Joint trial scheduled

Rape suspects to face jury

by Valerie Ciptak
staff reporter

The three Toledo men accused of kidnapping and raping a University woman will be tried together despite requests from each of the men's attorneys that the trials be separate.

County Prosecutor Betty Montgomery requested a consolidated trial because each case involves the same witnesses, the same event and the same time frame.

"Instead of taking three weeks to try, it will take less than a week," she said.

Lawyers for Lamont Walker, Troy Hill and Patrick Henry said that trying all three men together may prejudice the jury.

"It's impractical for the jury to dissect statements of three different defendants," said Lafayette Tolliver, Henry's lawyer.

The three men, charged with kidnapping and raping a woman Oct. 26, will be tried March 12 before Wood County Common Pleas Judge Donald DeCessna.

DeCessna said that although he could not tell how the jury would act, having one trial would be in the best interest of the victim.

"We want to minimize the hard part (victim's testimony) the best we can," he said.

THREE SEPARATE trials would also be an injustice to the defendants, he said.

"If we go to a one-two-three arrangement, who goes first?" he asked.

In addition, the trials would not be tried equally because the second defendant would know the outcome of the first trial, he said.

Attorneys for the defendants have also requested that some evidence to be submitted by the prosecution be suppressed from the trial.

On Feb. 28 DeCessna will decide whether or not the prosecution can submit certain evidence, including previous testimonies of the defendants, blood tests and critical evidence found in Hill's car the night of the alleged rape.

A woman's disregard for a traffic light caused a two-car accident yesterday about noon, police said. Angela Perkins, a non-student living at 214 Napoleon, was headed west on Wooster and had a green light. Patricia Weng, sophomore library education major, drove through a red light heading north on Manville and was struck on the right side by Perkins' 1976 Ford. Weng, after assessing damages, drove her 1973 Pontiac away with moderate damage. Perkins' disabled car was towed.

Aquino warns Reagan of aiding Marcos

MANILA, Philippines (AP) - Corason Aquino warned President Reagan yesterday against supporting the National Assembly's expected proclamation of President Ferdinand Marcos as winner of Friday's presidential election.

The assembly, dominated by Marcos' New Society Movement party, is to begin official tabulation of votes tomorrow, using what the opposition has said are fraudulent local vote tallies.

"I would wonder at the motives of a friend of democracy who chose to conspire with Mr. Marcos to cheat the Filipino people of their liberation," said Aquino, who claimed anew that she has already won the presidency.

Marcos has declared himself the "probable winner."

Reagan asserted at a news conference Tuesday night that the elections were marred by fraud on both sides, but his remark was disputed by several U.S. election observers who said they had seen no evidence of fraud by Aquino's supporters.

No immediate reaction came from the presidential palace to Reagan's statements or to his decision to send diplomatic trouble-shooter Philip Habib to Manila as his personal emissary.

AQUINO SAID only that Habib would likely get a courteous welcome.

As to suggestions that she reconcile with Marcos, she replied: "It would be a delusion of policy that an opposition whose leaders and followers have been and are being killed can suddenly settle down to a Western-style opposition role in a healthy two-party system. Too many will be dead the moment the world's head is turned."

The nation's Roman Catholic bishops arranged to meet today to review the election.

The military says 86 people were killed during the two-month campaign, the latest being Aquino campaign official Evelio Javier, a former governor shot dead by hooded men in Antique province. The Philippine News Agency placed the total at 107.

Results of two separate counts kept showing opposite results five days after the election.

Aquino had gained in the government election commission returns but Marcos led with 7,032,695 votes, or 50.6 percent, to 6,859,234, or 49.4 percent, with two-thirds of the precincts reporting.

THE INDEPENDANT ballot-monitoring group National Movement for Free Elections, or Namfrel, had Aquino ahead, 7,158,679, or 52.3 percent, to 6,532,362, or 47.3 percent for Marcos, based on 64 percent of the precincts.

Both counts were continuing although they are not legally binding. Only the National Assembly count, to be posted on chalk boards as tally sheets are read, is official.

NASA still looks for answers

WASHINGTON (AP) - NASA insisted yesterday it is not yet convinced a booster rocket caused the explosion of space shuttle Challenger and said both the rocket's manufacturer and space agency experts agreed to the launch in unusual sub-freezing weather.

At the same time, the space agency released internal documents that showed a history of concern with the "O ring" seals where the four segments of the solid rocket booster are joined. In report after report, the huge rubber-like rings' elasticity and ability to contain gases were mentioned as critical items to be looked at.

Attention has been focused on the seals because films of Challenger's Jan. 28 liftoff show a plume of flame appearing to spurt from the right rocket booster toward the shuttle's main tank loaded with volatile fuel. The ability of the seals to contain gas and flame is under close scrutiny.

"The cause is still an open issue," William Lucas, director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Marshall Space Flight Center told a news briefing. "We are investigating every part of the shuttle and not attempting to focus in too early."

After scrubbing a launch on Jan. 27 for other causes, NASA engineers discussed the weather by telephone with space shuttle contractors.

Conviction rate rises for drunk driving

by Brian R. Ball
copy editor

A more vigorous approach among Ohio prosecutors toward tough drunk driving laws may be the cause of a higher conviction rate of original charges in Bowling Green Municipal Court, a court referee said.

The court's annual report also shows a decrease in the number of charges reduced through plea bargaining during the last two years.

In addition, there has been a steady decrease in the number of cases the court has handled in 1984 and 1985 under Ohio's two drunk driving statutes - driving with prohibited alcohol concentration (PAC) law and/or driving under the influence (DUI) - compared with 1982, the last full year with only the DUI law in effect.

Victor Ten Brink, a municipal court referee, said drunk driving cases are being pursued more vigorously because of the tougher PAC law enacted in 1983. The laws might also be a reason the number of cases in Bowling Green has declined.

Out of a total of 286 PAC and DUI cases assigned to Municipal Court last year, 214 cases, or 74.8 percent, resulted in convictions of the original charge. Plea bargaining to a reduced charge resulted in 23 additional convictions, or 8 percent of the total caseload.

Total convictions for 1985 were 82.8 percent. About 5 percent, or 15 cases, are still pending.

The 338 cases heard in 1984 resulted in 247 convictions, which represents a 73 percent conviction rate. Convictions obtained through plea bargains added 52 cases, or 15.4 percent, for a total conviction rate of 88.4 percent.

Ten Brink said the PAC law stresses technological testing, making cases more black and white.

Although the technology is occasionally challenged for reliability, constitutionality and whether or not the test has been administered correctly, the tests do offer scientific proof of guilt, he said.

Under the DUI law, only 37.9 percent, or 162, of 427 cases in 1982 resulted in the convictions on the original charge, although 55.7 percent, or 238, were convicted on a lowered charge. This represents a 93.6 percent total conviction rate.

DUI statutes rely more on field testing, observations of the alleged drunk person's driving by police officers and reflex testing, Ten Brink said. This made convictions harder to obtain and made prosecutors more willing to accept plea bargaining to wreckless operation or inability to maintain physical control.

Persons arrested now are often charged with both PAC and DUI for the same offense to give prosecutors two approaches to a case, he said. However, the charges are merged and result in a single sentence upon conviction.

Bar owners seek relief from liability

by Ron Coulter
staff reporter

Local bar owners would like to have legislation enacted that would relieve some of their legal liability and give responsibility back to the drinker.

Bill Gamble, owner of Uptown, said that bar owners have increasingly become involved in third party liability cases. Recent lawsuits have found bar owners liable for drinking related accidents, rather than the drinker.

"Suppose a person leaves a bar and hurts or even kills someone. The victim's family can sue the bar that served the guy instead of the guy

"We (bar owners) would like to have a cap put on the amount of liability we are responsible for. We are like sitting ducks."

— Bill Gamble

himself," he said.

Gamble is president of the Wood County Permit Holders Association, which includes in its membership licensed liquor sellers in Wood County. The association has petitioned Ohio legislators for changes in the liability system.

"We (bar owners) would like to have a cap put on the amount of liability we are responsible for. We are like sitting ducks," he said. "The person drinking has some responsibility, but bar owners have total legal liability."

DAVID KRAKOFF, executive director of the Ohio Retail Permit Holders Association, said there is a need for drinkers to be accountable for their actions.

"In the past five or six years, there has been a trend that people have stopped realizing that the drinker has a responsibility too. The responsibility of the (liquor) permit holder has been overemphasized, while the drinker's responsibility has been underemphasized," he said.

Krakoff said that lawsuits against bar owners are becoming common.

"Families of accident victims are bringing lawsuits against the people that serve the liquor, rather than the drunk, because they (the family) know that's where the money is," Krakoff said. He said insurance companies representing bar owners usually don't want to go through a long battle or pay court costs. As a result, they settle out of court. This leads to increased insurance rates or cancelled coverage.

David Hoose, of the Bartlett Insurance Company, said insurance rates have gone up because it has become unprofitable to insure liquor sellers.

"There has been an increased consciousness on the part of people to sue," Hoose said. "The frequency of lawsuits has increased, along with the severity of the damages awarded by juries."

Let budget bill fall

Like a tree uprooted by a swollen river, the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing law was forced through Congress.

