State

Carpenter cleared: The victim of a 156-year old law was recently cleared of his two-year sentence after spending 18 months of it in prison. James D. Moseley of Decatur, Ga. was given a two-year sentence for having oral sex with his wife. The nearly two-century-old sodomy law was changed by a Superior Court judge to be inapplicable to "consenting married couples."

Menopause study: A recent study published in the New England Journal of Medicine concluded the changes in women's blood cholesterol during menopause could contribute to the increase risk of heart attacks during their mid 50s. The study was directed by Dr. Karen A. Matthews of the University of Pittsburgh.

Traveling stray: Since jumping on Kent Wassenberg's motorcycle two years ago, Brutus, a 70 lb. boxer/labrador retriever has traveled 25,000 miles on the bike's trailer. Brutus wears goggles to protect his eyes, a hooded sweatshirt to protect from the cold and a harness to keep him from falling off the bike. Brutus can be seen with the Marysville, Kan. native throughout the midwest.

Permission plea: Larry McAfee, 33, of Atlanta recently won permission of the courts to turn off his life support system. The system has kept him alive for four years after a 1985 motorcycle accident that left him a quadriplegic. The judge said McAfee had the right to refuse medical treatment.

Nation

Gone batty: A 65-year-old Lorain, O. woman was bitten by a rabid bat after it attached itself to her body cast — she recently had back surgery. The woman is physically fine, but emotionally shaken after the attack. Police officials say that it was an isolated incident.

Miata mania: Car dealers are busy these days writing waiting lists for potential buyers of the 1990 Mazda Miata. So popular is this luxury sportscar, some buyers are putting down deposits to get the Miata next year. Car magazines are calling the car "fun and affordable." Base price for the car is $13,800.

Cemetery case: Police officials in Louisville, O. are currently searching for vandals who broke into the mausoleum of Augustus Coy, who died in 1937. The vandals desecrated the corpse and stole its skull in Union Cemetery, a private establishment. Police do not believe it was part of a ritual and say if vandals are caught, they will be charged with a felony, and if found guilty could be sentenced to jail for six months to five years.

Cave-in: A construction worker in Blue Ash, O. was in serious condition after 10 ft. of soil caved in while at work. Randy Webb, 32, was kept alive because of an air pocket found in the soil allowing him to breathe. He was admitted to the hospital with "crush injuries."

Overweight kids: Heart researchers want healthy diet and exercise habits to be taught in the school system to keep inactive children from becoming overweight adults. John Morrison, associate professor of cardiology at the Children's Hospital Medical Center in Cincinnati, will be heading the research project at Princeton University.

Quayle to visit: U.S. Vice President Dan Quayle will be visiting Columbus and Ashland today to dedicate the Clean Air Mass Transit Bus at Columbia Gas in Columbus and to attend the 7th Annual Reception and Dinner in memory of the late Congressman John Ashbrook at Ashland University.

Christian leader reproves U.S.

by Rima Salameh
Associated Press writer

BEIRUT — Gen. Michel Aoun said Thursday that U.S. foreign policy is "biased and shortsighted," then asked American help in what the Christian leader calls the war of liberation against Syrian troops in Lebanon. Aoun said the U.S. withdrawal of its last diplomats Wednesday was based on "rumors, false suppositions and unconvincing reasons."

"It is pitiful that American-Lebanese relations should deteriorate to that point due to the stubbornness of the American Embassy ... backed by a biased and shortsighted foreign policy."

--General Michel Aoun, Christian leader in Lebanon

He likened the 6-month-old battle between his 20,000 Christian soldiers and a Moslem alliance led by the 40,000 Syrians to what Americans' "forefathers did ... 200 years ago" in the Revolutionary War. Syrians and Christians exchanged artillery fire for five hours before dawn Thursday and police reported two dead and seven wounded.

The U.S.-trained general said he would welcome the return of Ambassador John McCarthy and other American diplomats to Lebanon only if Washington recognized his Christian Cabinet as the legitimate government.

His government competes for power with a Moslem Cabinet led by acting Premier Salim Hoss. McCarthy, who had been in Lebanon since the rival regimes were created a year ago, avoided taking sides by not presenting his credentials to either.

U.S. military helicopters evacuated the 30 remaining Americans from the U.S. Embassy compound in east Beirut on Wednesday morning.

"It is pitiful that American-Lebanese relations should deteriorate to that point due to the stubbornness of the American Embassy ... backed by a biased and shortsighted foreign policy," Aoun said.

He was clearly angered by the State Department's declaration Wednesday that it evacuated the U.S. diplomats because Aoun threatened the palace in Baabda, east of Beirut, the 54-year-old Maronite Catholic general urged the "American people and their elected representatives to ignore their State Department's policy."

Americans should "support all the Lebanese, Moslems and Christians, in our war of liberation" against the Syrians, he said.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said Wednesday that a leader of Christian youths who massed outside the embassy before the evacuation told diplomats they could move in and out of the compound only "at their own risk."

Aoun said her remarks were "a calculated but crude personal attack on me."

