Confidence vote offered by hopefuls

by Greg Connel and Ron Fritz

If the ticket of Craig Taliaferro and Jeffrey Fitzgibbons is elected to the top two posts in the Undergraduate Student Government, they will petition the students "for a confidence vote in Taliaferro," according to Fitzgibbons.

Vice-presidential candidate Fitzgibbons said Thursday if it is determined the student body has no confidence in Taliaferro, in light of new information presented in the News yesterday, Taliaferro will voluntarily resign as president.

"I will then assume the position and appoint a vice president conditional to approval by members of the USG legislative body," Fitzgibbons said.

Taliaferro said if his ticket is elected, he would also like to meet with the other candidates and determine their stance.

"No matter who wins, I want the entire student body to be behind it," Taliaferro said. "I don't want it to tear apart the student body.

"The important thing is to stay unified as a student body — period. That is how we are going to make gains."

Although Fitzgibbons admitted he had no prior knowledge of Taliaferro's complete felony record, he said he still has confidence in his running mate.

"I was disappointed at first, but personally, I still feel Craig and I are the best candidates and present the best platform. That hasn't changed," he said. "I have lost no faith in him."

"I have the utmost confidence in Craig holding the office and given the nature of the crimes and the time he has paid, it can only improve him."

However, one member of Taliaferro's campaign staff said he feels betrayed.

Terry Mann, junior magazine journalism major, said Taliaferro should have told his campaign workers about his past.

Toolin' around

George Kryder, an employee of G.M. Sader, Inc., totes a shovel while joining Jeff Purser, junior recreation administration major, for the inaugural lap around the new BGSU PACE Trail, located around the Student Recreation Center pond. Kryder, an employee of the contracting company doing work on the track, decided to join Purser for a jog during his running demonstration. Tuesday afternoon dedication ceremonies included a demonstration of how the track's lighting system indicates the pace of runners.

Shortage of blood hurts supply for 19 hospitals

by Beth Church staff reporter

Low donor turnout continues to plague the Red Cross' efforts at the University, according to Wood County's bloodmobile chairwoman.

Judy Goris said by late Thursday afternoon, about 640 pints of blood were collected at the University's bloodmobile. She said the goal for the week was 1,000 pints.

"We need to collect 275 pints each day. We're trying to meet the needs of 19 hospitals in 10 counties," she said.

The bloodmobile also fell short of its goal here last February when only 700 pints were collected.

Goris said she is unable to explain the poor response.

"During the winter, I suppose we can blame bad weather, but I just don't understand what's happening now," she said.

Both O-positive and O-negative blood types are in very low quantities, according to Mary Ann Coscarelli, public relations director of the Toledo chapter of the American Red Cross.

"We are 50 percent low in both types. O is the universal blood type and it is vital for immediate transfusions," Coscarelli said.

She said 38 percent of the population has O-positive blood type.

"But we want all blood types to donate," she said.

Nations sign contract Soviets to pull troops from Afghanistan in May GENEVA (AP) — The Soviet Union, the United States, the Marxist Afghan government and Pakistan signed an agreement Thursday to withdraw an estimated 115,000 Soviet troops from Afghanistan.

The agreements were signed by Secretary of State George Shultz, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, Afghan Foreign Minister Abdul Wakil and acting Pakistani foreign minister Zain Noorani in a formal ceremony at the U.N. building in Geneva.

The agreements, which will take effect May 15, commit Pakistan and Afghanistan not to support "directly or indirectly, rebellious or secessionist activities" directed against each other.

Pakistan represented Afghan guerrillas at the talks. The Moslem insurgents, who have been fighting the Soviet-backed government for 10 years, have said they will not sign the accord.

The United Nations estimates 1.5 million Afghans have been killed in the war, which began after an April 1978 Communist coup. More than 10,000 Soviets have died since they became involved 1½ years later, Western sources estimate.

Gorbachev told American business leaders in Moscow on Wednesday that the Afghan accord may have international implications on a par with the superpower treaty signed in December to ban medium-range nuclear missiles.

Aid office must cut back

New federal requirements reduce students' eligibility

by Tim Bush staff reporter

When the University financial aid office begins reviewing financial aid applications for the 1988-89 school year early next week, it will be forced to make some unfair decisions regarding student eligibility, said the associate director of the office.

Deb Heineman said new federal guidelines regarding a student's income and contribution to the cost of his or her education are unfair determinants of a student's financial aid needs.

"There is less eligibility for financial aid out there," she said.

Beginning with this upcoming year's application reviewing process, 70 percent of a

"There is less eligibility for financial aid out there."

--Deb Heineman, associate director of financial aid student's prior year income and 35 percent of their savings will be counted against a student's upcoming financial aid needs as their expected contribution to their education, said Heineman.

"The 35 percent of savings rule has been in effect for many years and no one has ever said that it was unfair," she said.

To demonstrate the unfairness of the new income reporting rule, Heineman gave an example of a possible financial aid applicant.

If a student made $2,000 one year and saved it all, she said, on the next year's financial aid application 70 percent of that $2,000 income and 35 percent of that $2,000 savings would be counted against that student's financial need as their expected contribution to their education.

"That student would be expected to contribute $2,100 the next year to their education even though they had only made $2,000 the previous year," she said.

"Apparently you are not supposed to work and save money anymore if you want to be eligible to receive financial aid," Heineman said.

Conrad McRoberts, the University director of financial aid, said the majority of University students have been able to get their financial aid needs met under the eligibility requirements.

"Some students do not see loans or student employment as a very attractive way of meeting their needs compared to a grant, but they are being met," he said.

However, Heineman said, "We have a real concern with the coming year. People who work, save money, and are Middle American cannot even get a loan."

Students' errors result in partials

by Amy Burkett staff reporter

More than half of the partial schedules issued Thursday and today resulted from student error, according to the director of University Registration and Records.

Susan Pugh said 52 percent of partial schedules issued had some type of student error, but of all valid course requests, 89 percent were satisfied.

Of the 11,178 students registered for fall semester, 42 percent received a partial schedule, Pugh said.

"This is not a completely accurate perception of the situation, because only 64 percent of those who will be back next fall have registered," Pugh said.

According to Pugh, sophomores received 1,945 partials, more than any other class. Juniors received 1,299 and freshmen 807. Only 556 seniors received partial schedules.

Of the specific colleges, Arts and Sciences had the largest number of partials, totaling 1,390, followed by the College of Business with 1,234 and the College of Education with 952.

The number of partials received has been very consistent from year to year, she said.

On the bottom of the partial schedule students receive a designated time to make schedule changes. This process takes place in the Grand Ballroom Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. Open registration is April 25-29.

News in Brief

'Ms. Bronze' focuses on talent, intelligence

The 15th annual Ms. Bronze Pageant, sponsored by Phi Beta Sigma, will be held Saturday in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom of the University Union at 7:30 p.m.

The Ms. Bronze Pageant, which began in 1974, is called "bronze" because it is a pageant especially for women of color. The idea behind Ms. Bronze is to move away from traditional pageants with bathing suit competitions and to stress the inner beauty of the contestants instead.

Contestants will be judged on talent, poise and intelligence.

The winner of the pageant receives a trophy and a dozen roses, as well as a year's reign as Ms.

Bronze.

Tina Hadden won last year's pageant, which benefited the Sickle Cell Anemia Foundation. She sang, "I Can't Stand This Living All Alone," by Phyllis Hyman, giving an outstanding vocal performance.

Advanced tickets can be purchased for $3.95 at both the University Union Information Desk and in the Minority Students Activities office on the third floor of the Union. Tickets will also be sold at the door for $4.50.

Proceeds from the pageant will go to the United Negro College Fund.

Inmate outfit is cheap shot

"The issue is not guilt or innocence, but that the record is there, isn't it?"
 Craig Taliaferro asked this question Wednesday, and on Thursday a supporter of fellow Undergraduate Student Government presidential candidate Tim Peterson answered it.

After reports appeared in the News Thursday morning of Taliaferro's past felony record, Peterson was seen walking around campus with a person dressed in "jailbird" attire.

Although Peterson denied he had anything to do with Reginald Goolsby, a fellow member of Sigma Phi Epsilon, donning the costume, originally he did nothing to dissuade Goolsby, saying that Goolsby was just going to class and he had a right to free expression.

Goolsby said wearing the outfit was more of a "personal thing," than a campaign stunt and that Peterson did not ask him to wear it.

However, wearing the jail attire was rubbing salt in Taliaferro's wounds. It was one of the lowest, cheapest and most immature acts that we have seen in a USG political campaign. If Goolsby was in some way attempting to help Peterson's campaign, USG should not condone such feeble, last-gasp attempts to win an election.

Even if Peterson was not behind the act, guilt by association allows the act to speak loudly — and poorly — for his campaign.

The incident leaves a bad impression on USG's election and at a time when all candidates are calling for more student support, antics such as Goolsby's are bound to turn students away from USG.

How can the students be expected to take student government seriously when supporters of presidential candidates resort to shots below the belt? Soon a new administration will be named and many of the candidates who were against each other today, will have to work together tomorrow.

Let's hope, despite such tasteless incidents, they can.

Misadventures in mail delivery

OUT OF WHACK

By Craig Hergert

A couple of years ago on "Cheers," Cliff Claven, television's most famous know-it-all and mail carrier, was featured in the film Woody made for his folks back home.

In the film, Cliff demonstrates to Woody's folks his skillful execution of his appointed rounds by delivering the mail in the hallway of an apartment complex. Moments after Cliff's departure, every resident walks across the hall to get the mail to its rightful owner.

A cheap laugh? Maybe. But everyone seems to have at least one horror story about a real life post office snafu.

Last August I received a letter from my mother in Minnesota. She mentioned that my Aunt Hilda had been to Florida to visit her daughter Carla (no, I'm not making up these names) and had helped her plant a small garden.

I thought it was pretty strange for anyone, even Floridians, to plant a garden in August. But I kept reading.

