Money Big Factor In Union Future, News Writer Finds

By CAROL SUTLIFF

Ohio State University, Ohio U, and Kent State have all built student unions recently. Where's Bowling Green's? At least four or five years in the future, from the looks of the present situation, according to Pres. Ralph W. McDonald.

The major problem concerning BG's Student Union lies in that old factor—money. Bowling Green did not begin as early as other state universities to accumulate the necessary funds to construct the building. Miami is in the same boat.

Insufficient Funds

Estimates of cost for the proposed student union here run from one to one and one-half million dollars. We would need at least half of that, about $500,000, before it would be financially feasible to get a loan for the additional money to begin building. At present the student union fund has only $232,832.05, which is less than half of the amount of cash-in-hand we need.

If present enrollment stays at about 3,000, it would take four to five years to accumulate the money at the present fee of $10 per student per semester.

Right now that $200,000 and all plans for the Student Union are in the hands of the University Housing Commission, consisting of Dr. McDonald, as president of the University; E. T. Rodgers, as president of the Board of Trustees; and Ervin J. Kreischer, as business manager of the University.

This Commission is a special agency, authorized by the Ohio state legislature and established by the Board of Trustees, to build dormitories and union buildings. The Housing Commission is the agency which handles the union funds and buys land.

Financial Complications

The complications involved in financing the building of a student union were explained by Dr. McDonald recently.

Rough architects' plans call for a building of approximately one and one-quarter million dollars. We need $500,000 to $750,000 to attract a bonding company which would buy bonds to provide the additional funds at a reasonable rate of interest.

We shall also need a continuing income to pay operational expenses of a building and the entire union program every year after the building is available.

The union must be a self-liquidating project—that is, income must pay for operation of the building and pay off the interest and bonds invested in it.

Once built, revenue in the building would come from a continued student fee, a bookstore which might be located there, rental fees for dance space and use of facilities, and from food services.

Bowling Green definitely will build a student union, Dr. McDonald said, but, "We must use reasonable business judgment in doing it."

Financial Possibilities

There is another possibility of obtaining funds, but plenty of "ifs" are involved.

Under a provision of an appropriation bill passed by the 1951 legislature, the governor is empowered to allocate $1,000,000 to each of the state universities for dormitories or student union buildings, provided the money is declared available from surplus funds.

Therefore, we might obtain some of this money at the end of the biennium—IF a surplus were declared, IF the governor should decide to allocate the funds for this purpose, and IF the Board of Trustees should decide to use it for a union.

If the University were able to obtain other money for building dormitories, then the Board of Trustees might use the surplus funds for a union, IF those funds were made available.

Of course, there is always the possibility that an alum might give money to the University for a union. Many of the early unions on college campuses were financed in that way. Other universities have built unions by obtaining loans to add to the accumulation of student fees. This is the way Bowling Green will probably do it in the final analysis.

Student Union Fee

Bowling Green students had a Student Union fee as far back as 1941. A fee of $1 was levied for upkeep of the Falcon's Nest until three years ago. Since that time no student fees have been used for

News Director Wants Slides Of University

Kodachrome slides of the University are wanted by Paul W. Jones, Director of the News Bureau, in order to obtain a collection to show at alumni club meetings.

Mr. Jones desires 35-millimeter Kodachrome slides of campus scenes and activities such as buildings, outstanding campus facilities, departmental and extracurricular activities, and retired faculty members.

He plans to borrow the slides in order to make duplicates and then return them to their owners. The collection will also be available to other University groups desiring them.

Shelley, Zingale Show Winners

Jennie Shelley and Joe Zingale are shown above as they pantomimed one of their two songs which won first prize in the finals of the Varsity Club Show, Tuesday night.

Joe Zingale and Jenney Shelley won the first prize at the Varsity Club Variety Show finals last Tuesday. The winning couple did pantomimes to "John and Marsha," and "Why Did You Believe Me When I Said I Loved You, When You Know I've Been A Liar All My Life."

Jack Dewan and Richard Moss were masters-of-ceremonies for the three nights, and between acts they presented many routines, which included impersonations, singing, dancing, and jokes.