Bill challenges drugs

by Beth Grace
Associated Press writer

COLUMBUS — Two days after President Bush took his proposal to battle drugs to the nation, a Republican state lawmaker announced legislation aimed at strengthening Ohio's war against drugs.

Sen. Charles Henry of Burton, flanked by fellow Republicans Senate President Stanley Aronoff and Sen. Paul Pfeifer, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, unveiled a bill Thursday aimed at teaming state drug fighting expertise and money with local drug task forces.

The bill also takes aim at drug dealers' "most vulnerable area — their profits," Henry said.

Senate Democrats, who already have proposed a major judicial system expansion, appointment of a drug czar and new prison construction, welcomed the proposal but did not endorse it.

"We're glad to see the Republicans getting on board," said spokesman Chris Burnett. "We want to see Ohio have a good, solid drug program, but were concerned about a proposal with such a decentralized focus."

Henry's measure calls for a $50 million fund from which a 12-member state task force, headed by the lieutenant governor, would allocate grants of at least $50,000 to county task forces. More grant money would be made available depending on the scope of the local drug problem and population, Henry said.

An additional $35 million would be allocated to build another new state prison, he said. Henry indicated the task force grants could be funded, at least in part, by federal funds from an expanded federal drug-war budget and the new prison could be financed with a 30-year bond issue.

State corrections officials have said that despite a $638 million prison construction program that will leave the state with 24 prisons by 1992, it will not be enough to hold the number of inmates expected to be jailed by then.

Henry said the bill also would rework the state's criminal forfeiture statutes to bring them more in line with stricter federal laws. Under the bill, authorities would be allowed to seize all assets, property and proceeds related to drug transactions, even if the offender is charged with only one offense.

State law now requires that a person be charged with two or more offenses before criminal forfeiture proceedings can begin.

The measure also would make Ohio the 18th state to impose an excise tax on drug trade. The rates would be $3.50 per gram of marijuana, $200 per gram of other controlled substances and $400 per 10-unit dose of controlled substances.

Drug dealers would also be required to purchase state tax stamps.

"It's a law enforcement tool," Aronoff said, explaining that failure to obtain a stamp would give authorities authorization to begin confiscating property and other assets against the taxes owed, plus a 100 percent penalty.

NATO rebuilds discussions in western Europe

by Alison Smales
Associated Press writer

VIENNA, Austria — Greece's mistrust of its old enemy Turkey, a NATO ally, blocked Western plans to propose limits on military maneuvers, sources reported Thursday after talks resumed on reducing conventional forces in Europe.

The West hoped to begin the third six-week round between NATO and the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact with proposals that would help maintain what U.S. Ambassador Stephen J. Ledogar called the "breath-taking pace" of the 23-nation talks, which began in March.

On Wednesday, NATO diplomats in Vienna and Brussels put the finishing touches on the Western plan, described by senior officials as an unprecedented effort to curb military exercises on the world's most heavily armed continent.

Diplomatic sources said; however, that Greece felt NATO set the limits too high when it proposed requiring maneuvers to be announced in advance if 40,000 reservists would be called up or 1,200 armored personnel carriers used.

Greece sought lower limits because of concern about neighboring Turkey, the sources said, but they

Student detained as result of disturbance

by Jill Novak
staff writer

A University student responsible for a commotion yesterday afternoon in the Union Oval was taken into custody by city police and transported to Wood County Medical Health Center.

At about 11 a.m. Thursday, a man reportedly walked into the Union Oval and sat down in front of the University Activities Organization's plant sale, taking numerous items out of his backpack, witnesses said.

One witness said she did not think anything out of the ordinary was happening until the man gave away a food coupon book and started throwing things and handing things to people.

"He took out a pile of bumperstickers that said 'Buckle Up America' and started handing them to people and saying 'God Bless You'," she said.

The witness and other bystanders became concerned when the man put assorted papers in a square on the ground around him and repeatedly shouted, "Get out of my square!"

At this time, it was reported a male and female "walked into his square" and the man shoved the male and hit the female across the legs with a stick.

"It was really scary. You could tell he was not with it — like he snapped — and it seemed like mentally there was something wrong," the witness said.

Another witness said someone ran and called campus security at this time, unaware that Bowling Green city officers had been called earlier.

When city police arrived, the man had to be restrained for safety purposes, according to a city police spokesman.

"He was then taken into custody so he wouldn't hurt anyone or himself," the spokesman said, adding there may be charges pending for damage.

The man was taken to Wood County Medical Health Center and it was recommended he be forwarded to the Toledo Mental Health Center to receive attention for a medical problem, police said.

Grad wins ethics prize

by Penny Pletcher

Journalism classes should put more of a forceful attempt on media ethics, according to University journalism graduate student Paul Kostyu.

Ethics in journalism was the topic of an essay for which Kostyu received the 1989 Carol Burnett Ethics Prize. His work was entitled, "Doing What's Right: Teaching Ethics in Journalism Programs," which he wrote in November 1988 for a graduate class.

He said the teaching he does gave him the idea for a paper on ethics.

"I recognized ... students had problems with ethics," Kostyu said.

For his paper, Kostyu said he surveyed University journalism students and 90 well-known journalism programs in the United States.

