Education is key to King's dream

by Jackie Jackson
copy editor

Working toward a dream is a tough task, but education is the key to fulfilling it, said Mary Edmonds, University vice president of student affairs.

She said Martin Luther King Jr., who would have been 59 today, did not intend for his dream to be a reality in one year, or two or three, but he kept to the belief that his "four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but the content of their character."

King, whose birthday is observed by the nation on Monday, was not referring to a color blind society, but a recognition of cultural diversity as something positive, Edmonds said.

Unfortunately, nearly 20 years have passed and his dream still remains a vision.

"People still judge you by race and you still have to be overqualified to get the same jobs," Edmonds said, "but education is the ticket."

Edmonds, who was a personal friend of King, said if we did not have him we would be in worse shape.

"He gives us hope that one day the color of your skin will not be the measure of your worth," she said.

THE MAN REMEMBERED

John Scott, professor of theater, said King gave people the inspiration to strive for change.

"The legacy of his dream is in the hearts of a lot of people who are still left to pursue changing the face of American society," he said.

Scott agreed with Edmonds that education is important, adding, "equal access to education is as important as food. It is nourishment for the spirit, for the intellect, and for the body."

Conrad Pritscher, professor of education, said things will get better only if more white people actively fight against racism.

"Whites need to talk to whites when they see incidents of racism," he said. "They often don't listen to blacks when they (blacks) complain of racism. Many whites are being prejudice without realizing it."

He said for a while we made great strides, but in the last seven years it has been more fashionable to show prejudice towards blacks.

"Martin Luther King Jr.'s non-violent approach made some people aware of the problem, but since 1980 in particular there seems to be a reversing of the good," Pritscher said. "The very fact that our foundation board voted to not divest even though our president has recommended that they divest, is evidence that apartheid and racism is indirectly being promoted on this campus."

"It is no more possible to be half free than half alive," Pritscher said quoting King.

Pritscher said education is still needed. □ See King, page 4.

Bork gives up gavel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal appellate court judge Robert Bork has resigned from the bench, telling President Reagan he wants to "publicly respond" to the charges that doomed his nomination to the Supreme Court, the White House announced yesterday.

Bork's resignation letter was dated Jan. 7 but was released only yesterday.

In a letter accepting the 60-year-old jurist's request to leave the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, Reagan said:

"The unprecedented political attack upon you which resulted in the regrettable Senate action was a tragedy for our country. All Americans are the poorer today for not having your extraordinary talents and legal skills on the high court."

The Senate on Oct. 3 denied Bork a seat on the Supreme Court by a 58-42 vote, culminating a long and tumultuous confirmation process that left Reagan administration officials embittered and prompted Reagan at one point to promise that he would send a new nominee "just as objectionable" to the Senate.

In his letter to Reagan, Bork took note of the political brouhaha that surrounded his confirmation process, and said that, "for several months, various highly vocal groups and individuals systematically misrepresented not only my record and philosophy of judging but, more importantly, the proper function of judges in our constitutional democracy."

"This was a public campaign of miseducation to which, as a sitting federal judge, I felt I could not publicly respond," the letter said. "What should have been a reasoned national debate about the role of the courts under the Constitution became an essentially unanswered campaign of misinformation and political slogans."

"If, as a judge, I cannot speak out against this attempt to alter the traditional nature of the courts, I think it important to place myself where I can," Bork said.

Transfers to cut deficit

by Barb Weadock
staff reporter

The Ohio National Guard has found sources within its own budget to cut the deficit in the tuition grant program, said an official of the organization.

More than $6 million has been transferred to the tuition grant program, according to Maj. Calvin Taylor, public affairs officer of the Ohio National Guard.

Legislative actions of budget transfers and a loan will provide the source of funds, Taylor said.

A transfer of $2,213,748 will be made by the capital improvement board from the funds for line items, such as armory renovations. A transaction of fiscal year 1987 operations and capital encumbrances, totaling $74,946, which have lapsed, will be also transferred, Taylor said.

Recruitment funds totaling $47,000 and a general revenue fund loan of $2,150,000 to the fiscal year 1989 budget from the sale of the Toledo Bayview and Canton armories will add to the fund.

The deficit is a result of an increase of recipients in the tuition-grant program, an 11 percent increase in tuition at state assisted universities and a 3.5 percent reduction in the state budget for the National Guard are the primary reasons for the deficit, said Sgt. 1st Class Donald Lundy.

Additional budget transfers to the tuition grant fund are expected, Taylor said.

"For 1989 that amount is sufficient to allow funding participation at a 60 percent rate," he said. "This year it's 100 percent."

With the 60 percent funding for next year, and participation in GI Bill funding, students can come up with just over 100 percent of costs, according to Taylor. This gives the participant extra money to help cover the cost of books, he said.

Participants in the tuition grant program must apply for acceptance each term. The applications inform the students that funds may be unavailable, he said.

As of now, all students need to apply for the program each term.

