Sanctions on Poland removed

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan, responding to pleas from church and trade union leaders, lifted economic sanctions against Poland yesterday but warned the Warsaw government not to retreat on political reforms.

"We will be watching to see that further steps are taken toward national reconciliation in Poland and that the progress made is not reversed," Reagan said in a statement.

The Polish government estimates its economy has lost $15 billion because of Western sanctions imposed after the martial law crackdown on the Solidarity trade union in December 1981.

However, critics claim Warsaw's leaders used the sanctions as an excuse for the country's poor economy.

"The present regime in Poland uses the sanctions as a crutch and it's high time that we kicked the crutch away and let them stand on their two feet and not blame (the United States for) what's happening to the economy," said Aloysius Mazewski, president of the Chicago-based Polish American Congress and a guest at the White House for Reagan's announcement.

The last remaining U.S. sanctions against Poland were the denial of "most-favored-nation" tariff treatment and a ban on U.S. credits and guarantees.

A SENIOR administration official, briefing reporters on condition he not be identified, said

Prof to take Eakin's post temporarily

by Melissa McGillivray
assistant managing editor

A University chemistry professor and assistant to Richard Eakin, former vice president for planning and budgeting, will temporarily fill Eakin's shoes until a permanent replacement is found.

University President Paul Olscamp will appoint Chris Dalton, assistant vice president for planning and budgeting, to serve as acting vice president effective March 1, Olscamp said yesterday.

The position became vacant Wednesday, when Eakin, who joined the University in 1964, left to become chancellor of East Carolina University in Greenville, North Carolina.

Eakin's term as chancellor begins March 1, and places him at the top position at that university.

Olscamp said he will appoint a search committee to find a permanent replacement for Eakin.

Dalton said yesterday he had not "heard anything official" from the president about the appointment.

"He indicated to me several days ago that that's what he was going to do," Dalton said. "But all the details haven't been worked out."

ONE OF the details not yet worked out is whether Dalton will retain his position as chemistry professor and researcher in the photochemical sciences department in addition to his duties as acting vice president.

Dalton said he is not sure how long the search process will take, but he guessed a new permanent vice president may be appointed in the summer.

He also said he does not know if he will apply for the permanent position of vice president.

"I'd have to think about that," he said.

Dalton was appointed assistant vice president for planning and budgeting last month, after serving as chair of the Faculty Senate budget committee since September 1985.

He joined the University faculty in 1977 as an associate professor of chemistry.

City insurance costs rise

Many municipalities affected by liability coverage crisis

by Caroline Langer
Friday editor

The city of Bowling Green is paying so much more for so much less.

Four percent of the city's budget, $351,900, is spent on insurance, said Colleen Smith, assistant municipal administrator. The cost of insuring city operations has gone up $87,499 since last year even though bonds for public officials, public employees and excess property are no longer covered.

"There is an insurance crisis... we couldn't obtain the Public Officials Liability Insurance for any price," Smith said. Coverage for public officials was $14,194 in fiscal year 1985-86.

The city administration has self-insured the officials by agreeing to defend and support them if they are involved in a lawsuit within the scope of their employment, she said.

Chapter 2744 of the Ohio Revised Code requires coverage be available to all city officials to provide for their defense. A Bowling Green city ordinance also includes members of boards in voluntary positions as well as those paid officials under this protection.

Markel Services Inc., the underwriters who insure most of the city's operations, stated that they could no longer insure the officials because of the city's "claim history," Smith said.

THAT BAD claim history came from a recent case where the city settled out of court with Showe Development Corp. for $250,000, Smith said.

"The cost of legal council to represent and win would have been more than the cost to settle (out of court)," she said.

The developers sued the city after the city did not approve their proposal to build a housing project east of Klotz Road on the north side of Gypsy Lane, she said.

Smith said there are two reasons for the insurance crisis which Bowling Green and other municipalities are facing: courts awarding large settlements to those suing public administrations and insurance companies increasing their rates.

The problem began when the Ohio Supreme Court nullified sovereign immunity on Dec. 15, 1985, for public entities, which

"We're caught up in the middle of the whole situation - it's a vicious cycle."

Colleen Smith, assistant municipal administrator meant that municipalities became easier to sue, she said, calling the change in the law "tragic."

As more lawsuits were filed against municipalities and large settlements were awarded, insuring cities became less profitable for the insurance companies so they increased their rates, Smith explained.

"We're caught up in the middle of the whole situation - it's a vicious cycle," Smith said.

OTHER AREAS where insurance costs have soared include police liability, up 93 percent, and the city's general liability damage insurance, with premiums up 31 percent as well as higher deductibles so the city is responsible for paying a greater amount of the damage before the insurance company takes over the costs, Smith said. Insurance for underground pipelines and electric poles has gone up 76.6 percent and the deductibles are also higher.

In order to avoid the high cost of insurance premiums and to obtain money to protect areas no longer insured by companies, such as for public officials, insurance pools are forming in parts of the nation and some cities are self-insuring certain parts of their operation, Smith said.

The Ohio Municipal League is planning to form such a pool, she said. Each member city would pay into a fund according to its total assets and liabilities. The money would be invested until needed.

She said the city plans to join the pool once it becomes established.

In the mean time, Bowling Green is trying to become somewhat self-insured and is working to remove many of the liabilities the city has, such as potholes and broken branches, Smith said. "We can't remove all the liabilities, but we do have some

If Nielsen were to survey the student body on campus this week, ABC's mini-series "Amerika" would turn up low on the ratings list.

Many University students say they have not even attempted to watch the 14½-hour mini-series.

The excuses range from students who say they simply never watch any television, to those who claim they are unwilling to commit themselves to a whole week of watching and the risk of having to miss one episode and ruining the whole story line.

Then there are those students who say they would just rather watch "St. Elsewhere" or "Hill Street Blues."

Sean Smith, a junior public relations major, had seen a lot of the previews and commercials, but was not very impressed. He said it didn't look like it was going to be very accurate or realistic, and based on that premise, he never even started watching it. He said it looked like its purpose was to make the Russians look bad.

A few of the questioned students did watch "Amerika" the first few nights, but decided against watching the rest of the series. Jack Thomas, a senior biology major, watched "Amerika" for only one night. He said it was somewhat antagonizing because it was so absurd that it started to make you really think about the possibility of the Soviets taking over becoming a reality. "I just don't like the idea of the Soviets running around in Texas," he said.

ANOTHER STUDENT said the first few nights were so unrealistic that he wouldn't continue watching it. John Eliyas, a senior psychology major, said the Soviets could never totally take over because too many people want the simple things in life that Americans now enjoy and would never stand for giving up.

Of those viewers who were questioned, most agreed that "Amerika" definitely reflected negatively on the Soviets, and the whole idea of the Soviet Union so easily taking control of everything was unbelievable.

Ray Dunlap, a junior radio-television-film major, found an alternative beyond the weekly entertainment programs. He

Gridders add ECU to slate

The University Athletic Department announced yesterday the signing of the Division I school East Carolina University to both the 1989 and 1992 football schedules.

The first opening was created when Wichita State, originally slated for the Sept. 9 contest, suspended its football program. The Falcons will travel to ECU for next year's game while the Pirates visit Doyt L. Perry Stadium for the 1992 contest.

BG video market saturated

by Judy Immel
staff reporter

The number of video stores in Bowling Green is out to rival the number of pizza places.

The opening of the newest video store, Network Video, adds to the saturation of the video market, agreed the managers of video stores in the area.

"The saturation of the stores has reached its limit, both in town and nationwide," said Bill Burkle, owner of Video Connection, 425 E. Wooster St.

Presently there are four stores in town dealing strictly with video rentals, three grocery stores and one television shop renting videos.

Loren Phillips, owner of the Phillips Television Company, 1028 N. Main, started renting out videos as an addition to his regular business in 1980, when the community was "not proliferated with video stores."

"Each new business is cutting into the pie," he said.

The number of businesses began multiplying in 1985, when Barney's Videos, 1093 N. Main St., opened, according to Phillips and Sue Wilkins, manager of Video Spectrum, 112 E. Washington St., the oldest video store in Bowling Green. The store opened in April 1981.

"The interest in videos has been there since the beginning," Wilkins said.

Burkle said he has seen an increase in video rental by students in the last two years.

"I think a lot of kids get tired with the bar scene and they're just looking for something different to do on the weekends," he said.

The busiest days of the week for the video stores are Fridays and Saturdays and the busiest time of the year is winter.

"Our business directly relates to the weather," said Kimberly Laubengayer, manager of Barney's Videos, 1093 N. Main.

"When it's sunny out, business slows down," she said.

Students can get the best price for video cassette recorders and videotapes from Monday through Thursday, when the video stores offer special deals to help offset the slower business period.

Network Video adds another store to the list

Renting a VCR overnight runs from $3 to $7 at most of the stores, including various coupons, and videotapes cost approximately $2 each. Memberships at the stores further reduce prices.

"Students seem to pool their money for tapes, so the cost is even less," Burkle said.

Laubengayer said in the long run, many people prefer tapes to going to movie theaters.

"It's a lot cheaper to rent a tape, plus you can stop the movie if you want to go do something or rewind parts that you miss," she said.

The shorter time that it is taking for movie releases to move to video format also adds to the attraction of videos, the managers agreed.

For instance, the summer smash "Top Gun" will be released next month.