Like the tree, it was dragged along by the conservative tide of balanced budget hysteria. It blunders downstream despite currents of opposition from every economic class.

Fortunately, the law struck a judicial rock in federal court last Friday. A three-judge panel unanimously ruled unconstitutional the section of the Gramm-Rudman law requiring that mandatory, across-the-board spending cuts be triggered when Congress fails to meet specified deficit-reduction targets.

Under the Gramm-Rudman Act, the comptroller general, head of Congress' General Accounting Office, was given the authority to determine the size of the automatic spending cuts.

The panel overturned the key provision of the law on the grounds that "it vests executive power in the comptroller general, an officer removable by Congress."

Without the automatic spending cut mechanism, the law loses its bite. Without the threat of the comptroller general's axe, the pressure on Congress to balance the budget will be significantly lessened.

Whether or not the budget ought to be balanced is entirely another issue, an issue that far pre-dates the Gramm-Rudman proposal, and one that will not be debated in this space.

But the unconstitutionality of the Gramm-Rudman law as it now stands cannot be debated. Executive powers ought be guarded jealously. It is self-defeating for Congress to be coerced to action by an actor removable by Congress. The comptroller general cannot be endowed with executive powers.

But the law then becomes unenforceable. And an unenforceable law is no law.

Justice provided, the Supreme Court will concur with lower court when the ruling is appealed.

Then Gramm-Rudman can fall into history like so many other dead trees.

Bears' QB can call him 'Daddy'

by Mike Royko

For the past couple of days, I've been pondering whether I would like my kids to have grown up to be like Jim McMahon, the Bears' quarterback.

The question arose because of some scathing remarks made about McMahon by Joe Theismann, the star quarterback of the Washington Redskins.

Theismann doesn't like McMahon's flaunting of headbands and his casual attitude toward the sacred game of professional football.

"If it weren't for football," Theismann said, "he'd be some yo-yo out there drinking beer."

But McMahon's worst offense, Theismann said, is that his eccentric behavior could set a bad example for young people. "... There is a responsibility to the youth. What he doesn't realize is that kids look up to him. Maybe he doesn't care."

And he piously concluded: "I sure wouldn't want my kids growing up like him."

I suppose it's possible Theismann is right. Maybe McMahon will set children down the path to wickedness, sin and wearing silly headbands.

In one of his more frivolous moments, McMahon dropped his trousers during practice in New Orleans and mooned a passing airplane.

So, if air travelers begin reporting that they are looking down and seeing thousands of adolescent rumps shining up at them, we'll know that McMahon has made an impact on the youth of America.

happily spend the rest of my years as a beer-drinking burden to them.

McMahon showed admirable restraint in barely acknowledging Theismann's criticism. If he had been in a nastier few moral judgments of her own.

In a magazine article, she wrote: "Success ruined our marriage. Or perhaps Joe's inability to handle success. He lost his values."

Also: "Our marriage went up and down with his career... We shared the downside more than the success."

So, I think that if I were going to preach to my sons about role models, I might say something like:

"Lads, if you want to chew tobacco, I won't complain. And if you want to moon an airplane, I can live with that, too."

"But after you've been married to a woman for 15 years, and you're in the bucks and a famous star, don't walk out on her and the kids for some cute trick in the movies."

And one final thought that Theismann might consider:

Yes, if it weren't for football, McMahon might be "some yo-yo out there drinking beer."

But if it weren't for football, Theismann might be some yo-yo out there romancing a truck-stop waitress named Pearl.

If Pearl would have him.

Royko is a syndicated columnist writing for the Chicago Tribune.

... I've thought about... whether I'd like my kids to be like (Jim) McMahon. And after careful consideration, I don't think I'd mind too much.

But I think it's too early to tell. As of this week, there hasn't been one report of mooning made to the FAA.

However, I've thought about what Theismann said, and whether I'd want my kids to be like McMahon.

And after careful consideration, I don't think I'd mind too much.

I estimate that with his salary, commercial endorsements, speeches and all the rest, McMahon is going to make several million dollars before he turns 30.

Well, if my kids did that, I would sit down with them and have a heart-to-heart talk about how families should stick together - especially fathers and sons. Then I'd drop my resignation on the editor's desk and mood, he might have raised some questions about Theismann's qualities as a role model to youth.

For example, McMahon, despite his habit of putting tobacco under his lower lip, is still happily married to his wife and is said to be a doting father.

In contrast, Theismann recently bid farewell to his loyal wife of 15 years, and took up with a curvaceous TV actress.

Don't misunderstand. I am not making any moral judgments about Theismann. Men, even those who play professional football, can be weak creatures. And a good-looking babe is a good-looking babe.

However, his wife, who said she learned she was being dumped only when their accountant mentioned it to her, made a

Lesson in racism packed a wallop

by Shelly Trusty

When I came to Ohio from the West I was shocked by the racial bias I encountered. I heard people openly referring to Afro-Americans as "those niggers" and I listened to discriminatory remarks about Americans of Jewish, Chinese, Italian and Polish descent.

I was shocked because in my hometown the worst thing someone could be labeled was "bigot." Once you were thought of as prejudiced you never lived it down. A bigot was someone who lacked education, sensitivity and class.

The word "nigger" was worse than profanity; "Jap" or "chink" was never uttered in polite conversation.

I worked to never show bias or negative emotion toward members of minority groups. Discussions on affirmative action, busing and Malcom X were lessons in diplomacy and repartee.

Once, while I was walking down the hall, an Indian girl slugged me in the stomach and when I got my air back I said, "Thank you." I didn't do anything about the incident because I didn't want to be labeled prejudiced. But I was.

I realized then my prejudice was just as bad as the prejudice of the people who discriminated against minorities. I based the way I treated people by the color of their skin.

If that Indian girl would have been white I would have reported the incident, or I would have hit her back. But I didn't. I didn't see her as a girl, I saw her as an Indian.

Prejudice is the practice of categorizing people into two groups. These groups are "us" and "them." When you define an individual by the fact that he or she is a member of a group you refer to as "them," you are prejudiced.

It doesn't matter how good or bad you treat a member of a group, it is the fact that you have put them into a group that makes you a bigot.

I have always heard that the opposite of prejudice is "equality," but it's not. To say someone is "equal" is to say he or she is the same as yourself. All people are different, so inequality exists and prejudice prevails.

The opposite of prejudice is "individuality." By recognizing everyone as an individual no one can be placed into a group. "Us" and "them" cannot exist.

If we think of all people as individuals we can no longer say, "That person is an Afro-American." We can't even say "That person is an American." We must say, "That person is an individual." This prevents racial, cultural, sexual and national bias.

By realizing the importance of individuality we can see that all people are different, not just "them." It is the strength of individuality that binds people together and it's the recognition of that strength that is the essence of respect.

I learned a lot from that individual with the strong right hook, and now that I think about it, maybe "Thank you" was the appropriate response.

Trusty, a senior English major from Reno, Nev., is a staff reporter for The News.

Letters

Fraternity show 'inexcusable'

I am writing in regard to Richard Moore's letter (Feb. 5) which addressed the "minstrel show" performed by Theta Chi Fraternity. As a young black woman of Bowling Green's academic community, I was infuriated and outraged that such a prejudiced and ignorant act could happen in an institution supposedly committed to the ideals of excellence, commitment, equality and pluralism. This kind of behavior, as displayed by the Theta Chis, is absolutely inexcusable, and in fact contradictory to President Olskamp's and the University's commitment, and to the goals of the Office of Minority Affairs and the black community here.

Coffee ad promotes stereotypes

I am angry about the advertisement for General Foods International Coffees in the Feb. 11 BG News. This ad is offensive to women, and it reinforces the stereotype of women as inferior.

First, the ad assumes that women can't assert themselves or feel confident to ask men out. Then, the ad assumes women are ignorant, particularly in the areas of sports and fine wine. We are shown that women can only conduct a shallow conversation because they are unintelligent. She listens to his sports trivia, his critique of the wine. In the ad's scenario, the woman contributes little to the verbal exchange except to compliment the man.

This ad specifies how women are expected to play their roles. Women must put on a facade to please men and put them in a position of superiority and control. The conclusion is that if a woman doesn't play the adoring, submissive female she won't get a man.

Many readers will say, "Calm down! It's just a coffee ad." I disagree. It is an obvious manifestation of the tendency of our society to perpetuate faulty stereotypes. No one can deny that women are different from men, but we must not assume that this difference implies inferiority.

Class gets its kicks

Prof: Soccer teaches management techniques

by Tim Wasserman

Students who signed up for Management 463 this semester probably didn't expect to see soccer listed on the syllabus under class participation. But within two weeks into the semester, members of Arch Darrow's advanced organizational behavior class were forming teams.

"I told them we were playing soccer at the beginning of the semester and I left the planning up to them," Darrow said. "They decided the rules and guidelines for the game as a group. I think an athletic team has all of the components that General Motors, AT&T or any big company would have."

Darrow said when he started the program three semesters ago he got a lot of surprised reactions from other teachers and students.

The idea originated from J.B. Richie, a management instructor at Brigham Young University. One of Richie's students, a soccer player, compared management principles to playing soccer. Richie decided to have his students play soccer for two days in class to help them better understand management.

