Influenza vaccines ordered

High-risk students urged to get shots

by Melissa McGillivray
staff reporter

For the many students who suffer from asthma, diabetes, heart disease or lung disease, a new type of flu virus could be more than just an inconvenience, Dr. Joshua Kaplan, director of Health Services, said yesterday.

The University's Health Center has ordered vaccines for the "Taiwan Flu," an illness that could be life-threatening to people under 35 who have any of the above conditions. Kaplan said he expects the vaccines to arrive in about two weeks.

Children and young adults with diabetes, chronic heart or lung disease, and asthma, are in high- or moderate-risk groups and should definitely get the vaccine, he said.

People who take care of high-risk persons should also be vaccinated, along with users of medication that suppresses the body's natural immunization system.

However, people who are not in high- or moderate-risk groups will not be able to receive the vaccine, he said. These people can catch the "Taiwan Flu," but it will not affect them any differently than another type of flu, he said.

People over 35 years old are usually immune to the illness.

THE VACCINE will not be available to people who just want to make sure they don't contract the flu, he said.

"There's just not enough of it for that. There is a somewhat limited supply through the department of health," he said.

Because the vaccine is new, there is a limited supply available, he said. Two of the three manufacturers of the vaccine are already out of it, he said.

Kaplan said he became aware of the situation about three days ago. Students had been calling the county health department to receive the vaccine, but the department does not give it out. That is when Kaplan decided to order the vaccine for the Student Health Center, he said.

The flu spread to the United States last August, he said, after a serious outbreak in Asia. Six cases have been reported in the United States as of Nov. 7.

"The flu season is earlier in Asia," he said. "But the flu

U.T. trustees OK price for property

by Ron Fritz
managing editor

The University of Toledo board of trustees yesterday approved the sale of its 50 percent interest in the former J. Preston Levis Regional Computer Center to the University for $237,500.

Fred Mollenkopf, UT public information officer, said there was no opposition to the sale from the eight trustees who were at the meeting.

The sale of the property, which is located in Perrysburg Township off of Ohio 25 in the Levis Industrial Park, was first approved by the UT trustees in 1984 and negotiations on the price have been going on since then.

Richard Eakin, vice president of planning and budgeting at the University, said the price was based on an appraisal of the property.

He also said he was pleased that the sale was finally approved.

"It's good to hear," Eakin said. "This is the final step in a number of steps that had been taken for us to secure the property."

Eakin said the University plans to use the property to store library materials.

"It allows us to make more use of our library space," he said. "The Great Lakes collection had already been moved there and that will be the site of that collection."

"We're absolutely delighted that the sale is complete and I'm sure the University of Toledo is also."

— Richard Eakin

Rush Miller, dean of libraries, said the Institute for Great Lakes Research collection moved to the Perrysburg site from the sixth floor of Jerome Library during the last two weeks of September and early October.

He said the approval by the UT trustees makes the move official.

"The Great Lakes collection is one of the major research centers of its kind in the world," Miller said. "It's an open collection for people to do research on the Great Lakes."

The computer center was established in 1972 by the two universities, using a state grant.

The Levis Center at one time housed the computer facilities for both schools, Eakin said. The city of Toledo and the Criminal Justice Coordinating Council also used the facility.

However, in 1982, both universities decided that it would be more effective and efficient to move their computer facilities on-campus.

"It evolved into each university needing to house its own facility on-campus," Eakin said. Mollenkopf said the center eventually had no use as a computer facility to UT.

"We needed to move our computer facilities on-campus and the city moved (its computers) to Government Center downtown," he said. "I assume that since it (Levis Center) is closer to Bowling Green (than it is to UT), it will be more accessible to them."

The proceeds from the sale will be used to further develop UT's present on-campus computer facilities, Mollenkopf said. Eakin said the sale will benefit both universities.

"We needed the space for library storage and the University of Toledo didn't really have a use for it," Eakin said. "We're absolutely delighted that the sale is complete and I'm sure the University of Toledo is also."

Charges filed against adult bookstore owners

TOLEDO (AP) — The Lucas County prosecutor used a new tactic in his fight against pornography yesterday, filing civil lawsuits to close 11 adult bookstores in Toledo.

Prosecutor Anthony Pizza says he did not file criminal obscenity charges against the owners because criminal charges have been proven to be ineffective. Pornography peddlers have no incentive to get out of the business by criminal proceedings against them because the penalties, if any, do not deter them economically.

Rather than being found guilty on an obscenity charge, the store owners are convicted of disorderly conduct or other minor offenses, he said. "We are looking for a more effective deterrent than that."

His latest tack is to have the stores closed down as public nuisances.

Pizza said the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in a Buffalo, N.Y. case that closing down adult bookstores as public nuisances does not violate constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech and freedom of expression.

Defendants in criminal obscenity cases often argue that the material they sell is protected by those constitutional guarantees.

"With the Supreme Court allowing the bookstore in Buffalo, N.Y., to be closed, the court held there was not a (constitutional) violation. You can close it down and not violate the First Amendment rights if they violate our particular charges here."

Pizza is seeking preliminary injunctions to close the stores for a year. The lawsuits, filed in Lucas County Common Pleas Court, name the operators of the stores and owners of the buildings.

He said the action is similar to one he took against a fireworks maker, in which the Ohio Supreme Court in June upheld the use of public nuisance laws to stop sales of illegal fireworks.

A spokesman for the American Civil Liberties Union in Toledo said the court action is a ploy.

"That's just a smokescreen they're using to close them down without using obscenity as the reason for closing them down," said Sandy Craig, spokesman for the ACLU. "The right to sell pornography is permitted under the Constitution. That should not be denied."

"They're dealing in magazines that are obscene under both Ohio law and the interpretation of the U.S. Supreme Court," Pizza said. The businesses sell extremely hard-core pornography not found in other stores, he said.

French fear higher price for hostages

PARIS (AP) — Joy over the release of two French hostages held in Lebanon was tempered yesterday by speculation that the kidnappers, Iran or Syria may raise the price of freedom for those who remain.

The return home Tuesday of Camille Sontag, 85, and Marcel Coudari, 54, brought to five the number of French captives Shiite Moslem fundamentalists have freed this year.

At least five still are held. Coudari corroborated previous reports that a sixth French kidnap victim may be dead.

