The Republicans are hoping the president's visit to Bowling Green today will result in a GOP victory in November. The con-cerns for more neutral parties, however, are far more immediate.

Restaurants in the area view the presidential visit as a chance to increase profits, according to John Daugherty, general man-ager of the Soft Rock Cafe on Main Street.

"I expect a whole lot more business than usual today, both before and after dinner — and especially at happy hours," Daugherty said.

He added that he expects receipts at the cash register to be up as much as 35 percent and said he would be disappointed if husiness may show business was slow. "If we don't make the extra money, I just may send the Re-publican party a bill for the extra people I have working to-day," he said.

day," he said. Bill Baum, manager of Sun-dance Restaurant, said he scheduled two additional waitresses and cooks to handle the anticipated crowds.

Baum said, if all goes well, Sundance should increase their typical Wednesday profits by as much as $1,500. But despite the expected crowds, Baum said it will not make a significant difference for area businesses.

"In the big scheme of things, it doesn't affect profits that much — but with 15,000 more people in town for the speech, it will defi-nitely be a shot in the arm for the day," Baum said. Tom Votava, captain of the Bowling Green Police Depart-ment, said he will be more concerned with handling the crowds at the speech than with the crowds at the restaurants.

In order to handle the multi-tude of duties, Votava said the city will be employing officers from police forces outside the city. "The entire project will in-clude, give or take, 90 officers from Wood County and Hancock County, as well as officers from neighboring towns."

She said she admits there are good reasons for high school students to be interested in the president's speech, but said there is concern about students walking around an unfamiliar town.

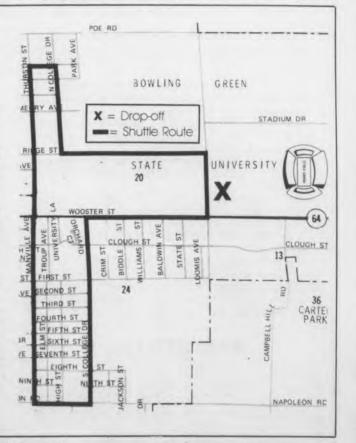

"I hope no students skip out...not because I don't agree with the reasons but it could be

Tickets still available for courthouse speech

News in Brief

Tickets were still available for today's appear-ance by President Reagan at the Wood County Courthouse as of Tuesday afternoon.

The Bowling Green Chamber of Commerce, 163 N. Main St., reported having "quite a few" tickets left. The office will open at 8 a.m. and will proba-bly close whenever crowds start to gather downtown.

U.S. Congressman Delbert Latta's local office, 280 S. Main St., also reported having a supply of tickets Tuesday night. The office will be open until 11 a.m. today for people needing last-minute tickets.

A third location for obtaining tickets — which are free — is the Wood County Republican Party headquarters, 1045 N. Main St. The office had more than 100 tickets left Tuesday night and ex-pects to have some available this morning.

Campus Republicans were passing tickets out Tuesday in the Union Oval.

Groups ought to be praised for efforts in alcohol awareness

A trip to Howard's on a Friday night...Motown night at Uptown... A six-keg blast on East Merry Avenue....these are a few of the favorite pas-times of University students.

Drinking is a popular activity at the University and on college campuses everywhere.

Yet, something seems to be changing.

More and more students are beginning to take responsibility for their actions while under the in-fluence of alcohol — the most prevalent drug on campus.

As the University enters the third day of Alcohol Awareness Week, student groups and individuals are rallying to support a common cause. Yesterday, the Student Health Center presented a health fair and campus police conducted a pre-a health fair and campus police conducted a pre-sentation on "Drunk Driving and the Law." The Student Health Center is sponsoring guest speakers throughout the week, the Student Recrea-tion Center is holding a "Celebrity" Life Cycles event Thursday, the University Activities Organi-zation is showing "The Lost Weekend" Thursday night and various residence halls are sponsoring events to promote an understanding of the effects of alcohol.

In addition, the Undergraduate Student Govern-ment is recruiting members for the "I'm Driving Club," which asks bar owners to offer free soft drinks to patrons who agree to stay sober and drive their friends home. WBGU-FM is holding a trivia contest and Greek Life is promoting a mocktail — a non-alcoholic drink contest. These and other events are continued throughout the week.

The need for such programs at the University is unquestionable.

This was evident March 9, 1985, when two mem-bers of the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity were killed and a third injured while traveling to Florida for spring break, being hit on the way by a drunk driver.

Police found 12 empty beer cans in the back seat of the driver's car and his blood alcohol content was 0.23 percent — twice the level considered safe by authorities.