A few lines later, my mom mentioned that she was going to visit my other aunt, Fritz, for Memorial Day.

That's when I checked the postmark. Mom had mailed the letter in May.

A friend of mine, though, has stories that make mine look like kid stuff. When she went on Christmas vacation a year ago, she had her mail held. Upon returning the first week of January to pick it up, she found only a few pieces.

A month later, without any explanation from the post office, she found a huge bundle of mail, mostly Christmas cards and overdue bills.

This year she had a similar ordeal. A month before moving in early December, she filled out change of address forms to prevent any mail mix-ups. A week or so before leaving for Christmas vacation, her mail stopped coming. She didn't get any Christmas cards.

She did get some in February, however.

Her most recent misadventure with the post office happened last week. Rushing down to the post office to get a stamp and mail a letter before its 5:30 p.m. closing time, she discovered a sign announcing a new closing time — 4:30 p.m.

She also discovered that the stamp machine, intended to service customers after hours, was empty.

So off she went to Churchill's to get a stamp.

Racing back to the post office, she arrived at ten after five, safely before the last mail pickup time of 5:30, only to find a sign announcing a new final pickup time of 5:05.

Mix-ups, cut-backs, and now a rate increase.

Who's in charge here? Cliff Claven?

Hergert, an instructor in English from Slayton, Minn., is a columnist for The News. He currently has in his wallet eight 22-cent stamps that he doesn't know what to do with.

Instant celebrity in a flash

By Mike Royko

Before the primary, some pundits said Wisconsin was a liberal state because it has a history of electing progressives. They were wrong. Others said it was a conservative state because it had elected right-wingers. They were wrong, too.

Having spent more time in Wisconsin than anywhere but Chicago, I think I understand it. The fact is, Wisconsin has a split personality.

The primary results show it. But this personality quirk is illustrated even more vividly by the strange case of a fellow named Britton McKenzie.

McKenzie, 41, recently became an instant celebrity in Wisconsin.

He is, by his own admission, one of the most dedicated, relentless, persevering and consistent flashers in recorded history.

In a recent interview with the Wisconsin State Journal, he estimated that he has publicly exposed his male appendage between 10,000 and 20,000 times. He can't be more precise than that because, well, when you're as busy as he has been, who has time to keep count?

The reason he made this record public is that he's involved in an interesting legal dispute that, I believe, shows that Wisconsin has two personalities.

Because exposing oneself is considered lewd and lascivious behavior, McKenzie has occasionally found himself in trouble with the law. He's been convicted of flashing about 30 times and served at least one prison term in Oregon.

However, even flashers have to eat and have a roof over their heads, so McKenzie has worked in various jobs, as a salesman and whatever else he could get.

Some time ago, he applied for a job as a laborer in the Dane County park system, and as a weed cutter in their county's public works department.

Some people say Dane County, which includes Madison and the University of Wisconsin, is the most liberal county in America. As a non-liberal acquaintance who lives there says: "We've got more pinkos here than in Moscow."

But even Dane County's officials blinked when they saw McKenzie's arrest record. They decided that they couldn't employ someone who couldn't keep his trousers zipped.

Now, that, I believe, shows one side of the Wisconsin personality. While not wanting to employ a flasher isn't necessarily conservative, it's at the very least a traditional, middle-class attitude.

However, after he was turned down for the job, McKenzie decided he had been treated unfairly and he hired a lawyer to fight for his rights.

And they filed a complaint with the State Department of Industry, Labor and Human Relations.

Under Wisconsin law, an employer can't discriminate against someone with a criminal record if that person's crimes have no bearing on the kind of work he will be doing.

Naturally, the Dane County authorities said that McKenzie's habit of exposing himself would have a bearing on his work. How would it look to picnickers and softball players if he suddenly popped out of a bush and dropped his pants?

But McKenzie's lawyer responded by saying that this was unlikely to happen.

That's because McKenzie never, ever exposes himself in the great outdoors. This has nothing to do with fear of frostbite, poison ivy, bee stings, or harmful rays of the sun.

It's just that he never has the urge to expose himself anywhere but in libraries or laundromats. It's just not fun for him anywhere else.

Therefore, the argument went, he could cut weeds or dig out tree stumps so long as the weeds or tree stumps weren't in a library or laundromat.

After his discrimination complaint was filed, a state discrimination officer investigated.

And this is where we get the more liberal side of Wisconsin's split personality.

The discrimination officer made "an initial determination of probable cause." This didn't mean that McKenzie was right. But it meant that there was enough evidence that he was discriminated against to justify further hearings.

There will be an effort to resolve the dispute through mediation. And if that doesn't work, a state examiner will conduct hearings and make a final decision as to whether McKenzie is a threat to expose himself while chopping weeds.

And as further evidence of this split personality, I offer this final fact.

It seems that recently he walked into another library and waved around something other than his library card. He was jailed again.

Putting him in jail is, of course, the more conservative thing to do.

But even though he's in jail, his discrimination allegations will continue to be studied, which is the liberal thing to do.

I find it a fascinating case. And it would be even more fun if they held the hearings in a laundromat.

Royko is a columnist for the Chicago Tribune.

Senior Giving Week helps future of BGSU

"It's for a good cause." You've heard it before, right, seniors? Someone from some left-field organization like "Save the pot-bellied, flat-footed weedwacker" comes knocking at your door, their hands stretched out in a valiant effort to get that last penny that's buried at the depths of your pocket, along with all the lint and gum wrappers.

Maybe you give, maybe you don't, depending on the price of weedwacker stock or how well that epistemology exam went. In any case, you think, "What's in it for me? Wouldn't that penny be more beneficial if given to a cashier for a nice, juicy piece of Bazooka?"

And maybe some of those feelings are resurfacing as you look another Senior Challenge Giving Week in the eye. What's in Giving Week for you?

First, the gifts of funding for campus lighting, a three-faced clock for the carillon, and your choice of a University-sponsored organization or service will help to embellish the already-respected reputation of BGSU and increase the value of your diploma. Second, the gifts will maintain the superior quality of BGSU education, service, and beauty for future generations of undergrads to enjoy. And when you return to campus for your 25th reunion (gasp!), you will be able to admire the lighting and the beautiful clock and take pride in knowing that you helped place them there.

I think they call it a "Win-Win" proposition. I call it a great idea. Call it what you will, but during this year's Senior Giving Week of April 10-15, take the opportunity to preserve a future of excellence for Bowling Green State University.

Congratulations and Good Luck, Class of '88!

Job lost because of summer graduation

I'm one of the lucky ones. I'm finally a senior graduating in August. Well, because I won't be returning in the fall, I've been discriminated against. Last week, I visited Student Employment to get a jump on the campus summer job scene; luckily, I found one that I was well-qualified for and quite interested in. A couple days after a very short, five minute interview, I received THE call; "I'm sorry," she said, "I had to give the position to someone else because I don't want to train someone for ONLY the summer."

That kind of upset me! I think that Student Employment should do something so that other people don't have to waste as much of their valuable time as I did. When a referral is placed for a summer job, I believe that the employer should indicate if the position will continue into the fall semester. I thought I had my summer employment pretty much in the bag, but I guess it's back to square one.

Transmitter's move brings sharper tunes

by Beth Church
staff reporter

Listeners of WBGU-FM may find that R.E.M., Roxy Music or Robyn Hitchcock and the Egyptians will sound a little clearer when they return next fall.

The radio station's transmitter will be moved early this summer from South Hall to the top of the Administration Building, according to Chuck Konecny, WBGU engineer.

The move will result in an improved signal, said Lisa Sherrill, general manager of WBGU.

"There will be a clearer, sharper signal — especially on the outskirts of Bowling Green," Sherrill said, a junior interpersonal communications major.

An advantage of the move, Konecny said, is better reception by car radios with vertical antennas.

The cost for the new antenna will be approximately $1,500, he said, but the cost of the total move will be $2,500.

"The total cost will be for materials, not labor. All of the work is being done by University employees," Konecny said.

The transmitter will be moved during summer break between classes when the station is off the air, Konecny said. Work for the move

'There will be a clearer, sharper signal — especially on the outskirts of Bowling Green.'

--Lisa Sherrill, WBGU General Manager

will take between three and four days, he said. Although the move has been planned for three to four years, WBGU only received authorization for the move last February from the Federal Communication Commission, he said.

The FCC delayed acceptance of the station's application because of the number of other nearby stations and the proximity to the Canadian border, according to Sherrill.

Konecny said the FCC was concerned that WBGU would overlap a Findlay College station or a Toledo station.

"This is also one of the reasons we haven't gone to higher power," he said.

He also said the communication treaties the FCC has with Canada must be strictly followed.

The transmitter has rested at South Hall since 1959, Konecny said, where the radio station was located until 1965, when it was transferred to West Hall.

Greek Week goes gold

Celebration welcomes campus involvement

by Pamela Monastra
staff reporter

Although the Summer Olympics are still a few months away, members of the University's greek community will "Go for the Gold," beginning Sunday.

"Go for the Gold" is the theme of Greek Week, according to Wendy Moorman, Greek Week representative for the Panhellenic Council. She said the event is important to the greek community at the University.

"The week is planned for all greek members of the University," Moorman said. "It's our chance to celebrate being greek and it shows our unity."

Chris Shuff, Greek Week representative for IFC said this year is a giant step in improving future Greek Weeks.

"There are major differences (in Greek Week) this year that will hopefully improve Greek Week permanently," Shuff said. "We've had all positive feedback on the changes such as more events, more participation, and more campus involvement."

The biggest event is Sunday's carnival, Moorman said, because it involves the entire campus. It will be held from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the Ice Arena parking lot.

Sorority and fraternity pairings will enter booths in an outdoor festival for the entire community, where WMHE-FM will be broadcasting live to add music to the wide range of activities.

Food vendors, such as Stingers, Steve's Ice Cream, Marco's Pizza, and Taco Bell, will also be present at the festival with non-alcoholic drinks.