In each release, the hostages passed through Damascus, capital of Syria. Premier Jacques Chirac has called Syria "the obligatory passageway to any solution to the Lebanese crisis."

Iran is an equally important factor, commentators said yesterday.

"Chirac Fulfilled the Conditions Set out by the Damascus-Tehran Axis," was the headline in Le Matin, a Socialist-leaning daily.

Le Matin compared the freeing of hostages to a banking transaction in which two signatures are necessary: Syria and Iran.

The pro-government daily Le Figaro commented: "It is clear that, to obtain freedom for the other hostages, one must again pay the pound of flesh. At what level? We do not know. Blackmail? No doubt."

CHIRAC'S GOVERNMENT denies negotiating to free the Frenchmen and insists that its Middle East policy is not being determined by the hostage situation.

Iran and Syria praised France's Middle East policy after the kidnappers released Sontag and Coudari.

France is normalizing relations with Iran. It recently agreed to pay $330 million to settle a dispute over a $1 billion loan made to France by the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, who was ousted in 1979 by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's fundamentalist Shiite revolution.

Sontag and Coudari were

Journalist speaks on S. Africa

Author addresses racial struggle, economic problems, starvation

by Jared O. Wadley
copy editor

World problems do not disappear when they're not covered regularly on television news programs, said a Washington, D.C. journalist and author last night.

In his program titled "The United States Presence in the South African Region: Strategic versus Economic Interest," William Minter spoke about the racial problems in South Africa at the Off-Campus Student Center.

Minter, who has been to South Africa twice, said the problem is that a small group wants to monopolize the power and wealth in South Africa on the basis of a racist ideology.

"The group will continue excluding the majority from their rights until they realize that they can't do it anymore," he said.

Minter has written King Solomon's Mines Revisited, which depicts today's crisis in South Africa.

He said one of the things the book focuses on is how South Africa and its American and European allies responded in the 1960s and 1970s to rising African nationalism.

Minter said he became involved with the South African situation in the mid-'60s after he met some people who told him that America was involved in the problem.

He said his goal is to help in the South African struggle by helping people become aware of the problems.

Minter said he visited South Africa during 1966-68 and 1974-76. In 1966, he and his ex-wife taught secondary school in Tanzania—north of Mozambique.

In his program, sponsored by the African People's Association, he also presented Killing a Dream, a movie about the lives of the Mozambicans.

According to Minter, Mozambique, located on the southeastern coast of Africa, is a country slightly larger than California and Oregon combined.

He said it receives military supplies and oil from the Soviet Union, but the country still

University needs class in cultural diversity

At an institution of higher learning, there is no excuse for ignorance.

And the existence of racial myths and prejudices in our society indicates there are people who are ignorant of the heritage, customs and lifestyles of others around them.

So in 1983, the University Human Relations Commission recommended that all students successfully complete a course in American cultural diversity.

The Undergraduate Council, headed by Dr. Eloise Clark, vice president of academic affairs, is presently considering the proposal and we urge the council to speed its implementation.

Courses of this type would help students obtain a better understanding of blacks, Hispanics and other ethnic minorities, and to develop increased respect for the differences in their lifestyles.

By virtue of having a predominantly white student body, there seems to be little value placed upon the appreciation of other ethnic groups at the University.

To illustrate this, programs developed by student organizations to accomplish this goal frequently suffer from lack of interest and low attendance.

Now, one required course is not going to solve all the problems people have in dealing with others different from them.

But in the process of learning at the University, a better knowledge of the individual differences among the student body would be more relevant on a day-to-day basis than, say, the works of Henry David Thoreau and John Molloy.

Undergraduate enrollment of black and Hispanic minorities at the University has declined by over 50 percent since the late 1970s.

And it would seem to reason that part of the blame for the declining enrollment has to do with the climate of understanding - or a lack thereof.

A required class in cultural diversity will help to enhance interpersonal relations and improve the atmosphere for the majority and the minority.

Big Mo swings to the left

by Mike Royko

Does anybody remember Big Mo? Sure you do. He was a character who was introduced to America by George Bush in 1980.

That's when Bush hoped to be the Republican candidate for president, and after every primary he would prattle about how Big Mo - whose full name is Mo Mentum - was behind him.

As it turned out, Big Mo was with Ronald Reagan, no matter what he said or did. With Big Mo behind him, Reagan could do no wrong, even when he didn't know what he was doing.

At least that's the way it was until Tuesday, when the Democrats took control of the U.S. Senate.

It happened so suddenly and decisively that I had to wonder: Had Big Mo abandoned Reagan?

So I went outside, put a wet finger in the air to see which way the wind was blowing, and, sure enough, I soon found Big Mo sitting on a park bench.

What's up? I asked him.

"I assume that you're talking about Tuesday?" he said.

Of course. It looks to me like you have changed loyalties.

He shook his head. "That's because you don't understand. Sure, I, Big Mo, was with Reagan. But that doesn't mean I'm with all those other characters."

You mean the Republican senators who were beaten?

"Sure. They were on their own."

But what about the rest of the Republican Party?

"Look, I don't have time to mess around with every rinky-dink in a blue suit and a powdered tie who goes on 'Meet the Press.'"

So it was only Reagan all along?

"You got it. And now it's time for me to start looking around for someone else."

I see. You're already looking ahead to '88.

"Sure. It takes me, Big Mo, a while to build up a head of steam. It's not like in the old days, before TV and primaries, when I could save my energy for a convention. Now I have to hoof around New Hampshire with all those mopes."

Then give me a tip. Who's it going to be? Dole? Bush? Kemp? Laxalt? Robertson?

He shook his head. "Forget it."

But what other Republicans are there?

"Who says Big Mo has got to be a Republican? I'm non-partisan."

You mean it could be a Democrat?

He leaned forward. "Let me tell you a secret. I'm not a leader. I'm a follower."

I get it. You were with Reagan because you thought he was a winner.

"Right. I looked at him and told myself, this guy has got it. When he talks, people listen, even if he's not really saying anything. When he makes a speech, he can bring a lump to your throat, a tear to your eye, and he doesn't look like he used a blow dryer on his hair."

What does a blow dryer have to do with it?

"Blow dryers are out. Big Mo is never going with anybody who tries to look and talk like a cousin of the Kennedy clan."