Although the students killed were not drinking, many students here do and the driver of the car that killed them could easily have been another University student.

In the past, Residence Life officials, campus and city police have all said the majority of student infractions were alcohol-related.

Still, many students will make fun of alcohol awareness. Some will say they are clearly aware of how much fun it is getting drunk.

V.JERONE STEPHENS The 'negative' President's last stand

Reagan's visit to Bowling Green is expected to yield two results for Reagan and the Republicans: (1) to shore up sup-port for state and local Republican candidates, and (2) allow Reagan to take his last stand in solidly Republican territory where he can have a mindless claque of Republicans applaud his rhetoric of accomplish-ments, while ignoring his dismal failures of almost eight years. Local Democrats fear his visit will add three to five percentage points to the vote of local Repu-blican candidates. I doubt that such tangible results will flow to Republican candidates from the visit, but we will have to wait un-til after Nov. 8 to test this hypothesis

Reagan is likely to achieve his second goal of promoting his programs as beneficial to Bowl-ing Green and the U.S. while in Bowling Green. This is, after all, middle America where there are middle America where there are many who believe that if you removed "In God We Trust" from coins that God would send oracher stock market crash from coins that God would send another stock market crash upon the U.S., where many be-lieve that the Pledge of Alle-giance should be recited five times a day, and that the ACLU is waiting in the wings to carry out a coup d'etat. Prayer-in-school rhetoric is likely to play big in Bowling Green be-that in Bowling Green, at BGSU and in Wood County, there are a lot of religious people who have so little faith in their religion that they believe - correctly that the only way such drivel that they dispense can be articu-lated to the larger population is through the use of governmental institutions or meaningless slogans etched on coins we must all gans etched on coins we must all carry. The insipid duo col-umnists for the BG News, Schreffler and Edwards, present us with an example of such polit-ical-religious tripe each week. And the intellectual and moral tedium levels of this duo are on the same wavelength as Reagan's pronouncements.

Reagan's successes of the past eight years have been in getting the citizens to believe that if we pray, pledge and prostrate our-selves to a mythical god and use the State to oppress people at home and abroad, we can prosper forever, even when provid-ing a free lunch to the affluent. With the rich and affluent firmly With the rich and affluent firmly locked onto the tit of big-spend-ing Uncle Sugar nourished by Reagan, there is no money to go around for Pell Grants to help needy students, funds to help re-build the cities, to pay for health care for the elderly and sick, and no money to house the homeless.

Hence, Reagan will pretend these people do not exist or that they are where they are because they are not military contrac-tors, crooks or liars who can en-ter the open doors of the Reagan Administration to gorge them-selves and their clients at the trough of Reagan's America. trough of Reagan's America. A crook and perjurer such as Mi-chael Deaver or the crook and liar Oliver North can be portrayed as victims of the system while homeless and the system, while homeless and job-less Americans are blamed for their own plight. We will not hear much about the real prob-lems of real Americans, and we will not be offered potential solutions for dealing with the prob-lems, but trivial and mythical answers to profound questions that were not asked by Reagan and his Reaganites. With Rea-gan leaving office, it is now time to begin asking the real ques-tions of how we feed the hungry, house the homeless educate the house the homeless, educate the young and heal the sick. While Reagan has diverted our atten-tion from these questions, he has made asking questions impera-tive, and while his administra-tion has been a moral, intellectual and social disaster, he has ensured us that the next President must deal with the problems he left behind. And the nar-row choices we have been pre-sented with by Reagan have caused politicians to delay the moment of truth, but that mo-ment is now upon us with Rea-gan's departure.

Taxes on the rich must be levied with severity and speed, Star Wars abandoned as a Star Wars abandoned as a worthless system whose only benefits have been to the mili-tary contractors and the in-dustrial complex, the military budget reduced by one-third by 1990, and to 50 percent of its pre-sent level within four years. Rather than pro-flight consumer spending that Reagan has pro-moted and supported, econo-mists now tell us that the future emphasis must be on consumer emphasis must be on consumer thrift and savings. The years we have had under Reagan, while nation, have generated a politi-cal and economic dynamic that must eventually lead us in a new direction: toward less interven-tion in other nations' affairs, more social services and health care for our own population. In the long run, Reagan and the Reaganites will have the almost exact opposite effect that Rea-gan has had in the last eight years, and there will be little choice in the matter for any of us. In Bowling Green, we can be thankful for another thing: we will not have to be bothered by the old zombie again. Stephensis an associate profes-sor in political science.