Senate OK's New Plan For Representation

Student Senate has unanimously approved a second representation plan for presentation to the student body, after two sessions of discussion and revision.

This alternative plan, together with the one proposed by Senate on Feb. 16, will be voted on in an all-campus election March 25 in the Nest.

A section of the plan which provides for 13 senators elected from single member districts of about 194 residents each would be incorporated directly into the Senate constitution. Voting procedures at primary and general elections and a provision calling for fall elections of senators would be inserted into the by-laws.

Students Named To Committee

Leo Miller and Mary Jane Harold were confirmed as members of the Public Relations committee upon recommendation of the reviewing committee.

Five students and two faculty advisers will be appointed to study the possibilities of a teacher evaluation program by the students. A teacher rating sheet of 25 questions used by Wooster College was read at Senate meeting.

Two representatives of the National Student Association were invited to attend Senate March 23. Jack Cookston, OSU Senate president, and Fanne Kehoe, also of OSU, will discuss membership in NSA, which Senate has considered affiliating with for the past two years.

Following Senate meeting, an open forum discussion between senators and gallery was held on possible changes in existing car regulations, in preparation for the ODK discussion about this matter Sunday.

Lindsey, Van Brunt New Editors

MARILYN LINDSEY

Marilyn Lindsey and Gretchen Van Brunt were selected by the University Publications Committee last Monday afternoon to serve as editors for two major student publications.

Miss Lindsey, a junior in the College of Business Administration, will serve as editor of the 1953-54 Key. At the present time she is its business manager.

A journalism major, Miss Lindsey has a 3.0 cumulative average and is a member of Alpha Phi sorority.

GRETCHEN VAN BRUNT

Her home is Findlay.

Miss Van Brunt, a student in the Colleges of Liberal Arts and Education, will be the editor of next year's Freshman Handbook. A journalism major, she has served on the editorial staffs of the B-G News and Key.

She was also assistant editor of the 1952 Handbook and has edited the Delta Gamma sorority newspaper. A junior with a 2.98 cumulative average, Miss Van Brunt's home is Lancaster, N.Y.

Talks By Panel Also Planned

Car regulations will be the topic of the panel and open discussion sponsored by Omicron Delta Kappa, men's national leadership society, at 2:30 p.m. Sunday in the Gate Theatre.

Seven participants on the panel have been announced by Earl Nissen, ODK chairman of the event.

They are Arch B. Conklin, Dean of Men; Eugene Beatty, assistant to the president, who will discuss parking facilities; Mrs. Florence Currier, Dean of Women; Lamont Greene, men's representative and narrator; Marion Long, freshman women's representative; Jane Winfield, senior women's representative; and Earl Nissen, ODK representative.

Following a half-hour discussion of car rules by this panel, the discussion will be opened to the audience. Students may ask questions of the panel, make comments, and present constructive ideas concerning car regulations, Nissen said.

These suggestions will be presented to the Council on Student Affairs by ODK, Nissen added. The Council is currently studying car regulations.

This forum is the first in a series of programs planned by ODK for the rest of the semester. Nissen said the programs may be presented as often as once a month.

Urschel Pond Committee Suggests Improvements

Senior Interviews By Representatives Set For Next Week

Four company representatives and two school superintendents will be on campus next week to interview students seeking positions after graduating, according to Eugene Chandler, assistant in the Bureau of Appointments.

On Monday, Janet E. Marks, a representative of A. Polsky Co. in Akron, will interview students interested in retailing, merchandising, and personnel. L. C. Tyband, a representative of Kraft Foods, will be here Tuesday, March 17, to interview accountants.

On Wednesday, March 18, a representative of the Kroger Company will show a movie at 4 p.m. in the Main Aud. and the following day will interview students interested in retailing. C. E. Marsh of the G. C. Murphy Retailing Company will interview students interested in retailing and merchandising on Friday, March 20.

J. C. Cox, superintendent of Pontiac, Mich., schools, and W. W. Zinser, superintendent of Olmsted Falls schools, will be here on March 19 and March 20, respectively, to interview students desiring teaching positions next fall.