"If the program is full, they are already aware they are on a priority basis," Taylor said.

The task force committee announced that they will fund up to

BG dedicates safer runway

by Judy Immel
assistant city editor

A new runway at Wood County Airport is reducing hazards while attracting larger aircraft, according to William Gibson, airport manager.

The 4,200-foot long runway, which opened in October, will be dedicated this morning.

The runway previously used for take-offs ran in a northeast-southwest direction, creating a hazard with low-flying aircraft over the city, said Daniel Reddin, president of the Airport Authority.

This runway was closed with the opening of the new runway, which extends in an east-west direction. Air traffic is now directed over the city's industrial park, and is high enough before it goes over town, decreasing noise and increasing safety, Reddin said.

Better approaches, clear of obstructions, also makes the new runway safer, he said.

The north-south runway at the airport will remain open.

News in Brief

Something's cooking at UT

TOLEDO (AP) — The University of Toledo has hired a chef to spice up food served at large gatherings at the school president's home and to oversee the school's food, officials said Wednesday.

James Sexton, a culinary arts instructor at Hocking Technical College, about 80 miles southeast of Columbus, will become UT's first coordinator of special events. He will be paid $34,962 a year and will begin work Jan. 25.

Sexton, who has a master's degree from Ohio University, will cook or oversee menu planning at President James McComas' home and at the Peterson House, a guest house owned by UT Corp.

The Peterson House dining room seats 16 and is used primarily for entertaining when a private setting is desired, McComas said.

He also said that Sexton would not be his personal chef.

"He will never cook meals for us unless we have university guests, and he will not necessarily prepare those," McComas said.

Finances interest freshmen

WASHINGTON (AP) — College freshmen this year are thinking more about making money and less about the meaning of life than did earlier classes of new university students, according to study released Wednesday.

The annual UCLA-American Council on Education survey of nearly 290,000 freshmen found that "being very well off financially" is one of the top goals of college freshmen.

"A record number (75.6 percent) identify this as an essential or very important life goal in 1987, up from 73.2 percent last year, 70.9 percent in 1985 and nearly double the level recorded in 1970 (39.1 percent)," said the report, entitled "The American Freshman: National Norms for Fall 1987."

In contrast, only 39.4 percent listed "developing a meaningful philosophy of life" as a top goal. In 1967, 82.9 percent of the freshman survey listed that as an essential goal.

Ruling hinders freedom of press

"Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press."
That guarantee, found in the First Amendment, was made by the founding fathers when they wrote the Constitution in 1787. It contains no ifs, ands or buts. There are no age limits or restrictions placed upon it. It is an unconditional promise of the freedom to express your opinions.

However, 200 years later, the Supreme Court doesn't seem to read it that way.

On Wednesday, the Court ruled 5-3 that public school officials have the right to censor high school student publications if the message is "inconsistent with its basic educational mission, even though the government could not censor similar speech outside the school."

The case was the result of a controversy in 1983 when a Missouri high school principal refused to allow students to publish two articles in a student newspaper. The stories dealt with teen-age pregnancy and the effect of divorce on children.

Three students brought a lawsuit against the principal because they believed their freedom of speech had been violated. They were right.

High school students are in the early learning stages of journalism, and some amount of supervision is needed to help prevent factual errors and libel suits. However, that is the reason high school newspapers have advisers—to advise.

By giving high school administrators a free hand to censor student publications, the Court is chipping away at one of the most important rights guaranteed in the Constitution. And this is how rights become weakened to the point of being meaningless, empty promises.

This is a dangerous precedent, and it may open a floodgate of censorship across the country. What will be the next area of free expression to fall to the limitations of the Supreme Court? What will be the next thing to be declared "not a public forum," and therefore become subject to censorship?

High school is the time when a lot of fundamental beliefs are formed. If high school students are told they are not free to express themselves openly, they will believe it and stop questioning authority. This is a dangerous threat to the future of our society.

We are appalled by the Supreme Court's decision. Instead of permitting censorship to exist in some segments of society, it should be emphatically ruling against it.

Rock fantasy comes true

From the grade school talent show ...to the Sex Beatles

OUT OF WHACK

By Craig Hergert

I have this private fantasy, or at least it was private until now.

See, Mick Jagger becomes ill, of a humility deficiency or something. And the Stones need someone to fill in for him. And they want someone lean, and dynamic and sexy.

And they settle for someone lean, namely me.

Actually, last month I had a chance to act out this fantasy, on a small scale. A local rock group called the Sex Beatles were a man short for their last gig of the semester at Pollye's, and they were looking for a musician to fill in. Since they couldn't find one, they settled for me.

I'm not sure they realized just how experienced I am in the music world. In 1965 when I was nine years old, I sang the Gary Lewis and the Playboys' hit "Save Your Heart for Me" for the Slayton Elementary School talent show run by Miss King, our music teacher.

The talent show was a major deal. The students in each classroom would perform in front of Miss King, and she'd select one act from each class for the talent extravaganza at the end of the year.

