a sad club.

The team is so bad that if they played Alabama, I believe the point spread would be a pick'em. If the Maras have any ambition to build a winner, then get Shula. Besides Tom Landry and Chuck Noll, no one is regarded higher.

Shula also has had experience with building an organization from scratch. Look at his success with Miami; two Super Bowl titles and an undefeated record in 1972. He built a winner surrounded by the famed "no-name defense." Shula is quite capable of ending the glaring deficiencies the Giants' display each weekend.

What everyone must keep in mind is that to build a winner from zero, and the Giants are far from zero, isn't going to be immediate. Rome wasn't built in a day, and the fans should remember that. But what management must remember is that they have an obligation to build a winner and not just provide bandaid solutions when major surgery is needed. What's needed is a coach of coaches. Don Shula is a Caesar in his field.

But would Shula want such a tremendous challenge? Does he believe the Giants' problem can be solved in a time frame acceptable to him and the fans? It's no sense kidding; Giant fans are getting justifiably annoyed at half hearted efforts. They want positive signs for hope.

Getting Shula won't automatically guarantee respectability and success, but it will put the club on the right road and get them off the dead end street they've been on for nearly 17 years.

For those viewers who tune into collegiate football this weekend, watch the nationally televised South Carolina-Georgia game. The favorite for this year's Heisman Trophy, George Rogers, will display his awesome talent for the Gamecocks.

Thus far he leads the nation in rushing with 1,089 yards, and barring injury should be able to top the 1,500 yard level for the second straight season. Last year he was named first team Associated Press/AP, and though exposure of Gamecock football has been slow in coming, the praise from pro scouts has been unceasing.

What will be interesting to see is whether a great player from a school not blessed in football tradition finally wins the Heisman. For too long the "big name" schools have dominated winning the award.

There is no doubt in my mind that Rogers has all the opportunity to be another Earl Campbell. The team able to draft him can only improve any weaknesses in a running game.

Despite all the talk to the contrary, you can be sure of two things when the smoke clears; either Dave Winfield will be a Yankee or George Steinbrenner will have another run in with commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Kuhn has long had a policy of watching over potential trades and free agents with the same intensity of a mother hen over her eggs. There is widespread speculation that if a deal can be made, legal action from the Major League Player Association may ensue. There is also a strong belief that other clubs are getting together to insure that the Yanks don't get Winfield.

Congratulations are in order to MSC's Keith Sahlin. This fine kicker holds every career, seasonal, and game kicking record in the school's history. His first extra point against William Paterson College gave him his final record--career extra points (79). If any pro team is smart--hopefully the Jets are listening--they'll give him at least a tryout, because Pat Leahy has been anything but consistent.

Bill Virdon received the award as Major League Manager of the Year for his fine job with the Houston Astros. However, two other pilots deserved it to a greater degree. Bobby Cox of the Atlanta Braves did a marvelous job, and so did Billy Martin with Oakland. Though neither team won its division, they showed considerable improvement and proved themselves to be legitimate contenders next season in their respective divisions.

Tribe crowns Kings, 5-0

Booters unbeaten in last three

Greulich fires up booters

Jeff Greulich heads ball away during last week's match vs Kings College. Greulich has come on strong of late, after being switched from fullback to wing two weeks ago.

With their victory over Kings and their tie vs Ramapo College, MSC now holds a 3-7-1 record and promises to give Glassboro State College a run for their money on Saturday.

by William Delorm

After snapping a five game losing streak on Oct. 17 vs New York University/NYU the soccer Indians have gone on a tear.

Undefeated in their last three games, the Tribe made a two and one half hour trip to Pennsylvania last Wednesday to play Kings College/Kings. The long boring bus ride, however, was worth it, as MSC came away with its most impressive victory of the season 5-0.

On Saturday, a torrential rain ended MSC's game with conference cellar rival Ramapo College/Ramapo in a 1-1 tie.