Students wishing to be interviewed are asked to sign in the Bureau of Appointments for a specified time.

Poor Water Taste Attributed To Waste

The recent bad taste that has been noticed in the water is believed to be the result of the dumping of industrial waste somewhere along the Maumee River, according to Douglas T. McKnight, manager of city utilities.

Activated carbon is being added to the water, according to Mr. McKnight, to alleviate the taste and odor. He stated that the chemicals causing the taste are harmless and will probably disappear within a few days.

A swimming, picnic, and a recreation area were among the suggestions made to the administration by the Urschel Pond committee, says Charles Green, chairman. Student Senate set up the committee to make a survey of the Urschel Pond area, and to make recommendations for its improvement to the administration. These were purely recommendations of what could be done, and the final test would hinge on cost and administration. They were taken to the President, and leveling off process has already been started on the picnic area.

The pond area, located at the rear of Delta Zeta house, would be divided into a swimming, picnic, and a recreation area, which would include volleyball, badminton, horseshoes, and sunbathing.

It was also recommended that one part of the pond area be set aside as a park, with a pavilion, tables, benches, and a fireplace to be used for picnics.

Locker rooms for men and women, showers, dressing stalls, ring buoys, and pool equipment, were some of the things that were recommended for the swimming area.

Stuart Givens, coordinator of student activities, was appointed to work out the administrative end of the project.

Art Guild Members See Rouault Show In Cleveland Today

The retrospective show of Parisian artist Georges Rouault, currently exhibited by The Cleveland Art Museum, will be viewed today by 40 student-members of the art department Art Guild, according to Otto G. Oevirk, adviser for the guild.

Members of the guild left campus at 8 a.m. aboard the Falcon bus and will start the return trip at 6 this evening.

160 Paintings Shown

Rouault, famous for his paintings and print making, especially the deeply religious works, has 160 paintings in the show. The paintings are representative of the 81-year-old artist's life works, according to Mr. Oevirk.

The show is being exhibited at two museums in the United States before being returned to Europe. It closes in Cleveland Sunday.

Faculty Men Accompany

In addition to Mr. Oevirk, Prof. Willard F. Wankelman, chairman of the art department, and Robert E. Stinson, art instructor, will accompany the group on the trip.

Mr. Oevirk stated that the trip is part of the art department plan for students to visit, at the rate of one a year, art museums in Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, and Toledo.

Three One-Acts Scheduled Tonight

Three one-act plays will be presented at Gate Theatre tonight at 7 p.m. The plays are being directed by students as members of a directing class. Admission is free.

The first play, "Where the Cross is Made," is being directed by Walter Hoy and is a heavy drama which turns into a fantasy. It was written by Eugene O'Neill.

The cast is composed of Donald Noland who plays a sea captain, Isaiah Bartlett; Robert Stager who plays the captain's son, Nat Bartlett; Jennie Shelley as the captain's daughter; and James Slinger as Dr. Higgins.

An original by Carolyn Knepper, who wrote "Divided Duty" for a playwriting class last year, is being directed by Margaret Chandler. This play revolves around a family struggle over two children. The cast includes Hugh Smith as Davey, Tina Lazoff as Mary, Robert Smith as Jack, and Mary Lou Kieffer as Miss Martin.

Directed by Carolyn O'Connor, the last play on the bill is "The Knave of Hearts," a whimsical story. Members of the cast are Jean Butler, Janis Frye Chase, Jobea Anderson, Robert Kirkwood, Gene Rucker, Robert Smith, Ralph McKinney, Glenn Mosley, and Thomas Roland.

In Our Opinion

Here's Your Chance!

It has been four years since car regulations went into effect. And for every one of those years, students have been complaining about them.

Omicron Delta Kappa's open discussion on car rules Sunday afternoon will give students the opportunity they have been looking for—a chance to present constructive ideas, comments and suggestions for changes and improvements in the present system.

"We hope the students will do some good, sound thinking on this question," Earl Nissen, chairman of the affair, has commented. As the saying goes—speak now, or forever hold your peace.

Student Union A Dream?