And in 1965, sharing billing with someone playing "The Spinning Song" on the piano and Jean Burnham singing "All I Want is a Room Somewhere" from "My Fair Lady," and about a dozen other acts, there was this nine-year-old singing "Save Your Heart for Me."

For those of you too young to remember this classic, here's how "the bridge," as we in the music biz put it, goes:

When you're all alone
Far away from home
Someone's going to flirt with you.

I don't think it's wrong if you play along.
Just don't fall for someone new.

I have two very clear memories about singing this song at the talent show. First, some of the teachers were laughing and I didn't know why. Second, I had no idea what "flirt" meant.

Two years later, I was back in the talent show. I remember the line-up quite clearly. Someone sang Bobby Goldsboro's "Honey," a duet sang "Something Stupid," and Sheryl Swen-hagen gave what has to be the most spirited rendition of "The Ballad of the Green Berets" ever performed by a sixth-grader.

And me, I sang "The Little White Duck." This time I noticed that my fellow sixth-graders were laughing. Apparently at the ripe old age of twelve they were too sophisticated for this song.

Many years passed by before I sang publicly again. When I was an undergraduate at Concordia College in St. Paul, Minn., a few guys and I put together a fifties group which we called "Hergy and the Heartbeats." I was the lead singer for one simple reason. I was the only member of the group who could remember all the words to the songs.

Although I have performed for coffeehouses and at political rallies on campus in the last four years, last month was the first time I've played with a group since my days with the Heartbeats. I had a great time, especially since I got to sing lead on seven Dylan tunes. You have to understand that I'm one of those rare individuals who believes that the words "Dylan" and "tune" are not mutually exclusive.

The whole experience was quite an honor. Right before we started, the two real Sex Beatles realized they had left their song list at home. And they let me get it for them.

I also had the honor of playing tamborine on about a dozen songs. After I had gotten blisters on my hand the night before during rehearsal, the Sex Beatles told me to wear a glove. I must have looked like a Minnesota version of Michael Jackson: I wore one glove—a winter one.

What they didn't tell me to wear, though, was padding on my hip. As a result I had a football-sized purple bruise that lasted a week. Unfortunately I was out of Bowling Green the entire time, so I was unable to show it to a single groupie.

A friend of mine was brave enough to sit through the entire evening and tape all of the Dylan songs, without, she swears, wearing ear plugs. And when I was back in Slayton over break buying a few things at Wayne's clothing store, and I just happened to have the tape with me, Wayne insisted on playing it on the store's sound system.

Not only did the shoppers hear "Like a Rolling Stone," performed by Ireland's Mickey Stevens, Austria's Dieter Frank, and Slayton's own Craig Hergert, but the folks in the street heard it as well.

I looked outside, half expecting to see Miss King whispering, "Can I pick them, or what?"

Hergert, an instructor in English from Slayton, Minn., is a columnist for The News.

Hustle doesn't always pay

Pizza drivers plagued by dogs, customers and jabberwocky

By Jerry Yarnetsky

Dishes, they keep piling into "leaning towers of pizza."
"Delivery!"

You grab your coat, rush to the register to find out where you're going, what you're taking and how much to charge them. Quickly, so as to avoid customer complaint, you run the food out to the pseudo-oven in your car.

"Groan," you groan. If you smell another pizza tonight you'll go crazy. Spices, sauce, sausage, mushrooms, molten cheese frolicking back and forth over its cooked dough surface. Your car roars to life as you head toward your destination(s).

The street is in view, though not well lit. You don't even have the benefit of snow to reflect the little light that is available.

"Doesn't anyone ever put his street number in a visible place?" you ask yourself, searching for a house that belongs to a certain pizza. "I doubt it," you say, reasoning that a certain someone may visit the customer that he wouldn't want to come over. Such is society today, however, them getting their pizza five minutes later than when they want it is their penalty for not turning on the porch light or not giving other identifying information. You find the house behind a row of pine trees.

You park your car, dive into your oven to retrieve the customer's food. At this point you pray that you neither drop it nor that a jabberwocky galumphed over the pizza while you were driving there.

The pizza's in one piece, and you take it up to the door. Three or four minutes later (after bashing up your knuckles on their door—the door bell didn't work) the customer comes to the door, "sorry, I didn't hear you."

After you give them their food, they take another minute or two counting out five dollars in nickels and dimes to pay for their food. All this time you're standing out in 10 degree below zero weather. Eventually you get back to your car, with no tip for your troubles.

Delivering a pizza generally isn't that much of a royal pain but each run does have its ups and downs.

Being a pizza driver you automatically have a reputation with the police and the city as a whole as a bad driver. This has proved to be the case (at least through rumor). I have walked through dorms and overheard horror stories about people being run off the road by pizza drivers. One driver I personally know, loves to pass me up on a small side road going 45 miles per hour. Rumor has it that he goes 80 in the country. On the other hand, I've known drivers who've received speeding tickets going 40 on W. Poe while everyone else in front and behind him was doing 45 mph. Such is the nature of the beast.