Then that rules out most of the Democrats.

"Not all of them. There's one Democrat who has everything Reagan has - that jump-in-the-throat, tear-in-the-eye sincerity. The fatherly manner. And he's got something that Reagan never had. Brains. Of course, Reagan never really needed any. In politics, if you've got charisma, you can always hire brains."

So, tell me, who is the ideal Democrat?

"Mario Cuomo."

You've got to be kidding. Sure, he's dynamite on TV. He looks mature and strong. But what about ideology? It's just the opposite of Reagan's."

"Forget ideology. The Democrats have wised up. They've picked over the Republican ideology and are taking what they can use themselves. Their mainstream ideology is not going to be much different than the Republicans' mainstream ideology. And they're not going to let themselves get McGoverned or Mondaled again. At their next convention, all the extremist special-interest whackos are going to be stashed in the back row or standing in the alley. It's the Republicans who are going to have those problems."

Republican extremists?

"Sure. You know what the single most powerful group in the Republican party is today?

The religious fundamentalists. Wait'll they really get going, giving everybody the fish-eye who they suspect of being a humanist, and saying that it's sinful for a kid to see 'The Wizard of Oz' because only God could give the Cowardly Lion courage. I mean, how would you like to be a Republican candidate when the litmus test is whether you think the Tin Man could have a heart?"

It would be an interesting campaign issue.

"Sure. Can you see Bush trying to take a position on whether the Straw Man could have a brain?"

He might be able to speak from personal experience.

"See, the four biggest problems that the Republicans are going to have are: 1) most Americans aren't fundamentalists and don't want anybody sticking religious views down their throats; 2) the Republicans don't have anybody who looks like Reagan or sounds like Reagan, and millions of people voted for Reagan because he was Reagan, not because he was a Republican; 3) most of the issues from six years ago aren't going to be issues in 1988, and 4) the Democrats will finally have a candidate who looks and sounds like a grown-up."

So Big Mo is going to be with Cuomo. You know, that will break Bush's heart.

"Maybe the Wizard of Oz will give him a new one."

Letters

How to make a difference

Mary Menuez' column, "Demonstrations all show," reminded me that our valid concerns sometimes get lost in the translation to action. One of the questions her column raised seemed to be "How can we constructively confront the really 'putrid issues' of our times - apartheid, rape, and nuclear armament?"

Those are her words and examples. We would add U.S.-sponsored terrorism in Central America, the erosion of our civil rights and a free press which seems to have abdicated its role as government watchdog. We believe that viable alternatives for action do exist.

For example, you can write letters to elected officials and foreign governments, help to organize a speakers' series on peace issues, participate in a study group or reading group to become more informed, and attend USG, UAO and GSS meetings to express your interest in addressing these issues. You can do all or any of the above, depending upon your interests and the skills you want to develop.

One individual working in conjunction with other individuals can make a tremendous difference.

The Bowling Green Peace Coalition, the Social Justice Committee, Amnesty International and other groups are working on these issues right now. Watch the newspapers and the Green Sheet for announcements of their activities, or get their phone numbers from the Student Organization Handbook and support them.

You will soon discover that people who are concerned about apartheid, nuclear armaments, human rights, women's issues, gay/lesbian rights and intervention in Central America are not a small, radical minority on this campus as The Bowling Green Review would have us all believe. Please, make your voice heard.

Finally, we want to commend Menuez for caring enough to participate in the "Die In," even if she isn't happy with the experience in retrospect. Translating your concerns into constructive participation isn't easy and it takes more than a little nerve to stand up for your convictions. However, a supportive network is growing on this campus for those who want to do just that. If you want to become involved, it's there.

Frosh missed the point

During the past couple of weeks BG News columnist Mary Menuez has angered at least 11 readers, and one could safely assume that others have been upset. All this wrath has been kindled by one little column (Oct. 30) poking fun at freshmen. Yesterday I read what appeared to be a very earnest, point-by-point refutation of Menuez's lampoon, and I knew that I had to write this letter.

I am both amazed and amused by the passionate rebuttals these recent letter writers have felt compelled to write. These people seemingly have missed the point of Menuez's column - to self-consciously create a caricature of Bowling Green freshmen for the purpose of amusing her readers, including the very freshmen she was ostensibly demeaning.

Put simply, it was all in fun, folks. Anyone who read the second paragraph of her column should realize that she could just as easily have defended the freshmen, but chose instead to embellish a funny stereotype.

I hope that the indignant responses inspired by that column will draw curious readers to Menuez's delightful irreverence every Thursday. She is the best thing to hit The BG News' editorial page since Craig Hergert first put his talents to work here.

Menuez is not out to get freshmen ... alone. Anyone is fair game, it seems; that's what makes reading her so much fun. Grad students next, Mary?

Vandalism ridiculous

Why people feel free to destroy the little beautification done to this campus is beyond me. I am writing in response to the article printed in The BG News Tuesday, November 4; "Vandals damage chimneys."

I find it absolutely thoughtless and ridiculous that anyone would damage one of the few beautification projects the University has sponsored in my four years at Bowling Green.

Aside from the legal punishment one can receive from such destruction, the mere act of destroying a piece of artwork that was constructed to enhance our campus is incomprehensible to me. I would think people could find something more stimulating to do on the weekend besides bending wind chimes.

Fishing for liberals

by Robert Silverman

I'd like to be the first to congratulate The Bowling Green Review for their successful fishing expedition of the last two months. Their masterful skills turned in a catch that is enough to make any serious angler's mouth water. And I am one. I honestly tip my hat to their showing.

They've reminded me of the lesson I learned when my father took me fishing to Canada when I was a boy: The fresher the catch, the better the taste. And boy were The Review's hooks pulling in fresh-caught fish after they set their September bait. And I'll bet more than one hooked fish is still wiggling.

In September's issue of The Bowling Green Review, if the readers will remember, was printed a presumably honest account concerning the distribution of student fees. And The Review is absolutely right: All students should know about this distribution.

But those sneaky anglers knew they couldn't attract any juicy liberal lips with dull statistics, so they added a few wormy quips about why some student organizations were worthless and shouldn't receive any money. And they printed a potentially funny joke, given the right circumstances, about who should lead at a gay dance. Better bait does not exist.