A "report to the readers" concerning Bowling Green's proposed Student Senate appears in today's News. Actually, the story is a detailed discussion of the immediate plans for a Union, and how finances, enrollment, and present Student Union fees will affect it.

The report is a factual presentation, showing that a "University Union" IS possible, and that our $10 a semester Student Union fee is not going for a pipe dream of graduates or administrators. In the future we'll be looking forward to a self-liquidating Union which represents efficiency and the many worthwhile hopes which students now have for it.

'It's Really Nothing', Says Ed

Ed Bessire, "man-of-week," takes a break from his "heavy" schedule.

By BOB JOHNSON

Man of the week is Ed Bessire, a junior from Lima. What has Ed done to project himself into the role of a "campus personality?"

"Nothing, absolutely nothing. Nothing in three years here," says Ed proudly. He added that it has been a long tough haul, what with the many groups which seem to be existing for the mere purpose of finding more things for people to do.

Ed, "Easy Ed," as he is called, claims that the only way to treat life is from a casual standpoint. He finds that he can consistently maintain a 2.0 average by his relaxed approach to the matter of studying and attending classes.

He doesn't let classes interfere with his relaxation, which consists in the winter of sleeping and reading Mickey Spillane in bed. In the spring and summer, he shifts his interests to sleeping, reading Spillane in bed, and golf.

"Golf is the greatest sport," he says. "And the first nice day you'll find me up at the crack of noon and out on that course."

Asked if he didn't ever have any close calls in his quest toward never doing any work, Easy Ed grimaces at the memory and says that he certainly has. It seems he pledged a fraternity.

"The pledging didn't strain me nearly as much as now that I am an active member." The word "active" was spoken painfully.

Ed disclosed, however, that he is able to completely avoid work. He has a simple device of putting his head between two pillows, which keeps noise, daylight, and fraternity committee chairmen from disturbing his rest.

He cites another example

LETTERS To The Editor

Dear Editor:

An article and a letter have been published about the work set-up for athletes on this campus. The article, by Hal Van Tassel, represents the administration's outlook on the situation; and the letter, by Frank Kraft, is a neutral student's viewpoint. I would like, at this time, to present the athlete's side of the story.

In Mr. Van Tassel's article, he refers to the athlete as being 'king on campus and drifting along on grades and unearned money'. His article is mainly composed of vague references which are founded on nothing but Mr. Van Tassel's personal opinion.

By any standards you can set up, Bowling Green's athletic aid program is completely ethical and above board. In fact, during the season, Bowling Green requires fourteen hours of work from its athletes each week and the Mid-America Conference, of which we are a member, requires only seven hours of work per week during the season.

Mr. Van Tassel goes on to say that the athlete's only protest with the program was the suddenness with which it was administered. I believe that he overlooked the main issue. How can the athlete, who spends 20 to 25 hours a week with his sport, find time to work 14 hours a week, to attend 16 hours of classes, study the necessary amount of time each week, and take part in a reasonable amount of extra-curricular activities?

Mr. Van Tassel also remarks that we have, perhaps, lost our love of sports and engage in them for purely mercenary reasons. Is this why football players lose close to $200 a summer by quitting work

Lines at Deadline

It is rumored that there is a student around campus, a daily patron of one of the local restaurants, who always drinks his coffee black. But he has an arrangement with the management whereby the end of each month he gets a quart of cream free, to take home. Enterprising, what?

three weeks earlier than the normal student, so they can come to Bowling Green to practice five hours a day in the hottest part of the summer? If it is for mercenary reasons, why then, do the basketball players give up their Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays to play ball when they could be working and earning money?

Let us face facts, Mr. Van Tassel. Bowling Green does not support subsidized athletes. Athletes do, however, deserve their fair share of time. We have never asked for any sort of break because we didn't need it.

It would only be fair, therefore, to accept the standards set up by the Mid-America Conference and desired by the athletes.

Sincerely,
Walter R. Wagner

In 1950 the Board of Trustees levied a $5 fee to begin accumulation of funds for a union. This was raised to $10 a semester, with the approval of the student body, in January, 1951.

President McDonald pointed out that "University Union" would be a more appropriate term than Student Union since the union will be a campus center for alumni, students, and friends.