If you drive pizzas in your own car (fortunately I don't) you won't get enough money to make it even close to profitable. Not that it's necessarily the fault of the pizza places themselves, but that BG roads aren't the greatest to put 50 or more miles on your car.

People can be outright inhuman to us pizza drivers—they seem to get the impression that we're super human. A customer will expect a pizza to get to them by 11:15 a.m. so they can eat it during break at work. The driver gets the order to them at 11:20 a.m., because the customer didn't tell the person who took the order that they want the pizza by 11:15 a.m. When the driver gets it to them by 11:30 a.m. the driver gets hell when he has no control over the matter.

You say to yourself, "I hustle, what's the problem?"

At other times they like to get their joys by making a driver dig for change when they know it's cold outside. They then rub it in by saying "It sure is cold out there, isn't it?" This mistreatment of pizza drivers can be corrected by either getting them in out of the cold or by having the proper change ready—tips aren't bad either.

A pizza driver has a lot of responsibilities to the customer too, though, and any driver can tell you that slightly tipping a pizza box can be hazardous to their health (it gives the effect of a pizza with half double cheese, half no cheese). I've had both animals and kids run under foot—this doesn't help as the task of getting the pizza to the door takes three to five hands in the first place.

Getting them their food warm is also a task that's easier said than done. Nothing guarantees the driver that the person who ordered the food will come to the door or to the front office swiftly. Insulated bags help, but sometimes that doesn't even do the trick.

After all that pain, the job can be a rewarding endeavor. I've delivered to some of the most architecturally pleasing houses and buildings in Bowling Green. I've also been the savior to a hot poker game at the country club (they tipped well—they reached into the kitty and pulled up a tip). One time I delivered some subs, and a little kid was holding back a dog—who I'm sure felt like ripping my leg off—while his mother was paying for the food.

"He's not a stranger, (dog's name), he's the pizza man."

Yarnetsky is a sophomore journalism major, and depending on how you look at it he's from either Middletown, Ohio or Buffalo, NY. He's a driver for Paglia's Pizza, and it's not as bad a job as he makes it out to be—it's worse.

USG to block hike

by Catherine Hoehn
staff reporter

The Undergraduate Student Government will be working to curb any tuition increase this semester after successfully lobbying for more parking last semester.

USG President Dave Robinson said the issue is the highest priority for the student government.

"The number one goal is to not have a tuition increase. It's a high goal. We're up against very high forces in the University," he said. "Every person in charge at the University is against a tuition increase."

An adhoc committee has been formed within USG to battle a large tuition increase, according to USG Vice President Jim Perry.

"I realize BGSU is in a time of economic trouble this year," Perry said. "But we don't feel students should have to put up with a large tuition hike this year."

He said there may be a substantial need for some tuition increase next year, but that the burden of alleviating the University's "economic crisis" is not strictly the students' problem.

"I don't think all the responsibility should be put on the students, through tuition, while administrators are getting raises in salaries," Perry said.

USG will also be focusing on several other goals from last semester, as well. Robinson said USG will continue working to decrease racism at the University while increasing the number of minority students.

The student government has set aside the final week in January as Divestment Education Week. The goal for the week is to help students understand Apartheid and divestment in South Africa, so that USG can represent the majority of students' opinions, Perry said.

Certain committee heads will work towards other priority goals, such as increasing voting for next year's elections. The projected budget for next year is double that of this year, Perry said.

"We're really going to make it a dig deal. We want to get lots of people involved," Perry said.

The student government is also continuing work to get political figures to speak on campus, such as Bob Dole, Republican senator from Kansas; improve the quality of living conditions on campus; and to upgrade the Action Reaction program used to obtain students' opinions on various issues.

"We want the program to portray more positively the image that we care about the students' opinions, because we do," said Tim Peterson, student welfare coordinator.

Although parking was a significant issue for USG last semester, cabinet members are "milk-ing down" the issue because they believe they have done what they can for this semester.

"We got 200 (parking) spaces last semester. We illustrated the need for parking spaces and they were gotten," Peterson said. "My concern is not with parking any longer. We've done as much as we can this year."

He added that the effort to gain more parking space was realized by the parking petition which USG circulated.

Steve Fork lands a Cessna 172 RG on the new runway at Bowling Green Airport. The runway which is 4,200 feet long and 75 feet wide is being dedicated today.

Airport

The new runway is 1,300 feet longer than the northeast-southwest and north-south runways, making it long enough to accommodate larger aircraft, such as corporate airplanes.

This feature will attract more business to the city, Reddin said.

"Local industries used to have to go to Toledo to get to their planes," he said. "Now more businesses will use airplanes because they will only have to go a half-mile down the road."

In addition, the new runway will allow cargo planes to take off from the airport, making shipping faster.