"Studios are realizing there is more money in videos than in the theater," Laubengayer said.

one on standby all day in case a pothole or something is reported."

A BIT of relief came on Nov. 20, 1986, when limits were placed on the amounts of claims against cities by Ohio House Bill 176, Smith said. However, this partial restoration of sovereign immunity is not expected to curb the number of suits brought against public entities.

Because of the passage of partial immunity, the insurance market will eventually get better for Ohio municipalities, according to Smith.

said he started watching "Amerika," but found a show on the Discovery Channel that was run specifically to compete with the ABC series and easily won out.

The show he began watching ran actual footage from the Soviet Union and was much more believable, educational and interesting, he said.

Although the students questioned were not necessarily representative of the entire student body, it appears that the mini-series "Amerika," at least on this campus, was too unrealistic to keep the students' interest for all 14 1/2 hours of the mini-series.

Two students chosen to teach in Ecuador

by Becky Thomas reporter

While many students will go south for spring break, two University students will have to wait a little longer.

Wiley Blevins and John Morehart, senior elementary education majors, will go to Ecuador this August to teach at a private academy for the children of diplomats.

The Inter-American Academy, located in Guayaquil, is made up of 231 students in grades kindergarten through 12, and 20 staff members, Morehart said.

They will teach an American curriculum, though a knowledge of the Spanish language will come in handy.

"The children are fluent in both Spanish and English. We are learning Spanish quickly; we have the tapes and the pocket dictionaries - all that stuff," Blevins said.

Blevins and Morehart heard of the opportunity through a friend who had attended the International Job Fair at Ohio State University last year, Morehart said.

They called the University Placement Services office, and found out about the fair this year from Louise Paradis, assistant director of placement for the College of Education and Allied Professions.

Blevins and Morehart attended the fair Feb. 6-8, and were notified of their positions on Feb. 7, Morehart said.

They went through a series of interviews for the positions, one of which lasted three hours, and were finally chosen out of 86 candidates for the job.

Morehart said they had considered many different schools in many different countries, and the program in Ecuador sounded the best.

"The experience will be interesting, intriguing and challenging - it will be a learning environment for ourselves as well as for the children," Morehart said.

Blevins and Morehart have a two-year contract that starts Aug. 1, which gives them two weeks to prepare the lessons before classes actually start. They will be staying in an apartment in Guayaquil that was arranged for them by the director of the program, Morehart said.

Their interest was sparked by the unusual aspect of the job.

"We both wanted to travel abroad, which is hard to afford on a teacher's salary. Now we can do that, and we plan to travel all over South America," Blevins said.

THE MULTI-CULTURAL aspect of teaching in another country is often what interests students in pursuing this kind of job, Paradis said.

"There are many different aspects of teaching internationally. If the student is proficient in the language, he may choose to teach in a school in which he could use the language in order to improve his fluency," Paradis said. "Some students choose to teach in English-speaking schools; however, they still have an opportunity to develop language skills."

The decision to teach in a situation such as this demonstrates initiative, flexibility and adaptability on the part of the student, according to Paradis.

"The student has to make the decision and then take the steps necessary to make this decision a reality. He also has to exhibit the basic classroom skills such as human relations, interpersonal communication, decision-making and organizing," said Paradis.

Friends' reactions to the news were mixed, and Blevins and Morehart were both surprised at some of the reactions.

"Someone actually asked me if it was near Kansas somewhere. It is not near Kansas; it is not in Central America. It is in South America, and it is a fairly peaceful country," Morehart said.

After their two year stay the two are not sure what is in store for the future.

Class helps students to improve intimacy

IPCO course focuses on love relationships

by LeWonn Belcher reporter

In an effort to narrow the notorious communication gap between college men and women, the University is offering a course called Intimate Communications.

The course, IPCO 406, was developed over a period of 10 years by Raymond Tucker, chairman of the department of interpersonal and public communication, and is offered for only the second time in four years through the IPCO department.

Open to both majors and non-majors, the course is designed to help heterosexual students improve intimate relationships, Tucker said.

"Intimate relationships are difficult to get started and maintain," Tucker said. "The idea of 'I'm a boy and you're a girl' isn't good enough. You can learn to be better at intimate relationships."

Tucker said having an intimate relationship does not involve just doing what comes naturally, he said, adding that people don't know what sensuality and good sex are all about.

If people depend on natural

"In terms of sexuality in relationships, I'd give the world a 'C minus.' In most relationships it is abysmal, mainly because we don't know any better."
Raymond Tucker, chair of IPCO department instincts, they are "doomed," he said.

According to Tucker, the major difficulty men and women have in intimate relationships is the inability to connect with one another.

"THEY DON'T know how to find love and they don't know how to keep the romance alive," he said.

Tucker also added that people are hung up on addictions instead of preferences. He said an addictive behavior is when people demand something from someone and are unhappy if they don't get what they want.

Tucker said rather than addictions, people should have preferences. They should tell their partner what they want and then work together to achieve the goal. That way both people will be happy, he said.

"Any relationship that is not a mega-love relationship is doomed to failure," he said. He said the relationship will not work unless two people are so in love that it is obvious - they can't wait to make each other happy and they're thinking about each other all the time.

Tucker also believes that IPCO 406 can improve students' sexual relationships.

"In terms of sexuality in relationships, I'd give the world a 'C minus,'" Tucker said. "In most relationships it is abysmal, mainly because we don't know any better."

To remedy the situation, he recommended that students take IPCO 406 and read some of the many books on the market such as Alex Comfort's Joy of Sex.

Tucker said students should be cautious about taking the advice of sex "experts" like Dr. Ruth Westheimer.

"It's great entertainment, but don't take it too seriously," he said.

Poland

Continued from page 1. that while trade tariffs will be lowered for Polish goods, Warsaw will have to compete in a very competitive market.

As for the lifting of the ban on credits and guarantees, the official said, "There will be no manna from heaven flowing from this decision." Poland already owes the United States more than $2 billion in guaranteed credits that it is unable to repay.

In lifting the sanctions, Reagan noted the lifting of martial law in Poland in 1983 and the release of thousands of political prisoners in a series of amnesties. Since last September, no one has been arrested on political charges, he said.

The president said that "significantly, the leaders of Solidarity and of the Catholic Church in Poland agree that this is the right course for us to take."

During Deputy Secretary of State John Whitehead's recent visit to Poland, Lech Walesa, leader of Solidarity, and Cardinal Jozef Glemp appealed for an end to the sanctions.

MAZEWSKI, THE head of the Polish American Congress, said the sanctions had become counterproductive.

Seminars attract leaders

by Amy Burkett

Are you a leader of an organization looking for new ways to inspire or motivate your members?

If so, you may want to "Discover the Challenge," which is the theme for the University's seventh annual leadership conference. The conference, which is sponsored by the Panhellenic and Interfraternity councils, takes place today and tomorrow.

"The program is designed to help students become better leaders and to provide them with insightful programs. It is also an opportunity to meet and discuss ideas and concerns with leaders from many different campuses," said Carrie Roads, Panhellenic conference coordinator.

Roads said the conference is not aimed specifically at Greeks.

Terri Hoodlet, publicity chairman for the conference, said, "There will be many different seminars, including Parliamentary Procedures Made Fun, How to Deal with Power, Creativity, Scholarships, Motivation, Hazing, Rush and The Power of Laughter."

The speakers for the seminars include 13 faculty members from around the country, in addition to graduate students, unit directors, and representatives from Greek Life, the Office of Student Affairs and Residence Life.

The keynote speaker is T.J. Schmitz, vice president and chief executive officer of Tau Kappa Epsilon International Fraternity and the Teke Educational Foundation, Inc. Schmitz also serves on the board of directors for the Study of the College Fraternity at Indiana University.

"The conference was very small when it began in 1980, but has grown to include 35 schools from Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois and Pennsylvania," said Mark Malo, registration coordinator. "This is the only undergraduate conference (of its kind) in the country," he said.

Mardi Gras to end charity week

by Julie Wallace
staff reporter

A bake sale, a euchre tournament and a sweatshirt sale are just some of the events being held on campus during the annual Charities Week.

From Feb. 23-28, the week-long effort to raise money for various charities will feature student organizations and residence halls involved in different fund-raising events.

Don Miller, a graduate student in college student personnel and adviser to Volunteers in Progress, the parent body of the Charities Board, said the board is trying to increase student involvement with the program.

"In the past, Charities Week was a major event on campus, but it has declined in the past few years . . . we are now trying to turn that around by notifying all the student organizations and pushing for their involvement," he said. "We really want the students to get an awareness of the various charity and volunteer programs available, and this is a good way to do it."

The finale for the week, Mardi Gras, will be held Saturday night in the Union.

Sponsored by the University Activities Organization (UAO) and nine other groups, the Mardi Gras celebration will involve decorating the entire Union to fit this year's theme, "Run Through the Reruns," with the Lenhart Grand Ballroom being set up in a casino-like fashion with booths and gaming tables and decorated to resemble "Gilligan's Island."

DEBORAH SPINA, a graduate student in college student personnel and an adviser for UAO, said that the money earned by the organizations at Mardi Gras will be donated to a charity, with full credit going to the organization that earned it.

"We collect the money after Mardi Gras that is to be donated," Spina said. "At that time, the organization can specify which charity they want to donate to or they leave it up to us to decide which one will get it. In either case, the money is given in the name of the group that earned it."