Darrow's class finished playing soccer last week after one month of spending class time at the St. Thomas More gym.

DARROW SAID he uses the game of soccer as a learning tool out of the classroom for practical experience.

"Active learning is better than passive learning," Darrow said, "I feel they learn more in the month playing soccer than they do in the rest of the course."

The game of soccer has all of the elements of the working world because there are conflicts, coalitions and power structures similar to job experiences, he said.

But soccer can be a little rougher than the working world. Two students suffered broken toes this semester but Darrow said he watches the game to make sure it doesn't get too rough.

ROBERT NUSSBAUM, senior human resource management major, said he liked playing soccer more than sitting in a class.

"I thought it was strange when he said we were going to play soccer in class, but then I realized what he was trying to teach us," "It was a nice change of pace and I enjoyed getting out of the classroom."

Darrow said not all of his students liked playing soccer.

"But I told them not everyone wants to go to work every day either," he said.

Students also learned planning skills as they relate to management. Letting the students organize by themselves resulted in more goals being scored and better organization, he said.

In some instances things were done against the rules and students were punished by a loss of points. This will be incorporated into a discussion on organizational ethics during the course, he said.

Students have to write a paper worth 25 percent of their grade describing the game as it relates to an organization's workings, Darrow said.

"I think the students are bored going into their classes learning facts and memorizing them," he said. "Students like my class because it's something different and they gain notoriety being in a class where you play soccer."

Miss BGSU pageant slated for tonight

by Melissa McGillivray
staff reporter

Several University women will be competing tonight in the only student-run pageant in the state.

John Fox, junior marketing major and associate producer of the 26th Annual Miss BGSU Scholarship Pageant, said every aspect of the show is handled by students, from stage building to production.

The Pageant begins tonight at 7:30 in Kobacker Hall. It will continue each night through to Saturday.

"We're lucky to be able to (run the pageant)," Fox said. "We would like to keep it student run. It gives us an opportunity to see what we can do, and it's also a challenge."

Other state university pageants are handled by outside agents.

This year's pageant will feature 21 University women ranging in age from 17 to 26. They will participate in talent, interview, evening gown and swimsuit competitions.

Tonight and tomorrow's competitions are preliminary events, with the top 10 finalists going on to compete Saturday, Fox said.

THE PAGEANT'S theme is "On Broadway," and the contestants will perform Broadway show tunes from the 1930's through the 1980's. Some numbers will include all the contestants, he said.

In addition, Melissa Sue Bradley, former Miss Ohio and runner-up to Miss America in 1984, will emcee the pageant and sing each night.

The only requirement for Miss BGSU contestants is that they be a University student or Wood County resident.

Contestants should also be talented as this competition is 50 percent of the total score, he said. For this year's contestants, talent is not limited to singing and dancing, he said.

A roller skater, a comedian, a piano player and a student who dances while displaying baked goods, are among those who will perform.

The winner will receive a $300 scholarship and a chance to go to the Miss Ohio pageant, where the winner is awarded a $10,000 scholarship. The winner of Miss Ohio will then go on to the Miss America pageant.

The runner-up in this weekend's pageant receives a $125 scholarship, second prize is $75, and third is $50.

Tickets will be sold in the Union during the week of the pageant and will be available at the door, Fox said. Tonight's tickets are $1.50 for everyone. Friday and Saturday's tickets are $2 for students and $5 for non-students. Weekend passes for non-students are $6.

Aquino

Continued from page 1. Marcos, 68, president for 20 years, has not faced real opposition since 1969. He ruled under martial law from 1972 to 1981. His six-year term runs until 1987, but he called a special election trying to prove he still had overwhelming support. Most of the districts not yet reported were in areas Marcos was expected to carry. Aquino spokesman Rene Saguasag was asked if he expects Marcos to win in the National Assembly count.

"By the tyranny of numbers, yes, because they have the votes," he replied.

Marcos' New Society Movement has a two-thirds majority in the assembly.

Liability

"The nationwide general liability for this type of customer last year was 156 percent, meaning that for every dollar an insurance company brought in, they paid $1.56. You just can't keep up that kind of loss," Hoose said.

$57,000 goal set

by Julie Fauble
staff reporter

The class of 1986 is challenging itself to raise $57,000 as part of an annual fund raising event.

Since 1970, seniors have been participating in the Senior Challenge Program, said Marcia Sloan, assistant director of alumni affairs.

The money from this year's challenge will go to the Placement Center and for campus beautification if the administration approves, she said.

The landscaping should cost about $5,000, said Patricia Ritter, chairperson of the publications committee of the Senior Challenge Executive Committee.

The money for the placement center will go toward placement resources, such as software and hardware, she said.

The Executive Committee of the program, made up of 17 seniors from different areas of the University, began planning the Challenge last fall, Sloan said.

The program raises money through a pledge system.

SENIORS MAKE pledges payable in three installments and the first installment will be due a year after graduation.

A certain percentage of seniors' pledges can be given directly to a particular organization, such as a club, fraternity or a scholarship fund, of the students choice, she said.

The rest of the money will be divided between campus beautification and the placement center, she said.

The Executive Committee has not decided what percentage of the pledges will be allowed for individual preferences.

The Committee is recruiting team captains who will then be responsible for recruiting volunteers.

Ritter said in honor of the University's 75th anniversary, the Executive Committee set the goal at $57,000 because it is the reverse of 75.

Bikes more than transportation

Cycling club offers training for competition, touring, fitness

by Valerie Lonero
staff reporter

Although many students depend on a bicycle for transportation, some riders are ready to pedal for competition or long distances without dreading the hours of training.

The BGSU Bicycling Club plans to give students the opportunity to learn more about cycling skills and touring options through training lessons.

The club, which first met Tuesday, was organized by Jim Karlovec, a sophomore interpersonal communications major and Donny Marinoni, a junior secondary education major who plan to promote cycling and train interested cyclists.

Karlovec and Marinoni decided to form the club because of their experience in cycling.

"Bicycling is a way to get in shape and it's an interesting way to travel," Karlovec said. "It's a way to see the details of scenery and meet different people."

There will be a club initiation fee and training sessions will be held every three weeks on campus. A permanent location for the sessions has not yet been established.

Members will be taught the various features of cycling maintenance and safety rules.

"Members will learn minor repairs which are important. If a cyclist gets a flat tire and he's 30 miles away from a phone, he has to know how to fix it," Karlovec said.

vec said.

"There is definitely a demand and interest of cycling in the area. There seems to be a trend of people in this country getting into shape and the bicycling club is another way to introduce fitness," Marinoni said.

In addition to maintenance and safety, club members will learn the different aspects of cycling such as touring and racing competitions.

"Tours are a lot of hard work, it allows the cyclists to see the scenery and take different routes all over the country," Marinoni said.

The club will also inform members of cycling courtesies when riding with groups of people, like keeping safe distances, knowing when to pass and riding in single file, Karlovec said.

The club plans to have an annual race in Bowling Green open to all University students and to the general public. Other races will be offered ranging from 13 to 100 miles which can be completed in one day.

"I hope to have around 50 official members by the end of the semester. We have over 150,000 miles of cycling experience so our members will learn a lot," Karlovec said. "At our first meeting Tuesday night we had about 40 people show up so I think the club will definitely be a success."

Students interested in the cycling club should contact Karlovec or Marinoni for the time and location of the next meeting.

AIDS policy considered

by Susan McDonald
staff reporter

Although the University does not have a published blanket policy for Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS), there is one in terms of education and counseling, said Joshua Kaplan, director of Health Services.

"We make policies in terms of health care," he said.

Kaplan said that there have been no reported cases at the University.

But faculty, staff and students should be educated about the safety guidelines of the disease, he said.

One of these educational measures was an interview and phone-in question session about AIDS presented by Kaplan on WBGU radio. He also conducted a video-taped panel discussion with Bill Hann, associate professor of biology, in Founders Quadrangle.

Kaplan said that faculty and staff are also briefed on information about AIDS, such as its symptoms and how it spreads.

Other Health Service policies are found in the guidelines of the American College Health Association, which lists 17 recommendations and guidelines for colleges and universities in dealing with AIDS.

"Our policy in Health Service essentially agrees with the recommendations from the American College Health Service," he said.

Kaplan said that one of these guidelines followed is that the University does not restrict the access of students with AIDS or symptoms of AIDS to theaters, cafeterias, swimming pools or any other common areas.

Another guideline followed is that screening processes are not used for newly admitted or current students for the disease.

Kaplan said the staff at Health Services is also briefed on all current medical literature and has up-to-date in-service briefings.

"One thing we have made sure is everyone knows current information," he said. "We are prepared to deal with AIDS patients."

Health Services also provides counseling with AIDS victims and makes referrals to the Medical College of Ohio (MCO) in Toledo for bloodtesting.

Health Service policy is that all medical records are kept confidential. But because AIDS is a reportable disease, under law the Student Health Center has to report it to the Wood County Board of Health, which informs the state board of health.

Research awards available

GSS sponsors cash prizes

The Graduate Student Senate will sponsor the Charles E. Shanklin Award to honor original graduate research.