He found that students do, in fact, differentiate between ethical and non-ethical behavior, but find themselves in a bind when they come face-to-face with this type of behavior.

Burnett organized this award after her court victory over the National Enquirer in 1976 as an effort to advise journalism students in being responsible to the public.

The Enquirer had accused Burnett of being drunk and disorderly in a public restaurant. The fact that she was promoting alcohol awareness gave her reason to sue the publication, Kostyu said.

Part of her winnings from the court battle helped to set up the funding for this yearly award, Kostyu said.

The University of Hawaii and the Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication presented the award to Kostyu at its national convention in Washington, D.C. on Aug. 12, 1989.

Upon speaking with the judges, Kostyu said he was told it was difficult deciding on the winner of the award and that the decision was very close between the applicants.

Kostyu said he was not aware of the contest when he wrote his paper for one of his classes last year, but entered the contest at the recommendation of Dennis Hale, head of the department of mass communications.

"You always hope that you win, but you never know how the judges will look at your paper and how they will view your writing style," Kostyu said. "Dr. Hale made me feel like I had the advantage because he recommended that I enter my paper."

Pets enliven residence life

by Lori Miller
staff writer

Although most students find that a suitcase of clothes and a toothbrush can tide them over for a semester, others need to bring their pets.

Mike Klem, sophomore undecided major, bought a 2-year-old iguana, named him Elvis, and brought him to school.

"The reason I brought it was to make my roommate mad," he said. "But I've always liked lizards and things like that."

Klem kept 'Elvis' in a 30-gallon aquarium but admitted he had to take it home because it "kept (going to the bathroom) on one of my friends."

When people visited Klem's room, they did not mind Elvis, once they became accustomed to him. Although the pet caused several women to scream, nothing drastic occurred, he said.

Aimee Sturgeon, junior art education major, had two hamsters in her dorm room last semester.

The hamsters only got out of their cage a couple times by climbing on top of a toy and eating through the top of the cardboard cage.

The second time they got out, one ran into the hall and into another resident's room, she said. The woman went and reported the episode to a resident adviser but before anything was done, someone had already grabbed the hamster and hid it.

Despite that incident, Sturgeon said, everyone liked the hamsters. When one of the hamsters became pregnant several other residents wanted to adopt one of the babies, she said.

Sturgeon believes that pets are good to have in a dorm because "(they) are what a dorm needs — it needs a little life," she said.

When students are caught with pets in their rooms usually one of two steps are taken, according to Rodgers Hall Director, Mark Shannon.

"The students are to remove the animal immediately or if that can't be done, we confiscate the animal and hold it until someone can pick it up," he said.

The only pets that are allowed in dorm rooms are fish in aquariums. Students have tried to sneak in pets ranging from gerbils to dogs and cats, he said.

Usually the hazards of having pets are waste material and disturbances to the students, Shannon said.

"We usually find out about the pets from students who complain about barking or other noises," he said.

Representatives from 90 University organizations gathered Thursday in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom in the University Union to participate in the annual Student Organization's Fair.

Between 1,500 and 2,000 students interested in possibly becoming involved in campus activities attended the event, according to Greg DeCrane, assistant vice president of the Student Activities and Orientation Organization.

Kelly McCray, graduate staff assistant of the Student Activities and Orientation Organization, said he was pleased with the student turnout.

There were more organizations that applied for booths than Student Activities was able to accommodate, but some organizations were able to get booths at the last minute due to groups that did not show, McCray said.

Regina Mollison, freshman journalism major, said the fair was helpful to her.

"I think it's a pretty good idea especially for freshman," Mollison said.

Andy Yerkes, senior history major, said this was the first time he attended the fair and he believes he has missed out on a great deal in the past.

"I wish I'd come here my freshman and sophomore years," Yerkes said.

Of the groups being represented, many agreed that the fair is helpful in boosting enrollment in their organizations.

"We've been real busy," said Andrew Middlefield, chairman of publicity for Circle K.

Lori Uhlenhake, junior home economics major, said the Bowling Green Student Home Economics Association was primarily interested in becoming more visible to the students.

Free refreshments were provided as well as balloons and buttons for those attending the fair.

Birds trouble residents City asks for full 'force'

by John Kohlstrand
staff writer

Bowling Green has battled the invasion of pesky birds for years with little success, but experts have been enlisted to help them find a solution.

Sandra Rowland, from the Humane Society of the United States, and Ed Clary, from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, met with City Mayor Edwin Miller yesterday to help solve the problem.

Miller said they would inspect some of the sites where the birds have crowded and discuss potential solutions for the city.

Large numbers of starlings have regularly gathered in the trees of some city neighborhoods at dusk. Droppings from the birds have frustrated many homeowners in these areas, including Theophile Reynolds, 222 Curtis Ave.

"We've tried everything going and we just can't get rid of them," Reynolds said.

Droppings from the birds coat her driveway every day, she said.

"I have to clean it up every morning," Theophile said. "I have to get up before 8 a.m. to wash it off. If I don't, the sun bakes it on and I can't get it off."

Miller said he sympathized with these unlucky residents.