The airport's $3.6 million expansion project also included runway end identifier lights (REILS), to make the runway more visible at night, a more powerful rotary beacon and a precision approach path indicator (PAPI) system, Gibson said.

"It's a fantastic facility," Gibson said. "Other runways may be bigger or longer, but I haven't seen anything better."

Reddin said planning and fundraising for the expansion began 15 years ago. "There was a lot of cooperation between government agencies to get this job done," he said.

Station helps blind viewers

by Tim Baker
staff reporter

WBGU-TV will begin testing a service on Jan. 18 which would allow blind and low-vision viewers to better understand their programming, said Paula Davis, director of public information.

The program, Descriptive Video Service (DVS), describes key elements of a program like setting, lighting and scenery during pauses in the dialogue, she said.

DVS was developed and is produced by WGBH-TV in Boston in conjunction with American Playhouse, Public Broadcasting System and Washington Ear, a Washington, D.C. reading service for the blind.

Currently, there are only 13 other test areas in the country. According to Davis, WBGU was chosen as a test site because of its stereo and multi-broadcast sound capabilities, which the station acquired in July 1986, and are necessary for DVS. Davis said to have access to DVS, the viewer needs a stereo TV or a stereo adapter. To receive DVS, the viewer must turn on a separate audio program channel which is available on stereo televisions or adapters.

The premiere of DVS will be at 9 p.m. on Jan. 18 with Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude" on American Playhouse.

Madge Levinson, coordinator of volunteers at the Sight Center in Toledo, said only one-third of the televisions sold last year were equipped with stereo.

Levinson is providing a 200-seat viewing area at the Sight Center for the DVS broadcasts throughout February.

Classroom proposal OK'd

by Judy Immel
assistant city editor

Two schools on Bowling Green's west side have recently received approval from the city's planning commission for the addition of 20,000 square feet of classroom space.

However, even this increase will not keep up with the growing number of students in the city, according to Richard Cummings, superintendent of Bowling Green City Schools.

Conneaut Elementary, 524 Haskins Road, will expand by 6,000 square feet for four classrooms, a continuation of a project started last year.

Kenwood Elementary, 710 Kenwood Ave., will add 14,000 square feet for eight classrooms. Construction will also nearly double the size of the library with an 1,800 square foot addition and add an eating area of 3,000 square feet.

"All this construction will probably not be adequate in five years," Cummings said. "But it is impossible to predict the number of children who will be moving into the city."

In recent years, the increasing number of students, especially at the elementary level, has caused students to be assigned to schools away from their districts, he said.

"There just are more and more kids in Bowling Green every year," Cummings said. "We are adding about 60 new kids per year to the schools." He attributes the student population increase to the city's "immense growth" and the result of the large "baby boom" generation having children coming of school age.

Cummings said he is "delighted" that the schools' facilities will be increased.

"This is a much needed addition and the city has been very cooperative," he said. "I have been concerned about the students who have been reassigned each summer to schools outside of their home districts because of the crowding."

Kenwood Principal Ted Eldridge said with the additional classrooms, a third teacher will be hired for each grade from one to six.

"Because we will have more teachers to draw on, we will be able to offer even better programming to our students," he said.

Presently, class sizes at Kenwood range from 25-30 per class, Eldridge said.

Cummings said bids for the additions are now being advertised and work should start by March or April. The construction will be finished by August for the 1988-89 school year.

Parking

Jean Yarnell, manager of parking and traffic, said, however, that the plans to create more parking spaces were initiated several years ago, and that the petition had little impact on the matter.

"I used that (the petition) in my presentation to the administration, but I used it to show that students were unhappy with parking," she said.

Perry said no official decision has been reached regarding the government's involvement with the issue, but that the results of the parking petition will be pre-

"We still have a ways to go, but hopefully in the long run, things will get better. White people will see that they're short changing themselves," he said. "It's not just a dream for black people, it's a dream for all people."

Edmonds expressed hope that one day King's dream will become reality.

"Martin had a dream," she said. "Many, many people bought into that dream hoping it could become a reality in a short period of time, but we also know that change takes place very slowly and that particular dream may not be realized in our lifetime, but we can hope that someday it will occur."

News Briefs

Presser's hearing set

CLEVELAND (AP) — Teamsters President Jackie Presser's request for a delay in his trial will be the subject of a U.S. District Court hearing on Jan. 25, court officials said Wednesday.

Presser, 60, is to go on trial Feb. 15 on labor racketeering and embezzlement charges. He and two co-defendants are alleged to have participated in a payroll-padding scheme at Teamsters Local 507 in Cleveland. Presser is secretary-treasurer of the local.

Attorneys for Presser filed a request last week asking Judge George White for a trial delay, saying the union leader was not mentally or physically able to stand trial. In court documents, they said Presser has been weakened by radiation treatments he underwent following lung cancer surgery.

Presser moved to Phoenix, Ariz., last fall on the advice of his doctors, the documents said.