It's a perfect image. Imagine if you will the writers of The Review sitting with their feet up, wearing brown caps full of hooks and lures. A cooler full of cold beers keeps them company as they wait in anticipation for the school of fish just under the surface to start biting, as they watch for the bobbers to start going down, for the letters to start screaming in.

What a feeling that must have been. Only professional fisherman could have known their opponent as well. I'm serious. This is mastery at work, and mastery is something we can all learn from. After all, BGSU is a learning institution.

But the setting of the bait was only half of the skill in this encounter we have all been privy to. The second half was knowing how to come out on top and The Review was all ready with the First Amendment rights of free speech as a defense.

The October issue of The Review printed some of the letters that besieged them after their September bait was set. Predictably, these letters called them "racist," "sexist," and "homophobic." The Review editorial replied that they were upset about the letters, that those who called them names were narrow-minded, but that they, at The Review, had every right to print any opinion they wanted to. And they are right. Everybody, on any side of a political issue, has the right to free speech.

While name-calling is usually ugly no matter which direction it comes from, it does appear, however, from this example, that sometimes it can be just enough to bait the hooks.

Silverman is a teaching fellow in creative writing in the English Department.

Early gift sends two home for holidays

Sig Eps help fly couple to Montana

by John Meola
staff reporter

Going home for Christmas is as much a part of the Christmas tradition as Santa Claus. However, some University students cannot go home because money to travel is not available to them.

Such was the case for Mike and Marcy Gill, both from Montana. Mike is from Great Falls and Marcy is from Livingston. Marcy's parents currently live in Alaska.

But the Gills will fly to Montana for Christmas break after all, courtesy of the members of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity.

The Gills were married in June and live in the Sigma Phi Epsilon house. Marcy, a graduate student majoring in college student personnel, is the house mother for the fraternity. Mike is a senior majoring in graphic design. He is not a member of the fraternity but lives in the house because Marcy lives there as part of her duties.

The couple wanted to go home for the holidays, but by the time they began looking for airline tickets, the prices had risen to the point where they could not afford them.

"MY WIFE was pretty bummed out so she went and talked to some of the guys in the house about it," Mike said.

He had decided that instead of going to Montana, they should spend Christmas with his grandmother in Tifton, Georgia.

But for Mike, it would not be like years past.

"I always go home for Christmas, so it would be pretty strange to be somewhere else during Christmas," he said.

When the residents of the house heard about the couple's difficulties, they decided they would help their house director and her husband get home for the holidays.

All 117 members of the fraternity got together and contributed money.

When the money was collected, the fraternity contacted travel agents in the area. Many of the travel agents had difficulty locating flights to Montana, according to Doug Ruch, secretary for the Sig Eps and the person in charge of raising the money for the couple's Christmas journey.

However, one travel agent was able to locate a flight leaving from Detroit on Dec. 21 to Great Falls.

Ruch said that the fraternity helped Mike and Marcy make the trip home because of what the two have done for the fraternity.

"They've done a lot for the house and the morale of the members, so we decided to give them this trip," he said.

Student changes lifestyle to beat diabetes

Editor's note: The subject of this article requested that his last name be withheld.

by Beth Murphy
copy editor

A brown paper bag was instrumental in helping Scott realize he had diabetes.

He and a friend were looking at a grocery bag with the disease's symptoms listed on it.

"I kept pointing to them - I've got that one, and that one, and that one..." Then it kind of hit me," he said.

It's been about a month and a half since Scott walked into the University's Student Health Center for testing and walked out with a diagnosis of diabetes. At that point he was overweight, drank heavily and was leading a relatively reckless life. But he was having fun.

"I've become very boring now," he said in his incessantly joking tone. "I can't do anything that I'd like to do."

Some of those things that he used to like to do included "hanging around in bars for days" and "going to parties and drinking lots of beer." Although his diet forbids it, he still empties a few on weekends, a mere shadow of his 12-pack-a-day habit last summer. "I think I had a problem back then," he concluded, reflecting on the "Coors cases" days.

"I think it's your God's way of saying 'Cut it out!' I don't believe in God, but I suppose somebody could rationalize it that way. Maybe it was either slow down this way or slow down into a brick wall doing 80 mph."

WITH DIABETES the body cannot use sugar normally, so it builds up in the blood. Scott has Type II diabetes that occurs in adults and is the form that affects 80 percent to 85 percent of all diabetics, according to U.S. News & World Report. Type I is juvenile diabetes and is more serious.

Scott doesn't require insulin injections but takes a Diabeta pill once a day. A change in diet was also necessary. Salads and fruits replace fried foods and "anything good" like Burger King feasts, Scott said.

The 22-year-old sophomore finance major said he suspected he had the disease because he became more aware of its symptoms after his 24-year-old brother learned he had diabetes four years ago.

"When I lost 50 some pounds in four months, I knew something was wrong," he said. "There are other signs, like always being thirsty; no matter how much you drink you're always thirsty."

Other symptoms mentioned in a U.S. News & World Report article include irritability, being easily tired, itchy skin, tingling or numbness in hands or feet, slow healing of cuts and blurred vision.

Although his lifestyle has taken a drastic turn due to diabetes, he admits he feels better physically.

"I'm so much healthier than I used to be it's unbelievable. Now I can run. Before I could go up a flight of stairs and say 'Where's the oxygen?' Now I can play racquetball and beat my athletic friends," he said.

BUT THE BOUT with diabetes has just begun for Scott. He joins the 6.5 million Americans known to be afflicted with diabetes and the estimated 5.5 million others who are estimated to unknowingly have it, according to Fortune magazine. It also stated about 300,000 Americans die each year from the disease.

Scott knows the disease is a progressive illness, but a smile appeared as he quipped, "It always gets worse, but who knows. We're having fun right now."

Greeks 'set' tournament

Volleyball games to aid charity

by John Meola
staff reporter

University greeks and independents alike will be spiking, setting, dinking and bumping this weekend in the Racquet Room at the Student Recreation Center to benefit a liberal arts college for the deaf.

Delta Zeta sorority and Theta Chi fraternity will have their annual volleyball tournament this Saturday starting at 10 a.m.

The event has taken place for the last eight years. However, this is the first year that the Theta Chis have co-sponsored the event, according to Donna Gretz, the chairperson of the volleyball tournament.