Other events include a VIP reception Monday, Junior Olympics on Tuesday, Greek Games and a picnic on Wednesday, "All That Glitters..." amateur talent competition on Thursday, and the closing ceremonies to be held Friday.

"The closing ceremonies are an important part of the whole week, five different greek unity awards will be given out, along with an overall fraternity and sorority award," Moorman said.

Two bands, "Exchange" and "Opiate of the Masses," will perform during the closing ceremonies, where the check will be presented to the Special Olympics.

"This week will be extremely exciting and we invite all to participate, greeks and non-greeks," Moorman said.

GREEK WEEK '88

GO FOR THE GOLD

Folks spin spokes for fun

by Amy Cole
reporter

For the members of the Falcon Wheelers Bike Club, riding laps, like those in the Delta Upsilon Bike Race, is just a "walk in the park."

The Wheelers aren't used to walking, however.

The club was formed in spring 1986 by Jim Karlovec, senior interpersonal and public communications major, and Don Marinoni, senior history and education major, for the purpose of riding.

According to Brent Evans, president of the club, the Falcon Wheelers have already traveled great distances.

In spring 1987 the club took its first major trip, from Bowling Green to Washington D.C. The purpose of this six-day, 600-mile journey was to raise money for prisoners of war and those missing in action, Evans said.

"This has been our major project so far. We made some major newspapers and were interviewed by some major television stations," Evans said.

Even though the club has been successful, it has not gained much support from the University.

"We're kind of on our own. Most of the funding we receive is from the members of the club," Evans said.

The Wheelers, which has about 30 members, is now involved with projects such as the 38th Annual Delta Upsilon Bike Race and the "Black Swamp Century," Evans added.

"The Bowling Green cycling club sponsors the 'Century.' This event brings cyclists from everywhere. Hopefully, this will help us establish a name for ourself," he said.

The Falcon Wheelers also sponsor their own activities.

Every weekday at 4:30 p.m. the club takes rides of 20 to 30 miles, Evans said. Anyone wishing to be involved in these daily rides should show up in front of the University Union.

"We are always looking for new members for the club," he said.

Delta Upsilon bikers race to help abused children

reporter

Despite the fraternity's financial problems and recent reorganization, the 38th Annual Delta Upsilon Bike Race, the oldest Greek event on campus, will occur tomorrow.

Ed Shultz, co-chairman of the event, said regardless of all the problems getting the race together, the propaganda has been beneficial to the fraternity.

"It (the race) pulled us together after reorganization," he said.

The race, beginning at 11 a.m. in front of the Math-Science Building, originally started as a 24-hour bicycle marathon intended to raise money for The Villages Inc., a charity which deals with battered children.

In the past few years, the race has been run as a relay and the money raised for The Villages Inc. comes from entry fees and raffle ticket sales.

This year, however, the race is taking on a different twist. Instead of limiting the participants of the race to sorority and fraternity teams, Delta Upsilon decided to open the race to members of a campus bike club and non-Greek individuals.

Brent Evans, president of the Falcon Wheelers Bike Club, said adding non-Greeks to the race will help relations between Greeks and non-Greeks.

Sign-up for the event will be the day of the race and will cost $7, Shultz said.

Elderly visited by class choir

by Barb Weadock
staff reporter

The sunshine may be only steps away for some, but when those steps seem like miles, a few verses of "You Are My Sunshine" can bring the rays as close as a smile.

Students from Lorna Gonsalves Pinto's Sociology 101 class recently visited residents of Bowling Green Manor nursing home to sing and socialize.

"When I introduce topics to the class, I try to relate them to students' lives," said Pinto, a sociology teaching fellow.

Pinto wanted the students to communicate with older people by singing and chatting with them in a one-on-one situation.

The students picked songs they thought would appeal to the residents.

"They (the students) were really excited about singing," she said. "I want them to go into the rooms and see how the residents live."

In addition to the sing-along, soloists Tim Parker, freshman math major; Jennifer Slocum, freshman English major; Jennifer Radcliff, freshman business major and Tony Pistillo, freshman business major, performed.

The class completed a survey on its attitudes regarding the elderly. Pinto said the students discovered they were discriminatory against the elderly.

"I think some of them are apprehensive about spending time one-on-one with the residents," Pinto said. "A lot of the time we are too busy to talk to someone who can't do something for us."

Pinto said her students were very excited about the trip.

Ann Marie Burello, sophomore social work major, thinks the experience is educational and it is good for students to see different living situations.

"I know Friday in class everyone will have different feelings," Burello said. "The trip is making sociology more real for us by dealing with the elderly."

Pinto said Sociology 101 is really one of the important freshman courses because it teaches students to appreciate diversity.

Increase helps Post Office

Raise in some postal rates needed for salaries, benefits

by Tracy Richards reporter

Not every type of mail has been affected by the new postal rates, according to the University's Post Office coordinator.

James Clemens said while the cost of most classes of mail increased April 3, the fee for sending first class priority and non-profit bulk mailings did not.

Third-class mail, such as the non-profit bulk mailings sent by the University, has experienced a one-tenth decrease, he said.

"This decrease will have no effect on non-profit bulk mailing at the University whatsoever," Clemens said.

The rates of first-class priority mail for packages of 12 ounces or more have not been affected either, he said.

However, the price of stamps increased from 22 to 25 cents, which has made it necessary to purchase three-cent stamps to supplement any leftover 22-cent stamps, Clemens said.

If a letter is now sent with a 22-cent stamp, the receiver of the letter will be charged the postage difference, Clemens said. If payment by the addressee is refused, the letter will be returned to the sender.

One-cent stamps also must be purchased for postcards, which have also increased in cost by one cent.

"Everybody always complains about postal increases. It usually lasts about two or three weeks until everybody gets used to them," he said.

During the first week, about 20,000 25-cent stamps were sold, Clemens estimated.

According to Bob Hill, Bowling Green's postmaster, price increases have occurred "normally in every class and type of special service fee which includes C.O.D., special delivery and business reply mail."

Package increases range from $1.43 to $25.46, compared to the old rates which ranged between $1.19 and $24.35, Hill said.

A proposal for postal increases was filed by the Bowling Green Post Office 10 months ago, Hill said.

"We tried to fix our rates over a period of time so businesses could adjust," he said.

The post office has been semi-independent, rather than taxpayer-supported since 1971, and the raises were needed to meet operating costs such as transportation costs, raises in salaries, and employee benefits, Hill said.

BG News/Paul Vernon

Cindy Long, junior marketing major, sorts the bulk mail by zip codes. According to Long, bulk mail has to be at least 200 pieces and has to be pre-sorted to be sent third class. Any department, on-campus organization or fraternity can send material out through bulk mail.

Election

"I feel Craig deceived his campaign workers and this is a good indication he would have continued his facade until he was challenged by whomever," Mann said.

Mann said the campaign workers were informed about the conviction for possession of marijuana in 1969, but they were not aware of Taliaferro's other convictions.

"I personally feel betrayed in that he should have told us (the campaign workers) about the robberies so we could form a program which would allow us to contend with this problem," Mann said.

"By him not confiding his trust in us he prevented us from going out and presenting an accurate view of the campaign and the ticket. Public officials must hold themselves in higher regard the public eye—that's their duty to the public."

In spite of his feelings of betrayal toward Taliaferro, Mann said he would like to see the platform make it into the USG office.

"I believe the issues he ran on would benefit the campus community the most. I feel strongly about the goals we worked toward. The revelations about Craig's background will in no way deter my belief in the issues."

"I think it is a shame a convict had to come to the campus community to teach the students they have a conscience and a morality."

Election results will be available at 11 a.m. today.

Aid

"Parents come in and say, 'I am not asking for free money, I just want to get a student loan,'" she said.

Heineman said parents and students who are dissatisfied with their eligibility for financial aid are being directed to write their congressional representatives.

Federal and state rules regarding financial aid eligibility are changed by legislators every year as short-term solutions to ever-changing conditions, said Heineman.

"With constant changes in the

The Afghan agreement provides for withdrawal of all Soviet troops, pledges by Pakistan and Afghanistan of non-interference in each other's affairs, and the safe return of about 5 million refugees from Pakistan and Iran. Moscow and Washington will guarantee Afghanistan's future non-alignment and the United Nations will supervise the settlement, including the return of refugees.

programs, we, in the financial aid departments across the country, cannot collect any data on current programs. I wish they would just leave us alone for four years or so. We could conduct a study and present a long-term solution," she said.

Heineman said she would like to see students graduate with the same financial aid program under which they started, much like academic programs.

"Those of us in financial aid are really on the side of the parents and students. We do what we can for students under the law."

Ten sailors injured in Gulf

Underwater mine explosion disables U.S. Navy warship

WASHINGTON (AP) — An underwater explosion tore open the hull of an American guided-missile frigate in the central Persian Gulf and injured 10 crewmen Thursday. Pentagon sources said it appeared the warship hit a mine.

The injured sailors — six with slight burns, one with second-degree burns, one with a hernia and two with back injuries — were evacuated from the USS Samuel B. Roberts, the Defense Department said.

The Roberts then began steaming slowly under its own power toward port in Bahrain.

The sailor with the second-degree burns was flown to Bahrain, the Pentagon said late Thursday. The other nine were transferred to the USS San Jose, a combat stores ship operating in the central gulf.

Defense sources said the crew of the Roberts had spotted "some mine-like objects" in the water immediately before the 10:10 a.m.

EDT explosion. The Pentagon declined official comment on the report.

The sources, who insisted on anonymity, said the frigate was "making only about two knots" on its own power Thursday afternoon and would probably be taken under tow by the cruiser Wainwright.

The Roberts and Wainwright are two of 14 Navy ships assigned to the Persian Gulf force to provide protection to commercial ships flying the American flag. The San Jose was in the area only because it was on a resupply mission.