Soviets lift Zhivago ban

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet monthly has begun publishing in installments Boris Pasternak's masterwork "Doctor Zhivago," which had been banned since it won the 1958 Nobel Prize for literature.

The literary monthly Novy Mir printed the first 102-page excerpt from the novel in its January edition, along with a commentary by Soviet historian Dmitri Likhachev.

In the book, Pasternak recounts the experiences of a young doctor, Yuri Zhivago, during the turmoil of the 1917

Bolshevik Revolution and the repression and privations of the civil war that followed.

Pasternak was forced by Soviet authorities to renounce the literary Nobel for "Doctor Zhivago," and was expelled from the official Writers Union. He died in official disgrace in 1960.

He is one of the authors whose previously unpublished works are being released now under Mikhail Gorbachev's policy of glasnost, or greater openness on selected topics.

Cookie crook arrested

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A transient has been sentenced to three years in prison after pleading guilty to breaking into a church nursery school and eating Oreo cookies and drinking Kool-Aid, officials said.

David Deskin, 25, drew the sentence because he already was on probation for another burglary.

The Rev. Mike Sutton of the Pearsall Road Baptist Church, angered by repeated break-ins, told prosecutors he was unable to turn the other cheek any longer.

Deskin was accused of breaking into the school nursery and stealing a package of Oreo cookies and a loaf of bread in August.

Bexar County Assistant District Attorney Anne Kelly said Deskin had been suspected in the other break-ins before church officials filed charges.

Deskin was on trial for burglary, which could have landed him in jail for 20 years. On Tuesday, two days into the trial, he pleaded guilty to a reduced burglary charge in return for the three-year sentence.

Crash cause still mystery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pilots of Continental Flight 1713 had no clue of a problem as their DC-9 raced, apparently at proper speed, down the slushy runway at Denver's airport and began climbing routinely last November.

But within seconds came the sound of a stalling engine, an expletive, a bang, more engine stalling and impact, according to documents released by government investigators yesterday.

The sequence from first sign of trouble to impact with the ground covered only 4.3 seconds.

The documents, including a transcript of a cockpit tape, provided no evidence that would point directly at the cause of the Nov. 15 crash that killed 28 of the 82 people aboard the flight that had been bound for Boise, Idaho.

A National Transportation Safety Board spokesman emphasized that the investigation has yet to determine whether the apparent engine stall caused the crash or whether the stall itself was the result of other factors that already may have caused the plane to lose its proper aerodynamics.

Ted Lopatkiewicz, the spokesman, said several key reports, including one on the condition of the two engines and a close analysis of background sounds from the cockpit recording that might reveal engine performance have yet to be completed.

An engine compressor stall could be caused by slush or ice going into the engine, perhaps during takeoff. But aviation experts said such a stall might also have occurred if the plane lost its normal angle of attack causing an interruption of air flow through the turbine.

Ice contamination on the wings or an unusual wind gust might cause a plane to lose its proper altitude and cause an interruption of engine air flow, experts have suggested. Both possibilities remain under NTSB investigation.

Witnesses have said that Flight 1713 rocked dramatically from side to side seconds after liftoff, followed by a wing tip striking the ground and the plane flipping on its back. It broke into three pieces.

The documents made public yesterday confirmed the plane had been thoroughly deiced. The sound of the deicing fluid hitting the aircraft could be heard on the tape as the plane rested at the special deicing pad used by Continental aircraft at Stapleton Airport.

Capt. Frank Zvonek, 46, and his younger co-pilot, Lee Edward Bruecher, 26, who had flown only one previous trip on a DC-9 and would be at the controls, marveled about the deicing procedure.

"It's like goin' through a car wash," remarked Zvonek.

The deicing was completed 23 minutes before the plane took off and the pilots requested clearance from the deicing pad, according to the transcript. But a mix-up by controllers apparently allowed at least one other aircraft to move ahead of Flight 1713 in the takeoff line.

A must-win series?

BG needy of wins against lowly Redskins

by Tom Skernivitz
sports editor

There once was a time when a Bowling Green-Miami hockey series had all the similarities of a Three Stooges film festival.

A real laughter became the standard with the perennially great Falcons doing all of the gut-clenching at the expense of the pick-ons from Oxford.

But things have a way of changing somewhat.

A dis-appointing BG team enters this weekend's home series lodged near the uncharted territory of the Central Collegiate Hockey Association basement. A 7-9-2 league record has dropped the Falcons to sixth place and, more importantly, four points away from fourth place and a home-playoff berth.

Meanwhile, squatting Indian-style two spots below BG are the dust-covered, last-place Redskins. The only giggling one might hear the Falcons utter this weekend may come from hovering too close above the 'Skins ticklish head feathers.

"(Miami's) a vastly improved hockey club," BG's leading scorer Nelson Emerson said. "We're going into the series no differently than any other series this year. We know we need every win we can get right now and we'd like to start against Miami."

Despite their hard times this season, Emerson said the Falcons have not grown content with a spot in the lower portion of the CCHA standings.