"These birds leave a tremendous amount of droppings and kids shouldn't be playing in them," he said. "(But) there isn't anybody who knows how to drive them out."

Miller mentioned Curtis Street and Grove Street as being particularly troubled by the birds, and he said the city of Findlay has experienced similar problems with birds in its downtown area.

Compressed air noisemakers and irrigation sprayers have been used in the past to combat the problem, but these methods did not work well, he said.

"We'd like to somehow find where they're congregating before they come into town," Miller said, though he added the only dispersal methods the city have considered are noisemakers and irrigation sprayers.

This year, the city will try to deal with the problem on a "complaint basis" by setting up noisemakers where the birds are creating problems, Miller said.

Last year noisemaking vehicles drove through the streets in hopes of dispersing the birds.

by Greg Plagens
city editor

Mayor Edwin Miller plans to ask City Council for the funding necessary to return Bowling Green's Police Department to full force — a level it has not reached in three years.

The mayor said he is asking for three officers, one to work in dispatch when the 911 emergency system is activated, and two to work on patrol.

However, he said, "We're still going to be at a very minimal number of people for keeping the safety of the community."

In 1988, 26 sworn officers were employed by the police department, which is a ratio of 1.01 officers for each 1,000 Bowling Green residents.

According to Lt. Sam Johnson of the Bowling Green Police Department, two officers were released three years ago because they did not meet the standards required by the department.

Johnson said budgetary restraints then caused a cutback which did not allow the two positions to be filled.

"We're fighting hard to get more manpower," Johnson said. "We're understaffed and have been for years."

One negative aspect of the cutback is that more overtime hours have to be worked by other officers "sometimes to beef up and sometimes to maintain (enforcement)," Johnson said.

During peak times which include evenings and weekends, the department tries to keep a full shift, plus extras.

Although Johnson declined to comment on what constitutes a full shift, he did say, "We don't have nearly enough (officers) on the weekends."

"There's a real problem developing," he said. "There are times when there aren't enough officers to go around."

A full staff is often needed to patrol off-campus parties which require a lot of manpower. The department usually sends more than one officer, to deter possible problems, he said.

While the size of the police force has diminished, the Bowling Green geographic area has continued to grow.

Annexation of such property as the Woodland Mall, the Gypsy Lane Estates Mobile Home Park on East Wooster Street and Varsity Square Apartments on Varsity Square has added to the area covered by police.

According to Miller, the four housing developments presently under construction, as well as the research/enterprise park at the corner of East Wooster Street and Dunbridge Road, will soon be under city police jurisdiction.

Miller refused comment on whether the police department's expanding responsibilities will lead to further additions; however, he did say, "We will be looking at the needs of the city from all aspects."

Study lab aids all students

by Tara Rainson
reporter

Studying is a skill which is not easily learned, according to specialists at the University Study Skills Lab.

More than 1,200 students enrolled at the lab programs last year to improve their test-taking, note-taking, and time-management skills, as well as to receive special help in specific general education and science courses.

Joyce Blinn, a reading specialist from the facility at 213 Moseley Hall, said contrary to the misconception that the lab offers help for below-average students, the service is actually geared toward aiding all students.

"A lot of people think this is for dummies or else it's remedial," Blinn said. "But that's just not true."

Help with the specific courses is offered by student mentors, a majority of whom are juniors, seniors and graduate students who teach groups ranging from two to five people.

"The students have an easier time relating to (the mentors) because (they) have already been there," Blinn said.

These mentors can understand the students' problems and provide excellent help because they have already developed their own study habits and test-taking skills, Blinn added.

"Rather than giving (the students) the answers, the mentors will ask them to look at their notes or to talk to another student," Blinn said. "Their job isn't just to give them the answers."

In addition to student mentor sessions, study skills workshops are being offered. These workshops concentrate on test anxiety, test taking, preparation/note-taking, strategic reading/note-taking, time management and library skills.

These workshops are offered to assist with general education courses and science courses and are taught by Blinn and staff member Ofir Sisco.

Participation in a science workshop is required for entrance into a student mentor session for a science course, but no workshop is required for entrance into a mentor session for a general education course.

Iraqis race to find ruin

by Salah Nasrawi
Associated Press writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq — President Saddam Hussein has offered $1.5 million to any Iraqi who can solve a 3,000-year-old puzzle — how King Nebuchadnezzar managed to water the fabled Hanging Gardens of Babylon.

Archaeologists are divided over whether the gardens, said to have graced terraces hundreds of feet above the palm-fringed Euphrates, existed. They reputedly were built by Nebuchadnezzar in the 6th century B.C. to enchant his home-sick queen, the Median princess Amytis.

The ancient Greeks considered the gardens one of the seven wonders of the world, but Nebuchadnezzar made no mention of them in his detailed writings, and no conclusive evidence of their existence has been uncovered.

But the Iraqi government, which is remodeling the city where Nebuchadnezzar ruled ancient Mesopotamia from 605 B.C. to 562 B.C., believes they did exist based on findings by German archaeologists who first excavated Babylon more than 75 years ago.