Another first for the tournament is a Happy Hours at Howard's Club H bar from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. The Happy Hours will be open to everyone, and will feature the band Loved by Millions. Toledo radio station WIOT will broadcast from the bar between 5 p.m. and 8 p.m.

There are 32 teams participating in the event, representing both on-campus and off-campus groups. Five of the teams are independent. Gretz said that the sorority is looking for more independent teams to become involved.

"(The tournament) is the biggest it's ever been because it's not an all-greek event," Gretz said.

Gretz said that proceeds from the tournament will benefit Gallaudet University in Washington, D.C., a liberal arts school for deaf and hearing-impaired people.

Dry Dock hits rough seas

by Susan McDonald
staff reporter

Although the past few weekends for Dry Dock have been considered a success because of large student turnout, the bar still faces financial problems because food sales are low.

University Food Operations is under contract to sell food and beverages at the University's first non-alcoholic bar, located in the Mid-Am Room in the basement of Harshman Quadrangle. But Food Operations may bow out because there are not enough people buying its products.

Dave Fried, complex coordinator of Harshman Quadrangle and advisor to the Dry Dock Advisory Board, said that the state mandates that any food service venture Food Operations is involved in, including on-campus operations such as Berries Restaurant in Harshman Quadrangle or the Amani in the Northeast Commons, has to be a break-even venture.

So far, the Dry Dock has not been such a venture.

Dave Maley, manager of Harshman Dining Hall, said about $500 would have to be made per night for Food Operations to break even.

Kim Meyer, Undergraduate Student Government representative to the Dry Dock Advisory Board, said that $335 in sales were made last week. Exact figures for the other two nights the bar has been open are not available.

"If there is not enough interest in Dry Dock, we still have to pay the expenses, and if this gets into a deficit situation, we will pull out," Maley said. "The department (Food Operations) would be glad to be involved as long as it didn't lose any money since there is no money to lose in a break-even situation."

Art Willhite, president of Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students (BACCHUS) and chairman of the Dry Dock committee, said he does not believe Dry Dock will close, even if Food Operations pulls out.

"As long as people take an interest in what we're doing, we will be open," he said. "I think it is going to grow a lot larger."

Fried said the bar has averaged more than 300 customers per night.

"That's certainly a success when you look at the numbers," he said.

Willhite said, "I don't know of any other function on campus that brings as many people in per week."

Maley said even more students are needed to increase sales. Heavy promotion of the social and entertainment aspects of the bar must be done in order to attract more students, he said.

"The food is not going to pull people in," he said.

Willhite said he was still hopeful that food sales would get better.

"As long as we can get a number of people, we can increase sales," he said.

Vaccine

season hasn't started here yet."

The "Taiwan Flu" caused several epidemics in this country between the 1930s and 1950s, he said. Thus, people who were around at that time seem to have developed an immunity to illness, he said.

"PEOPLE OVER 35 seem to be protected," he said. "However, the people under 35 were never exposed."

Small epidemics in 1977, 1978 and 1979 in this country affected only children and young adults, he said.

Besides the health center, private doctors in town also give the "Taiwan Flu" vaccine, he said. The health center does not carry the regular flu vaccine, so those wishing to receive a regular flu vaccine should go to the county health department.

People who are not already vaccinated against the regular flu should receive that vaccination at the same time they receive the "Taiwan Flu" vaccination, he said.

The "Taiwan Flu" vaccination is available at the University's Health Center for $2.

Hostages

freed in Beirut on Monday, the day European Common Market foreign ministers met in London to take measures against Syria for its alleged support of terrorism.

Those adopted included an embargo on arms sales to Syria, which gets nearly all its weapons from the Soviet Union, and an end to high-level official visits.

France would not accept stronger sanctions. Those originally proposed by Britain, which broke relation with Syria last month, were diluted.

LE MONDE SAID in an editorial: "It is difficult not to think that the day when someone wants to get some new concessions out of us, assuming all the hostages are by then freed, there will be nothing left to do but take others."

Corporate raids opposed

WASHINGTON (AP) - Akron Mayor and newly elected Congressman Tom Sawyer launched an offensive yesterday to focus national attention on hostile corporate takeovers.

The move stems from Sir James Goldsmith's reported takeover attempt of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. Goldsmith, a British businessman, has bought up 11.5 percent of the Akron-based company's stock.

The takeover threat has touched off a beehive of activity in Akron, where residents have been encouraged to buy up Goodyear stock themselves.

Sawyer is the area's new congressman, succeeding retiring Rep. John Seiberling, D-Ohio.

"Goodyear... has almost become vulnerable to this kind of hostile takeover as a product of its willingness to invest in the long term as opposed to providing the quick short-term profit that someone like Goldsmith traditionally has looked for," Sawyer said during a television appearance on "The CBS Morning News."

By allowing Goodyear to be taken over, he said, the country runs the risk of losing productive and strategic capability.

SAWYER SAID he is organizing a teleconference with officials from more than 50 communities in 37 different states in which Goodyear has major plant installations.

Today's teleconference, which is to be directed from New York City, is expected to involve business, labor and government officials.

Sawyer said the move is an "attempt to bring the combined force of leverage and authority and public opinion all across this country to bear on the kind of problem we face as a nation - whether we're going to allow our productive capacity to be stripped in the name of short-term profit-taking."

Sawyer also is scheduled to testify next week before the House Judiciary Committee, which is conducting a hearing on corporate takeovers.

"My hope is that it (the hearing) will both flush out some of the intended directions (of Goldsmith) and portray in a national setting some of the consequences both of his action and the potential response of a government" that will not allow productive capacity to be stripped from the country, he said.

Sawyer said he hopes that a combination of legislation and existing laws can be used to address the takeover problem.

Proposal might allow Tribe move by 1992

CLEVELAND (AP) - The Cleveland Indians front office has refused comment on reports that the team could be moved or sold to out-of-town buyers by 1992 under terms of a purchase proposal by two local developers.

Indians Chairman Patrick O'Neill will, however, make himself available today to the media to answer questions about the deal, Indians spokesman Rich Minch said yesterday. Other than that, Minch said, there would be no comment.