"(Sixth place) is a little different, especially for the older guys on the team," Emerson said. "We have a lot of good players on this team and we are sure we can move up in the standings. We've just got to put everything together and maintain a little composure."

The Falcons escaped Goggin Ice Arena last October with two overtime wins against the Redskins. Brian Meharry notched the game-winner in a 4-3 BG win in the game one, while Andy Gribble clinched the following game, a 6-5 Falcon OT victory.

"They played really well at home," Emerson said. "We went in there and they played some intense hockey."

This weekend's series in BG's Ice Arena will be no cake walk for the Falcons, either.

Despite the Redskins' last-place position and poor reputation, they have been known to upset the best of teams. The Redskins defeated second-place Michigan State last Saturday, giving them a weekend split with Spartans.

The biggest surprise was not the victory, but the fact MU played without leading scorer, Mike Orn, who missed the game

BG looks for road win

The Bowling Green men's basketball team has had its ups and downs this season, which can clearly be seen by the fact that their longest win streak is two games.

Tomorrow, the Falcons will try to equal that mark as they travel to long-time rival Toledo for a locally televised Mid-American Conference game.

BG, 5-8 overall, 1-2 in the MAC, defeated Detroit and Wagner back-to-back, before dropping four straight games. The Falcons ended that losing streak Wednesday night with an 88-70 victory over Miami in Anderson Arena.

Senior forward Steve Martenet paced the win over the Redskins with 21 points and eight rebounds. Guard Anthony Robinson added 15, while freshmen Joe Moore and Billy Johnson scored 14 and 11, respectively.

The Falcons will be looking for their first win on the road this season as they have dropped all seven road decisions. They could find it against UT.

The Rockets, 8-4 overall, 0-3 in the MAC, were drilled Wednesday night at Eastern Michigan 82-54. UT shot only five free throws the entire contest, connecting on three. Jeff Haar paced the squad with 19 points.

UT leads the all-time series, 60-53, but BG closed that gap last season with a pair of wins, 79-70 in Anderson and 83-77 in Centennial Hall.

Channel 11, WTOL-TV, will broadcast the game, which begins at 8 p.m.

Falcons travel to UT

Look to stop Rockets' record-breaking Savage

by Andy Woodard
assistant sports editor

Playing a game on the road in any conference can be like going into a jungle.

When Bowling Green's women's basketball team travels to Toledo tomorrow, they hope the Mid-American Conference match-up won't be too "savage".

Kelly Savage, that is.

The Rocket guard scored a UT school-record 39 points in Wednesday night's 76-61 victory at Eastern Michigan. She was 13-of-22 from the field, including seven-for-13 from the three-point line, and hit all six of her free throws.

Backstrom

Savage now has 39 three-pointers on the season, good enough for fourth in the nation. The seven three-pointers tied her own MAC record.

"We'll play our usual man-to-man, hard-nosed defense on her," BG point guard Paulette Backstrom said. "She can score when she gets open on her three-point shot... but we're not going to play a zone and let her stand out there and shoot them. I think it'll be a lot easier to hold her down... if we're in our man-to-man."

Falcon coach Fran Voll said Backstrom will probably start the game guarding Savage, but he added several other players could guard on her.

"Savage is really a good player and we have to be concerned about her," Voll said. "But we also have to recognize too that she's not the only girl they have. We think they have some other good players which we're going to have to be concerned with too.

"But at the same time we know she's there and we'll have to play good defense."

Savage is the only starter who is averaging in double figures for UT, but the rest of the starting line-up all score between five to eight points a game, led by center Kim Sekulski with 8.6 ppg.

BG, 9-3 overall, 3-0 in the MAC, defeated Miami 77-66 in Anderson Arena on Wednesday night. The Falcons strength came from the inside that night, as forwards Jackie Motycka and Megan McGuire, and center Angie Bonner accounted for 49 of the 77 points, and 33 of the 49 rebounds.

UT (6-6, 1-2) could have its work cut out against the inside trio, as the Rockets allowed the Hurons to dominate the rebounding, 52-39.

"They might try to sag it in and play a zone on (our inside people)," Backstrom said of what UT might try to do defensively. "That probably means that it will just open it up for the rest of us on the outside."

"And we should really dominate them on the boards because I don't think they have many players over 6-1."

BG could present many match-up problems to UT as Motycka, Bonner and McGuire all average in double figures, and 11 of the 12 Falcons scored against the Redskins.

"(I feel) we're pretty hard to defend against," Voll said. "I'm sure they have as many problems trying to defend against us as we'll (have against them)."

The game will be televised locally by WTOL-TV, Channel 11, from Centennial Hall. Tip-off is set for 2 p.m.

I Don't Want It - You Take It

BG News/Mark Thalman

Miami's Eddie Schilling (5), Lamont Hanna (44), Jeff Fuerst (53) and Tim Stewart (45) seem to be playing hot potato with a rebound during the Redskins 88-70 loss to Bowling Green Wednesday night in Anderson Arena. The Falcons travel to Centennial Hall Saturday night to face the Toledo Rockets at 8 p.m.