Hussein, who is known as Saddam in Iraq and the Arab world, announced a $1.5 million prize for whomever comes up with the most plausible watering system, and $750,000 to the runner-up.

No modern technology can be employed in the watering system, only the primitive tools available in sixth century B.C. Mesopotamia.

BG set to force Pirates off plank

by Don Hensley
sports editor

For the Bowling Green football team, the guessing game is about to end.

For the past four weeks the coaching staff has been racking their minds trying to figure out what Bill Lewis' East Carolina Pirates are going to do against them in the season opener. But with the game only one day away, the worrying is over and it's time to see what the 1989 Falcons have to offer.

"We know their personnel based on what we saw in the spring game," BG head coach Moe Ankney said. "But, what they are going to do offensively and defensively is a guessing game."

"The most important thing is how well our team plays and execute, not what the other team does."

The Falcons will look to get off to a better start this season than they did last year when they opened with a 62-14 drubbing at the hands of West Virginia, who eventually played Notre Dame for the national championship.

"This is going to be a very competitive game, and we aren't going in as a big underdog this year," Ankney said. "It's a game that if we play good we can win, and that is a lot better feeling than going in the other way."

BG will still be forced to play a solid, fundamental game if they are to come out on the winning side of the ledger.

The Pirates are led by a host of talented players, but all the conversation surrounding the game seems to always get back to senior quarterback Travis Hunter.

Hunter is effective both as a runner and a passer. Last year, he threw for 328 yards while rushing for 333.

He will be helped out by sophomore Michael Rhett and senior Willie Lewis, who are both new to the Pirate backfield. Wide receiver Walter Wilson returns after catching 19 passes for 355 yards in '88.

The Pirate defense will be spearheaded by defensive end Anthony Thompson, who recorded 80 tackles including 15 sacks last season. Sophomore linebacker Robert Jones will also supply defensive help after coming off a 43 tackle performance in '88.

The Falcons, on the other hand, will be looking for some defensive help.

With the defensive unit coming off a season in which they surrendered 333 points, they will be ready to show they have improved.

Booters battle Hoyas

by Mike Drabenstott
sports reporter

The soccer team will look to recover from last game's "can't-put-the-ball-in-the-net" disease as they travel to Washington D.C. for a 1 p.m. Sunday match against Georgetown.

The Falcons fought Mid-American Conference foe Central Michigan to a scoreless tie Saturday, taking 22 shots but not once finding the back of the net.

BG to face tough foes

Spikers set sights high at Runza Invitational

by Matt Schroder
sports reporter

After a short week of practice following last weekend's tournament in Washington D.C., the Bowling Green women's volleyball team arrived in Omaha, Neb. yesterday morning where they will participate in the Runza Invitational, hosted by the University of Nebraska.

Resides BG and the Cornhuskers, Houston and Kansas State will also take part in the weekend tournament, which is scheduled to begin tonight at 8.

Head Coach Denise Van De Walle said she is aware of the stiff competition that the team will face tonight and tomorrow. "The field of teams in this tournament is 500 times harder than what we faced in Washington," she said. "Houston is almost always ranked in the top twenty in the nation, and there are many pre-season polls that picked Nebraska to qualify for the final four."

Those projections may not be too far off. BG will be going up against a Cornhusker team that finished 28-5 last season, and boasts four returning starters.

One of those starters includes first team All-American Virginia Stahr, who was among the top 10 in the country in hitting percentage last year.

"Nebraska is our first opponent, and it may be the toughest challenge we face all season," Van De Walle said.

The Falcons are looking forward to facing the big name schools, but they realize that they will have to stay sharp throughout the entire tournament.

"We'll have to serve receive, and communicate better than we did last week, plus our hitting must remain as strong as it has been," sophomore Tammy Schiller said.

Van De Walle sees this tournament as a chance to help the Falcons make a name for itself among the volleyball elite.

"Houston and Kansas State are not out of our league. The next step for our program is to be regionally known," she said. "If you can beat them (UH and KSU), then it's just a feather in your cap."

Harriers compete at MU

by Charles Toil
sports reporter

The Bowling Green men's and women's cross country teams look to continue their winning ways Saturday when they travel to Huntington, W.V. for a meet with Marshall University, Appalachian State University, and Ohio University.

Head Coach Sid Sink said although he would like to win the entire meet, their main focus will be on OU, whose women placed first and men took second in last season's Mid-Western Conference Championship.

"They're the team we want to beat," Sink said. "OU is definitely out to get us, since we've beat them (at regular season meet) the last two years."

Sink

The men will be running against an OU team that is led by two fifth year seniors — All-American and All-MAC Shannan Ritchie and All-MAC Frank Zoldak. Zoldak did not run in last Saturday's 17-39 victory over the University of Akron.

BG junior Brian Donnelly, who finished first with senior Mike McKenna in their meet against University of Toledo last Saturday, said McKenna and himself are going to go all out against the two.

"We're going to try and go all out after those two," he said. "We would like to beat them, or at least get between them." Sink said he expects Donnelly and McKenna to challenge Ritchie and Zoldak the entire race, but believes the middle runners will be the difference between victory and defeat for the Falcons.