Three $750 first prizes and three $250 second prizes will be offered in the areas of Arts and Humanities, Social and Behavioral Sciences and Sciences and Mathematics, Susan Willis, vice-president of Graduate Student Senate, said.

"We hope to encourage graduate students to do work that is significant but more importantly, this award should help graduate students in different interdisciplinary lines get to know each other and share ideas," she said.

Graduate students should submit a 750 word abstract before the end of the month outlining their research. Abstracts will be judged for each division by a three member panel comprised of one graduate student and two faculty members and two finalists will be selected from each division, Willis said.

Finalists must submit a copy of their abstracts and a final paper/project before April 3 to the Executive Council of the graduate student senate.

A final on-campus presentation will be at 7 p.m. in the assembly room at McFall Center on April 24.

Finalists' abstracts will be evaluated on the basis of comprehension, thoroughness of research, content, originality and presentation quantity.

8 Education majors to teach in Rio, Canada next semester

by Mike Amburgey
staff reporter

Eight education majors plan to fulfill their student teaching requirements abroad this semester by participating in the College of Education's International Student Teaching Program.

Larry Wills, assistant to the dean of the College of Education for international programs and student services, said three student teachers will be teaching in Rio de Janeiro at Our Lady of Mercy school. This is a comprehensive kindergarten through twelfth grade school serving 36 different nationalities of students, he said.

In addition, five student teachers are headed to Montreal, Canada. They will split into two groups with two teachers going to MacDonald High School and three teachers working at Dorset Elementary School.

The opportunity to teach abroad is a learning experience for education majors, he said.

"It's a component of the college (Education) designed to provide students with an opportunity to have a cultural experience other than their own culture," Wills said. "When students come back they are more aware of other cultures. They become more aware of cross-cultural issues."

LORI HOHLBEIN, senior English education major, is among those going to Canada.

"I'm looking forward to traveling to Montreal and learning the French culture," she said.

Hohlbein will teach Shakespeare, poetry and writing to high school students, who receive their instruction in English in the predominantly French speaking city.

"They told us that we should do our sightseeing when we first get there, because after that, we'll be too busy," Hohlbein said.

She and the other teachers going to Montreal will live with host families around the Montreal area.

RIO DE JANEIRO student teachers plan to live in dormitory-type housing arranged by the school, Wills said.

Geoff Stevenson, a degree-holder seeking teacher certification, is one of the three bound for Brazil. Stevenson will teach American and world history at Our Lady of Mercy.

He said he is excited about the range of diversity represented at the school.

"I don't anticipate any problems as far as culture shock," Stevenson said. "I'm pretty excited about being in a foreign country for 10 weeks."

Financial aid cuts await court decision

by Mike Amburgey
staff reporter

Federal government contributions to student financial aid may be substantially trimmed if the Gramm-Rudman budget balancing law survives Supreme Court scrutiny and President Reagan's budget proposals become law.

A segment of the Gramm-Rudman law, passed by Congress last December, was declared unconstitutional Friday by a federal three-judge panel because it authorized across-the-board cuts to be overseen by the General Accounting Office. The panel ruled this unconstitutional because, by law, Congress must authorize all spending.

According to Robert Jamroz, special assistant to the U.S. Secretary of Education, there are several proposals designed to cut back on government spending in student financial aid.

One of the measures included in President Reagan's budget, which is before Congress, is the definition of an independent student.

"Currently, 53 percent of students receiving financial aid are independent students," Jamroz said. "Any student who is 22 or younger would be considered a dependent student, unless they are an orphan or a ward of a court."

HE SAID this is part of a proposed budget and if passed, it will become effective for the 1987-88 academic year.

"The budget put before Secretary (William) Bennett (U.S. Secretary of Education) would place greater emphasis on secondary and elementary education, and conversely, less emphasis on higher education," Jamroz said. Under Gramm-Rudman, there will be a 4.3 percent reduction in Pell Grant funding, he said. Students with families earning $15,000 per year or less will receive their full Pell grant award. This may become effective March 1.

Students coming from families who earn between $15,000 and $28,000 will receive less than a full award, Jamroz said. Anyone whose family earns above $28,000 will be considered ineligible for a Pell grant.

Another area targeted for change is student loans.

"There will be a 0.5 or half a percent increase in interest fees for the Guaranteed Student Loan program," Jamroz said.

He said that $7.9 billion in federal aid is marked for students in 1986-87, which translates into $15 billion in total student aid when coupled with state grants and money from private lending institutions.

In 1987-88 federal funding will decrease to $6.1 billion generated by the federal government. Money matched by state supplements and banks will bring the total aid package to $13.7 billion for 1987-88, he said.

"We are proposing to combine work-study program and state supplements," Jamroz said. "The state grants will be combined with work-study for a combined package."

HE SAID the Department of Education is proposing that all students undergo a needs analysis when considering taking out a Guaranteed Student Loan. Anyone whose family earns below $30,000 per year would automatically qualify for a GSL.

The National Direct Student loan program would be restructured under President Reagan's proposed budget, he said. A student could borrow up to $10,000 a year under the new plan.

Repayment rates would adjust more easily to former students' earning power, once working after graduation. Payments on the NDSL would be decided by colleges on an individual school basis, Jamroz said.

Conrad McRoberts, director of financial aid and student employment, said his office is investigating the effects of the bill.

"We are trying to find out the ramifications of Gramm-Rudman for students at Bowling Green, and we will keep students apprised," he said.

"Obviously, Gramm-Rudman will have a negative impact on some students here at Bowling Green," McRoberts said.

Library to get new dean

A new dean of libraries and learning resources should be selected in three to four weeks, Philip Mason, executive assistant to University President Paul Olscamp, said yesterday.

Joan Repp, chair of Jerome Library's access services, headed the search committee which forwarded information regarding the candidates to Eloise Clark, vice president of academic affairs, last Friday.

The search committee doesn't rank the candidates, but merely provides Clark with information about them, Repp said.

Each candidate was on campus in late January to speak with faculty and staff members. The candidates are:

• Rush Miller, director of libraries, Sam Houston State University, Huntsville, Texas.

• G. Charles Newman, director, Butler Library, The State University College of New York at Buffalo.

• Robert Burr, director, Crosby Library, Gonzaga University, Spokane, Wash.

The new dean will replace William Miller who has been acting dean since the summer of 1984. When the new dean is chosen, Miller will resume his position as assistant dean of libraries and learning resources.

Federal cutbacks affect senior citizens center

by Zora Johnson
staff reporter

Cuts in federal revenue sharing are trickling down to affect some local non-profit organizations.

The city has proposed cutting contributions to the Wood County Senior Citizens Center from $25,000 to $15,000 this year, according to Jean Smith, administrator of the center.

Wes Hoffman, municipal administrator, said that the city had to make the cut because of decreased revenue sharing.

"If revenue sharing does survive, we'll be taking a look at what we can do. But the Gramm-Rudman bill has had its effects even this year," Hoffman said.

"As of right now we've had to ask the county to pick up some of the support for services such as the Link, the airport and the Senior Citizen Center."

Because the cut means that the center could be facing a deficit by the end of the fiscal year, Smith has asked the Board of Public Utilities to grant the center gratis utilities, meaning utilities at no cost.

IF THE BOARD decides to provide the center with water, sewer and electric service at no cost, the total cost would make up the $10,000 deficit, Smith said.

But the board has decided not to make a decision on the request until the county decides on its degree of support for the center.

Members of the board suggested the center seek additional funding from outlying municipalities and townships in the county.

Smith said she did not see this as a feasible alternative.

"When you go to the towns and villages you hear that Bowling Green gets all the advantages having the center right there in town," she said. "It seems like it is a two-way street and we seem to be caught in the center of it."

Lyle Wright, director of public utilities, said he did not support the request.

"We're at the point right now where the income of the electric and sewage department is deficit," Wright said. "Until we get in a better position, I would not favor the request."

INDIVIDUAL Board of Public Utilities members expressed differing opinions on the gratis request.

"If we set a precedent like this by granting gratis utilities, other non-profit organizations might appeal and ask for free utilities," said Thomas Pendleton, board member.

Other members argued that Bowling Green might already be contributing more than its share to the center.

"We do provide the building and maintenance in addition to our contributions," said Sheila Fulton, board member. "We are doing a lot more than our share."

Smith said, without additional contributions from the city, the center could have a difficult time operating.

A trip back to the Old School

First-graders get a glimpse of the past at Educational Memorabilia Center

The small brick vintage schoolhouse standing near the center of campus may seem out of place on Bowling Green's campus, but the building serves a bigger purpose than proof of the past.

As a group of first-graders from Glennwood Elementary School in Rossford discovered, this one-room schoolhouse is a museum of educational history.

The District Six schoolhouse, appropriately named the Educational Memorabilia Center, was originally brought to the University as an extension of a reception room in the Education Building that was decorated with antique school desks and other donated schoolroom items.

"The room had so much antique furniture that it became more like a museum," Marilyn Braatz, publication specialist in the College of Education, said.

THE OLD schoolhouse made for perfect storage of the antiques.

A Norwalk family donated the building to the University in 1975 when it was moved from State Route 18 near Norwalk then rebuilt and restored at its present location, Braatz said.