Gymnasts open season

Travel to Kent State for first dual meet

by Don Hensley
sports reporter

The Bowling Green gymnastics team will swing into action Sunday when they open the 1988 campaign against the Kent State Golden Flashes.

The tumblers will once again be under the watchful eye of Dr. Charles Simpson who brings a career record of 118-42-2 into the meet. Simpson has placed the leadership responsibilities in the hands of junior Kim Trost.

Trost, who holds the school record of 9.6 on the balance beam and 37.15 in the all-around competition, will play a major role in this year's team success. Leadership will be extremely important since seven of the 14 girls are freshmen. Although the team is young, they are still very talented.

"We have two returning All-MAC selections in Suzanne Bell and Lisa Hillman and the freshmen are outstanding," Simpson said.

Lisa Hillman and Suzanne Bell are both outstanding gymnasts. Hillman is especially strong on the uneven bars, while Bell's forte seems to be the floor exercise. As a team the Falcons needed help on the uneven bars and that is where Simpson recruited the heaviest.

"Last year, the bars were the area in which we needed improvement," Simpson said. "We recruited for bars this year and I am eager to see some improvement."

This year's team seems to have come together rather early in the season. This is basically due to the fact that the team seems to be more of a team on and off the mats, and according to Trost, they seem to be doing better routines.

"We have much better routines this year than last," said Trost. "The team is stronger this year both in and out of competition."

The tumblers will have a chance to show their early season strengths Sunday when they travel to Kent, and then next Saturday when they return home to face the Ball State Cardinals.

Redskins

Orn, who will play against the Falcons, is 18th in the CCHA with 17 goals and seven assists for 24 points. The senior scored four goals in the previous two games between BG and MU.

"Their game doesn't revolve around (Orn), but we're always watching him," Emerson said. "He's an exceptional player who can break away and put the puck in the net."

SMU names Gregg as coach

DALLAS (AP) — Forrest Gregg left his head coaching job with the Green Bay Packers and returned to his alma mater yesterday to start anew the scandal-rocked football program at Southern Methodist.

"It's a distinct honor for us at SMU today to announce the selection and appointment of our new head football coach — Forrest Gregg," SMU Athletic Director Doug Single said at news conference.

Gregg, who was the SMU football team's captain in 1955, now has the job of restoring SMU's program tainted in a play-for-pay scandal that blotted out the school's 1987 and 1988 seasons.

"I am really pleased to be home," said Gregg, who has never coached college football, but took the Cincinnati Bengals to the Super Bowl.

Tankers in action

by Mark Huntebrinker
sports reporter

The Bowling Green men's and women's swim teams dive into their 1988 portion of their schedule this weekend at the Recreation Center's Cooper Pool.

The men host Toledo today, then return to action tomorrow as Ashland and Windsor invade BG. The women get into the action Saturday as they host Ashland.

The tankers hope to pick up where they left off in 1987. The women are coming off a win over Kent State Dec. 11th and a second-place finish in the International Swimming Hall of Fame Invitational over Christmas break in Ft. Lauderdale, FL.

The men have put together an impressive string of performances. They surprised powerhouse Kentucky to win the BGSU Invitational Dec. 4-5. A week later they got by Kent State and then placed first in the 60-team field Swimming Hall of Fame Invitational in Florida.

Both teams are right on schedule according to head swim coach Brian Gordon.

"We're right where we wanted to be headed into the semester," he said. "We will find out exactly where we stand after this weekend."

Toledo looks to be the men's biggest challenge of the year. The Rockets have their best squad in six years and may hold an extra edge because they competed last weekend.

"Toledo may be a little sharper because they swam against Ball State last weekend while we've been off for about a month," Gordon said. "We hope to use our depth to our advantage."

While the men face their biggest challenge of the year, the women's real test is yet to come. Included in the remaining six meets this season are powerhouses Michigan State, Miami, Ohio, and Ball State. The women will swim some people in different events this weekend as they prepare for the upcoming weeks.

Today's men's meet against Toledo will start at 7 p.m. Tomorrow's men's and women's action is slated for 2 p.m.

OSU defeats Iowa

COLUMBUS (AP) — Grady Mateen scored Ohio State's last four points, including two free throws with four seconds remaining, as the Buckeyes upset No. 17 Iowa 87-83 in Big Ten Conference play last night.

Mateen, a 6-foot-11 junior, gave Ohio State the lead for good on a short turnaround with 3:23 remaining, making it 80-78.

After three Ohio State free throws gave the Buckeyes an 83-78 lead with 1:28 left, Iowa's B.J. Armstrong hit a three-point field goal to pull the Hawkeyes to within 83-81.

Mateen then tipped in a miss by teammate Jerry Francis with 31 seconds left for an 85-81 Ohio State lead.