He pointed out that through the fees now being levied, the building will actually be paid for by students who will be alumni when the union materializes.

All-America basketball teams are in the air. Several major publications have compiled their selections—the United Press and the International News Service, chosen by sports writers of these two syndicates, and Collier's magazine, picked by more than 300 members of the National Association of Basketball Coaches are among those already released.

Probably you have read most of them. If you have, you've undoubtedly wondered, as I did—Why no Al Bianchi? Students here at Bowling Green have a legitimate gripe in that their favorite court hero was completely ignored by the major all-America voters thus far. More than likely he will be ignored by the rest also.

Several Reasons Behind It

There are several reasons for this, all of which tend to tear down the so-called "unbiased" and nationwide appeal of these ratings. I have before me a copy of the 1952-53 Collier's All-America team. On their first team they include three players from an 85-mile radius of Philadelphia—Walter Dukes, Scoton Hall; Tom Gola, LaSalle; and Ernie Beck, Pennsylvania.

The other two are Johnny O'Brien, Seattle, and Bob Houbregs, Washington. These are five exceptionally fine basketball players. Possibly, we couldn't expect to find Bianchi's name in the same class with these better-known men. Then again, maybe he's just as good.

The second team shows such stalwarts as Bob Speight, North Carolina State; Dick Knostman, Kansas State; Bob Pettit, Louisiana State; Joe Richey, Brigham Young; and Don Schlundt, Indiana. Still no Bianchi, and perhaps we can excuse Collier's and their selection committee for that, too.

District Teams Also Picked

But they also include a voting on the NCAA District All-Star Teams. The first five are all players from Big 10 schools. Included in the 10 honorable mention ratings are five more from that conference. Of the remaining five, two are from Notre Dame, and one each is from Rio Grande (Ohio), DePaul, and Xavier University (Ohio).

This, I believe, is carrying it a little too far. Is the Big 10 really that much of a basketball conference, that only five men out of 15 can break into an all-star rating? Certainly from the many schools in the district (Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota) there are more than five basketball players, outside the Big 10, who deserve a rating.

Al Bianchi is the perfect example of what I mean. Few players could accomplish in many seasons what he has done in one. Besides what statistics prove, Al has developed into one of the greatest players in the history of a University famous for its great cagemen.

A closer look at the methods used by the Collier's selection committee in picking its all-star teams might clarify the reasons behind Bianchi's being left off, and show what a real farce these selections can be.

Picked in Mid-season

In the first place, these votes, compiled from the members of the NABC, were sent in before the middle of January. Harold Anderson, Bowling Green's fine coach, was given until Jan. 10 for his. This seems a bit ridiculous to me. They might as well take the pick of the pre-season yogis and print them after the close of the campaign, as vote when the season is

Girls Volleyball Tournament To Start Monday

The women's intramural volleyball tournament will begin Monday, March 16, at 4 p.m.

Dormitories, rooming houses, sororities, or any women's organization may enter one or more teams consisting of six to eight players.

A player may not be on more than one team. One team requirement is that there will be no more than 50 per cent physical education majors on the floor at one time with one exception: seven players, four majors and three non-majors.

All teams may practice before the tournament begins. The gym will be available daily beginning Monday, March 9, at 4 p.m.

Each team may enter one of two divisions: Monday-Wednesday at 4 to 5 p.m. or Tuesday-Thursday from 4 to 5 p.m. The team entry sheet with preferred division should be submitted to the women's physical education department no later than Wednesday, March 11, at 4 p.m.

In addition to the house and independent tournament there will be a class tournament. Practice for all teams will start Tuesday, March 10, at 8:15 p.m. Members must come to two out of three practices to be eligible for the final selection on March 19.

Positions Open For Summer YMCA Camp

Men who are interested in obtaining positions at Camp Nelson Dodd, YMCA camp, for this summer may see A. R. Deiss today in the conference room of the Student Center between 2 and 5 p.m.

Each year about 30 men from Ohio colleges are employed as counselors and staff members at the camp which is located near Brinkhaven. The camp prefers outstanding students who are preparing vocationally in such fields as education, recreation, physical education, or the ministry.

not even half over. That would make about as much sense, and the names would sound just as good.