"The building was 100 years old at the time," she said. "It was taken down brick by brick by a professor of the University (Dr. Daniel Heisler) and his three sons."

Most of the Center's artifacts have been donated from other Ohio schoolhouses, but some original items include a wooden desk, complete with carved initials, an iron stove, some wooden floor planks, and all of the exterior bricks.

It has been 47 years since this schoolhouse held its last regular class. Classes would begin in the fall, but let out in April so children could help with spring planting, Braatz said.

School days began with a loud hand bell. The boys had to walk in one door and sit on one side of the room while the girls entered another door and sat on the opposite side of the room. Likewise, at recess, the boys had to play in the back and on one side of the building and the girls played on the other sides.

SINCE EIGHT grade levels were being taught at a time, keeping students in order was important. Discipline consisted of a dunce stool, cap and a hickory stick.

"If they were punished in school, they got the same punishment at home," Braatz said. "The parents knew the importance of good education and tried to reinforce what teachers did in school."

"Not all schools were set up like this," she said. "Different schools had different customs; it depended on what the people in the area wanted."

Supervision of teachers was consistent in northwestern Ohio schools in the 19th and early 20th centuries, however. All teachers were female and were not to marry during the term of their contract and had to be home between 8 p.m. and 6 a.m. unless attending a school function.

Also, teachers followed a strict dress code and had many restrictions on their social life. There were no teacher strikes, although five years of service earned a 25 cent per week raise.

The Memorabilia Center is open on Saturdays and Sundays from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. or by appointment for groups.

Family expected to join freed man

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Soviet Union has "indicated" that the mother of Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky and other family members will be allowed to emigrate to Israel, the State Department said yesterday.

Reporters had asked at the department's daily press briefing whether the administration had assurances from the Soviets that Shcharansky's relatives would be allowed to leave.

It issued a one-sentence statement which said: "The Soviets have indicated they will allow his mother and other members to emigrate."

Shcharansky was released Tuesday in an East-West swap of prisoners after serving eight years on charges of treason, espionage and anti-Soviet agitation.

His brother, Leonid, said later in Moscow he and their mother, Ida Milgrom, intended to file emigration applications yesterday. Soviet citizens with family members abroad can be granted exit permits if they ask to be reunited with relatives.

Dissident released from U.S.S.R.

Freed Shcharansky will campaign for emigration of Soviet Jews

JERUSALEM (AP) - Anatoly Shcharansky said yesterday he will resume the campaign for free emigration of Soviet Jews that led the Kremlin to put him in prison and labor camps for more than eight years.

Israel radio also said he sent forms to Moscow formally inviting his 77-year-old mother, Ida Milgrom, and his brother Leonid to Israel on the basis of family reunification. That is the first step in getting exit visas from the Soviet government.

The State Department said yesterday the Soviet Union has "indicated" Ida Milgrom and other relatives of Shcharansky would be allowed to emigrate to Israel. The brief announcement did not elaborate.

The Jewish human rights activist, who was imprisoned as a spy, told Israel radio in his first interview since being released to the West: "It is my task to use my experience to help those people who stayed behind in the Soviet Union."

On Tuesday, Shcharansky walked across the Glienicke Bridge to West Berlin from Communist East Germany. Three other people held in the East and five imprisoned in the West, all on espionage charges, were exchanged on the "bridge of spies" half an hour later.

IN EAST BERLIN, he said, he was told to walk a straight line to a car and deliberately took a zig-zag route. "Of course, that's funny, but it was a matter of principle never to agree to anything for the KGB (secret police)," he said.

"Either I didn't listen to what they told me to do, or I did exactly the opposite."

His brother Leonid, 39, told Western reporters in Moscow that Shcharansky lay down in the snow, demanding the return of his belongings before boarding the special plane taking him to Berlin, but finally left with only a prayer book. He crossed the bridge in borrowed clothes.

The radio said the 38-year-old mathematician and computer analyst, who was reported to have health problems during his confinement, had undergone a medical examination.

He appears pale and thin but told a government spokesman he gained more than 20 pounds because of better treatment during the last weeks before his release.

SHCHARANSKY and his wife Avital, who led a worldwide campaign for a decade to free him, stayed out of sight most of the day, appearing only briefly on the balcony of their second-floor Jerusalem apartment.

They were separated the day after their wedding in 1974, when Avital emigrated to Israel with the understanding that her husband would follow in a few months. She began her campaign when the Soviet Union refused to let him go.

Shcharansky said he knew "almost nothing" of the international efforts for his release and often was denied routine mail privileges.

"Avital would write me twice a week, and I would receive two letters a year from her. And that was in a good year. There also were years when I didn't receive a single letter," he said.

Uri Savir, spokesman for Prime Minister Shimon Peres, said the Shcharanskys appealed to President Reagan by telephone to intervene with Soviet authorities on behalf of his mother and brother.

They made the call to Reagan, and another to Secretary of State George Shultz, shortly after stepping from the Israeli executive jet that brought them from West Germany Tuesday night. Avital, 34, had met her husband in Frankfurt.

Savir said both Reagan and Shultz promised to help.

There have been reports that Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev reached the initial agreement that Shcharansky would be freed at their Geneva summit in November.

Rockwell wants role in project

PITTSBURGH (AP) - The builder of the space shuttle and the B-1B bomber envisions a role in creating a space station and the space plane President Reagan would like to have flying by 2000.

But an official of Rockwell International Corp., the nation's largest space contractor and second-largest defense contractor, said yesterday it's too early to make any proposals for private industry to take over any part of the space program now operated by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

"We're always looking at the commercialization of space. But our position is that it's premature," Rockwell President Donald Beall said following a shareholders meeting in Pittsburgh.

Beall told shareholders that preliminary planning has already begun on a plane, mentioned by Reagan in his State of the Union address, that could reach Tokyo from Washington in two hours.

The plane might take off like a conventional airliner and leave the earth's atmosphere at 25 times the speed of sound before descending.

Ex-Salvadoran officer admits role in killings

WASHINGTON (AP) - A former Salvadoran army officer, planning to seek political asylum in the United States, says he participated in death squad killings in the early 1980s and witnessed the slaughter of civilians by El Salvador's U.S.-backed military.

Ex-Lt. Ricardo Ernesto Castro, 35, a 1973 West Point graduate, described death squad killing of suspected "subversives" as a routine activity of the Salvadoran army in early 1981. He said he personally commanded four assassination missions, claiming about a dozen lives.

Castro said he also saw the army execute unarmed women and children during a counter-insurgency sweep near the Rio Lempa in the fall of 1981 and leave the bodies in shallow streams as a warning to leftist guerrillas.

"My company was thirsty, but the soldiers would not take water from one of these streams because of these kids' corpses," Castro said in a recent tape-recorded interview at his suburban Washington home.

Castro, who left El Salvador in mid-1982, is the first Salvadoran army officer to publicly state that he participated in death squad killings. He initially told his story to free-lance reporter Allan Nairn for an article in the current issue of Progressive magazine.

CASTRO, HOWEVER, said in the interview he was recruited to work with the CIA and served as a translator for an American who trained the Salvadoran military on interrogation techniques. He said the American trainer did not advocate torture, but suggested that suspects be kept "completely disoriented" by keeping them isolated and employing psychological tactics.

Castro's statements support allegations made by private human rights groups that the Salvadoran military committed massive abuses in the early 1980s, killing tens of thousands of civilians. During those years, the Reagan administration disputed many of the charges but acknowledged that some abuses occurred.

In a July 1982 report certifying human rights progress in El Salvador, the State Department said "there has been no evidence to support periodic guerrilla allegations of large-scale massacres allegedly committed by government forces."

The administration now contends abuses have largely been brought under control, although private human rights groups say government forces still commit selective murders in the cities and use indiscriminate firepower in the countryside.

AN ESTIMATED 50,000 civilians have died in the 6-year-old civil war.

Castro said he came to the United States in mid-1982 to tell U.S. officials about the corruption and atrocities that many young officers felt were undermining prospects for restoring peace in El Salvador. After his appeals received little attention, he said he decided to stay here with his wife and three children and plans to request political asylum.

Castro said widespread political assassinations represented a policy established by the military high command initially using army personnel, but he added that by mid-1981, the "death squad" work had shifted to the government security forces, particularly the Treasury Police.

Bethesda heart surgeon defends competency

WASHINGTON (AP) - Dr. Donal Billig, defending himself against manslaughter charges in the deaths of five heart patients, said yesterday that none of his fellow doctors had told him he was incompetent to conduct surgery at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

In his first testimony at his military court-martial, the former head of heart surgery at Bethesda also said that a 1978 eye injury had not impaired his ability to conduct surgery before joining the Navy. He said he had told his Navy recruiter that his privileges had been terminated at a New Jersey civilian hospital in 1981.

Billig, a Navy commander, is charged with involuntary manslaughter involving five patients who died during or after heart surgery. He is also charged with 24 counts of dereliction of duty in connection with other operations.

As he took the stand, Billig, 55, said he was "a little nervous." However, he appeared to grow more confident as he proceeded, answering questions from his lawyers in considerable detail and volunteering answers to counter prosecution testimony that was beyond the scope of the questions.