The work of the many groups supporting Alcohol Awareness Week is commendable and even if students don't attend the events or visit the University's non-alcoholic night clubs, they still should take a few moments this week to think before they drink.

I left the University for two years beginning in January of 1985. When I returned in Jan-uary 1987, the entire financial burden was mine. Neither of my parents are in the position to help with my education, which is fine. The decision to return was entirely my own.

However, I soon learned that the desire to continue my educa-tion was not enough to keep me in school. The largest obstacle between me and my degree has been money. In the three semesters I have been back to school, I have accrued a debt that will take me at least seven to 10 years to pay back. Papers, tests and my GPA have become secondary concerns for me. My primary concerns are finding transportation to and from my off-campus job; paying my rent and bills; paying for books and tuition. All the while I think to myself, "coming back was

BGSU to host Toledo leadership event

by Elizabeth Kimes staff reporter

While most people easily can be considered followers, those aspiring to be leaders will get a taste this week of what consti-tutes an effective college president.

The University is sponsoring a two-day symposium called "The Effective College Presi-dent." The event will take place Thursday and Friday at the Radisson Hotel in Toledo. The keynote lecture is being sponsored by the U.S. Depart-ment of Education's Fund for the Improvement of Post-Secondary Education (FI-PSE), which sponsors and commissions six lectures a year throughout the nation. Martha Tack, University professor of educational administration and supervision, will deliver the keynote ad-dress with James Fisher, president emeritus of the Council for Advancement and Support of Education.

According to Tack, the ad-dress will concern the nationwide survey she and Fisher did over the past two years to determine what makes an effective college president.

"We contacted 824 people in our study and had a 75 percent response rate," Tack said. "This seems to indicate to me that there is an interest in knowing some answers and more information."

Of the 615 respondents, 15 percent were identified by coleagues and selected experts as being effective leaders and presidents, Tack said.

"Overall, only three percent were nominated by their colleagues or the experts more than three times," she said. "I think it shows effectiveness is a rare quality." Although University President Paul Olscamp participated in the survey, Tack would not release any information concerning his effectiveness rating.

Tack said the criteria to determine the effectiveness of a college leader is multifaceted. The effective presi-dents were found to be more willing to take risks, less worried about popularity, more distant and less encumbered by the organizational structure by going immediately to a problem, she said.

Tack and Fisher also studied the personal characteristics, background and the attitude differences between those deemed to be most effective, she said. The keynote address will be delivered on Thursday with a round table discussion afterwards concerning the lecture. Facilitators of that discussion will include seven college leaders who have been dele-gated as some of the nation's most effective college administrators.

"All together, they are a re-presentation of the higher edu-cation system," Tack said. "They come from the four sec-tors: two-year, four-year, pri-vate and public colleges." The seven college presidents also will be delivering other presen-tations during the two-day symposium.

According to Joyce Kepke, director of conference pro-grams for Continuing Educa-tion, approximately 60 people have signed up to attend the event. Attendees will include a chancellor, students, presi-dents, deans and vice presidents, deans and vice presi-dents from Maine to Oregon, Kepke said.

University President Paul Olscamp will deliver the wel-coming and make introductions during the symposium.

BG soccer loses two captains

All-American Jon Felton and Kevin McGrath quit team

by Mark Huntebrinker ssistant sports edito

Experience and leadership were two major reasons the Bowling Green soccer team was surrounded with high expectations as they prepared for the 1988 season opener. Now, as the 15th game of the season approaches, the Falcons find themselves without the services of two players that were to play a crucial role in providing that expected experience and leadership.

Senior captains Jon Felton and Kevin McGrath are absent from the BG roster as they pre-pare for a contest Friday at Akron University. The lone captain remaining on the Falcon squad is senior back Ron Haines.

Felton, a mainstay of the de-fense for the last three seasons, left the team late last week before the Falcons ventured to Kalamazoo, MI and lost 1-0 to Western Michigan. McGrath, a stable midfielder throughout his career at BG, suffered a considerable de-crease in playing time from last season. He decided to leave the team after the first nine games team after the first nine games. McGrath said the two captains did not confront each other about leaving the team. "I had no idea he (Felton) was going to do that," he said. "It was my decision completely, I went and quit."

McGrath also said his exit from the program was because of other reasons than head coach Gary Palmisano.

"There were no arguments between the coach and myself," he said. "The way things were going, I felt I couldn't fulfill my leadership role." Felton was unavailable for comment. Palmisano denied to comment on the situation, but his senti-ments in the Bowling Green

Soccer Outlook before the season began related just how important Felton was to the team.