In addition to various food sales, the Students Against Muscular Dystrophy (SAMS) organization is selling sweatshirts to raise money and both a pool and a euchre tournament are being held. Rodgers Quadrangle is holding "Penny Wars" and Darrow Hall is sponsoring the first-ever "Clean Sweep for Charity."

"We tried to be innovative, and this is what we got," said Darrow's hall council vice president, Sandy Myers. "Not many other people would do something like this."

Myers, a freshman pre-journalism major, and the other members of the hall council will be sweeping the rooms of the students in the wing that contributes the most money by the end of the week.

Miller said that although a special week has been designated, fund-raising events and volunteer programs happen throughout the year on campus.

"Volunteers in Progress, along with the Charities Board, is involved with both fund-raising and volunteer programs throughout the year," he said.

"The benefits of student involvement is not just monetary. The knowledge and the experience they can share is invaluable to the community."

Blotter

A Lakewood man was arrested Wednesday night by city police for allegedly trying to steal a car from the parking lot at Meadowview Court Apartments, 214 Napolean Road.

Acting on a telephone tip, police arrived at the parking lot at about 10 p.m. and found the car in question being driven out of the lot. Police arrested the driver, Steven Kirchner, 28, of Lakewood, and charged him with grand theft auto.

According to police, Kirchner told them that the car's owner is the sister of his ex-wife, and that the car was "rightfully his." Police said Kirchner had used a key to gain entry to the car.

Kirchner was placed in Wood County Jail.

Police arrested an area man Wednesday morning for carrying a concealed weapon after a Sohio employee reported a suspicious person walking along East Wooster Street. David Shipman, 21, address unknown, was stopped by police at 5:36 a.m.

while he was walking in front of Wendy's Restaurant, 1504 E. Wooster St. While the police officer was talking to Shipman, he noticed Shipman was carrying a sheath knife under his jacket.

The knife was confiscated and Shipman was placed in Wood County Jail on $7,000 bond, police said.

An obscene telephone call was reported to police Wednesday afternoon by a female University student, who told police that a male had called three times. On the first call, he asked if she was selling coupon books. When she answered no, the caller then made a derogatory sexual reference to her, police said.

A University student was charged with shoplifting for the theft of a bar of soap and a bottle of contact lens cleaner from State Discount Store, 902 E. Wooster St.

Sheri Gibson, 20, of Mansfield and living in 372 Rodgers Quadrangle, was arrested Wednesday. The value of the items was $6.18, police said.

Soviets to release Begun today

MOSCOW (AP) - Psychiatrist Anatoly Koryagin came home yesterday after five years in a labor camp, and officials said Jewish activist Josef Begun would be out of prison in 24 hours, nearly a week after his release was first announced.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov reported the releases at a news briefing. Koryagin, who had accused authorities of putting sane dissidents in psychiatric hospitals, and Begun were among the most prominent dissidents still held, but other well-known activists remain in prisons or labor camps.

Begun, 55, was still at Chistopol Prison yesterday.

An Interior Ministry official telephoned Begun's wife Inna yesterday evening and told her to go to the prison, 500 miles east of Moscow, for her husband's release today.

"Boris and I will be going to Chistopol as soon as we can get tickets," Mrs. Begun said. Boris is Begun's son from a previous marriage.

"I was told my husband will be freed tomorrow, in the second half of the day," she told The Associated Press by telephone.

Begun, a teacher of Hebrew, was pardoned Tuesday by the Supreme Soviet, the nominal national parliament. He was sentenced in 1963 to seven years in prison for anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda.

A SOVIET official had announced his release prematurely in a television interview on CBS last Sunday.

Mrs. Begun and Boris said other dissidents freed from Chistopol recently told them Josef Begun is the last remaining prisoner held there for alleged anti-Soviet activity. At least 150 dissidents have been released in the past three weeks, and officials have said an equal number of cases are under review.

Statements say 'Ivan' was killed

Prisoners' testimony supports claim

JERUSALEM (AP) - A lawyer trying to prove John Demjanjuk was not 'Ivan the Terrible' cited testimony yesterday that prisoners flung the brutal Nazi guard into a blazing furnace during an uprising at the Treblinka death camp.

A prosecution witness who wrote a history of the concentration camp in Poland said he knew the story but took it "with a pinch of salt."

Demjanjuk, a 66-year-old retired autoworker from Cleveland, claims he was not at the camp and says he is the victim of mistaken identity.

His Israeli lawyer, Yoram Sheftel, read from the testimony of four Treblinka inmates in an attempt to prove Demjanjuk was not the Ukrainian guard who beat and stabbed prisoners, cut slices of flesh from their bodies, pushed them into death chambers and turned on the gas.

From testimony of Shlomo Hellman, he read: "Groups attacked the Germans and Ivan the Terrible was overpowered and thrown into the furnaces. We set the gas chambers on fire."

Sheftel cited three other survivors who claimed the guard whose cruelty earned him the name was killed in 1943. Inmates attacked Ukrainian and German SS guards in August of that year and managed to set parts of the camp afire before the revolt was crushed.

DEMJANJUK, WHO was born in the Ukraine, claims to have been a prisoner himself. He says he was captured in 1942 while serving in the Soviet army and was held at a POW camp near Treblinka, where 850,000 Jews perished in 1942-43.

Hellman was at Treblinka for more than a year. He died after giving his testimony to the Yad Vashem Holocaust Museum in Jerusalem in 1961.

Sheftel also cross-examined prosecution witness Yitzhak Arad about the testimony. Arad, a historian who wrote a book about Treblinka based on testimony of survivors, said he had interviewed Hellman.

"This whole description I took with a pinch of salt," he said. "This passage is very heroic: the overpowering of the Germans, the heavy fighting, the burning of the gas chambers. I was skeptical because not a single German was killed at Treblinka."

Ohio leads in Japanese auto part firms

CLEVELAND (AP) - Ohio leads the nation as an American home base for Japanese companies that make automotive parts, according to a new study.

There will be 30 Japanese firms with plants in Ohio by next year, employing 5,000 workers, said Donald Iannone, author of the report and director of the Economic Development Program at Cleveland State University's Urban Center.

Those 30 firms represent one quarter of all Japanese companies that manufacture auto parts in the United States, Iannone said.

He said 119 Japanese companies make or plan to make auto parts in the United States.

After Ohio, Michigan is second with 18 plants. California has 17.

The Japanese firms were not particularly willing to discuss their business decisions, Iannone said, but a major reason the companies were attracted to Ohio seems to have been its location.

Nearly all the companies in Ohio are in the southwest, in an area generally straddling Interstate 75, he noted.

"The I-75 corridor, which stretches from Michigan all the way south, is viewed very favorably by the Japanese," he said.

Iannone said he feels the success of Honda's auto and motorcycle plant has indicated to other companies that Ohio is a good place to do business.

THE REPORT was prepared by Iannone for the Ohio Department of Development.

"The state was interested in some explanation of what was making them successful to this point," Iannone said. "We were interested in the dynamics, what was driving the investment."

SEVEN JAPANESE companies will build cars in the United States by 1989 and Iannone expects the number of Japanese suppliers to increase, too. By 1989 or 1990, he said he would expect another 20 firms to locate in Ohio.

Cuomo says he won't seek presidential nomination

NEW YORK (AP) - Gov. Mario Cuomo said yesterday that he would not be a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1988.

"I will not be a candidate," said the New York governor at the end of a call-in show on WCBS radio in New York City.

The 54-year-old governor said that he had "no desire to increase the speculation" about a possible run for the White House.

"This decision is the best thing for my state," said Cuomo, adding that it was also "the best thing for my family" and "the best thing for my party."

Recent nationwide polls had placed Cuomo as a strong second to former Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado as the choice among Democrats for the nomination.

"In my opinion, the Democratic Party offers a number of candidates who can prove themselves capable of leading this nation toward a more sane, a more progressive and a more humane future," said Cuomo.

"I will continue to work as hard as I can to deal with those problems here in New York and to support the selection of our party as vigorously as I can in my role as governor of the state of New York," he added.

"I'M VERY, very grateful to a lot of people who suggested I might adequately serve as the candidate myself, but the decision I've made, I think, is best for my state, best for my family, and I think also best for my party," Cuomo said.

Human rights report cites S. Africa, USSR, S. Korea

WASHINGTON (AP) - The State Department yesterday called the police crackdown in South Africa the most troubling human rights trend of 1986 and dismissed some of the Soviet Union's newly proclaimed human rights moves as "only talk."

The department's annual report to Congress on human freedoms in 167 countries also criticized South Korea, a close American ally, and claimed an inability to determine whether the Central American contras were guilty of war crimes in their fight to overthrow the pro-Soviet Nicaraguan government.

On the positive side, the report said conditions in the Philippines, Haiti and Guatemala improved last year.

Like its predecessors, the 1,356-page human rights survey is a detailed report card on the human condition in lands ranging from the democracies of Western Europe to North Korea - which Assistant Secretary of State Richard Schifter likened to the regime in George Orwell's classic novel of repression, 1984.

Paris meeting to focus on stabilizing exchange rates

WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker yesterday said a weekend meeting in Paris of industrial nations should help efforts to stabilize exchange rates, but that real progress requires West Germany and Japan to do more to stimulate their economies.

Volcker told the Senate Banking Committee that continued slow growth in those and other industrial nations increases the risk of recession in the United States.