"The key will be if our next four guys can beat theirs," he said. "If OU takes the number one and two spots, we will badly have to take that group."

MAC teams hit the road

Football squads face out of conference challenges

(AP) — College teams from Indiana, Louisiana, New Jersey, Ohio, North Carolina and Iowa will provide the opposition this week for members of the Mid-American Conference.

Eight games will feature MAC teams, but none will pit MAC opponents. Two games were played last week, with Eastern Michigan beating Kent State 30-7 and Toledo holding off Ohio U., 27-18, to get off on the right foot in the conference race.

The conference season resumes Sept. 16 with two games, then gets under way in earnest Sept. 23 with three more.

On Saturday, MAC teams prep for conference play by hitting the road in six games: Miami of Ohio is at Purdue, Ball State visits Rutgers, Kent State takes the short trip to Akron, Bowling Green is at East Carolina, Ohio U. is welcomed by Iowa State and Central Michigan is at Southwest Louisiana.

The Miami-Purdue game will be televised by ESPN.

In addition, Western Michigan hosts Louisiana Tech and Eastern Michigan rolls out the red carpet for Youngstown State.

Miami, Bowling Green and Central will be playing their openers. Ball State, Ohio U. and Kent will be trying to avoid an 0-2 start.

Miami is coming off its worst season ever and is winless in its last 13 games. Meanwhile, Purdue is 16-4-1 against MAC teams and has 15 starters back from last year's 4-7 team.

Ball State, fresh from a 35-10 loss at West Virginia last week, will be seeking a victory in New Brunswick, N.J. Rutgers is both unbeaten and winless after fighting to a 17-17 tie at Cincinnati last week.

MAC teams are 5-2 against Akron in Gerry Faust's first three years as head coach and Kent is hoping to make it 6-2. The series between the rivals is 15-15-2. Akron opened with a loss last week at Virginia Tech, 29-3.

Bowling Green, coming off its worst season in 35 years, has lost its last eight games on the road. East Carolina, 3-8 a year ago, won its last two games a year ago.

Never mistake Ohio U.'s Bobcats for road warriors: They have lost 20 of their last 21 road games. Iowa State, 5-6 a year ago, has 11 starters back, but Ohio U. has that many on defense alone.

Eastern Michigan has won 12 of its last 14 home games and is aiming for its fourth straight 2-0 start. Meanwhile, Youngstown State can't seem to beat a MAC school, going 0-3 last year.

Good news for Central Michigan: Saturday opponent Southwest Louisiana is 0-1.

Bad news for Western Michigan: Southwest Louisiana's 40-14 loss was to Louisiana Tech, which the Hurons must entertain Saturday.

Sports Trivia Bowl announces winner

The first round of the Student Appreciation Day Sports Trivia Bowl came to an end Wednesday and there were three teams tied for the first round lead.

With Bowling Green TriTraining, Beta Alpha Phi, and 3rd-floor Chapman each completing the quiz in perfect fashion, the round was decided in blind draw fashion and 3rd floor Harshman Chapman was the winner.

The other two teams still have a chance to win because the second round started Thursday and will proceed until the deadline next Wednesday.

With Dave Whitmire, Billy Martin, Joe McMahon and Eric Schneider representing 3rd-floor Chapman, they now automatically qualify for the finals, which will be held the week before the Student Appreciation 'Night' game with Akron Sept. 30.

The winners of the four qualifying rounds will then compete against each other to see who will be honored at the football game. The winner will also receive a pizza party in part with The BG News. Remember, non-winners from last week are still in the hunt for upcoming drawings.

This week's quiz can be found elsewhere on this page.

Violence upsets Thatcher

England's Prime Minister cancels exhibition

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Thursday she was dismayed at the re-emergence of English hooliganism and her government asked soccer officials to cancel a visit by the national team to the Netherlands in December.

As Thatcher spoke in Dundee, Scotland, Swedish police hustled hundreds of English fans out of their country after a night of vandalism and fighting that resulted in more than 200 arrests.

"I am always horrified if there is any difficulty with football fans abroad," Thatcher said. "It's really a disgrace to Britain when fans behave like that."

Hours after she spoke, Sports Minister Colin

Harriers

Like the men, coach Sink said the key to victory for the women will depend on how well the fourth through ninth runners can finish against OU.

He added the Bobcats only had a 17 second gap between their first and sixth runners in the victory over UA last Saturday.

Leading the way for the Falcons will be senior Mary Louise Zurbuch, freshman Cheri Triner and Jill Strawser.

Zurbuch, who finished first with Triner in last Saturday's Moynihan officially asked the Football Association to cancel an exhibition match between England and Holland set for Dec. 13 in Rotterdam.

In a letter to FA Chairman Bert Millichip, Moynihan sought to call off the match "in the interests of the future of English football and of the country as a whole."

Dutch soccer fans also have a reputation for hooliganism, but usually do not cause problems in other countries.

"There is certainly no realistic prospect of preventing hooligans from reaching Rotterdam, given its proximity and the availability of alternative routes to the city," Moynihan's letter said.

meet against UT, said she is optimistic about how they will race.