The Reagan administration increased the U.S. force in the region last summer in response to a request from Kuwait, whose oil tankers come under attack in the course of the Iran-Iraq war.

Dan Howard, the Defense Department's chief spokesman, said the Roberts had been in no danger of sinking and that the crew had managed to staunch flooding in the engine compartments on its own.

Blowup rocks Piedmont jet

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — An engine on a Piedmont jetliner exploded into jagged pieces Thursday, slicing through both sides of the plane and forcing the pilot to make an emergency landing as passengers screamed and fainted.

No injuries were reported among the 56 passengers and four crew members, but passengers said some on board fainted after the turbine blades ripped through the right rear bathroom and a work area for attendants as the plane cruised at 31,000 feet.

"If somebody had been in the bathroom or the stewardesses' quarters, they would have been killed," said passenger Doug Bruce of Columbus, Ohio. "My first thought was, 'This is it.'"

"It blew a big hole in the plane," said passenger Fred Hinton of Raleigh, N.C., "I'm 240 pounds, and it was big enough that I could crawl through it."

"All the kids were screaming," Hinton said. Piedmont Flight 486 was flying from Charlotte, N.C., to Columbus, Ohio, when its right jet turbine disintegrated about 9:45 a.m., Piedmont officials said. The plane, a Fokker F-28, has two engines, one mounted on each side of the cabin.

The plane, 40 miles south of Charleston, immediately lost air pressure in the cabin; several passengers later complained of headaches, earaches and elevated blood pressure.

"It began with a wearing noise and loud vibrations about five or 10 times straight, and then there was an explosion in the back of us," said passenger Rafael Gonzalez of Charlotte, N.C.

Turbine blades and engine parts ripped through the fuselage, punching holes in both sides of the plane. A hole on the right side, adjacent to the engine that disintegrated, was 2 feet wide by 6 feet tall. On the opposite side, the hole was 2 feet by 1 foot.

Naples bomb kills five

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — A car bomb blew up in front of a club for U.S. military personnel in Naples, killing five people and wounding at least 17, Italian officials said. A U.S. sailor was among the dead, the Pentagon said.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the blast that happened shortly after 8 p.m. (2 p.m. EDT) at the USO club.

Italian media quoted officials as saying five people died in the blast. A U.S. Consulate official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said he had been told five people were killed.

A Pentagon spokesman in Washington, Lt. Col. Jim Jannette, said one U.S. sailor had been killed and four sailors were wounded.

One of the bodies at the entrance to the club was draped in a U.S. flag, witnesses said.

One of those hurt, a 27-year-old Italian woman, was reported in grave condition.

Italian media said the bomb exploded during a reception at the club for the commander of the USS Paul, a torpedo boat destroyer docked in Naples. The consulate official said he could not confirm this.

Jannette said the USS Paul and USS Capodanno were in the Naples port at the time of the blast. The Capodanno has its home port in Newport, R.I., and the Paul is from Mayport, Fla.

Sexism debated at Miami

OXFORD (AP) — Miami University is considering dropping the word "freshman" from official use — in favor of "first-year student."

Trustees of the state university are to vote at a meeting Saturday on whether to approve both measures. Elizabeth Braeman, the student government leader and feminist who proposed the changes, said Thursday the trustees should approve them because student and faculty bodies have already done so.

She wants the university — which first admitted women students a century ago — to use "first-year student" in publications and in the student handbook.

Car bashing relieves tax-time frustration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Last-minute taxpayers may find some consolation in free coffee and headache powders, but some may want the chance to bash an old car when they head out to mail their tax returns Friday in cities nationwide.

In Arkansas, the rite associated with paying taxes will be abrupt, where Little Rock station KZOU-FM will broadcast from a parking lot where a mail box will be collected at midnight.

The station will offer taxpayers a chance to vent their feelings by taking a sledgehammer to a used car when they come to drop off their tax returns. A small charge for taking part will be used for charity.

Tax returns must be postmarked no later than April 15, and changes in the tax laws may lead to even more than the usual number of last-minute filers.

DO YOU KNOW WHERE YOUR HANDS GO?

Ruggers host Midwest Cup BG looks for third-straight title and trip to national finals

by Andy Woodard
assistant sports editor

The Bowling Green rugby club will try to accomplish what no team ever has this weekend — win the Midwest Universities Cup while hosting the tournament.

The Falcons host the Midwest Saturday and Sunday and will try to earn a trip to the national final four for the third straight year. All of the contests will be played on the intramural fields next to the BG Ice Arena.

No club has won the tourney at home in its nine year existence.

"The club that hosts loses a lot of energy and direction while setting everything up (for the tournament)," BG head coach Roger Mazzarella said. "It's caused a lot of people to lose it in the past."

"When the games get close, everything has to go your way, including down to the time you eat before the game; whether it be a half hour before or two hours before. Anything can be costly."

The Falcons won the tournament two years ago at the University of Illinois, where they downed Wisconsin 7-6. Last year, BG defeated Kentucky 26-25 at the buzzer at the University of Dayton.

But Mazzarella said his club has something no host has had in the past.

"One advantage we have is that we have 90 people," he said. "The ones who aren't going for a championship can do the busy work."

BG plays its first game at 10 p.m. Saturday against St. Thomas of Minnesota.

Mazzarella said he is somewhat concerned about the Catholic school.

"We don't know how good of rugby players they're going to be, but one thing we do know is that they're going to run around all day and see what they can disrupt," he said.

This may be the toughest year for the club to win the Midwest because they have captured two straight titles, according to Mazzarella. He said fan support will be instrumental in his club's chances.

"One reason we tried to get the Midwest here is because we believe in fan support from the sidelines," he said. "We have yet to go to an away game (this spring) where we didn't have more fans than the home team."

Other first round games Saturday include Iowa State against Slippery Rock at 10 a.m., and Michigan State against Wisconsin-Lacrosse and Vanderbilt vs. Miami at 11 a.m. Illinois State plays Mankato

State and Marquette takes on Ball State at noon, and Purdue plays Northern Illinois and Penn State takes on Ohio State at 1 p.m.

The quarter-finals are at 2, 3, 4 and 5 p.m. Saturday.

The semi-finals begin at 11 a.m. Sunday, while the championship is slated for 2:30 Sunday.

The champion advances to Monterey, Calif. for the final four April 30 and May 1. California-Berkeley has already reached the final four by virtue of winning the Pacific Coast Universities Cup.

Mazzarella said his club's main competition in the Midwest is Miami, Illinois State and Ohio State. The Redskins are in BG's half of the bracket, while the Redbirds and Buckeyes are in the other half.

The BG mentor said possible Midwest darkhorses could be Vanderbilt and Purdue. Vandy head coach Joe Franklin is the skipper of the United States National Rugby squad.

"This guy is good. They're kind of a rich school because they go on a tour about every other year," he said. "Last year they toured New Zealand."

Whiteman third player to sign

Men's basketball head coach Jim Larranaga announced Wednesday the signing of a two-time all-state point guard from Illinois to play for the University next year.

Kirk Whiteman, a 6-footer, averaged 22.5 points, 7-0 assists and 4.6 steals per game for the Knorrville Blue Bullets last season.

"Kirk is a smart player with good basketball skills," Larranaga said Thursday. "He's a good shooter from three-point range and a very successful student-athlete. He should fit in here."

Whiteman is the third high school senior to sign to play at Bowling Green next season. He joins Tom Hall, a 6-5 forward from Cleveland Heights, and Jay Zulauf, a 6-6 forward from Port Huron, Mich., who both committed to BG last November.

Whiteman led his squad to two Prairie Land Conference titles, a berth in two straight regional finals, and for three weeks the No. 1 ranking in the state.

Larranaga would not compare his recruits with last year's freshman class, but he did say the three will have the chance to play with the graduation losses of Anthony Robinson, Steve Martenet and James Tyler.

"These players will fit in well in our future," he said. "We went out and recruited the best student-athletes we could."

Larranaga said several other players could sign next week, including high school teammates guard Jean Prieoleau and center Sam Rowe from New Jersey, Lansing, Mich. junior college forward Carter Briggs, and forward Fred Clemon from Cleveland.

Voll signs 6-2 recruit McNulty

A 6-2 center from Livonia, Mich. signed a national letter of intent Wednesday to play women's basketball here at Bowling Green next fall, according to head coach Fran Voll.

Katie McNulty, a two-time all-stater who averaged 16 points and 12 rebounds a game last year, will provide the two-time defending Mid-American Conference champion Falcons with a good inside back-up, Voll said.

"You never know what's she's going to do until she gets here, but we think she could back-up some people inside," Voll said Thursday. "She certainly has the size to fill that role."

She is the second player to sign with the Falcons. Toledo Central Catholic standout Cathy Kock, a 5-4 point guard, committed in November.

McNulty lettered three years at Livonia Ladywood High School, playing on a state championship team her sophomore season. She earned all-league and all-state honors her junior and senior years.

She was the team's captain her final season.

"Those two will fit in very well and we're looking forward to having them," Voll said. "This may be all we sign, although there is an outside possibility we may sign one more player. But we're not looking at any others at this time."

Falcons ink spiker

Bowling Green volleyball head coach Denise Van De Walle announced the signing of a third prospect to a national letter of intent for the 1988 season.

Lisa Mika, a 6-0 middle blocker from Flossmoor, Ill. joins Holli Costein of Willard and Tammy Schiller from New Carlisle on next year's Falcon squad.

Mika was a three-year letterwinner in volleyball while playing at Homewood-Flossmoor High School, where she earned numerous honors.

Congratulations to the Phi Mu graduating Seniors.

Ohio to give awards next year

Professional, amateur honors named for Schmidt, Albritton

DAYTON (AP) — Ohio's top professional and amateur athlete each will be recognized at a banquet next year that organizers said Thursday they hope will become an annual event attracting national publicity.

The Mike Schmidt Award, named after the Philadelphia Phillies third baseman from Dayton, will go to the outstanding professional athlete.