BILLIG SAID that in a 1983 meeting, the head of heart surgery at nearby Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Col. Russ Zajtcuk "was not complimentary to me." Zajtcuk testified that he told Billig his surgery was at the level of a first-year resident and that he should not continue performing operations.

Asked by defense attorney Stephen Baker if Zajtcuk had said he was at the level of a first-year resident, Billig responded, "I don't specifically remember that."

Asked if he had been told he was incompetent, Billig answered, "The first time I ever heard that word was when this hearing started."

Most initial testimony centered on Billig's background and training and his initial months at Bethesda in 1983.

Billig said that by June 1983 he had been cleared at Bethesda to conduct uncomplicated cases of open heart surgery after consulting with colleagues at Bethesda or Walter Reed.

He denied that another doctor, Reginald Peniston, had told him he should give up heart surgery, as Peniston had testified earlier.

BILLIG SAID he had not encountered any difficulty in doing surgery between the time he was struck in the eye by a tennis ball in 1978 and joined the Navy in late 1982.

"As far as my job performance was concerned, I could do it as well after that injury as before," he said.

The government contends the injury left Billig with essentially no vision in his right eye and this hampered his ability to do heart surgery.

Billig also testified that he disclosed the injury left Billig with essentially no vision in his right eye and this hampered his ability to do heart surgery. Billig also testified that he disclosed the injury left Billig with essentially no vision in his right eye and this hampered his ability to do heart surgery. But he said he did not mention that matter in his initial interview with Bethesda doctors.

"I guess now the way things have evolved and reflected on it, maybe I should have mentioned it," he said.

Billig acknowledged he later was fired from a private surgical practice in Pittsburgh, Pa. But he attributed that and the Monmouth case to professional differences rather than questions of his abilities. He also cited professional considerations in explaining why he left two earlier civilian jobs.

Delegate observes fraud in vote tally

COLUMBUS (AP) - A team of international observers believes there was rampant fraud in the Philippines election, but cannot determine if it was enough to influence the outcome, Gerald Austin, Gov. Richard Celeste's campaign director, said yesterday.

Austin was part of a 44-member delegation invited by President Ferdinand Marcos and challenger Corason Aquino to monitor the bitterly fought election. Austin's group operated apart from a team of U.S. observers headed by Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind.

"I can tell you that from our group, we believe there was fraud that took place, that it was rampant, but we did not say that we could determine whether the fraud actually will influence the outcome of the election," Austin told a news conference. "It's possible (since) there were 27 million people voting, that a million votes could have been stolen and not influence the outcome of the election."

Austin, who was in the Philippines from Feb. 4-10, said he personally did not see any fraud. He and a delegate from Gambia were sent to a heavily pro-Marcos region where they visited 15 polling places.

"I DIDN'T see any people stuffing ballots. I didn't see the same people voting from one polling place to another. I didn't see any troops that were intimidating people," he said.

But on election night, Austin stood with three priests who had voted for Aquino and watched as the tally in their precinct was released. "When the sealed envelope was opened up, the vote was 147 for Marcos, zero for Aquino," he said.

"There were other examples of that where Aquino people, who were the officials in that precinct and therefore voted in that precinct, when the ballots were opened there were no Aquino votes," he said.

Half of the 44-member delegation was made up of Americans, and of them, half were Democrats and half Republicans.

Results of the election still are in doubt. Austin believes there is a possibility that Marcos "is going to have this election finalized" in such a way that he will win the presidency and Aquino's running-mate will become vice president. Candidates do not run in tandem in the Philippines.

"THIS GUY IS very, very slick," Austin said of Marcos. "I think if the final results are that Marcos wins, which I expect, I don't know that you could see a civil war over there, but I think you will see ... what happened in Poland, and that is the church becomes the opposing party," Austin said. He said the country is predominantly Roman Catholic.

"The church is very, very much involved with Aquino," he said.

Ex-Marine sentenced for fraud

CINCINNATI (AP) - A federal judge rebuked a former Marine before sentencing him yesterday to two years in prison for defrauding the government by supplying counterfeit safety equipment to the Defense Department.

U.S. District Judge Arthur Spiegel told William Ballard, now a Lewisburg businessman, that he should have known the potential hazards of supplying unapproved mask facepiece lenses to the military. Ballard, 37, served two years with the Marines in Vietnam, the judge said.

"I cannot accept Mr. Ballard's statements that he was just doing business as it was expected of him," Spiegel said at Ballard's sentencing hearing. "If anyone should know the consequences of shipping substandard equipment to the military, whose lives depend on it, it should be Mr. Ballard, who served on the firing line."

The mask facepieces were to have been used in gas masks, respirators and self-contained breathing systems used by military firefighters as protection against fire fumes and toxic chemicals.

Ballard, president of Lewisburg Supply Co., pleaded guilty to two counts of a 30-count felony indictment in which he was accused of knowingly shipping about 20,000 unapproved mask facepieces to the Defense Department and of changing labels on the items to cover up their true origin. His supply contract with the government stated that the mask facepieces were to have been made by Mine Safety Appliance Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa., but Ballard instead shipped items produced by Dayton Plastics Co., of Dayton, Ohio, a supplier not approved by military officials in the deal.

FEDERAL authorities said Ballard had another company print counterfeit labels from a Mine Safety Appliance Co. label that Ballard supplied as a sample. Ballard then shipped the unapproved facepieces to Defense Department depots for distribution. The offenses occurred in 1983.

Federal authorities said all of the bogus lenses were believed to have been recovered before they were placed in military service.

Ballard had claimed that he was not doing anything that other suppliers did not do in the routine course of business.

But Spiegel rejected that defense, saying, "Mr. Ballard cheated the government, out of greed."

Ballard was ordered to report to prison March 5 to begin serving his sentence.

Spiegel could have sentenced Ballard to maximum terms of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine on each of the two counts of submitting false statements.

The judge said he would not order restitution because Ballard has already made some reimbursement to the government and is negotiating to repay more.

Spiegel said he would leave Ballard's other assets intact for the support of Ballard's family.

"Whatever assets he has left, we believe would be better used to support his wife and four children than having the government support him, and them, through welfare payments until he is released," the judge said.

Human rights abuses charged in Nicaragua

LONDON (AP) - Amnesty International said yesterday that Nicaragua's leftist government often jails opposition leaders, lawyers and trade unionists for short periods in an attempt to intimidate and harass them.

According to Amnesty International, Nicaragua's Sandinista government has punished its military men for abuses such as murder and rape of prisoners, but it said some reported killings and disappearances of past years still have not been cleared up.

The London-based human rights organization also said there have been frequent reports from deserters and witnesses of the torture, mutilation and execution of prisoners by U.S.-supported Nicaraguan rebels. The number of victims "is believed to total many hundreds," the report said.

It cited a military manual previously distributed by the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency that allegedly encouraged such abuses. The manual was discontinued in 1983.

In a summary of a report entitled "Nicaragua: The Human Rights Record," Amnesty International said it has sent four missions to Nicaragua since the Sandinistas defeated the forces of right-wing President Anastasio Somoza in July 1979.

THE MISSIONS uncovered human rights violations by both the government of President Daniel Ortega and the rebels, the report said.

But the missions concentrated on alleged violations by the government, it said, because the organization's role is to press governments to uphold human rights commitments and to protest if they carry out, support or condone abuses.

Under the Sandinista government, political prisoners may be held incommunicado for periods of up to several months, denied a fair trial and be imprisoned under poor conditions, the report said.

Amnesty International said released prisoners have reported being subjected to disorientation by such means as lights being left on continuously in their cells or being given extra meals to make them believe more time had passed.

Punishments include forced exercise and being made to stand during prolonged questioning, according to Amnesty International.

NASA Center projects delayed

CLEVELAND (AP) - The scrubbing of the next three space shuttle flights has disrupted the plans of NASA Lewis Research Center scientists who were preparing a rocket booster for use next May.

More than 200 people at NASA Lewis work on the Centaur rocket, which was intended to propel the Ulysses and Galileo space probes from the space shuttle orbiter in May, said Larry Ross, director of space flight systems at the center.

Since NASA is working on other Centaur projects with different deadlines, the delay has forced a rescheduling of work and will add to the workload in the future.

Still, Ross said, "Of all the horrible aftereffects involved with the tragedy, it's the least of the worries having to replan the work."

Ross had no estimate on how much the delays would cost.

The Ulysses was scheduled to be launched from the orbiter on May 5 to examine the poles of the sun, and the Galileo was to be launched on the 20th to examine the atmosphere of Jupiter.

On Monday, NASA canceled the May flight and the two preceding ones while NASA and other agencies try to determine what caused the Jan. 28 explosion during the takeoff of the space shuttle Challenger, killing the seven crew members.

THE LAUNCH of the probes depends on the planets' being in certain positions, and the "planetary window" won't be open again for the Jupiter probe until June 1987.

The two rocket boosters are at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

Judge refuses ruling on official

WARREN, Ohio (AP) - A Trumbull County probate judge has refused to rule County Commissioner Thomas Battin incompetent by reason of mental disability, even though Battin has been incapacitated since a June 1985 automobile accident and continues to draw a salary.

The ruling by Probate Judge Thomas Swift Tuesday came on a request by Battin's wife, Karen, to be her husband's guardian. Swift's order of dismissal, however, states that she has the right to reapply.