Of course a major magazine such as Collier's has a deadline to meet, and all articles have to be planned weeks ahead of time. The release of any article has to be timed perfectly to get the most reader appeal. But how far can they carry this thing?

Also, since the sectional votes are divided into committees, and our district happens to be headed by one of the more prominent Big 10 coaches, perhaps there could be a touch of prejudice involved. On paper, it certainly looks that way.

Despite what the All-American committees select and what Collier's and others print, or neglect to print, there seems to me no better qualified candidate for all-star honors than BG's Bianchi. Just what Al has done is shown on the surface by statistics, and also beneath the surface by his leadership and team play when it was needed most. The story starts even before the season's opener at Hamline. More about that in this column next week.

Bowling Green Swimmers Favored To Take Mid-America Conference Crown

Miami University's beautiful new John Shaw Billings Natatorium is the site of the First Annual Mid-American Conference swimming meet, which began yesterday and will run through tomorrow afternoon at Oxford.

There are five participating schools including Miami, Ohio University, Kent State, Cincinnati, and Bowling Green, with possibly a few entries from Marshall and Western Reserve.

Co-favorites in the meet are Ohio University and Bowling Green. The Falcons incidentally, nipped the Bobcats in a dual meet here last week, 47 to 37.

Coach Sam Cooper left yesterday morning with 15 Falcon swimmers including Herb Scogg, John Bruce, Fred Gerbing, Ron Lauber, James Longnecker, George Ensign, Ron Dall, William Dellen, Marvin Dessecker, Ed Levy, Paul Dressel, William Cunningham, Henry Spangenberg, and Bruce Horsfall.

Bowling Green favorites in the meet are Fred Gerbing in the 100-yard free style, Herb Scogg in the backstroke and individual medley, and John Bruce in the breaststroke and individual medley. Coach Cooper is also relying heavily on Ron Dall and Ed Levy to pick up points.

Last night, the meet officially got under way with the 1,500 meter finals being run at 7:30. This morning, starting at 9:30, the meet progressed with the low board fancy diving preliminaries and the 50-yard free style heats.

At 2:30 p.m. today, another stage of the long week end will begin with the swimming of the 50-yard free semi-final, 200-yard backstroke time trials, 220-yard free style time trials, 200-yard backstroke time trials, 220-yard breaststroke time trials, exhibition of 30 minutes by qualifying divers, and the 400-yard free style relay time trials.

Tonight the program will include the 50-yard free finals, 200-yard backstroke finals, 220-yard free style finals, 200-yard breaststroke finals, one meter low board fancy diving finals, and the 400-yard free style relay finals.

Army Buries Airmen 61-28 In ROTC Tilt

The annual ROTC basketball game between the army squad and the airmen five was played Monday night in Men's Gym and when the smoke had cleared, the Army quintet had posted a lopsided 61 to 28 victory over the airmen.

Facing the winners was Hunter who dumped in 22 points and Wagner who tallied 19. Firsdon swished 11 for the losers, as only four players on the Air Force team were able to get into the scoring column.

The winners using seven players, six of whom scored, hit on 19 field goals and 23 charity tosses, while holding their opponents to only 9 hits from the floor and 10 from the free throw line.

As the score shows the game was never very much of a contest. The Army five jumped off to an early lead and held on to it the entire game, increasing their lead as they went along until they had doubled the count of the airmen.

Box score is as follows:

Van Wyck	3	3	9

Nothing-no, nothing-beats better taste and LUCKIES TASTE BETTER! Cleaner, Fresher, Smoother!

Ask yourself this question: Why do I smoke?
You know, yourself, you smoke for enjoyment. And you get enjoyment only from the taste of a cigarette.

Luckies taste better—cleaner, fresher, smoother! Why? Luckies are made better to taste better. And, what's more, Luckies are made of fine tobacco. L.S./M.F.T.—Lucky Strike Means Fine Tobacco.

So, for the thing you want most in a cigarette . . . for better taste—for the cleaner, fresher, smoother taste of Lucky Strike . . .