The David D. Albritton Award, named after a 1936 Olympic track and field silver medalist and outstanding high jumper, will honor the top amateur, said Gerald A. Paprocki, chairman of the event. Albritton grew up in Cleveland and now lives in Dayton.

Recipients will be chosen by a statewide ballot of sports writers and broadcasters, Paprocki said. The awards will be given at a $100-a-plate dinner Feb. 23 at the Dayton Convention Center, he said.

The banquet will salute Wright State University and Children's Medical Center, but is not a fund-raising event, said Paprocki, who is public relations director for L.M. Berry & Co. More important, he said, is that "we've got to focus attention" on Dayton.

"It's a way of tooting Dayton's horn and bringing some world-class athletes to the city," said Michael Cusack, Wright State athletic director. "I think the city needs some world-class touch and some major event."

Paprocki, who said he has been affiliated with the former Hickock Award banquet in Rochester, N.Y., and the Dunlop Pro-Am Awards banquet in Buffalo, N.Y., said he suggested the idea to Cusack and a development official from Children's while they were golfing about 1½ years ago.

Linda Lombard, a spokeswoman for the organizers, said Marty Brennaman, broadcaster for the Cincinnati Reds, has agreed to host the event. Former Cleveland Browns wide receiver Paul Warfield and Alan Page of Canton, former defensive tackle for the Minnesota Vikings, are among those who have said they will attend, she said.

Candiotti leads Indians' 3-1 win

CLEVELAND (AP) — Tom Candiotti pitched his second straight complete game and Willie Upshaw had two hits and scored twice as the Cleveland Indians defeated the Minnesota Twins 3-1 Thursday night.

The victory was the eighth in the last nine games for Cleveland, which has an 8-2 record.

Candiotti, 2-0, allowed eight hits, walked three and struck out six. The complete game was the Indians' fifth, and lowered their ERA to 2.02.

At Detroit, Jose Guzman combined with Mitch Williams on a four-hitter, and Ruben Sierra and Pete O'Brien each drove in a run, leading the Texas Rangers to a 2-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

At Pittsburgh, Barry Bonds hit two solo home runs and Junior Ortiz hit a solo homer and drove in the tie-breaking run with a bases-loaded walk as the breaking Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Philadelphia Phillies 4-2.

Smart

Help your parents get through college.

Just thinking about college tuition is enough to make most parents break into a sweat.

But can you blame them? When you consider the cost of tuition, books, dorms—not to mention pizza parties—you're talking big bucks.

Which is why you should do some talking. Like telling your parents about the Education Loan Programs at Manufacturers Hanover Trust.

At MHT, not only do we participate in all three Federally guaranteed loan programs, but we also work with state and national agencies and can make guaranteed loans in all 50 states.

In practically no time at all.

In a matter of minutes, MHT Student Loan Processors can program your information into our computerized loan-processing system.

Within 24 hours, the Bank will get a decision from the Guarantee Agency. It's that simple. Better still, with MHT your parents will get all the money they need from one source.

Example: If your folks need more money than government sources will give them, we can offer them tailor-made payment plans through The Education Loan Program, Educational Lines of Credit or Monthly Budget Program and Pre-Payment Programs that make it easy for your parents to fund themselves. (The Education Loan Program, Monthly Budget and Pre-Payment Programs are offered through the Tuition Plan, a company of Manufacturers Hanover.)

Once you get a loan from us, you can be sure it'll stay with us. Because we've never sold education loans to other banks (unless the borrower asked us to).

So if you need money for school, call 1-800-MHT-GRAD and get yourself an MHT Education Loan Application.

Then when your folks ask you about tuition, at least you'll have an answer.

"No sweat."

Get Psyched for Greek Week. We're ready for a good time.

The Alpha Sigs

So you have nothing to do this Friday or Saturday night? Well, have no fear, Dry Dock is here, and we're open both Friday and Saturday nights this weekend. Friday we have three live bands--The Exchange, Opiste of the Masses, and Sheepsish Grin. Saturday we have another live band, APB, co-sponsored by Beta Theta Pi. We'll be open both nights 9 PM to 1 AM, no ID's and no cover ever.

'Dead' followers still alive

by Carol Karbowski

Friday/Brad Phalin

Jerry Garcia and the Grateful Dead attracted their usual large following of 'deadheads' Monday at Joe Louis Arena in Detroit.

Garcia and the 'Dead' are still going strong after being together for over 20 years.

Deadheads prefer peaceful world

by Leigh Ann Hamilton

On Friday, April 15, Judy will attend the Grateful Dead show in Chicago. So will Eric. So will Noel. So will Natasha. So will thousands of others who call themselves "deadheads."

But being a "deadhead" involves much more than wearing the loose-fitting tie-dye apparel and listening exclusively to the Grateful Dead. Being a deadhead is a way of life for people like Judy, Noel, Eric, and Natasha, it's a way of looking at life, according to them.

Judy, 20, a former philosophy major at Dartmouth University, has been traveling with the Dead since she left school over a year ago.

"I just realized that school wasn't for me," she said. "This is what I need right now. Maybe one day I'll go back — maybe not."

Within this group of grateful dead followers, there is a true expression of trust and companionship, that the deadheads say is unmatched to any other experience in life.

Eric earns money to go from show to show, from city to city, by selling among other things, "Deadheads for Peace" bumper stickers. However, Eric does not hesitate to leave his possessions and money with us while he goes to talk to friends he hasn't seen since the last show.

"I know no one is going to steal my stuff," he said. "And even if they do, I know I would be alright. These people would never let me starve."

Deadheads live together harmoniously from show to show. As Noel, 19, from Los Angeles, put it, "I can't even remember how many shows I've seen with these people."

Their news consists of "A New World Rising" that Eric distributes free to people who attend Dead shows. It contains the dates of national events like peace marches, the Annual Student Disarmament Pilgrimage from New York to Washington

See Peace, page 12.

For a group that has been together for over twenty years and has enjoyed only one top forty single ("Touch of Grey"), the Grateful Dead has managed to survive and flourish through years of social and political upheavals to become one of the biggest-drawing live bands of all time.

Earlier this week in Detroit, the Dead played to a sold-out crowd that included Deadheads of all ages. The Deadheads, of course, is a group name for the Grateful Dead's intense fanclub. Deadheads are considered by many to be a type of cult, however, most fans tend to be highly intelligent yet individualistic enough not to fit into the mainstream of today's society.

"It was really strange," Ford Matthews, freshman undecided major, said. "I really like the Dead, but I'm not what you'd consider a Deadhead. I expected to be out of place because I didn't know what to expect. It was quite ... bizarre."

Before the concert, Deadheads could be found selling Dead-related items everywhere. Tie-dyed bandanas, T-shirts, and braided bracelets that were originated by Deadheads and are now a friendship sign, were being sold and traded for other Dead-related items.

Resplendent color was the trademark of the night although the band members wore darker clothes. Deadheads wore things like tie-dyed T-shirts with face paintings, colorful bandanas and long flowing skirts and dresses. One man came dressed as a butterfly, complete with wings. Drugs were common, though many did not get through the search and seizure at the door. Once the band started playing, the cloud of marijuana smoke rose quickly to the top of the auditorium. The police stood around and watched dully — outnumbered.

The Dead and their fans have formed a fellowship unique in the rock industry. This fellowship boasts its own popular press made up of several Dead-related magazines; its own radio program which may be syndicated nationwide; its own computer-linked database system in which Deadheads not only trade notes and views on ethical issues, but also pass along their concerns directly to the band members; and its own worldwide network of tape collectors who, with the band's cooperation, record all of the Dead's performances and share them with others.

On stage, however, the band has a rather unique style reminiscent of the 1960s when they used to bring bean-bag chairs and pillows on-stage to sit on during their six-hour long concerts. They do no jumping around, no speaking between songs, and no fancy theatrics. The band

Movie out of ordinary

by Craig Wagner

After several grueling hours of brain-picking, an apt characterization of the new film "Beetlejuice" still escapes me. Actually, I do not think one exists.

Some have called it a supernatural comedy, while others have placed it in the fantasy-horror genre. No, those do not quite fit—maybe it's a ghoulish comedy. No that's not it either. I give up.

Whatever it is, "Beetlejuice" is definitely out of the ordinary. It is also devilishly entertaining.

To explain the aura of confusion, consider the following examples of the delightful absurdity which permeates the film. First, the character for whom the movie is titled, Beetlejuice (Michael Keaton), is not really the main focus of the story, and he makes relatively few appearances.

There are also plenty of strange, disfigured creatures, yet they are more amusing than frightening.

Finally, demonic possession in the movie consists of making a startled dinner party stand up and sing in unison Harry Belafonte's banana-boat hit of the 1950s ("Day-o! Day-ay-ay-o! Daylight come and me wanna go home!").

It all sounds pretty weird, right? Well it is, but it is also a great deal of fun.

In simplest terms, the film deals with a haunted house. However, there is a peculiar twist—the story takes the viewpoint of the ghosts.

Adam and Barbara Maitland (Alec Baldwin, Geena Davis) are proud owners of an old house in Connecticut. After a car accident, the charming couple passes into the hereafter, but the two continue to reside in the attic of their former home.

The trouble begins when the house is sold to the rich and trendy Deetz family. Charles (Jeffrey Jones) is a henpecked husband, and his snobbish wife Delia wants to completely remodel the old house. Lydia (Winona Ryder) is their sulky teenage daughter, who wants absolutely nothing to do with either of her parents.

Disliking both the family and the renovation efforts, the Maitlands set out to scare the Deetzes away with their recently-obtained ghostly powers. However, the Deetzes are more entertained than frightened by the gory spectacles hatched up by the post-mortem couple.

Lacking the experience needed to do the job, the Maitlands consider several emergency plans to get the Deetzes out. One alternative is to call a mysterious demon who has been bombarding them with messages such as: "Unhappy with Eternity? Call Beetelgeuse!"