"Jon has taken the responsi-"Jon has taken the respons-bility of being a team leader has raised his level of play," he said. "His play will be one of the determining factors in how the club does this year."

Felton, who missed the last seven games of his sophomore season because of an ankle injury, bounced back his junior season to record seven points on one goal and five assist

But his scoring was only con-sidered a bonus. Felton an-chored a Falcon defense that allowed just 17 goals the entire 1987 season. His performance earned the 6 foot 3, 175 pound back from Elyria, NSCAA All-America and All-Mideast honors. He also shared team MVP honors with senior midfielder Larry Valbuena in 1987.

McGrath also missed the last portion of his sophomore season. A knee injury forced him to miss the last six games of 1986. Last season he tallied 10 points on four goals and two assists as the Falcons turned out a 12-5 record. McGrath, an Akron native, totaled 20 points on seven goals and six asssists in his career. This season, seeing limited ac-tion, he had one assist for one point in nine games.

BG ruggers to represent Ohio

by Matt Schroder sports reporter

Nine of Bowling Green's rugby club's best players will be participating in a select side tournament in Indianapolis on Saturday afternoon. The players are chosen from schools all over Ohio, and they will be competing against other colleges from throughout the Midwest.

All of the teams that participated in the Ohio Championship two weeks ago were being watched by a group of roving selec-tors, including BG's Roger Mazzarella, who were ultimately responsible for agreeing upon 24 ruggers to represent Ohio in the tournament.

The men from Bowling Green who will play in the game in-clude Dallas Black, Al Caserta, Kyle Fulmer, Todd Haitz, Lohn Lonsert, Mark Manning, Dan Martello, Gus Saponari, and Jim Williams.

Teammates for the BG ruggers will come from Ohio State, Kent State, Miami University, and the University of Cincinnati

"I'm looking forward to it (the tournament) because we'll get to play with some of the best players in our region instead of against them," said Dan Martello.

of against them," said Dan Martello. In addition to just representing Ohio, the ruggers who will be in Indianapolis on Saturday will be looked at by scouts from the committee that choose candidates for All-American honors. Should one of BG's ruggers be chosen by one of these scouts, he would be asked to first try out for the All-American team. Mazzarella said, "Being chosen for the 24 man squad in In-dianapolis was the first step towards being an All-American. The second step is to do well in the tournament." However, this tournament has other purposes as well. "These games will offer us a higher level of rugby," Sapon-ari explains. "The end result is to get our international team stronger. Few, if any of us will ever play internationally, but this gives the good players a chance to really show what they can do," he added. The nine BG ruggers will join their temporary teammates on

Suicidal athlete blames steroids

NEW YORK (AP) — Former South Carolina football player Tommy Chaikin used bodybuilding anabolic steroids for three years and says they drove him to violence and nearly to suicide before last year's Clemson game, according to this week's issue of Sports Illustrated.

"I was sitting in my room at the Roost, the athletic dorm at the University of South Caro-lina, with the barrel of a loaded .357 Magnum pressed under my chin," the story, written by Chaikin and SI's Rick Telander, begins. "My finger twitched on the trigger. I was in bad shape, very bad shape. From the steroids. It bad shape. From the steroids. It had all come down from the steroids, the crap I'd taken to get big and strong and aggressive so I could play this game that I love." that llove." Chaikin said he had been having "anxiety attacks" for five months and said they had become "so intense that I couldn't stand them anymore.

I'd lost control of everything.

"I was definitely going crazy, but not in a wild way. ... I knew I was history — it was just a mat-ter of time. I thought about the explosion and the bullet, about how it could take away this pain " pain.

Chaikin, a 6-foot-1, 250-pound defensive lineman from Betheafter redshirting in 1984-5-6-7 after redshirting in 1983. He said he didn't pull the trigger be-cause his father, who had flown to Columbia, S.C., for the game, knocked on the door and took him to Sibley Memorial Hospital in Washington, D.C.

In the waiting room, Chaikin said he "started to have spasms. My body was having a reaction to Stelazine, the drug that a psy-chiatrist had prescribed for me a few weeks earlier when I'd first come home from South Carolina to get some profes-sional help." Chaikin said that "suicide was always on my mind. Suicide and football."

Coach Joe Morrison, who took Coach Joe Morrison, who was over the South Carolina pro-gram in 1983, refused comment on the story. "Coach Joe Morr-ison does not plan to have any comment on the story tonight, sports information director Kerry Tharp said.