"With the injuries and it being the beginning of the season, we are running pretty well," she said.

Falcons

But that will be a tough task. Defensive tackle Derrick Carr and backup cornerback DeWayne Harris were both suspended for this game due to disciplinary reasons. But the secondary has been saved by the surprising play of Ray Southard, who is on the team after being declared academically ineligible last year.

"Ray has been a pleasant surprise," Ankney said. "He has really overcome his (grade) problems and his presence makes our secondary that much stronger, because he gives us support on the corners — an area we are lacking."

Offensively, the Falcons will look to the air where Reggie Thornton and Ron Heard will be chasing down the spirals of Rich Dackin from the wide receiver posts, while Chuck Edgerton, LeRoy Smith and Ron Viscounte man the running back positions. Dackin appears fully recovered from his wrist injury that occurred against Western Michigan last season.

Booters

BG head coach Gary Palmisano said after a week of practice he hopes his team will find the correct medicine.

"We've been building our attack during the past week as well as refining the defense," Palmisano said. "There is only so much you can do during the preseason without overwhelming the players."

Like the Falcons, the Hoyas are also hoping to secure their first win of the season. Wednesday, Georgetown dropped its second match in as many attempts, losing 3-1 to George Washington University.

The Hoyas are led offensively by last season's Big East Freshman-of-the-Year, David Barron. Though he has yet to score this season, Barron topped the team in points last year with 10 goals and four assists.

Between the posts for Georgetown will be sophomore Bryan Gowdy, who posted a stingy 0.77 goals against average in regular season play last year.

Injuries could pose a problem for the Hoyas, with two of their top senior midfielders and last season's second and third highest scorers, Andy Hoffman and Todd Colonna, doubtful for Sunday's contest.

Nonetheless, Hoya head coach Keith Tabatznik said the teams match up well, and that one mistake could make the difference.

"I expect a one-goal game," Tabatznik said. "It will be a matter of which team capitalizes most on the mistakes of the other."

Though the Falcons will travel more than 500 miles on Saturday, Palmisano said in the long run his squad would benefit from trip. He said staying overnight on the road and traveling as a team should bring the players closer together.

How do you satisfy the munchies when time and money are tight?

Friday/Greg Horvath

Wendi Jones, freshman fashion merchandising major from Rossford, Ohio: "I look through all my cupboards and the refrigerator. If I can't find anything that will satisfy me, I'll do without or I just try to scrounge up some money for the ice cream shop."

Neil Carlson, junior sports management major from Bellevue, Ohio: "I sneak my roommate's food out of the refrigerator."

Stacey Thuma, senior elementary education major from Tipp City, Ohio: "I write mom and dad a letter saying, send money for munchies fast."

Kevin Cox, senior public relations major from Toledo, Ohio: "I go to TACO BELL and get those forty-nine cent tacos."

Women's music featured on WBGU

by Deborah Hipple

Many forms of alternative music have hit the streets, so many that the average music-lover is bound to get confused. According to "Michelle" Bahl, a disc jockey at WBGU, listening to several types of music can help interested individuals learn how to differentiate.

The junior radio-television-film major said she hosts one of the two women's music shows which airs on Fridays from 3 a.m. to 6 a.m.

Bahl said the music she plays on the show can be termed "women's music," but she said she prefers to describe it in another way.

"(The music I play) deals with issues that affect women and sometimes society ... you can call it women's music, alternative, or even men's music," she said. Although Bahl never had a show before, she said she knew she would be learning a lot on the job, but did not know exactly the degree in which she was going to learn.

"I never really listened to this kind of music before. I like pop music and top 40, but I really enjoy it (women's music)," Bahl said. "People like Tracy Chapman deal with important social issues."

Although termed "alternative" by some music lovers, women's music shares many "Dick Clark" caliber qualities.

"One of (the groups), 'Jasmine' is very pop ... it's got a good beat and the lyrics are nice. They're good musicians and the voices are superb," she said.

Although her weekly show is aired at an early hour, she does get some requests.

Bahl said once a Toledo man called in to hear women's music and she was surprised to hear his voice at that time, considering the show's content.

She said the music she plays might be confused with feminist or lesbian music; however, it is not.

"I don't consider it lesbian, it's any music sung or written by a woman ... if I don't like it, I don't play it," Bahl said. "(Students) might like it if they hear it."

The other women's music show is aired on Sundays from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m., she added.

College eating and other nightmares

by Chuck Travis

Apart from the basic needs of shelter and sex, food is a primary human concern that becomes the heart, or the stomach, of the matter in regards to day by day living for most students.

The majority of students living on-campus usually buy books of meal tickets with their parents' money to purchase food, said Maureen David, junior education major. Adding that after the first few weeks of school these tickets take on a black-market status.

"A lot of people end up selling their tickets because they've bought too many," David said. "It's a good way to make extra spending money."

Jodi Jaros, freshman education major, said she believed the on-campus food selection was good.

"I like the salad bar and the breakfasts - overall the food has been pretty good so far," Jaros said. "But for students that have night classes, the dining rooms in the residence halls close too early forcing them to walk across campus to the Union to eat."