Eventually, Beetlejuice (the spelling is inconsistent in the movie also) does appear. Keaton's character, a bio-exorcist (you won't find that word in the dictionary), is an extremely rude and obnoxious creature with a penchant for the spectacular when it comes to scaring people.

When Beetlejuice makes an obsessive nuisance of himself, the Maitlands are faced with getting rid of him as well as the Deetzes. Of course, things are not that easy because Beetlejuice is determined to stick around for awhile.

Director Tim Burton relies mainly on imaginative visual gadgetry in this film, and he enhances it with some particularly gruesome humor.

During the climactic wedding scene, for instance, Beetlejuice produces a ring which is still attached to a severed finger. In response to his bride's astonishment, he exclaims, "I tell ya, honey, she meant nothing to me." Comparatively speaking, this is an extremely mild example of the special effects used in this movie.

"Beetlejuice" also presents some interesting views of the afterworld. Evidently, death does not offer an escape from the world's frustrating bureaucratic entanglements. There are still countless forms to be filled out, technical manuals to read, and long lines to wait in.

Also, the dead retain the evidence of their demise. A restaurant patron walks around with the bone in his throat that choked him. A magician's assistant accidentally sawed in half takes up two places on the sofa—one for her legs, and one for her upper torso.

Such visual effects are the main thrust of the movie, so the acting naturally takes a back seat. Still, Baldwin and Davis play their parts perfectly, and the rest of the cast does remarkably well in the midst of all the strange creatures in the film.

Although his appearances are few and far between, Beetlejuice, with his belching obtrusiveness, is the one who injects real life into the story. The character is quite loathsome, but Keaton makes him funny as well.

If there is any message at all in this odd festival of spooky delights, it is that death may not be any easier than life is—so enjoy life while you can. A good way to start is to see this movie.

"Beetlejuice," rated PG, is now playing at the Woodland Mall Cinema. Running time: 95 minutes.

College campuses at risk

by Greg Confel

A student out at the bars with some friends meets an attractive member of the opposite sex. They dance, share a few drinks, and at the end of the evening, they go home together.

The next morning the student wakes alone and finds a note scrawled in lipstick on the bathroom mirror which reads, "I have AIDS, now you have it too."

By now, most students on campus have heard this story. In spite of AIDS testing, the number of cases in the United States is increasing, and as it does, so does the fear as well as the possibility of catching the disease at the University.

Val Tekaucic, co-chairman of The Lesbian and Gay Alliance (LAGA), said there are probably already students on campus who have tested positive to carrying the HTLV-III virus that causes AIDS.

"I cannot imagine that on this campus there would be none," he said.

However, this does not mean these people necessarily have AIDS. According to a series of brochures published by the American Red Cross and the U.S. Public Health Service, the AIDS antibody test does not determine if a person will get AIDS, but only if they have been exposed to the disease.

"A positive test result does not mean that someone will get AIDS — many people with a positive test either remain free of symptoms or develop less serious illnesses," the brochures state. "A positive test result does indicate that a person has been infected by the AIDS virus and most probably can transmit it to others, even if he or she shows no symptoms."

It is estimated that more than one million Americans have been infected by the AIDS virus, the brochures state.

Joanne Navin, RN, MSN, and clinic coordinator at the Student Health Center, said the AIDS antibody test is not for everyone.

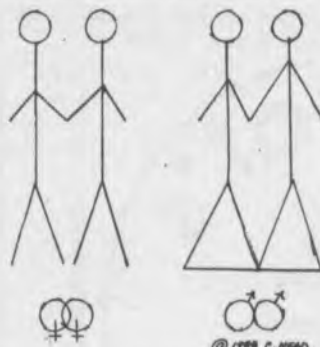

"It's not like having a throat culture where if you get a false reading they give you a shot of penicillin that you don't need; that won't kill you, but people have lost their jobs and even committed suicide over testing positive to the AIDS virus," she said.

The AIDS antibody test is offered at the Student Health Center to students who need the test as a prerequisite for employment. Many larger corporations and the U.S. government require all prospective employees to take the test, Navin said.

"No University student has tested positive at the Health Center to date, she added.

But the test is also available on an anonymous basis in Toledo at the Medical College of Ohio, and Tekaucic said there is no way to determine the number of University students who have been tested there, since many of them may not have listed the University as their address for the test.

It is known, however, that three cases of AIDS have been diagnosed in Wood County since 1985. Two of the three victims have since died.

Mary Edmonds, Vice President of Student Affairs, said there is no formal University policy to deal with an AIDS virus carrier or an AIDS patient on campus.

"That is definitely something we should handle on a case-by-case basis," she said. "Our policy is to provide as much education as possible. This is a policy which must be implemented on a daily basis."

"It is a continuous educational process.

It looks like every week there is new information being discovered about AIDS. When you have an emerging ideology, like with AIDS, you need to continually update your information," Edmonds said.

Health Center officials are working to do just that, Navin said. She and Dr. Josh Kaplan, Medical Director of the Health Center, regularly give lectures to groups such as the University residence advisers, fraternities and sororities.

Also to increase AIDS awareness, Dr. Kaplan is cooperating with the English department, which is requiring all freshman English students to write their proficiency exam this on the topic of AIDS.

In a letter to the English department, Dr. Kaplan explained some of the facts about AIDS to the instructors who then conveyed the information to their students.

"One common misconception is that AIDS is primarily a disease of homosexual men," the letter states. "Actually the virus is already widely distributed among heterosexuals. Because of this and other misconceptions, many people continue to risk exposure to the deadly AIDS virus."

The students were also given eight brochures from the Red Cross, one from the U.S. Surgeon General's office and three articles from U.S. News and World Report.

Jeremy Kolt, freshman undecided major and student in G.H. Li's English 111 class, said he is more concerned about what is not known about AIDS than what is known.

"There is very little known about the subject and the information we're given contradicts itself. In one pamphlet it says AIDS is not spread through normal daily contact, like from sharing a toothbrush, and then later in the same brochure is says if you have a positive (AIDS antibody) test do not share toothbrushes," Kolt said.

Kolt said it is the possibility of non-sexual contraction of the disease that most worries him.

"I'm concerned about getting it through regular daily contact, like if somebody gets

Prevent AIDS know the facts

by Kimberly Dilgren

AIDS is the abbreviation for acquired (not inherited) immune deficiency (a breakdown of the body's defense system, producing susceptibility to certain diseases) syndrome (a spectrum of disorders and symptoms). The AIDS virus attacks the human blood cells, weakening the body's defense against illness and disease.

To a lesser extent, the AIDS virus also attacks the nerve cells. The virus that causes AIDS may also produce a milder range of illnesses called AIDS-related Complex (ARC), a lesser form of AIDS.

Many of the early symptoms of AIDS or ARC are similar to those of the "flu." The severity and duration of the symptoms is what distinguishes AIDS. Symptoms include:

- Persistent, excessive tiredness for no apparent reason.
- Recurring fevers, chills, or night sweats.
- Unexplained weight loss of more than 10 pounds.
- Persistent enlargement of the lymph nodes (glands).
- Sore throat that does not go away, or white spots or patches in the mouth.
- A new, persistent cough.
- Easy bruising or unexplained bleeding from any part of the body.
- Persistent diarrhea.

Treehouse troupe performs childrens plays

by Sheree Seil

"Bamboozled" and "The Hans Christian Andersen Storybook" will be presented by the University's Treehouse Troupe under the direction of Dr. F. Scott Regan tonight and tomorrow night in Joe E. Brown Theatre at 7:30 p.m.

The Treehouse Troupe has traveled around Ohio to present the performances to students from different elementary schools. They will continue to perform until April 28.

The "Hans Christian Andersen Storybook" contains adaptations of four of Andersen's fairy tales. These tales include "The Jumping Competition," "Big Klaus and Little Klaus," "The Princess and the Pea," and "The Ugly Duckling." The Troupe has performed this show 17 times for students in kindergarten through third grade.

"Bamboozled" is a modern play based on the characters and traditions of commedia dell'arte, an improvisational slapstick form of farce which was popular during the 16th-18th centuries in Europe.

Treehouse Troupe member Shelly Parks, freshman creative writing major, says she enjoys performing for the children. "It's a lot different than performing for adults. They (children) are so enthusiastic — they really get involved."

Other members of the Treehouse Troupe include James Azelvandre, Rene Guerrero, Mel Hatch, Christopher McCarty, Andrew McLean, and Laurie Scott.

Who's the winner? Christopher McCarty (center) of Bryan can't decide whether the winner is Jim Azelvandre (left) of Columbus or Rene Guerrero (right) of Toledo in "The Jumping Competition," one of four stories brought to life in "The Hans Christian Andersen Storybook." The University Treehouse Troupe will present the production tonight and tomorrow at 7:30 P.M. in the Joe E. Brown Theatre.

Five star jazz artist will perform on campus

Wynton Marsalis

by David A. Lechner

Wynton Marsalis, a five star jazz artist and accomplished classical musician will be performing at Kobacker Hall Saturday night.

After establishing himself as a gifted musician, Marsalis made an exceptional sweep at the 1984 Grammy Awards. Marsalis received back to back Grammys in both jazz and classical music. At a very young age, the struggling 27-year-old Marsalis was the first musician to ever receive a Grammy in two separate musical categories in the same year. Marsalis has continued to garner such prestigious awards and it is believed that he has yet to reach his potential.

Marsalis, son of Ellis Marsalis, a renowned jazz pianist and composer, made his musical debut at age 14 with the New Orleans Philharmonic Orchestra. Being a featured soloist, he performed such classics as Franz Joseph Haydn's Trumpet Concerto and later Johann Sebastian Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No.2.

Continuing his activism with various funk bands, civic orchestras, and other local performers, his reputation earned him a slot in the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood at age 17. Within one year he was awarded a scholarship to the famed Julliard School of Music which he attended for three years. In 1981, Marsalis left Julliard without a degree and began touring with major orchestras throughout the United States and England.