Forward Joe Mysliwicz has played a major role in the Tribe's resurrection, having discovered how to put the ball in the net. It was his first half goal that knotted Ramapo on Saturday, and on Wednesday, his hat trick buried Kings.

In Wednesday's game, it wasn't the fact that Kings was that bad; it was the fact that MSC had finally zeroed their shots in on goal instead of at the crowd and the airplanes overhead.

They did, however, miss a pair of penalty kicks. Steve Reitberger and Mysliwicz were the culprits. MSC has converted only one of four attempts this season. Such has been the Indians luck.

Goalkeeper Mike Tropeano recorded his first shutout of the year while still nursing a badly sprained thumb. His play of late could make him a strong candidate for all-conference selection along with sweeper Paul Liddy.

Midfielder Gary Holt netted his first goal of the season and Alvaro Tarrago got his team leading sixth for the Tribe.

Not even Sprague Field's astroturf could withstand the storm on Saturday. After one-half of play and the game tied at 1-1, both sides decided that rowboats would make offside a little different to call and so the game was called.

Both sides had scored on poor goals as a result of the field conditions. The ball would hit the carpet, skim once then plop to a dead stop, making it difficult for the goalkeepers to decide when to go after it. As it turned out, both goalies were only burned once each, however.

The booters face their toughest test of the '80 season when Glassboro State College/GSC comes up to Sprague Field this Sat., Nov. 1 (1:30 pm).

The Profs are having another sensational season on the pitch, having already clinched the New Jersey State College Athletic Conference title.

Last year, GSC reached the division III finals before being ousted for the title by Babson University, 2-1. The Profs have all of their starters back from that squad including prolific scorer Scott Salisbury and goalkeeper Walt Gotrell.

Their biggest victory so far this season, was a 17-0 destruction of Jersey City State College.

MSC hopes that things will continue to click for them and that the astroturf and a large crowd can help them disrupt the Profs.

Indians take sixth straight

by John Huegel

Tailbacks Bill Grundy and Mike Horn once again added the offensive fireworks and the MSC defense continued their dominance, as the Indians nipped a pesky Central Connecticut State College/CCSC football team, 14-6, Saturday in New Britain, CN.

On the first play following the second half kickoff, Grundy supplied the Tribe with what would turn out to be all the scoring they would need.

The senior tailback took the handoff and swept wide left, broke a tackle and darted 80 yards to the end zone. Kicker Keith Sahlin booted the extra point and MSC led 7-6.

Grundy picked up more than half of his game total of 141 yards on that carry. CCSC struck in the first quarter when a roughing the punter penalty gave them a psychological boost and a chance to capitalize on an early MSC mistake. And, capitalize they did.

Quarterback Terry Hogan hit Tribe killer, John Klein on a 45 yard pass play. The extra point, however, sailed wide. Klein, who year in and year out catches an average of 10 passes against the Indians, looked as if he would once again give MSC fits. The defensive secondary had other ideas.

While yielding 105 yards in the air, MSC managed to keep CCSC at bay, taking advantage of the muddy field conditions and slipping receivers.

CCSC added 95 yards on the ground to their total. The Indians, surprisingly, didn't seem to mind the mud. As a team, MSC scampered for 242 yards--75 coming from Horn, and 43 of those on one play.

Minutes after Grundy had put the Tribe on the board, Horn, too, used the left side of CCSC's defense and dashed 43 yards for the final score.

The Indians' 62 yards passing gave MSC a total of 304 for the day. All-America linebacker Sam Mills accumulated 14 bone jarring tackles and Mike Popek racked up 11.

MSC, who is now ranked 13th in the nation in division III, confronts Trenton State College on Sat., Nov. 1 at 8 pm at Sprague Field. A win here could clinch the conference title for a third straight year. All are encouraged to come out early for the pregame balloon liftoff sponsored by Alpha Kappa Psi for the benefit of the American Cancer Society.