He also suggested that Japan should import more goods from Korea and Latin America in an effort to trim its huge trade surplus, a move he said would indirectly help ease this nation's $170 billion trade deficit.

Volcker testified amid reports of a tentative agreement among industrial nations aimed at stabilizing the value of the dollar against other major currencies in exchange for promises from Japan and West Germany to do more to spur growth.

The dollar's value has plunged more than 40 percent in the past two years.

Study says acceptance of government growing

DAYTON (AP) - Two political scientists say President Reagan's popularity helped Americans accept big government, and that acceptance isn't likely to diminish despite Reagan's loss of popularity over the Iran arms affair.

"I think they are accepting reality," Linda Bennett, an assistant professor at Wittenberg University in Springfield, said this week.

She and her husband, Stephen, a professor at the University of Cincinnati, have presented papers on their research at American and international conferences recently. They are working on expanding it to a book, tentatively titled "Living with Leviathan," a look at public opinion of big government from 1964 through 1986.

The couple have used National Election Studies conducted by the University of Michigan through 1984, but Bennett said similar questions on Gallup surveys from 1981-85 show the same trend.

Senator believes Reagan OK'd sale

WASHINGTON (AP) - The former chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee said yesterday he believes President Reagan gave advance approval to an Israeli arms shipment to Iran in August 1985, and "ought to stick with" that story he reportedly once told investigators but later retracted.

Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., also said embattled White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan was "just making problems" with some of his actions in the unfolding Iran-contra controversy.

Meanwhile, members of the presidential review board on the affair conducted a hospital-room interview with former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane.

And inside the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater announced that Regan stands ready to veto any legislation halting aid to the contra rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government. The Democratic-controlled Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved such a bill on Wednesday, and Reagan's spokesman said the intent of the legislation "is simply to abandon all Nicaraguans struggling to bring democracy to their country."

IN CONGRESS, meanwhile, Secretary of State George Shultz offered no response when Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., told him during a hearing that U.S.-provided weapons were having a "dramatic" impact in Iran's favor in its war with Iraq.

Torricelli, just back from a trip to Iraq, said, "The security of our country and of the entire western world is very much at issue today. There is a very real threat the Arab world could be united under this (Iranian) fundamentalist revolution," the congressman said.

In another development in the widening investigation into the Iran-contra controversy, visiting Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said in an interview that Israel would provide "necessary information" to congressional committees conducting their own review.

But he said his government would resist any attempt to force Israeli officials to testify about the country's participation in arranging seven U.S. weapons shipments.

Reagan himself said nothing during the day to reporters on the continuing investigation into the secret sale of arms to Iran and apparent diversion of profits to the contra rebels in Nicaragua. He has repeatedly defended the arms sales, but said he knew nothing of the alleged diversion of funds until Attorney General Edwin Meese III unearthed evidence in November of last year.

REGAN, THE chief of staff, avoided comment as well, as reports continued to circulate that his days at the White House may be coming to an end.

New federal rules regulate drug testing

WASHINGTON (AP) - Federal employees ordered to take drug tests will find it hard to doctor urine samples under rules issued yesterday, but also are guaranteed review by a medical officer before any positive result can be reported to a supervisor.

The technical rules, prepared by the Department of Health and Human Services, do not deal with the underlying controversy of whether it is proper to require tests.

But they still drew quick criticism from a union chief and from two members of Congress, one of whom accused the Reagan administration of attacking fundamental privacy rights of federal workers.

Last September, President Reagan ordered drug testing of employees who have sensitive jobs and instructed the department to develop the scientific procedures to be followed.

The Office of Personnel Management issued regulations last November that could make as many as 1.1 million workers subject to testing, although only a fraction of them are likely to be required to submit.

Those government-wide rules were held in abeyance pending the Health and Human Services guidelines, but some agencies - including the FBI and Drug Enforcement Administration - have been testing on their own. They will have 180 days to bring their clinical procedures in line with those set yesterday.

THE DETAILED new rules, designed to ensure that the person being tested is submitting his own fresh urine sample, call for water in the toilet used to contain a blue dye and for the sample's temperature to be taken within four minutes.

Both are to guard against the person submitting a sample diluted with toilet water or one that was smuggled into the testing site. A monitor would be nearby, but would not watch the person give the sample.

The guidelines include elaborate instructions on transportation of samples to make sure they are not mixed up and on the laboratory testing procedures.

For example, any sample that tests negative on initial screening is reported back to the agency as negative. An initial positive must be confirmed positive by a second, more expensive analysis that is generally accepted as nearly 100 percent accurate.

Even then, the report must go initially only to the agency's medical review officer.

At a news conference, Attorney General Edwin Meese III and Office of Personnel Management Director Constance Horner said the testing program was aimed at rehabilitating drug users.

BUT HORNER acknowledged that employees found to be using drugs once can expect to be fired if they are caught a second time.

BG icers wary of UM

Falcons' Urban faces Wolverine brother one last time

by Matt Winkeljohn assistant sports editor

They're tied for sixth place in a nine-team conference. They have a record of 14-21-1 overall.

On paper, when compared to BG, Michigan stinks. But the game is not played on paper, it's played on ice.

And BG head coach Jerry York said that concern is anything but minor as the Falcons travel to UM tonight and return home to face the Wolverines Saturday to complete the two-game series.

"Back in October, when I made my picks, I picked Michigan as my dark horse. They have a couple of dominant defensemen in (Myles) O'Connor and (Jeff) Norton," York said.

Not only does UM possess the highest scorer in CCHA in center Brad Jones, but the Wolverines have also given the Falcons fits over the last couple of years.

Last year, Red Berenson's squad split the season series with BG. The Wolverines took the first game in Ann Arbor Mich., 7-5, with Dan Kwilas in goal for the Falcons.

Then, last Jan. 10, Michigan blew into the Ice Arena and outscored the Falcons 7-2 in the final two periods to top BG, 7-4.

UM also split the seasonal series each of the previous two years despite finishing seventh last year, and ninth the year before.

Already this year, Berenson's boys have taken a game from BG. That was the first game of this season, a 6-5 affair in Ann Arbor. That was goalie Gary Kruzich's only loss in his first 25 games. He is now 23-3-2.

Senior forward Rob Urban is not slated to play tonight. But should he dress tomorrow in BG, he will be facing a pair of CCHA foes for the final time. In addition to seeing Michigan for the last time in a college hockey uniform (barring a postseason clash), Urban will play for the final time.

Jeff Urban is a sophomore left wing at Michigan. Despite breaking his hand two weeks ago, he will play this weekend.

With four goals and seven assists in 21 games, Rob leads the race for family scoring honors in Minnetonka, Minn. as Jeff has tallied three goals and three assists in 25 games.

Rob is obviously not so worried about slowing down his brother as he is the Wolverines.

"They are one of the hottest teams in the nation over the last two months. They have beaten Michigan State, and Western Michigan. Teams have to have talent to beat those teams,"

Urban said. "Plus, they have to get past Ohio State (in the standings) so they don't have to play Michigan State (in the CCHA playoffs)."

Jones has scored 32 goals and added 41 assists on the season. Fourteen of those scores have come on the power plays. Right wing Brad McCaughey has added 15 power-play goals and is the team's second leading scorer with total of 25-22-47.

Michigan has suffered poor goaltending all year. The team's leading goaltender, freshman Wayne Sharples, is ranked 14th overall in the CCHA's save percentage category with a mark of .849.

In the last month, UM has pounded second-place Michigan State in East Lansing, 8-2, narrowly lost another game, 2-1 to the Spartans, beaten and tied third-place Lake Superior and drilled Alaska-Fairbanks, 8-2 and 9-3. The Wolverines have also split their regular-season series with fourth-place Western Michigan.

York said the Falcons are "100 percent healthy" and goalie Gary Kruzich will play.

Given Michigan's ability to get up for the big games in recent years, and the fact Friday's game in Ann Arbor will be the last time UM's seniors play before a home crowd of more than 8,300, Michigan State coach Ron Mason may like his team's chances of overcoming BG's one-point CCHA lead.

The game is not played on paper. It's played on ice.

Cagers disprove critics with MAC tourney bid

by Tom Reed sports reporter

From Bowling Green, it's just 30 miles to Toledo's Centennial Hall, the site of this year's Mid-American Conference tournament.

But in essence, no team will have come further to reach the tourney than the Falcons.

Wednesday night, BG clinched a berth in the MAC tournament with a 77-75 victory over Ball State. It's the first time the Falcons have qualified for post-season play since 1983.

Yet back in November, most never gave them a chance.

The media picked BG to finish last in the MAC. In fact, one misguided reporter figured the Falcons would do even worse. He picked BG to place 10th in the conference.

Too bad, there are only nine teams. He probably forgot Northern Illinois left the conference. It was the thought that counted, though.

"It bothered me and the whole team that people were down on us," BG guard Joe Gregory said. "We decided that we were going to show that we were a better team than people thought."

Despite the team's optimism, the Falcons were still not taken very seriously. Heck, the coach, Jim Larranaga, was taller than all but one of his players.

Fan support was sparse. The campus was in love with the guys who put the puck in the net. But Larranaga argued his team was also goal-oriented.

"We want to play an exciting brand of basketball," Larra-naga said in November. "We will be fun to watch. And most importantly, we want to make the MAC tournament."

Someone strike up the Rocky theme.