He has recorded numerous award winning classical and jazz albums, two of which resulted in his unprecedented multiple Grammys in 1984.

Marsalis, equally talented in classical music, has always tried to put more emphasis on jazz. In his biography he says, "Because I play with orchestras and all that, some people think I'm a classical musician who plays jazz. They have it backwards. I'm a jazz musician who can play classical."

This reflects his feelings on how jazz is a style of music that must be studied and mastered before it's improved.

Marsalis' career has continued to prosper. In 1986, he won the Grammy Award for Jazz Soloist making it the third consecutive year he has received the award. His popularity has gained him recognition as the subject of feature stories in "Time," "Life," and "People" magazines.

As "Macleans" magazine pointed out in 1984, Marsalis can afford to limit himself because he "has the gifts to grow in whatever direction he chooses."

Racism affects hispanics on campus

by Nancy Erikson

In February the University celebrated Black History Month. This was evident in the events that took place on campus such as speakers, movies or dances.

Most University students knew that it was Black History Month. It opened some doors for those who knew nothing about the black culture and helped bridge the gap between blacks and whites.

This past week was Hispanic Awareness Week.

Most students are probably not aware of that. There have been few posters. There have been no movies. There has been no advertisements of speakers, if there have been any speakers at all.

There has only been apathy and disinterest, something that the hispanic-

Americans are fairly used to.

"There is not much interest in hispanic studies and culture at this university. This could be because the enrollment of hispanic students here has declined. The hispanic students come and they leave. They say they don't like the atmosphere of the campus," Dr. Antonio Buron, associate professor of romance languages, said.

He added, "Most of the problem is with recruiting students. I was interested in recruiting students from Texas but the University Administration would not back me up. Once I gave them 62 names of hispanic students that were interested in Bowling Green and the administration never contacted them, so they went to other schools."

It seems though, even though he has received little help from the administration in recruiting hispanic students from the

ACE

South West, it does not seem to be a problem with willingness on the part of the administration.

"I think the Administration is very serious and sincere about helping the recruitment of these students, but they are going about it the wrong way. I feel beautiful things and hear beautiful promises but there is a great lack of action on the part of those making the promises," he said.

Another problem that Buron has encountered is the never ending problem of prejudice and racism.

Originally from Leon, Spain, Buron said that although he has taught at the University for 19 years, he has never been elected to a committee.

"I don't know why I am never elected. I am qualified enough but never elected. So

Advertisements aren't personal enough

by Sean P. Smith

"Fogbrained, Gearhead needs crankcase for his dipstick, 1957 model, white exterior, mint condition, no wrecks or rebuilds. Picture of body please." (Cleveland Magazine)

"Submissive SWM, 25, gorgeous, athletic, seeking sincere, dominant female/bi-females/couples. Age, race, unimportant. Let me fulfill your needs and fantasies. 1st come, first served." (In Pittsburgh)

No, this isn't men's room graffiti. This is personal advertising at its best.

NOTE: These personal ads did not, and would not, appear in the BG News. The News' personals are much more tame. And boring. If the above people were to advertise in the BG News, it would probably be person of the 80's. While hopeless romantics in other cities are selling themselves in the personals, University students use them to find their lost jackets or advertise happy hour prices.

It's time to learn from other papers. The personals give other papers their personality.

For instance, where else but the "MetroTimes," from Detroit, could you find this ad:

"Sky God wishes to meet earth mother for cosmic union. Faster than light marathoner enjoys pulsars and quasars, non-polluted. Your icon gets mine. Let's get Astra!"

It only cost the Sky God $10 to run that advertisement. Included in the price is a mailing system in which the MetroTimes sends him all replies to his ad. For a

I-O-In Search Of

Anything else—Use your imagination
A key like this can be essential when reading "In Pittsburgh," that city's version of the singles magazine. In Pittsburgh uses these abbreviations heavily, as in the ad:
"SWJPM, 23, ISO non-smoking SJF to explore romantic spots in Pittsburgh. But if you're a material girl, drain someone else's wallet."

All advertisements are anonymous, which is half the fun. If you want to meet the Sky King, you have to roll the dice. Imagine the freedom of placing personal ads without identifying yourself.

You can say what you want, request a photo, and the replies aren't even sent directly to your home.

This freedom is probably an instrumental factor in persuading people to write these ads. Anonymity also inspires several would-be romantics to be less subtle with their desires.

"SWM, 21, tired of seeking alternatives. Wants female to fulfill my fantasies."

(MetroTimes)

Or,
"Adventurous couple wants to expand their sexual horizons. Looking for singles and couples for swinging together." (In Pittsburgh)

A little risky, maybe, but it only takes a spark to start a fire.

But the point is, it's been too long since an adventurous couple has advertised in the BG News. It's time they did. And it's time we ALL did.

Now don't get me wrong. Occasionally, somebody will take a risk and place an invitation to:

"The guy in the red shirt at the laundromat,"

or

"The girl who spilled a beer on my coat at Howard's."

With summer coming up, this could be the last chance to meet that cute guy upstairs or the girl who sits behind you in English class.

The personal ads at the University will put you to sleep. As somebody who has never been sent a personal, I can tell you — it's no fun reading the personals unless you're in them. It's all date parties and inside jokes.

There is no flavor. The ads are devoid of personality. Who are these people in the ads, and why are they so "psyched?"

It's a shame these ads are so dull, because the classifieds can be a virtual hotbed of sin and degradation for the single

Local bands play on campus

by Christy Lee Bland

Tonight at the Dry Dock, students will have the chance to hear local bands play a wide variety of music, both covers and originals.

Sheepish Grin, The Exchange, and Opiate of the Masses will perform. The show was supposed to take place in February at The Warehouse, but was cancelled by police for legal reasons concerning zoning laws.

The bands will present a variety of music styles. Sheepish Grin plays original and cover songs. The band, which formed two years ago, consists of Paul Johnson, vocals and guitar, Larry Zengel, drums and backing vocals, and Troy Raszka, bass and backing vocals.

When asked what type of music they play, "We do alot of originals. We could make alot more money doing current covers but it would be shallow and dishearting," Johnson said.

According to Raszka "The covers we do show our personalities and are fun." The latest influences on the band are Robyn Hitchcock and the Big Band sounds.

They have played in Dayton, Toledo, and at Miami University and are looking forward to playing with the other bands at Dry Dock. Sheepish Grin also has a tape available at Finder's.

The Exchange, James Ednie, bass guitar, Todd Szopo, singer, Dave Pomeroy, drummer, and John McAlea, guitar, have been together for six or seven months. They play mixed covers and some originals. "We like doing covers but we want to do more originals," McAlea said. Two of The Exchange's songs play on WBGU, "For You" and "This Is The Song I Wrote While Todd Was On The Phone." Their musical influences include R.E.M., U.2., XTC, The Cure, and The Who.

The Exchange plays every Friday night at Pablo's, 893 S. Main. Outside Bowling Green, the band has played in Cleveland, at the University of Michigan, and Akron. They have plans to play at Toledo's Rally By The River and the Fourth of July party at the Portage Quarry. They also plan to record an album in Detroit this summer.

Members of Opiate of the Masses include Scott Summitt, singer, Micheal Kimmy, keyboards and guitars, Matt Mohr, guitar, Ed (MarTee) Zunic, bass, and Sean Slovensky, drums.

Opiate formed a little over a year ago. "We splintered off from a cover band because we were unhappy and wanted to write original songs. It has proven to be very satisfying to us," Summitt said.

The band denies themselves a category of music. They consider their music experimental and theatrical when on stage. Summitt warns that there will be lots of surprises during the show. "We want the people to enjoy what we do. We want to give them a positive experience, even though they may think we are bizzare."

They have two original songs on WBGU, "I Am Electric" and "Cities." Their tape "Where You Are" is on sale at Finder's. This tape is being reviewed in some independent music magazines.

The Dry Dock is a great place to check out some of the bands in the local music scene and hear some original music. The show starts at 9 p.m. The Dry Dock is located in the basement of Harshman Quadrangle. Admission is free.

Conference held

by T.Cowden Moyer

The philosophy department's three day conference on liability in law and morals which begins today will put Bowling Green on the map according to its organizer.

Dr. R.G. Frey, professor of philosophy, said that there has not been such a distinguished group assembled to discuss the topics of law and morality in the last 50 years.

The eight speakers at the conference come from such bastions of legal thought as Oxford, Yale, Columbia and University of Chicago law school. The topic of the conference, liability in law and morals, was initiated by Alan White, a visiting professor from the University of Hull in the U.K. who has an interest in the subject.

According to Frey, when he and Christopher Morris, another professor in the philosophy department, began planning the conference eight months ago, they tried to develop it around White's interest. "We didn't realize when we began organizing that we would end up with a group this distinguished."

'Because The Magic Begins At Midnight'

Soaps operas provide an escape for students

by Rhonda Border

Do you have a pencil handy? It is soap opera trivia time.

1. What daytime drama celebrated its 25th anniversary on April 1?

- A. Guiding Light
- B. General Hospital
- C. All My Children

2. At the Fourth Annual Soap Opera Awards, which daytime drama was voted "Outstanding Daytime Show?"

- A. Loving
- B. Guiding Light
- C. Days of Our Lives

3. On General Hospital, Rick Springfield played the character of whom?

- A. Dr. Steve Hardy
- B. Dr. Noah Drake
- C. Madman Grant Putnam

If you answered these questions with relative ease, there is a possibility that you are suffering from the widespread disease "Soap Opera Fever." Although there is no known cure short of donating your television to Goodwill, you might take comfort in the knowledge that millions like you have also fallen victim to the daytime onslaught of sappy story lines and never-ending love triangles.

Many sociologists attribute the popularity of daytime drama to the "escape mechanism" that they provide their viewers. After all, they reason, what better way to momentarily escape the daily hassles of one's own life, than to concentrate on the seemingly unsolvable problems of the soap opera characters?