The report in yesterday's editions of The Cleveland Plain Dealer said that the proposal to sell the baseball franchise to Richard and David Jacobs guarantees that the team would remain in Cleveland at least five years.

The two brothers, who are shopping mall developers, are natives of northeast Ohio and have said they would not move the team out of town. O'Neill has said he would not sell to anyone planning to move it.

Richard Jacobs was not immediately available for comment, the secretary at his office in suburban Westlake said.

The reported lack of a longer commitment has raised concern about the future of a proposed domed stadium.

CUYAHOGA COUNTY Commissioner Timothy Hagan said domed stadium officials had expected to obtain a long-term commitment from the Jacobses, and he said commissioners would not proceed with a tax to pay for the dome without such a commitment.

"This absolutely stuns me," he said. "I'm sure it also stuns a lot of people with the (Greater Cleveland) Domed Stadium Corporation who were operating under the premise that the Jacobs brothers were willing to make a long-term commitment to keep the Indians in Cleveland."

A previous proposal to sell the Indians to attorney David LeFevre had contained assurances that the franchise would remain in Cleveland for at least 15 years. LeFevre, however, withdrew his offer in November 1984 because of litigation by minority stockholders who opposed the deal.

"There is no way we commissioners will go forward with a tax proposal until this is resolved with the Jacobses... until we get a long-term commitment from the Jacobses," Hagan said. "I'm not necessarily wedded to 20 years, but I surely would reject out of hand a commitment of only five years."

The newspaper reported previously that the proposal would be ratified today by IBC Corp., the managing general partner of the team.

Drug aids Alzheimer's patients

BOSTON (AP) - An experimental drug for Alzheimer's disease significantly improved the memories of 16 of 17 senile people treated in a study, and may be the first effective therapy for this devastating illness of old age, a researcher says.

Elderly people who did not know their sons and daughters or even their own names were able to recognize their families again after taking the pills. One less severely affected man went back to work part time. A retiree who before could barely speak took up daily golf again, while another victim resumed driving, cooking and cleaning her house.

"If this is validated, I think we will have our first viable treatment for Alzheimer's," said Dr. William Summers, who directed the study.

The drug is not available for routine use. It cannot be prescribed by physicians. Until researchers learn more about it, the medicine will be given only to small numbers of people enrolled in carefully controlled studies.

Summers, an assistant professor at the University of California, Los Angeles, based his conclusions on the treatment of people with moderate to severe Alzheimer's senility.

"Of these 17," Summers said, "four of them got dramatically better, seven got clearly better and five of them got better to anybody's eye."

SUMMERS SAID that his findings are encouraging but still preliminary, and he stressed that the drug does not cure Alzheimer's disease. Instead, it eases the symptoms of the disease, much as insulin controls diabetes or L-dopa relieves Parkinson's disease.

The results were published in today's New England Journal of Medicine, along with an editorial by Dr. Kenneth Davis, an Alzheimer's expert at Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York.

In an interview, Davis was cautious about the drug's potential.

It's not "a golden bullet," he said. "I do think this drug will help some people, and there is a market for it. I see it as a short, rational step" toward controlling Alzheimer's disease.

He noted that similar drugs have failed to produce dramatic results, and he suggested that Summers' findings might result from fortunate selection of study subjects and careful monitoring of the patients' drug levels.

Immigration to alter U.S.

Minority population may become majority by 2080

WASHINGTON (AP) - If changes in U.S. immigration laws fail to stem the current flow of aliens, a population group said yesterday, Hispanics, Asians and blacks could account for more than half of all Americans a century from now. "If illegal immigration remains high and annual immigration averages 1 million, the non-Hispanic white population would drop to just under 50 percent in 2080," said the new study by the private, non-profit Population Reference Bureau.

The report, "Immigration to the U.S.: The Unfinished Story," was written by Leon Bouvier, a population researcher who is a former vice president of the bureau, and Robert Gardner, a research associate at the East-West Population Institute in Honolulu.

"The nation must once again redefine itself," Bouvier and Gardner said.

The 1980 Census counted 226.5 million Americans, of which 79.9 percent were whites other than Hispanics. The Census said 11.7 percent of Americans were black, 6.4 percent were Hispanic and 2.0 percent were Asians and others.

At current high immigration rates, totaling 1 million annually counting both legal and illegal aliens, the non-Hispanic whites could shrink to 49.8 percent of the population by the year 2080 - becoming "the largest minority in a nation without any ethnic majority population."

AT THAT time, Hispanics would make up 23.4 percent of the nation, having surpassed blacks as the second largest group in 2010. Blacks would be 14.7 percent of the population and Asians and others 12.1 percent.

A new immigration reform law was passed this year providing amnesty for many people who arrived illegally in the past, but imposing employer sanctions and other provisions in the hope of stemming the future flow of illegal arrivals.

Even so, economic pressures continue to build in many developing nations, with lack of jobs and prospects for work forcing many people to consider emigration to other places - particularly the United States.

At the same time that immigration continues at high levels, the nation's birth rate is low, the authors said.

Since 1982 the fertility rate of American women has been below the 2.1 children per woman needed to keep the population constant over the long term.

Swiss miss timing in toxic alert

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP)—Switzerland conceded yesterday to top officials from countries along the Rhine River that a misunderstanding delayed an international alert for 24 hours after a disastrous toxic spill from a chemical plant fire.

Swiss President Alphonse Egli told the meeting that Switzerland was ready to discuss damage claims by countries affected and that he hoped they could be settled without legal action, said a West German delegation spokesman.

The spokesman spoke on condition of anonymity.

About 30 tons of agricultural chemicals—insecticides, herbicides and mercury-containing fungicides—washed into the Rhine on Nov. 1 when firefighters doused a blaze at a Sandoz chemical plant warehouse near Basel, Switzerland, and caused an environmental crisis.

A 25-mile-long slick of chemicals drifted downstream along the 820-mile Rhine, killing fish and endangering drinking water.

Disabled adults hired

NEWTON, Mass. (AP)—More than 87,000 of America's most severely disabled adults were placed in jobs in 1984 and 1985, earning about $400 million and saving taxpayers that amount in aid, according to a national study released yesterday.

The study, based on a survey of agencies nationwide that try to find jobs for the disabled, said about 25,000 mentally and physically handicapped adults gained their first jobs in 1984 and that number jumped to 62,409 in 1985.