The Falcons started slow, but gradually got their act together. They shocked Ohio University and won back their fans with a strong showing against Cleveland State.

Unity became their new theme as the MAC season opened. And as BG pulled together, the team began winning consistently.

"Hey, we're all in this together," forward Steve Martenet said. "This team is much more unified than last year's team. I think that was important."

Larranaga said the Falcons made the tournament because they triumphed in all the "must win" situations.

"Our kids did a remarkable job at winning when we desperately needed to," he said. "The Ohio University game here and last night's Ball State game are good examples. They came through in the clutch."

Larranaga, however, also deserves much credit. Besides, he was the one who put together the pieces of a team which posted a 7-20 mark last year.

"Jim got the puzzle together down there in Bowling Green," Western Michigan coach Vern Payne said. "He's done an excellent job."

Larranaga was radiant after Wednesday night's win. But the first-year coach didn't take much time to enjoy it. Yesterday, he was busy setting new goals for the Falcons, which are 11-13, 7-6 in the MAC.

"The next step is to get some wins on the road," he said. "This will give us more confidence for the tournament."

While most BG student will soon be preparing for midterms, Larranaga said his team is gearing up for finals.

"The next two weeks are like a review for us," he said. "We are going to go back over everything we learned this year. It's like a review for that big exam."

SCOUTING MIAMI UNIVERSITY: Last year's MAC champs are still scrambling to make the tournament. The Redskins, 6-7 in the MAC, can't afford a loss Saturday in Oxford. MU has dropped three straight.

Gregory said BG should be in for a tough game.

"Miami is real hungry right now, they are coming of a couple losses so they are going to be up for us," he said.

At the start of the year, MU lost the services of All-MAC standout guard Eric Newsome, since then the Redskins have struggled.

They are led by guard Todd Staker and Karlton Clayton, who are averaging 12 ppg. Staker was tremendous the Redskins' 76-75 setback in BG on Jan. 24. He tallied 30 points in a losing effort.

BG must also be wary of forward Trimmill Haywood, who is fourth in the MAC in rebounding (7.8 rpg.) In the last meeting, Haywood scored 24 points, including 10 in the final five minutes.

Redskins' guard Eddie Schilling paces the MAC in assists, averaging 7.5 per game.

QUOTE OF THE WEEK: Frank Booker describing the intensity with which teammate Lamon Pippin dunks the ball:

"Let me tell you, when Lamon slams he puts that little extra 'ugh' on it. You know what I mean?"

TOM REED'S FANTASTIC FIVE:

1. Indiana - The Hoosiers proved they could win even when Steve Alford isn't hot. Indiana also showed its poise in stifling Wisconsin's upset bid in Tuesday night's triple overtime thriller.

2. North Carolina - Dean Smith knows life doesn't begin at 55, but it doesn't end at 600. Last week, the legendary coach

Tumblers face WMU for MAC lead

by Andy Woodard
sports reporter

In about every sport, two of the better teams will square off during the regular season before the league championships. Tonight's Bowling Green-Western Michigan gymnastics matchup is no different.

The MAC championships aren't until March 29.

But the Falcons, 3-2 overall and 3-0 in the Mid-American Conference, will take on the defending MAC champion Broncos, 5-3 overall and 2-0 in the conference, tonight at 6 in Eppler North gym for first place WMU's ninth-year coach Kathy Beauregard has high hopes for the meet.

"We always have an excellent meet with BG," she said. "We want to be consistent, get a good score and make it a good meet."

"As compared to the other teams I've seen, it looks to be between BG and ourselves for the MAC championship. We know what the meet means and my team always competes better against the better teams."

FALCON COACH Charles Simpson, however, is downplaying the meet's importance.

"We're always going out to do the best we can, whether it's Western or anybody else," he said. "I've been telling my (gymnasts), if they beat us, make them earn it, but we just want to do our best."

BG senior captain Julia Wicks agreed with Simpson.

"Overall, we're just following coach's lead and preparing for the MAC," she said. "In our heart we know it's a big meet, but we want to downplay that and just have our best performance."

"No one wants to be overly nervous to where they have a lack of concentration. We'd rather be nervous about our routines than about the meet..."

No matter what way you look at the meet, both squads will be hampered by injuries.

BG junior Maria DeChiara is still has a sore shoulder and will miss the meet. The rest of the BG squad, which has had its share of illnesses and injuries, will compete.

THE BRONCOS will be without Bonnie Boggiano, who has the MAC's second-best all-around score of 35.95. Teammate Cindy Mazei, WMU's best vaulter, will also miss the meet.

Simpson, however, is still curious.

"We've got our big guns and so do they. It'll be interesting to see what happens."

won his 600th game. He should keep winning right through the ACC tourney.

3. San Diego State - Wonder if Denny Stolz knows anything about basketball? He could probably do a better job than the yahoo who's currently running the show. The Aztecs are a woe-ful 3-22.

4. DePaul - After multi-talented Mark Aguirre graduated and coach Ray Meyer retired, the Blue Demons lost much of their identity. But now Dallas Comegys and Joey Meyer are building a new tradition. DePaul may be a darkhorse in the NCAA tournament.

5. Toledo - DePaul is a sleeper, the Rockets should be put to sleep. Fortunately, the season is mercifully coming to a close. Toledo, 4-10, will miss the MAC tournament for the first time in six years.

APPLICATIONS FOR FRAZIER REAMS FELLOWSHIP

Deadline: Monday March 2, 1987

The Frazier Reams Public Affairs Undergraduate Fellowship Program was established in 1973 in recognition of Frazier Reams, Sr. and his distinguished service in the broadcasting industry and as a member of Congress and as a trustee of Bowling Green State University.

Five Fellowships may be granted annually to rising seniors who intend to pursue careers in public affairs (speech communication, broadcasting, journalism, political or governmental service, public health, community service, law or some other public affairs field). A rising senior is a student with a minimum G.P.A. of 3.2 who will attend BGSU for two semesters of his/her senior year, and will graduate no sooner than May 1988. Each fellow will receive $1500. Fellows will be selected by a committee composed of BGSU faculty and the vice president for University Relations. The selection of fellows will be based on an initial screening process and further review which may include personal interviews.

The application form and all support materials, including letters of recommendation, must be submitted to the Office of the Vice President for University Relations, Mileti Alumni Center by 4:30 p.m., Monday, March 2, 1987. Recipients will be notified prior to any public announcement on or about March 20, 1987.

Applications are available in the Office of the Vice President for University Relations, Mileti Alumni Center; School of Mass Communication, 302 West Hall; and the Department of Political Science, Founders Hall, 5th Floor, L519.

Student Recreation Center

Prediction. The End is Near: Weds. Feb 25!

No, not the end of the world but almost. It's the end of the Men's home basketball season and your last chance to see seniors Frank Booker and Avon Davey play in Anderson Arena. The Falcon hoopsters tangle with the Western Michigan Broncos in their final home game, as both teams fight for a MAC tournament bid. The end of the TWA/AAA Falcon Flyaway is also here and winners must be present to receive their trip. So, bring your sunglasses and spirit, and say goodbye to Booker, Davey, and the team in the Falcon Finale!!!

Say Goodbye to the Men at 8:00, Women at 5:30!

Friday interviews by Denelle Jones

What places have you found that offer a good environment to study in?

Tim Jensen junior biology/french major from Delaware: "Empty classrooms."

Kathy Szabo sophomore accounting major from Bowling Green: "Prout - it's more quiet and it has a study atmosphere."

Paul Roginski junior selling/sales management major from Bay Village: "The union - I can't study in complete silence."

Kim Jackson junior communications/RTVF major from Orwell: "Upstairs in Prout and Offenbauer East."

Havens of solitude

by Barbara Symbolik
Friday reporter

There never seem to be enough hours in the day to get all of the work done that accumulates on my desk. To keep myself from going insane from the never-ending work load, I try to find a quiet place to collect my thoughts and catch up on the growing pile of assignments.

When the weather is nice, you can usually find me at one of the parks: Carter Park or the City Park. At either one of these places, you can grab a picnic table and hide your face in the book you have neglected to read since the beginning of the semester and there is a test over it tomorrow.

When you get tired of reading, there is always playground equipment to entertain yourself with.

Frisch's Big Boy is the ideal place for studying - not to mention curbing a big appetite. A good time to go is late at night when there isn't a great deal of commotion, but enough atmosphere to make people-watching interesting.

For some, the Jerome Library is a great place to get away. Enjoy it while it lasts - the library closes at midnight weekdays.

The Student Services Building offers a lounge overlooking the patio. Not many people go there so there is plenty of space and quiet.

Those living in Kohl Hall or Founders Quadrangle are aware of the huge walk-in closets, which make a wonderful haven of solitude. Those closets have helped me through a whole semester of English literature.

The laundry rooms in the dorms can serve a dual purpose - there isn't much to do while you're in the rinse cycle, so until you have to fluff and fold, study or relax and enjoy the time.

The Moore Musical Arts Center offers a lounge in the basement and an outdoor courtyard. The massive brick walls allow the rays of the sun to peek in at you while the shadows from the other walls block out the world.

Other interesting areas which seem to provide great hideaways include the 11th floor of Offenbauer West (when you can get up there), Prout Hall study lounge, the Student Recreation Center on weekends when everyone is out on the town or home for the weekend, the band practice field, a rented room at the Holiday Inn or the safe comfort of your bed - if you turn off the ringer to the phone and refuse to answer knocks at the door.