Swift said Karen Battin had offered neither a physician's statement indicating mental infirmity nor a statement that Battin has refused to submit to an examination.

The case was being watched by county Prosecutor Dennis Watkins, who said he is drafting a petition for the state Supreme Court to rule on whether Battin is entitled to hold office.

"The fact that she has to file this is fairly strong evidence that he's unable to carry on his affairs," Watkins said yesterday. Watkins is trying to obtain a statement from Battin or his physician in order to support his contention that Battin is permanently incapacitated.

"He's no longer being rehabilitated at a hospital," he said. "He's at a nursing home."

BATTIN WAS injured in an automobile accident June 6, 1985, and has neither reported for work nor tended to any of the functions of his job since then. He continues to draw his annual salary of $32,678.

Watkins said Ohio case law fails to address the point, largely because technical advances in prolonging life have been relatively recent.

Officer fights to regain her job

WILMINGTON, Ohio (AP) - Fired in 1984 as a Wilmington policewoman, Sharon Frost says she has not lost faith in her ongoing effort to win back her job through lawsuits filed against the city.

Wilmington's law director, G. Allen Gano, said yesterday that the city still stands by its decision to fire Frost in December 1984 for incompetence. She had been the city's first woman police officer, and complained that she was not treated fairly because she was a woman.

Frost, 32, who still lives in Wilmington, is planning an appeal to the Ohio Supreme Court of her firing. She also has filed a $5 million civil lawsuit in U.S. District Court, charging the city with discriminating against her on the basis of her sex. Dayton lawyer Jeff Silverstein is representing her in both lawsuits.

"It's not really discouraging at this point," Frost said. "There is no point I feel that I am going to lose. I won at the Common Pleas level, and the city won the first appeal. It's just a matter of whose going to win at the next level."

This month, the Ohio 12th District Court of Appeals upheld the city's firing of Frost.

In July 1984, she was suspended with pay for talking to the press about the sex discrimination charges she filed against the police department.

After a pre-disciplinary conference, Frost was suspended without pay for 15 days. That suspension ended Aug. 30, 1984.

Police search for mass rapist

CLEVELAND (AP) - A man believed responsible for at least 30 rapes in the last 2½ years may have committed a large number of unreported assaults as well, the head of the sex crimes unit of the Cleveland police department said yesterday.

"The thing that's frightening to me in all this is the number that's perhaps gone unreported," said Lt. Lucie Krause in discussing the department's search for the suspected rapist.

"My fear is that he's been more active than this has been indicating. I just hope we get him."

Lt. Krause said rape remains the most underreported violent crime, making it likely that a large number of attacks by the man have gone unreported.

She said the assailant is the only suspected mass rapist in the city.

"We've had a couple of instances where we've felt some person was good for three or four rapes," she said. "But if you're talking about this kind of numbers, I can't think of any."

Detective Pat Carr, a 26-year veteran of the force, said she can recall no other rapist going unapprehended over such a long period, and with so many victims.

CLEVELAND police have released a composite sketch of the assailant, whose last reported rape was in December.

He is described as white, 5-foot-7, 140 pounds, with an olive complexion, black or brown collar-length hair and brown eyes. He is soft-spoken and about 20 years old.

Police say he is suspected of rapes on the city's west side and in the southwest suburbs of Fairview Park, Middleburg Heights, North Olmsted, Parma and Parma Heights.

BG crushed by Hurons, 87-64

by Ron Fritz
assistant sports editor

YPSILANTI, Mich. - Bowling Green's basketball team's chances for the Mid-American Conference tournament are plummeting as quickly as its shooting percentage the past three games.

The Falcons shot just 38 percent from the field as Eastern Michigan buried BG 87-64 last night in Bowen Field House.

It was the Falcons' third straight loss to tie them for last place in the MAC with four other teams.

BG has managed to shoot just 36 and 42 percent in losses to Central Michigan and Ohio University.

"If you can't shoot, you aren't going to beat too many teams," Falcon coach John Weinert said. "And lately, we haven't been able to hit anything."

"We couldn't even have thrown a shot into Lake Erie, no, we couldn't even put one in Lake Superior, and it's bigger."

While BG couldn't hit the broad side of a barn with its shots, the Hurons blistered the nets at 66 percent.

"I was very pleased with our effort tonight," EMU coach Ben

"We couldn't even have thrown a shot into Lake Erie, no, we couldn't even put one in Lake Superior, and it's bigger."

— John Weinert, BG coach

Braun said. "Our defensive intensity made them shoot bad, which helped us get going for easy hoops on offense."

The Hurons jumped to a quick 10-2 lead with 16:07 remaining in the first half, but the Falcons battled back to tie the game 15-15 with 12:07 left.

However, the Hurons scored the next six points to take a 21-16 advantage. BG came back with six of its own to tie the game 21-21.

EMU took control of the game at the 3:32 left in the half as junior guard Lewis Scott keyed a Huron spurt. EMU outscored the Falcons 10-4 down the stretch to take a 41-33 lead into the locker room.

"I thought that was a big key for them," Weinert said. "We caught up with them and then suddenly we were down by eight going into the locker room."

Scott led the Hurons with 14 first-half points. EMU shot a sizzling 17 of 26 from the field in the half for 65 percent.

"Lewis gave us a big lift in the first half," Braun said. "He hit his shots and played excellent defense."

BG, on the other hand, made 13 of 36 shots for 36 percent in the initial period. Sophomore forward James Tyler came off the bench to score nine points.

In the second half, the Hurons picked up where they left off, scoring the first four points. EMU never looked back, increasing its lead with a number of slam dunks, alley oops and layups.

When the smoke cleared, the Hurons had stretched their advantage to 23 points.

Scott finished with a game-high 18 points to pace EMU. Junior Mike McCaskill and senior Percy Cooper chipped in with 15 points each. Sophomore Chuck King added 11 points.

"It was a total team effort," Braun said. "I hope the team realized it was a team effort which won the game and continue doing it."

After holding a 20-18 rebounding advantage in the first half, the Hurons out-rebounded the Falcons 26-9 in the second half and 46-27 for the game.

BG was led by sophomore center Steve Martenet's 16 points. Junior Jim Smith scored 15 points while Tyler finished with 11. Anthony Robinson scored 10 points for the Falcons.

Senior captain Brian Miller, BG's leading scorer with a 16.5 per game average, was held scoreless.

The Falcons and EMU are now tied with Kent State, Toledo and Central Michigan with 5-8 MAC marks.

AROUND THE MAC: League-leading Miami defeated Kent State 77-69 behind Eric Newsomes 37 points. Ron Harper added 18 markers. The Redskins are now 12-1 in MAC action.

Ervin Leavy hit a basket with two seconds remaining to give Central Michigan a 57-55 win over Toledo. Leavy also led all scorers with 24 points.

Marty Lehmann canned an 18-foot jumper with a second left which gave Ohio University a 63-61 triumph over Ball State.

Northern Illinois stopped Western Michigan 67-60.

Knight will remain at IU

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) - Memo from Indiana's Bob Knight to anyone else seeking his coaching services: Forget it.

The Hoosier coach said yesterday he has not applied for the coaching job at Ohio State, that he doesn't intend to apply there or anywhere else and that he will remain with the Hoosiers for the rest of his coaching career.

The statement by Knight, released through the Indiana sports information office, was prompted by a report by WEWS-TV of Cleveland. The station quoted an unidentified source on Tuesday as saying that Knight had applied to succeed Eldon Miller at Ohio State, Knight's alma mater.

"I think I've made my position on jobs clear for a long, long time," Knight said. "I haven't had an interest in another job since I've been here, and I certainly don't now."

"Since being at Indiana, I've never called anyone about a job, nor would I.

There have been times when people have called me about jobs, but as my position on staying here became clear to everyone, people haven't even done that recently.

"I THINK I've made it perfectly clear I intend to be here as long as I coach," Knight said.

Knight has been coach at Indiana since 1971. The Hoosiers have won two NCAA championships and one NIT crown under Knight.

Ohio State Athletic Director Rick Bay also said he has not talked to anyone about the job yet and dismissed the report as one of many rumors about the coaching position.

"I'm getting so many rumors that I just can't respond to them anymore," said Bay, contacted at his home in Columbus Tuesday night. "I hadn't talked to a single person about about this job yet."

Miller was fired as head coach last week, but he will finish the current season. He coached the Bucks for 10 years.

NBA star drug-free test shows

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) - Micheal Ray Richardson rejoined the New Jersey Nets yesterday after a drug test on which his NBA career hinged showed no trace of cocaine in his system.

Richardson, who has been plagued by cocaine dependency, flew to Cleveland immediately after the results of the drug screening were released by the league.

"I am happy for him," Lewis Schaffel, Nets executive vice president, said. "The problem is professional."

The latest scare in Richardson's career came Monday when he missed a team practice and failed to keep an appointment with team physical Dr. Dennis Quinlan. Nets officials did not locate him until a shoot-around Tuesday morning.

Schaffel suspended him for Tuesday night's game against Detroit, fined him, ordered a urinalysis and held his breath, hoping the guard had not run afoul of the NBA drug enforcement policy a third time which would have meant his ban from the league for life, with a possible re-instatement only with approval of the league and the union.