Owen Demiene, a junior technology major, agrees with this concept. "Everybody (on the show) knows everybody else, and they all have a problem with the other person, and they all end up screwing each other over," he said. "Their problems sort of belittle mine; they make the fact that I'm getting a 'D' in my class seem pretty trivial," he added with a laugh.

However, any avid soap fan will tell you that there is more to it than that. Soap opera characters are almost "make believe" friends. After years, or even months, of loyal viewing, the characters on the television no longer appear to be two-dimensional talking heads. All at once, they are transformed into "real people," and fans find themselves wondering "Will Margo tell Tom that the baby is Hal's?" or "Will Bobbie really divorce Jake and continue this tryst with Scotty?"

According to Lisa Holmecki, a junior IPCO major, and loyal fan of General Hospital, Days of Our Lives, Ryan's Hope, Loving and One Life to Live, the key to soap opera attraction lies in the simple fact that "You definitely get caught up in (the characters') lives."

Not surprisingly, the soaps' popularity is evidenced in various age groups. Everyone has a grandparent, aunt or uncle who insists on taking time out during family visits to catch up on "All My Children" or "One Life to Live." Or a best friend who can remember coming home from kindergarten and sitting down with Mom to watch "Guiding Light."

Mila Wurster, a senior international studies and French major, has been a soap fan since elementary school. "When I was home sick (as a child), there was nothing else to watch on t.v.," she explained. "So I was home from school a lot," she joked.

The American soap has also found a niche in many foreign countries. It is not uncommon today to visit Turkey or Taiwan and catch a rather dated episode of "General Hospital." In France, a "The Bold and The Beautiful" fan can glimpse the handsome Ridge Forrester on "Top Model," the French version of the popular American daytime drama. Likewise, the traveler to Italy will find "All My Children" listed in the Italian "TV Guide" under the name "Pine Valley," or Valle di Pini.

And in Bowling Green, an elaborate networking system has been established by roommates everywhere to update the class-goer on the day's soap events. Inevitably, one roommate is always "up" on the day's list of favorite shows, and it is his or her responsibility to pass this information on the fellow fans, who were, unfortunately, called away to classes.

However, many viewers, including John Kocevar, a freshman criminal justice major, cannot pinpoint what it is about the soaps that keeps them glued to their sets. "I watch Days of Our Lives and I don't even know why; I just get into it sometimes because it's so intense," Kocevar explained.

On the other hand, Brian Tietje, a senior marketing major, can easily explain why he watches "The Young and The Restless." "I heard that one woman (on the show) was a transvestite in real life," he said. He's curious to see if he can tell the difference.

Whatever the reason is for watching, everyone is curious to see how his or her favorite show stacks up against the competition. According to the recent Nielsen Ratings, "General Hospital," with its dazzling list of guest appearances by superstars such as Elizabeth Taylor and Sammy Davis Jr., currently occupies the number one position among daytime dramas.

"GH" is followed by "The Young and The Restless"; "One Life to Live"; "All My Children"; "Days of Our Lives"; "As the World Turns"; "Guiding Light"; "The Bold and The Beautiful"; "Another World"; "Santa Barbara"; "Loving"; and "Ryan's Hope."

Although "General Hospital" retains the highest ratings, its story lines were voted the worst of 1987. Loyal viewers will recall the "Alphabet War" story line, in which the mind of Dusty (Shaun Cassidy) was controlled by the evil DVX organization. This particular theme was voted not only the worst of 1987, but one of the worst story lines of all time.

"The Young and The Restless" fans will be pleased to note that the Ashley/Victor/Nikki love triangle was voted the best such triangle of the season, while the Jack/Kayla/Patch fiasco ("Days of Our Lives") was voted the worst. Viewers perceived the romance of "Santa Barbara's" Cruz and Eden to be the most tortured love story, and voted the jacuzzi scenario between "As the World Turns" John and Lucinda to be the most unusual, and entertaining, love scene.

Whatever your favorite soap, and for whatever reasons, rest assured that millions of viewers support your opinion. Oh, and by the way, the answers to "Soap Opera Trivia" are "General Hospital"; "Days of Our Lives"; and Dr. Noah Drake.

Deadheads

members know that they are on tour for one reason — to play for their fans.

"I expected a lot more on stage from them," Kim, a freshman psychology major said. "I know why they call them the Dead now — they just stand there like sticks and play."

"The band doesn't play off of the audience — they don't need to," Matthews said. "The band generates enough excitement through their actual presence that they don't need anything else. When they started playing, everything just went wild."

"Could you imagine Jerry Garcia out on stage hopping around?" Brad McDevitt, senior art education major, said. "I mean, these guys are over 40 years old."

After a brief intermission when the roadies had to repair a feedback amplifier that blew during the first song ("Hell in a Bucket") the Dead came back on stage with little fanfare save the fan's approval.

"It's amazing that they've got such a following," Beth Diederich, senior history major (and a "Redhead Deadhead") said. "Their style of music is so different than what you would expect. When I was growing up, I'd hear their songs and never knew that it was the Dead because the songs are so unlike what I expected."

The style of the Dead is so unique that in this age of techno-pop music, it almost seems outdated. However, their songs reflect the band's history of aging, decline, rebirth and recommitment — a style that seems to parallel lead guitarist Jerry Garcia's fight with drug abuse and diabetes that almost claimed his life.

It is a new dawn for the Dead — the album that spawned this tour, In The Dark is an ambitious album, one created at a time when it seemed that the Dead would have no choice but to dissolve. With the album and their first top forty single, the Dead should be quite grateful that they are still together and happy with the music they are playing and the new generation of Deadheads they are creating.

sick and I try to help them, or somebody gets cut and I try to bandage them...there's just not enough known about how you can get it," he said.

Kolt said the campus environment makes that an even greater fear. "It's more of a risk than in many other places, because of the diverse group of people here, and the fact that we have an organization right on campus that is at high risk (LAGA)," he said.

As a homosexual, Tekaucic said he could be considered a "high risk behavior," a term changed from "high risk group" he said, "because everyone is in a risk group now."

But he added between 10 and 14 percent of the students on campus are gay, and often it is homosexuals who are blamed for the spread of the disease.

"We don't like having to take the heat. We do panels in classes and we run into that every time we talk. Mainly it's because some people are uninformed, so we try to educate them that this is everybody's problem and it just so happens that some homosexuals are in high risk behaviors."

Another high risk behavior is the abuse of intravenous drugs. Tekaucic said that is not a problem at the University.

"Around here I imagine that's a pretty small number (the number of homosexuals at the University who abuse IV drugs). I don't know of anyone who shoots up at all," he said.

However, Navin agreed that sexual promiscuity and experimentation create added opportunities for students to acquire AIDS on campus.

"There is a high proportion of college students who are sexually active, and of those students, many have a number of partners and don't know who all of them really are," she said. "Also colleges in general are high areas for homosexual experimentation so the potential for a higher risk is here, therefore it is very important that we educate students on the risks of AIDS and how they can acquire AIDS. This isn't just true at the University, but at all colleges."

Tekaucic, on the other hand, said the student intellect may actually make the campus safer than other areas.

"It's not like this is an urban setting and I imagine most people here are fairly well informed and intelligent...but then sometimes when I speak to classes here I begin to wonder, sometimes I think most people are burying their heads which is unfortunate."

Facts

— Pink or purple bumps or blotches on the skin.

Anyone testing positive for the AIDS virus must consider themselves a carrier. Some people remain apparently well after infection with the AIDS virus, but they are still carriers, and can transmit the virus to others.

How is AIDS transmitted? According to Josh Kaplan, health director at the university Health Center, AIDS is clearly transmitted by:

— transfusion of blood containing the AIDS virus.

— unprotected sexual intercourse with a partner who is a carrier of the AIDS virus. This includes vaginal sex, anal sex, and oral sex.

— inoculation with an infected needle.

— an infected mother to her unborn child.

What are some ways of protecting yourself from the AIDS virus?

— The best protection from the AIDS virus is abstinence.

— A long-term monogamous relationship with a non-infected partner. If you have been faithful for at least five years, and your partner has been too, then neither of you is at risk.

— Use a condom properly when engaging in sex. A condom will not protect the user from the virus if it breaks, slips off, or if semen and other fluids are allowed to leak. Also, avoid mouth contact with the penis, rectum, or vagina of a sexual partner.

— Do not share a needle with someone who is an AIDS carrier.

— Avoid sexual activities that can cause cuts or tears in the linings of the rectum, vagina, or penis. (For example, anal intercourse and 'fisting' are high-risk sexual behaviors.)

Marsalis

Marsalis' performance concludes the end of the University's annual Jazz Week celebration and is sponsored by the University Activities Organization.

Marsalis will be performing in Kobacker Hall on Saturday, April 16 at 7:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Ticket costs will range from $10-16.

I ask myself, 'why am I not elected, why am I not elected?' Then I think it is because of prejudice on the part of others in the department," Buron said.

Another problem he has experienced with racism was through his niece, who had a problem with prejudice a couple of years ago with one of her history teachers.

"My niece was very upset and I asked her what was wrong. She said that one of her professors in history said that 'the worst thing in the United States was the Latins and that if he were in charge he would put them all in a death camp.' Nothing has been done. This man is still teaching. I guess it is hard to do something because it is hard to prove but it is still not right," he said.

However, Buron does not have a hopeless view of white and non-white relations. He can see both points of view in any cultural or racial differences.

Peace

D.C., and other cultural events.

As Lois Glover put it in her poem entitled "Deadheads," "Deadheads want to live in a peaceful world: A world where all men and women of all races and nationalities are one brotherhood of unique individuals living in harmony with each other."

But there's also a sense of dedication beyond the music shared by deadheads, much of which is not on display. For them, happiness means the preference of hugs to handshakes, tie-dyes to tuxedos, dead tickets to diamonds, and most of all, friends to financial support.