Dining in, party time

by Deanna Griffith
Friday staff reporter

There are two new trends in off-campus student dining: the taste-testing party and the exchange dinner.

The taste-testing party - or in layman's terms, the potluck dinner - is simply what its name implies. The hosting apartment/house invites as many people as they have plates to fill. These guests are required to bring three things: themselves, their appetites and something to eat.

According to Linda Lloyd, junior elementary education/learning and behavioral disabilities major and a hosting resident, "At our first one (taste-testing party) we had a lot of hungry people, but we also had a lot of food." Lloyd added that "when we have these parties, we have a lot of people who are afraid to start eating, so I always have to go first."

These taste-testing parties generally have a theme so that the guests know what kind of food to bring. Lloyd's first party was around Thanksgiving, so her guests brought their favorite Thanksgiving Day foods. "My roommates and I supplied the turkey and fish, our friends brought potatoes, wine, stuffing, vegetables and desserts," Lloyd said.

She added, "We have also had exchange dinners; we cook for our friends, and then our friends cook for us." These exchange dinners usually consist of fish from Lake Erie that was caught over the summer on Lloyd's boat.

Delsa Mason, junior elementary education/learning and behavioral disabilities major and also a hostess, commented that "at these dinners other people cook for me, which is great because I hate to cook; the only thing I do is furnish the canned corn." Not only are these dinners a chance to get together with friends, but they are also a way to try out new recipe concoctions.

Mike Thomas, senior biology/pre-med major, said, "We have stir-fry parties. My friends Beth Bunguard and Jacki Reisig have a wok, and they invite us over and we throw everything in." Thomas added, "It got to be too expensive because we threw in everything, even steak."

The idea behind this new trend in eating is not only to add variety to dining, but also to get together with friends.

"You get together with a bunch of friends, eat a lot of food and just waste an entire evening," Thomas said.

This new twist to gourmet dining is designed so students can experience a variety of food without going out.

Artwork reveals images of self

by Kathie Reigle
Friday reporter

Because each work of art carries a message, therapists use this medium to help people learn about themselves.

"Art therapists are trained to help people communicate their feelings and other personal issues through the use of art materials," said Michael Franklin, director of the University's art therapy program.

In general, the art therapist will work with a team of mental health professionals in a diagnostic capacity. They do not directly interpret the artwork, but rather help the client to interpret his or her own creations.

"I think everything means something, but I don't know what everything means. Meaning behind objects people create become apparent only through the development of a therapeutic relationship," Franklin said.

"What one makes with art materials communicates a great deal. Words are often inappropriate to describe and process certain feelings and experiences," Franklin said.

This type of therapy does not only service the mentally ill but can help many groups of people, such as children, adolescents and the elderly, as well as affective disorders and schizophrenic disorders.

Art therapists can be found in any place where the need for people to learn about themselves. Not employed solely by hospitals, these therapists work in schools, prisons, nursing homes and corporate industries, to name a few.

Becoming an art therapist involves extensive training and education. The University has one of few programs across the nation which provides a comprehensive major at the undergraduate level. Students are required to take classes in many of the "studio" arts, which include painting, drawing, sculpture and ceramics, as well as art history.

"A large part of studying art therapy is in learning about the art-making process from a personal perspective. The intimacy involved in making one's own art will help to direct others," Franklin said.

Along with the studio arts, a specific supportive core requirement must be fulfilled in the areas of either psychology, social work or educational psychology. A choice of a cognate in a behavioral science, in which 20 hours must be fulfilled, range anywhere from criminal justice to gerontology to special education.

However, one cannot become an art therapist with simply an undergraduate degree. A graduate degree in which extensive theory and practice is involved and 1000 paid hours of actual client contact therapy are required to become a registered art therapist.

"When working as a therapist, one works with fragile people and it becomes mandatory that the therapist have specific training beyond the undergraduate level," according to Franklin.

Elinor Ulman and Linda Gant are two prominent art therapists who will be speaking at the University this semester. Ulman is an assistant professor and coordinator of training in the master's degree program in art therapy of the George Washington University in Washington, D.C. She is well known in the field for her scholarly articles and has been published in several books pertaining to the profession.

Gant is chair of the research committee for the American Art Therapy Association. Gant has also published many articles on both her clinical work and interests, and is noted especially for her research within the field.

Folklore and facts at archives

by Kelly Vaughn
Friday staff reporter

Little-known facts and folklore can be found on the fifth floor of Jerome Library in the Center for Archival Collections (CAC).

The CAC contains not only the history of the University and Bowling Green, but also northwestern Ohio. Land and property records, social welfare records and administrative records can be obtained for study of area counties' government proceedings.

Manuscripts documenting church, union and women's organizations along with historical newspapers are also available.

A Bowling Green Sentinel-Tribune article by Ivan Lake stored in the CAC explained the reasoning behind the University using the falcon as the mascot. "They (the athletes) are trained by a coach through early stages of fundamentals in every sport until they are ready for the campaign." The falcon is a courageous dark brown bird: "Therefore, let them be known as 'the Falcons' and let them live up to the admirable reputation that that small bird has earned."

Freddie the Falcon was introduced in 1950 by the service fraternity Alpha Phi Omega. Frieda arrived in 1966 for a publicity stunt, but did not become permanent until 1980.

The lamps in front of University Hall were put there to ensure the safety of University coeds as they walked on campus late at night. The poles were named Purity Poles and made it difficult for young love to spark and flame in the old days — University legend

Steve Charter, reference archivist, said many students use the archives for class assignments and projects. A journalism history class uses Civil War newspapers, a theater class uses diaries for oral presentations and graduate students use the manuscript collections for thesis research.

The view of the CAC as the elevator doors open is a little sparse, but the information it contains is overwhelming. The closed stacks contain boxes and racks of papers and documents.

After an application and request form are filled out, researchers can take notes in the research room, the Carnation Room, with pencil and paper.

The tables in the research room provide space for looking up past BG News articles to examine the hot topics of years gone by. For instance, how Reagan's visit was covered or students' feelings and fears after the Kent State incident can be found by requesting past issues.

The open area of the CAC contains many volumes of manuscript registers, cemetery inscriptions and University facts. Facts of BGSU contains lists of past BG News editors, past Homecoming queens, statistics and traditions.

The Bushes Still Kick Back, a three-ring binder of University legends, contains folklore about past presidents, buildings and social activities.

The book itself has a legendary name. The lamps in front of University Hall were put there to ensure the safety of University coeds as they walked on campus late at night. The poles were named Purity Poles and made it difficult for young love to spark and flame in the old days.

In desperate attempts for some privacy, some ingenious couples took to the bushes that were once plentiful in front of University Hall. It is said that many a passionate evening took place there.

Bob Hope was made aware of this form of courting when visiting the campus and commented on it while on national television. "BGSU," Hope is rumored to have joked, "is the only place I know of where, if you kick the bushes . . . the bushes kicked back."

The book, compiled by a 1978 campus folklore class, also notes the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity tradition of growing beards, Beta Beards, before the Beta 500 each spring. It started when a brother began growing one for luck three weeks before the event. In order to psych up the brothers before the race, the pledges start spinning the wheels at midnight the day of the race and keep them turning right up until race time.

The Key, which summarizes the academic year in one volume, can be found on the shelves for a quick and easy reference book for research on specific years of a particular annual event over a period of years.

The books highlight the 50 streakers who bared it all in 1974, and show how campus life has evolved over the years.

The most interesting feature to Charter is "the diversity of collections." The CAC has University department records, student organization records, annual catalogs and University yearbooks dating back to 1918.

The biggest drawback, according to Charter, is that forms have to be filled out to request material and the materials cannot leave the fifth floor.

Along with the University history, the CAC also has rare books and special collections, including works by Ray Bradbury.

The CAC serves to promote the conservation of northwestern Ohio's cultural and historical resources by operating a paper conservation laboratory to repair or encapsulate paper documents.

The Archives are available to all students to use for class or personal research. Whether researching Clyde, Ohio, family roots or class assignments, the CAC offers a unique approach to routine library research.

SHOP LOCALLY!

The money you spend helps Bowling Green grow and prosper

A part of everything you spend in local stores goes to make your town a better place to live for you and your family. Merchants pay taxes, donate to community projects, and support local institutions. The merchants are your neighbors and they want to work with you to improve and support the good life in our community. You'll be helping your neighbors and yourself.

When you shop locally, everyone benefits. It's more convenient so you save gas and time. You get friendly service because local merchants know you and appreciate your business. They depend on you to keep their stores going strong. And some of what you spend goes back into the community in the form of taxes to help pay for the services you enjoy having here: police, fire, and trash collection, to name just a few.

Remember... Your money buys more when you shop at a local store. It's good for you, good for us, good for the community!

Hotel a reminder of past era

by Jenny Hudson and Keith Cornelius

1896: Grover Cleveland was president, a seven-course meal was a whopping 25 cents and a double room at the Milliken Hotel cost $3.50 ($5 if there was a bathroom).

The Milliken Hotel, a Bowling Green landmark since it opened its doors 91 years ago, is located at the corner of Main and Wooster streets. It ceased operations in the 1950s. Uhlman's Home Store and the Hotel Hairstyling Salon now occupy the first floor.

But in its heyday, according to the 1983 Sesquicentennial issue of the Sentinel-Tribune, the Milliken was the most expensive structure in Wood County, boasting a sky light, a rotunda with a fountain and a $60,000 price tag.