"I truly feel attitudes are changing," said Jean Elder, acting assistant secretary of the Office of Human Development Services of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. "We look at people now and see abilities rather than disabilities."

The study was conducted with a $40,000 grant from HHS. It was done to evaluate President Reagan's 1983 Employment Initiative, designed to promote the disabled to the work force.

Elder said it was the first time anyone had taken a comprehensive look at how many of the severely disabled had been hired through agencies.

Cold freezes South, East

Freeze warnings were posted in the heart of Dixie yesterday as record-breaking cold air raced to the South and East, chasing homeless people into packed shelters and snarling traffic with icy roads.

"It's just pretty darn cold," Arlo Collie said at his service station in Alva, Okla. "I'm wearing my thermal underwear and a pair of winter coveralls."

Postal carriers in Woodward, Okla., "wrapped up pretty warm. Most were wearing face masks," said

Gary Foster, supervisor for mail delivery.

At least 18 deaths had been blamed on the weather since the season's first big snowstorm hit the northern Plains last week, and crews in North Dakota searched for a missing 13-year-old.

Wyoming reopened long sections of major highways that were closed overnight by blowing, drifting snow, but roads elsewhere turned slippery as the leading edge of the cold air triggered snow flurries across the Plains and the Midwest.

Bishops avoid confrontation

U.S. Catholic prelates say Vatican ruling 'deserves respect'

WASHINGTON (AP)—America's Roman Catholic bishops, after daring to debate the Vatican's punishment of a fellow U.S. prelate, stepped back from confrontation with Rome yesterday by declaring the Vatican's verdict "deserves our respect and confidence."

Their decision, after five hours of intense secret talks over two days, said that while the bishops sympathize with the pain of an embattled colleague, the pope in Rome must still come first.

The bishops, all appointed by Pope John Paul II or his predecessors and all subject to church discipline themselves, did not add to the Vatican's criticism of Seattle Archbishop Raymond Hunthausen. But neither did they defend him, as some of his supporters among the group had hoped they might.

"On this occasion the bishops of the United States wish to affirm unreservedly their loyalty to and unity with the Holy Father," Bishop James Malone, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, said in a statement approved by most of the group's nearly 300 bishops.

"The conference of bishops has no authority to intervene" in the dispute between the Vatican and Hunthausen, he said.

HUNTHAUSEN WAS ordered by the Vatican earlier this year to give up much of his authority to a Rome-appointed auxiliary bishop after Vatican officials judged him too liberal on such matters as ministry to homosexuals and divorced Catholics and dispensation of general absolution for sin to large groups.

He was allowed to make his case to his fellow bishops at the secret sessions—sessions like none other in recent years—and he used the opportunity to complain that "a shroud of secrecy" around the Vatican's investigative process had kept him from even seeing the formal charges against him.

Malone, however, said: "I believe it is clear that the process employed by the Holy See was in accord with general principles of church law and procedures. The decision reached at the end of the process was made by the proper church authorities. As such, it deserves our respect and confidence."

Sources familiar with the debate said that verdict was softened a bit from an earlier version that would have declared the Vatican decision "just and reasonable."

THE FINAL statement, said Cardinal John O'Connor of New York, indicated the bishops do not feel "the sky is falling in... the church is about to explode, there is imminent rebellion on the part of the bishops toward the Holy See."

Another conservative cardinal, Bernard Law of Boston, said the statement indicated strong papal support by the bishops, and "at this moment, more than anything else, that has to be seen."

Still, Bishop Michael Kenny of Juneau, Alaska, said he and a few other Hunthausen supporters dissented from the final statement, arguing that it should have at least mentioned that many Catholics in Seattle and elsewhere have seen the investigation and action against Hunthausen as unfair.

"I would like to have seen a stronger statement, but I don't know what more we could have done" as far as taking action, Kenny said.

Also taking a negative view, in an interview before the final closed-door session, Detroit Bishop Thomas Gumbleton said, "Bishops are going to be looking over their shoulders now, and that's not a healthy way to walk."

The bishops' statement said they had "felt much concern" in recent weeks for Hunthausen, for Auxiliary Bishop Donald Wuerl, for the pope and for other high church officials.

"THE ABUSE directed at the Holy Father and the Holy See, the dismay and confusion experienced by many good people—these things are deeply troubling," Malone said.

BG cagers successful in exhibitions

BG forward Jackie Motyka prepares to shoot the ball in last night's brown/white intrasquad game at Anderson Arena. Motyka led the brown team to a 78-62 triumph by pumping in 29 points.

Jennings, Pippin lead Falcons easily past Windsor

by Tom Reed
sports editor

A Pippin and a Pop'n. Last night, they had Anderson Arena hoppin'.

Lamon Pippin scored 16 points and Pop Jennings added 15 more to propel Bowling Green to a 119-69 thrashing of Windsor University in an exhibition game.

Playing in his first college game, Jennings came off the bench to tally eight points in the opening minutes of the second half. Pippin also did his best work after intermission.

Pippin, a sophomore, electrified the 1,367 fans with a pair of swooping dunks midway through the second half.

"Lamon is excellent in the up-tempo situations," first-year Falcon coach Jim Larranaga said. "He's good on the short jumpers and drives for dunks."

"Pop did an outstanding job helping his teammates out."

And they sure needed it in the first half.

Midway through the first half, Windsor surprisingly held a 30-25 lead. The Falcons looked sluggish on defense, which enabled the Lancers to get high percentage shots.

"We weren't doing the things we wanted to do," Larranaga said.

"We were having some trouble defensively."

Yet BG's defense gelled in the final minutes of the half and forced Windsor into committing several key turnovers.

After Pippin tipped in a shot to give the Falcons a 37-34 advantage, guard Joe Gregory stole a pass and scored an easy layup.

BG capitalized on a few more Lancer miscues to take a 51-37 lead to the locker room. Though the Falcons rallied to lead at half, they weren't happy with their performance.

"We knew we needed to be more intense in the second half,"

Pippin said.

Jennings' game certainly picked up after halftime. The New York City native scored three straight baskets in the opening minutes of the second half, to spark the Falcon uprising.

His third basket, a reverse layup, gave BG a commanding 70-46 lead. The Falcons outscored the hapless Lancers 18-6 over the first four minutes of the second half.