"I was sick, that's all there was," Richardson said in statement released by the club. "I know now I made a mistake by not going to the doctor. I guess every move I make will be scrutinized. I made my bed and I am going to have to lie in it."

"The sooner I feel 100 percent and can concentrate on playing basketball the better," Richardson said. "The only thing to worry about now is to help the Nets win."

Women slip past EMU

by Paul Silvi
sports reporter

YPSILANTI, Mich. - Bowling Green's women's basketball team shot 63 percent from the field, had five players in double figures, and outrebounced Eastern Michigan by 10.

Yet, it took some last second theatrics to slip by the Hurons 84-82 at Bowen Field House.

The Falcons led by eight points with 12:19 left in the game, but when the clock ticked down to :59, EMU had knotted the score at 81-81.

BG's Joelyn Shoup muscled in a rebound to put the Falcons up by two with 37 seconds remaining. The Hurons, however, got a break to keep them in the game.

With :07 left, Shoup hauled down a rebound, and had it knocked away into Paulette Backstrom's hands. BG's freshman then got bowled into the lower bleachers, and the official called Backstrom for traveling.

An incensed BG coach Fran Voll leaped off the bench looking for an explanation, and landed in a technical foul situation.

"I just stepped over the line (around the coach's box), and told the ref something to the effect that it wasn't a good call," Voll said.

EMU's JOANN LeFevre hit the free throw to bring the Hurons within one, still with seven seconds remaining.

EMU inbounded the ball looking for the winning bucket. LeFevre got the call again, but misfired, squelching the Hurons' chance for a come-from-behind victory.

"Both teams played great offensively, but I'm not too sure how good we played defensively," Voll said. "Eastern was on a roll, and for us to come up here after the loss (at Ohio University) and get the win, it shows a lot of character. Our kids answered the bell, and I think it's a tribute to the whole team."

Stephanie Coe led all scorers with 22 points. The senior forward missed just four field goals all night, and also managed a couple of charity tosses.

EMU coach Kathy Hart told Coe the Hurons couldn't use her talents.

"I'm naturally going to be up for a game against Eastern," Coe said. "It's always nice to let coach Hart know I'm doing all right."

Jackie Motycka hit for 17 points, while Rhonda Moore and Paulette Backstrom added 10 each.

SHOUP RETURNED to action a few games ago, but returned to true form against the Hurons. The BG captain had her best outing since coming back after an ankle injury, pumping home 13 points and cleaning the windows for 10 rebounds.

"I haven't been that offensive minded lately, and I haven't been getting the ball much," Shoup said. "I feel like I'm back in shape now, and I can play longer. I'm able to move better laterally."

EMU had six players in double figures; the only six that scored for the Hurons all game. Sharon Rose scored 15 points for EMU, and managed seven rebounds.

Renee Kudzia, Laura Nelson, and Sharon Brown each hit for 14 points, while Katie Nucci nailed down 12 for the Hurons.

"We got a great effort from our kids off the bench," Voll said. "We had to have a good Monday and Tuesday to get ready for today's game. That's a tribute to the kids off the bench."

Semicid, a vaginal contraceptive suppository, is an effective form of birth control that doesn't interrupt the mood. Because Semicid is so small and discreet, it's almost like using nothing at all.

There's no mess, no smell. No unpleasant taste. Nothing to remove. And it's available without a prescription.

And Semicid works. It contains the most effective contraceptive spermicide you can buy, nonoxonyl-9. And it has no hormones that can cause unpleasant side effects. One Semicid is approximately as effective as vaginal foam contraceptives in actual use, but is not as effective as the Pill or IUD. Ask your doctor about it. (Some Semicid users experience irritation in using the product. For best protection against pregnancy, follow package directions. And it's essential to insert Semicid at least fifteen minutes before intercourse.) If your doctor has told you that you should not become pregnant, ask your doctor if you can use Semicid.

Stop using messy, clumsy birth control methods. Try Semicid, and see how it can improve your love life.

Maleske could rebound for BG

In Wilson's Words

by Phillip B. Wilson
wire editor

Throughout my three years of watching Bowling Green basketball, I've noticed one major inconsistency that has plagued the team more than anything else.

I know that on a frequent basis they haven't scored as many points as their opponents. But seriously folks, there's one significant downfall.

The Falcons have needed a strong center.

Even during the days when Anderson Arena was blessed with the talents of Bill Faine, Colin Irish, and David Jenkins, head coach John Weinert's teams have lacked dominating "men in the middle."

This dilemma is even more magnified this year, in view of the fact that BG is 5-8 in the Mid-American Conference and fields one of the smallest teams in the league.

Before the next chapter of this roller coaster ride unfolds, I'll fill all of you in on something. There is hope for BG in finding the center they need and it doesn't involve the team attending church three times a week.

This hope... a little drumroll from the maestro please comes in the form of Mike Maleske, the all new Mike Maleske.

Two years ago, this forgotten Falcon freshman was the sixth man, but limited playing time always kept his point per game average around two.

Still, Maleske has sparked the Falcons in the past and against Ball State last year, he scored 10 points and grabbed two rebounds coming off the bench.

IN THE following game, Maleske, 6-7, 215 pounds, tried taking a charge from Miami's All-MAC forward Ron Harper when his knee popped, causing severe cartilage damage.

Maleske's left leg now sports a five inch scar on the inner portion of his knee cap and an additional three inch memoir on the outside.

Not only did the injury end his season, it ruined the two advantages the Detroit native previously had in his favor - speed and leaping ability.

Despite the immense difficulties, Maleske has kept his sense of humor.

"Back in Detroit, they used to call me the only white boy who could jump," he said. "Now, you can measure my vertical leap with a piece of cellophane."

But aside from Maleske's dry wise cracks and roommate Al Hughes's playful melodramatics (he frequently hums a few bars of the Six Million Dollar Man theme song) both are convinced he can help the Falcons next season.

I know his stats and sad stories aren't inducing any of you to rush to the Memorial Hall ticket office and purchase season tickets in advance. But as I said before, this is a different Mike Maleske.

OVER A TWO year span, I've never seen more of a physical change in any human being.

The "bruiser" has lived up to his nickname in the weight rooms and put on a lot of weight, most of it muscle although he admits to a pizza or two at Myles. At the end of fall semester, he was benching 300 pounds and weighed in at a hearty 260 pounds.

I realize he'll shed some of the weight when he starts to run (sometime this spring he says) but even at 240 pounds, I'm convinced he could be the strongest inside player the Falcons have had in a long time.

The only question in the minds of trainers is the knee.

Weinert said he doesn't know what Maleske's status will be next year with the new coach, mostly because of the rehabilitation.

But Maleske believes rehabilitation shouldn't be a problem. The knee is currently 82 percent, he said as quoted by his trainer, and believes it will be stronger than before the injury when therapy is completed.

EVEN IF the critics can accept that idea, I also understand those who say he won't be able to jump and is still too small.

Let's get one thing straight before any of you write Maleske off. If there is one thing I've learned from my own basketball experience, especially from watching the MAC, height and size are two way streets.

While he is not the tallest player in the world, Maleske will take up more space than most of the players he guards. If I were coach, I'd rather have a guy like him who can muscle it with anybody in the conference than a finesse 6'10" pogostick who can easily be blocked out of the paint.

Sure there will be some problems matching up, but there will be few players in the MAC who will be able to match his strength.

In his own defense, Maleske noted that stars like Harper, Kenny Battle of Northern Illinois, or Dan Palombizio of BSU will be gone next year. NIU is dropping out of the MAC and the other two will graduate.

Maleske said he's anxious to play with freshman guard Joe Gregory, a former high school opponent from their Motor City high school days.

Maleske plans to be a pilot after graduation. But hopefully he'll have a more important flight here first in trying to help the Falcons fly to a MAC championship.

One thing is for sure, only time will tell. In the meantime, why not think positive?

Falcons announce new grid recruits

Yesterday was the last day to sign national letters of intents for college football, ending the annual recruiting struggle for college coaches. Bowling Green, hoping to fill the void left by a plethora of graduating seniors, might be depending heavily on their incoming freshmen. The following is a list of high school seniors who have signed to play here next fall.

Harold Arrowsmith, Mentor Lake Catholic, 6-3, 260, OT; Rozell Winters, Cin. Forest Park, 6-0, 205, RB; Tony Lynch, Youngstown Rayen, 6-3, 245, T; Duane Crenshaw, Massillon, 6-2, 221, LB; Deon Allen, Lima Perry, 6-1, 200, RB; Mark Cumberledge, Lorain Admiral King, 6-3, 248, OL; Charles Dotson, Toledo

Waite, 6-0, 178, LB; Toy Eason, Flint (Mich.) Beecher, 6-4, 205, LB; Bill Horn, Sandusky, 6-5, 230, OT; Jim Howell, Perrysburg, 6-2, 201, RB; Keith Pace, Sandusky, 6-3, 190, LB; Allen Smith, Toledo DeVilbiss, 5-9, 162, DB; Rich Tracy, Bowling Green, 6-3, 190, QB; Carlton Williams, Detroit (Mich.)