The Milliken Hotel was the product of William Milliken's wish to bring a luxury hotel to Bowling Green. He wanted to ensure that it was unique but, according to Virginia Nader, local resident and granddaughter of Milliken, "It was never meant as a money-maker. He just wanted to offer Bowling Green a nice hotel."

Milliken, a Pennsylvania oil producer, moved to Bowling Green in 1887. His family joined him in 1889. Part of his fortune was obtained from the Wood County oil industry in the late 1800s. During this time he purchased the land on which the Milliken currently stands. In 1894 began construction of the hotel, Nader said.

Concurrent with the elaborate mansions and beautiful buildings that were flourishing in the Bowling Green area at that time, Milliken built the hotel with the help of Toledo architects and made it a landmark of a lifestyle now extinct, according to the Sentinel.

Since Bowling Green had just installed a public water system two years before the hotel was built, Milliken capitalized on the modern convenience, Nader explained. Six of the 50 rooms had private bathrooms, an uncommon luxury during that era. The other guests shared common bathrooms located in the hallway.

Electrical service was another story. Nader said that prior to the construction of the Milliken Hotel, there was no such utility available on Main Street. Milliken installed a generating plant that provided electricity for the hotel as well as other businesses and residences in the area.

The hotel also boasted its own sewer system and carriage house but still maintained its reasonable prices of $2.50 for a single room and $3.50 for a double.

An elegant dining room was located on the third floor was very elegant, even for its day, with tiled floor and beautiful wainscoting that provided an aura of elegance previously unseen in Bowling Green, Nader said. An oval dome of stained glass filtered light in from the ceiling.

Despite being the main attraction during the hotel's first 20 years, the dining room closed in 1917 when the oil boom died out and fewer guests frequented the hotel, according to the Sentinel.

The first floor of the hotel housed the lobby, with its grand stairway and tiled floor. The stairway and the hotel's front desk are still intact in the bath section of Uhlman's Home Store.

After business began to wane in the 1920s and '30s, the parlor on the second floor of the hotel still functioned as a meeting place, Nader said. The lobby served as a Western Union Office and a Greyhound Bus Station in the 1930s and '40s.

The hotel, which actually comprised the top two floors of the building, ceased operations in the 1950s when new fire regulations no longer permitted open stairways in public buildings, Nader explained. Restructuring would have been costly and unrealistic since the hotel wasn't designed to make money for the owners.

Also leading to the hotel's closing was the changing traffic patterns.

"Traffic had gotten so heavy on that corner that it was difficult to sleep in the hotel," Nader recalled. Interstate 75 and the Route 6 bypass had not been completed, so all truck traffic went right through town.

Since that time, the upper floors have remained virtually the same, with the white curtains hanging in the windows and the spreads still on the beds. The exterior has been maintained, but Nader lamented the fact that "the upper floors are in a terrible state of disrepair. It's heartbreaking."

Courthouse features architectural beauty

by Amy Kizer and
Donna Scenna

Marble staircases, ornate pillars, moldings and a stained glass vaulted ceiling are some of the many architectural features of the Bowling Green Courthouse on the corner of Court and Prospect streets.

On the third floor there are two murals depicting Wood County's oil boom in 1904 and Fort Meigs in 1813. The tile floors compliment the walls and ceilings, which are done in grays, peaches, creams and violets.

The dial of this clock is the second largest in the world. The tower is 185 feet tall with four dials facing each compass point. Its bell, which strikes each hour, weighs 2,000 pounds.

The interior of the courthouse, which was designed by N.B. Bacon of the Bacon and Huber architectural firm in Toledo, reflects the Romanesque revival style.

Construction of the courthouse began on July 4, 1894 with a special ground-breaking ceremony. More than 15,000 people attended the event, which began at 10:07 a.m. with a parade. As part of the ceremony, a special copper box was sealed within the cornerstone of the courthouse. It contains: a portrait of Gibson, a copy of the act providing for the building and copies of the Sentinel Tribune, The Blade and other area newspapers. Also included is a copper plate engraved with the following names: U. S. President Grover Cleveland, Ohio Gov. William McKinley, all Bowling Green businessmen and Grand Lodge Independent Order of Odd Fellows officials.

After construction began, the courthouse planners decided to purchase a clock tower. The dial of this clock is now the second largest in the world. It is second only to the Chronicle newspaper building clock in San Francisco. The tower itself is 185 feet tall with four dials facing each compass point. Its bell, which strikes each hour, weighs 2,000 pounds.

During construction, the architect and contractor made several unauthorized changes in the building specifications. As a result, the building committee deducted $4,500 from their payment. Nevertheless, the courthouse was completed in 1896 at a total cost of $255,746.84, according to a souvenir edition of the Sentinel.

Following 82 years of use, the courthouse was in need of renovation. The project began in 1978 and was finished three years and $3.2 million later. White marble was imported from Italy to match the original and the $200,000 worth of stained glass was renovated. Offices were remodeled, a new heating and cooling system was installed and repair was completed.

The building was placed on the National Register of Historic Places by the Department of the Interior.

Shoes repaired with western flair

by Dianna L. Borsl
Friday reporter

Like a pocket of down-home charm and as difficult to find as country music on the FM dial is Glenn's Shoe Repair. Proclaimed by a simple sign, "SHOE REPAIR," this country cobbler is technically at 147 N. Main St. But since the shop is hidden behind the store fronts, most of his weekly 145 customers come 'round back through Wilson's Shoes.

Once in the shop, customers hear the friendly voice of Glenn Haught coming from under an enormous cowboy hat, and country music fills the small space. Proprietor, worker and craftsman, Haught — complete with cowboy boots — explains the unlikely country flavor. Originally in Western wear, Haught purchased the machinery in 1978 and started boot repairs.

"Then it kind of took over. I've never advertised. People started coming in and I got out of the Western wear business," Haught said. But Haught said he left the clothing business just a bit too soon. "A year later the urban cowboy look came along," he said. Since then he has seen Western wear stores come and go in the area but his repair business has remained.

The shoe repair business also offers him the artisan opportunity he enjoys. "I especially like working on a good pair of Western boots. They're unique, every pair is special and when you're done you can make them look new," Haught said.

In addition, Haught believes good footwear is important. "The better the shoes the better it is for your feet; good shoes mean no feet problems," Haught said. Good shoes and boots can be repaired five or six times before the tops go, according to Haught.

However, other footwear and problems find their way to Haught's shop. Golf and bowling bags in need of zippers compete for space with the high heels, shoes and boots waiting for new soles that lean on shelves surrounding the shop.

Another area that demands Haught's skills is orthopedic work. Using prescriptions from doctors, Haught alters children's shoes. "A lot of children will have a toe-in or a toe-out problem and an outsole wedge is needed to correct the problem," Haught said.

Patching, sewing, installing lifts and other repairs fill the rest of Haught's 50-hour work week. Using a variety of machines that look like renegades from another era, Haught even repairs sneakers. "I've patched a lot of running shoes," Haught said. With costs of running shoes ranging from $60 to $70, many people bring their shoes in for repairs, Haught said.

Haught notes that shoe repairs could be making a comeback. A recent catalog advertised boots with the phrase, "wetting construction for easy resoling," Haught said. This is good news for Haught, who enjoys his work on doing about 100 jobs a week.

Smiling under the brim of his hat, Haught said, "If I didn't like it, I wouldn't be here." And with the country music nearly drowned out by the hum of the machinery, Haught picks up the next boot and moves on.

Theater becoming tourist site

by Kelly Rose
Friday staff reporter

The Gish Film Theater is on its way to becoming a tourist attraction in Wood County, according to Ralph Wolfe, curator of the theater. The theater is dedicated to Lillian and Dorothy Gish, who have been called the first women of the American cinema.

The film theater, located in Hanna Hall, was dedicated on June 11, 1976, and coincided with the establishment of a film studies program in the College of Arts and Sciences. The renovation of the film theater included a marquee, a lobby to display the photographs of the sisters in many of their movies and an improved movie projection area.

Wolfe initiated the naming of the film theater for several reasons. He said Lillian has had a life-long interest in films, is an Ohio native and began her acting career in Rising Sun, which is 20 miles from Bowling Green.

Dorothy Gish died in 1968, but her sister has visited the University four times. Lillian visited the campus twice in 1976 to receive an honorary Doctor of Performing Arts degree and to attend the opening of the renovated theater. Three years later she accepted the Popular Culture Association Achievement Award from the University.

In 1982 she came to the University to attend the dedication of the collection of photographs depicting the Gish's careers. The photos were originally a part of the 1980 Lillian Gish Retrospective at the Museum of Modern Art in New York City.

The actress' mother traveled as part of a touring company that often visited Ohio. The company sometimes needed children for its plays and Lillian often performed in them. She later worked with director D.W. Griffith in several films. In 1912, the sisters starred in their first movie together, "The Unseen Enemy."

Gish has received about every acting award, according to Wolfe. Among them are an American Film Institute Life Achievement Award, an Academy Award and a Kennedy Center Honorary Award.

Besides acting in 106 films, she also has extensive stage credits. Gish also carries the distinction of being the longest performing film star in American history.

In 1979, Lillian Gish endowed the Dorothy and Lillian Gish Scholarship to be awarded annually to an outstanding student in film studies. She also made a $10,000 endowment to create the Dorothy and Lillian Gish Collection of Film History in the University's Jerome Library.