The Falcons surge came thanks to a high-pressure defense which simply baffled the Lancers.

"It's our defense which creates the opportunities for the offense," Jennings said.

With the outcome well in hand, Pippin didn't want the crowd to become restless. That is when the dunking started.

Pippin's first dunk, at the 9:36 mark, came off an ally-oop pass from forward Anthony Robinson to make it 87-52. His second slam, a windmill dunk, gave the Falcons' a 93-54.

The Falcons continued to pour it on down the stretch. Forward James Tyler hit several jumpers and finished with 19 markers. But Tyler did most of his scoring early in the game.

Substitute Dan Raupp logged 14 points, while Frank Booker had 10. Point guard Joe Gregory also played well, especially in the first half in which he scored nine points and added seven assists.

"What I liked is that everyone made a contribution," Larranaga said. "Our substitutes also did a great job for us."

The well-balanced BG attack placed seven players in double

Forward Motyka excels in brown/white matchup

by Jeff McSherry
sports reporter

Last night's intrasquad game featuring the Bowling Green's women's basketball team was everything it was supposed to be.

Preseason scrimmages are characterized by mistakes, and the Falcons had plenty of them in the Brown squad's 78-62 victory over the White team.

"We didn't look real good in the early going," BG head coach Fran Voll said. "That's due to the nervousness of playing in our first game conditions."

"But we got much better as the game went on."

The first half, which ended in a 32-30 lead for the Brown, was full of turnovers and poor shooting. The Brown team shot 42 percent from the field while the White made only 37 percent of their field goals.

The second half, however, was broken open by the Brown who shot 57 percent compared to the opposition's 44 percent.

WHILE MISTAKES were no surprise, neither was the game's scoring and rebounding leader.

Sophomore Jackie Motyka, who led the Falcons last year with 16.9 points per game, had a game-high 29 points for the Brown. She also led everyone with 12 rebounds, eight of which came off the offensive glass.

The Brown was also aided by senior Stephanie Coe's 14 points and her game-high seven assists. Sophomore center Megan McGuire led the White with 18 points and eight rebounds.

Voll, whose team finished 18-10 overall and second in the Mid-American Conference standings at 13-5 last year, also had a chance to evaluate new players.

The graduation losses of Joe-lyn Shoup and Rhonda Moore in the front-court leaves the nucleus of forward Motyka, and senior guards Coe and Sherrie Voyles.

Because of this, Voll said this year's freshmen class could play an important role in the upcoming season. BG freshmen include centers Angie Bonner (14 points) and Jo Motter (eight points), along with forward Tecca Thompson (eight points).

"We are slowly moving to a front-line," Voll said. "Our freshman are doing real well and we've made some big improvements."

"But we have to get better."

BG winless on artificial rug

FOOTBALL: The Glass Bowl's artificial turf may work in Toledo's favor in Saturday's BG-UT football game.

The Rockets have won seven straight matches on artificial surfaces while the Falcons have lost their last three games (Washington, Central Michigan and Minnesota) on the rug.

The Falcons have not won at the Glass Bowl since a 17-6 victory in 1980.

Kick returner Daryl Story has broken the school's record for most kickoff return yards in one season. His two returns for 51 yards last week gave him 568 yards this season.

The senior, who also tied the mark for most returns in one season, can also break the career records for returns and return yardage if he runs back three kicks for 38 yards against UT.

Last week's crowd of 20,104 at Doyt L. Perry Stadium pushed the final 1986 home attendance to 73,482.

This season's five game average of 14,696 was 7,800 less than last year's average of 22,422.

This week's opponent, Illinois-Chicago, is ranked ninth in the WMEB poll.

CCHA-member Michigan State is second in the WMPL and KBJR polls and third in the WMEB poll. North Dakota is first in each poll.

□ □ □ □
BG set a new attendance record in its 5-2 victory over Ohio State, last Friday in the Ice Arena. Although 3,400 is the arena's capacity, 3,780 fans witnessed the win.

The previous mark was set on February 26, 1971 when 3,756 saw BG beat Notre Dame 5-1.

If the Falcons can average 3,526 fans this season, they will have drawn one million fans since the Ice Arena opened in the 1969-70 season.

Although Paul Ysebaert's eight-game goal-scoring streak ended in Friday's game against Ohio State, centers Greg Parks and Nelson Emerson extended their personal streaks in the Buckeye series.

Both have eight-game scoring streaks going into this week's IUC games.

Gary Kruzich was named BG's Player of the Week after his performance in the Falcons' two wins over the Buckeyes.

The senior made 47 saves in the series and allowed only two goals in each game.

In his last trip to UIC's home ice, Kruzich posted his second career shutout, 4-0 on December 7, 1986.

Graham sees greatness in Kosar

BEREA, Ohio (AP) - Otto Graham, the quarterback who led the Cleveland Browns to the championship in each of his 10 pro seasons, calls Browns quarterback Bernie Kosar a potential great.

"I believe that Kosar is going to be one of the best before he's through," Graham said by telephone from Los Angeles after watching the Browns beat the Miami Dolphins 26-16 in a nationally televised game. "He was throwing very accurately. I liked to throw long and I know he can do that."

Graham didn't know until he read the Los Angeles Times on Tuesday that Kosar had tied him for most passing yardage in a Browns game. Kosar threw Monday for 401 yards on 32 of 50 completions.

Graham hit that number on Oct. 4, 1952, with 21 completions in 49 attempts. Graham, a Hall of Famer, and Kosar are in second place behind Brian Sipe, who threw for 444 yards against Baltimore on Oct. 25, 1981.

Graham, 65, says quarterbacks have more obstacles to overcome than he encountered.

"There are so many different kinds of defenses," he said. "It's a more sophisticated game. To have a successful passing attack, though, the ingredients are the same."

"You have to have the receivers, the protection and the guy who can throw the ball. I say this, though I would like to have thrown against some of these nickel defenses. They cut down on the pass rush and give you time to pick out the receivers. And I really had some good receivers."

GRAHAM PASSED to such stars as Dante Lavelli, Mac Speedie, Dub Jones, Ray Renfro, Horace Gillom and Darrell Brewster. Kosar, 22, has a much less experienced set of receivers.