Wolfe hopes the film theater will be a place for people to come and learn about the history of American film and perhaps become a tourist attraction when the renovations are completed.

He expects to eventually make additional improvements on the projection facilities and get new seating for the film theater.

"RIDE THE NEW WAVE"

INTER-CAMPUS PROGRAMS

by Beth Gilbert
Friday reporter

Two paintings of odd-looking creatures hang on his living room wall. In his bedroom, about half a dozen clay sculptures of dragons stand guard on a shelf. His portfolio contains no landscapes or portraits, but rather drawings of "otherworld" creatures that bear little resemblance to anything seen on earth.

He calls himself a fantasy artist, and says, "Reality is only for those who cannot handle fantasy."

Cline Siegenthaler, senior radio-television-film major, draws and paints subjects like a seemingly innocent tube of toothpaste that becomes a dragon and a strange animal roasting an ant over a fire.

When people first see Siegenthaler's artwork, they think he is a little strange. "People in high school, and some in college, ask me what drugs I take," he says. "I just laugh at 'em."

Different perspectives. . .

Siegenthaler admits his art was influenced by "too many movies, comic books and more movies."

His interest in art began when he was a child. He took up sculpting in the second grade and started creating clay dinosaurs. Eventually he graduated to making superheroes and monsters.

"I started getting A's, so I kept making them," he explains.

Originally an art major, Siegenthaler switched to RTVF after his adviser told him his style of artwork did not fit in with the University's fine arts program.

He decided to check with the film department to see what opportunities existed with animation. Since he has always liked movies, it seemed like a natural step, although he says, "I like drawing better than making movies."

His art background is reflected in his favorite film technique, claymation, which is a process that utilizes clay figures. The figures are posed, filmed, moved a fraction of an inch or so, filmed, moved again, and so on.

It is a long and tedious process, but Siegenthaler likes the three-dimensional nature of claymation and working in a miniature form. He explained that claymation, which was used for "Gumby," is easier for him to do than drawing individual shots, which is the technique used in the Disney movies.

Recently he submitted a 3-minute claymation film to an animation company in Boston. The company is interested in putting together a special for Showtime consisting of short animated and live-action films by amateur filmmakers. If the show is successful, it may become a series.

Siegenthaler's entry was titled "No Mercy Hospital." It is the story of a non-human nurse and doctor who perform brain surgery on other non-human creatures. In the end, they accidentally create a human politician and then kill him so they do not have to listen to budget hearings or State of the Union addresses.

Over the summer, Siegenthaler was asked to participate in a counseling session for the psychology department. After speaking with him once, the counselor asked him to return with some of his art, and later concluded that he could draw weird pictures and still be normal. "I took that as a compliment," Siegenthaler said.

Siegenthaler has shown his work at the 5th Annual Wood County Art Show, the Wood County Fair and Currents art gallery.

Yugoslavian sees ordinary objects in artistic light

by Christopher Smith
Friday staff reporter

Books and movies can be deceptive. At best they are one-dimensional representations of real life that don't necessarily click with what they depict. Fortunately, this isn't always for the worst.

Take the case of Yugoslavian artist Relja Penezic. "It's funny. When I came here I knew all about America. I read a lot of books, (saw) a lot of movies and met a lot of Americans. But, this landscape and (the) people look so different than anything I'd seen before," Penezic said.

His impressions of America thus far are favorable. He doesn't worry about what impressions others have of his art. "I know positively that there are some people that don't like it but that's normal. I know also positively that there are some people who really like it very much. If you think you can please everybody then you'll never do anything. You'll be too scared to paint," he said.

Penezic is influenced by the French

Romantic period of the 19th century. He noted that artists of that time believed each object had emotion and a sense of sadness about it.

"I don't really believe in the same thing that they believed in, but I like their stories, their images, their atmospheres and everything so I try to recreate those things," he said.

Physical features characteristic of the Midwest (such as flatness of the land, colorful sunsets and wooden houses) caught Penezic's eye and much of his artwork reveals this. And while his paintings are devoted to area landscape scenes, they are not depicted with the realism of a photograph.

That's what most struck Currents art gallery co-owner Ro Basile. "He wants you to have some kind of an emotional attachment or emotional feeling. He can make you look at something as mundane as a water tower and give it a real ethereal kind of feeling," Basile said. His art is being displayed at the store.

"The thing I enjoy most about his art is that people who have lived here all their lives have come in and looked at these things and will say the same things as, 'I've seen these things all my life and I've never seen them quite like this. I've never noticed them before,'" she said.

When it comes to picking subjects around which to weave this magic, Penezic said he has no favorites. "I hope that behind everything is a concept, something I believe in. I'm trying to make romantic landscapes and you can make romantic landscapes out of anything," Penezic said.

Unlike the stereotypical image of painters, Penezic will not be found setting up at a scene and painting it glance by glance. He prefers to paint from images in his memory. His system doesn't seem to hinder the ease with which he finishes a painting, however.

"It's something (that) as I'm growing older I become quicker. It's experience. Now I know better what I want, but sometimes I get stuck on one painting for almost a month. Normally it will take me several days or a week. You never know how it's going to work," he said.

According to Penezic, painting expenses shouldn't keep anyone out of an art career — as long as you can sell at least some paintings. "When you sell your paintings and make money then it's not very expensive, but when you're in trouble then everything is expensive. Even the cheapest brush, you think twice before buying it," he said.

Artists who rely exclusively on selling their art to make a living are at the mercy of an uncertain market. "You don't paint them really for sales but for ideas. You have something to express, you do it, and then when it comes to sales it's hard to find your ideas connecting with someone who will buy it. That's why art sales are so complicated," Penezic said.

For Penezic, the monetary rewards are overshadowed by the personal satisfaction he derives from the actual painting itself. "Whatever happens, this time while you are alone with your painting . . . that's something that no one can ever take away from you. Anything that you can do alone for yourself, that's great," he said.

University office relates to public

by David Buehler
Friday reporter

Seven full-time staffers and several part-time employees spend their days trying to make the University look good to the public.

These employees can be found in the University public relations department and produce about 600 news releases per year, boasting of faculty and student accomplishments, according to Clifton Boutelle, director of public relations.

Thus, hometown newspapers carry stories of student achievements such as winning scholarships, making the dean's list and acting in plays.

About 200 publications ranging from the University Catalogue to pamphlets, brochures and posters also come out of the office, Boutelle said. Titles include the alumni magazine At Bowling Green with a circulation of 84,000 and "Green Sheet" which comes with the BG News every other week. The Monitor reaches faculty and administration.

About 1,000 rolls of 36-exposure film a year are shot for PR department publications, other University publications such as "The Bowling Green Falcon Hockey Media Guide," formal faculty and staff portraits, and team portraits, University photographer Bill Brown said.

"It's sometimes mind boggling when you think of how much film is shot through this office," Brown said.

Brown works 40 hours a week in his office and covers sports and cultural events evenings and weekends. A 10-year file of all photographs is maintained, and pictures taken of events around campus, like the apartheid rally, are kept in the archives.

Brown has two student part-time assistants helping him as well. He said he enjoys his work, even though it is demanding since he is on call 24 hours a day. "I have to check my calendar to make a date," he said of his social life.

The Foreigner

by Mickey Molnar
Friday reporter

The lives of a wimpy Englishman, a two-faced minister, his pregnant fiancée, her cretin-like brother and a paranoid Klansman intertwine in the madcap comic adventure, "The Foreigner," by Larry Shue.

The production is presented by the University Theater department in cooperation with Dramatists Play Service, Inc.

The setting is a fishing lodge in southern Georgia owned by the amiable Betty Meeks (Nancy Erikson, sophomore journalism major). The comic escapades begin when one of her regulars, "Froggy" (Jeff Smith, popular culture instructor), a shrewd and wily demolition expert in the British army, brings his friend Charlie (Michael Taylor, communications-education major) for a three-day visit.

Charlie, a shy science fiction magazine proofreader, is distraught over his wife's infidelity (she has 23 "friends") and lives in constant fear of having to participate in a conversation with strangers.

In Charlie's absence, "Froggy" alleviates the problem by informing the lodge's residents that Charlie is from an exotic land and speaks no English. Charlie opposes the idea at first but plays along.

The humor mounts when several characters reveal intimate details of their lives, assuming that Charlie doesn't understand a word.

The lodgers include a suspicious minister (John Schultz, senior comprehensive science education major), his pregnant fiancée Catherine (Melissa Millington, junior interpersonal and public communication major) and her dim-witted brother Ellard (Kerry Riffle, senior theater major).

Ellard will receive a large inheritance if Catherine deems him to be intelligent.

In one scene Ellard attempts to teach English to Charlie at the breakfast table and is amazed by his word recognition. He continues the lesson by teaching him the names of ordinary objects like a wheelbarrow.

Later in the play Charlie returns the favor. He administers lessons in his alleged foreign tongue to the unwilling minister and his associate Owen Musser (Ryan Adkins, sophomore education major). Owen, who's the head of an inept chapter of the Ku Klux Klan, takes offense to Charlie's words and threatens retribution.

The performances of Taylor and Adkins highlight a frenzied pace toward an amusing climax.

Photo: "Foreigner" Charlie Baker, played by Michael Taylor, chants to Owen Musser, played by Ryan Adkins, in order to frighten him.