She said she and many other students living in the dorms supplement their meals in the dining halls with food brought from home.

"I have vegetables and fruit that I keep in the fridge in my room; stuff like Granola bars and cookies are good to have in case I suddenly get hungry and don't feel like going out any where."

Sandee Mossbarger, a 10 year Kroger employee who works as an office worker and cashier for the chain, said she has seen a lot of students come through her supermarket doors.

"Students tend to buy quick and easy things. We see a lot of macaroni and cheese purchases," Mossbarger said. "A lot of students shop and stock up after the holidays when they have their parents' money in their pockets."

David Claflin, junior social work major who lives off-campus, said freedom of choice is one significant factor in shopping.

"I like the freedom to choose what I want to eat, where I want to eat it and when I want to eat it," Claflin said. "I'm not confined to the cafeteria, plus I like to cook."

Danielle Migyanko, junior international business major, together with two of her roommates, Anne Collins, senior health administration major, and Lauren Grodek, senior IPCO major, said along with shopping freedom comes responsibility in the form of a budget and the limits imposed by it.

"I usually buy what mom buys," Collins said. "Even though we have a budget for four people ... we usually overspend when we shop."

"It's easy to do," Grodek said. "I bring food to school with me from home because it's easier to stick to a budget that way and when I do shop I buy store brands to help cut costs."

Deb Brown, senior human resource management major, said she sticks to a firm $20 per week budget.

"I buy just what I need, no more — just the basics," Brown said. "I pick familiar products, things that we have at home as a general rule."

Mike Barrell, dairy manager at Foodtown, said students tend to enjoy shopping and they "make good customers."

"Working at the Instructional Media Center you get the chance to meet a lot of good people," says senior Chris Gunder, who has worked at IMC four years.

More than just filmstrip projectors

by Laura Hardy

Despite its recent name change, Instructional Media Services (IMS) continues to provide audio/visual equipment, materials and services for University students and faculty.

IMS, which was known as the Instructional Media Center until July 1 of this year, adopted the new title to more accurately reflect its objective of serving student and faculty needs for audio/visual equipment and services, according to Kevin Work, assistant director of the department.

"We wanted to stress the service aspect of (IMS)," Work, who is also responsible for equipment distribution and video and audio editing, said.

He said the former title also suggested there was only one large location for the department, but IMS actually consists of numerous departments on campus that offer a variety of audio/visual related services.

Although most of these departments, including IMS's main office, are located in the Education Building, IMS is part of Libraries and Learning Resources, Work said.

The departments listed below are located in the Education Building and provide the following services:

Materials Production Service, Room 101- staff members design, illustrate and produce artwork and visual media including slides, charts, graphs, and overhead transparencies. Photography for classroom use, as well as black and white prints for presentations and publications are also prepared.

Audio/visual Distribution Services, Room 102- provides equipment, films and videotapes for instruction and other campus activities. Projectors and audio and video cassette players are among the available equipment. Student operators may also be requested to set up and operate equipment.

Film and Video Rental, Room 102- Faculty may use this film and video library, which is supplemented by films and video tapes from regional and national libraries.

Materials Production Laboratory, Room 206- Students, faculty and staff may use available equipment and supplies to prepare presentation materials such as overhead transparencies, laminated posters, banners and photocopies. Lab hours are 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 7:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. on Friday.

Technical Services, Room 101- Services include audio and on-site video production, editing and duplicating of non-copyrighted tapes. Consultation of equipment selection and facilities design and maintenance and repairs on audiovisual equipment are also provided.

Work said students do not need an appointment if they wish to discuss ideas or receive advice for audio/visual presentations they want to create.

"(The IMS staff) will sit down and talk with people who want to put together presentations," he said. "We may direct them somewhere else, but we can usually find a way to save them time and money."

There is no cost for most classroom-related jobs, such as slide duplication, but any copies remain the property of IMS, Work said. Copies, which are usually ready in a week, can be requested for personal use for a small fee per slide, he added.

To reserve equipment, it is best to call the day before it is needed, Work advised. He said most small machines, such as tape recorders and slide projectors, can be picked up at the audio/visual distribution services counter, while a student operator will deliver larger equipment.

Although any University students, faculty or staff may use the facilities at IMS, Work said the services are ideal for people majoring in such areas as art.

"Art students usually can't carry their works with them when they interview for jobs, but we can help them take slides of their works so they can include the slides in their portfolios to show in interviews," he said.

Other departments include Instructional Development Service, located in 313A Hayes Hall, that provides individualized consultation on course design, unit and lesson planning, evaluation techniques, the design of instructional materials and course audit activities and Extension Media Services, with three locations in 126A Technology Building, 112 Math-Science Building and 216 West Hall, that provide these areas with audio/visual equipment and instructional development services.

Breathed has time

EVERGREEN, Colo. (AP) — Berke Breathed, who ended his "Bloom County" comic strip last month, is enjoying his escape from daily cartooning, which he calls "a sponge on your imagination."

Breathed, who has a home in Evergreen, has a new, weekly comic strip called "Outland." In it, he said, "I'm working in the fantasy land of a little girl whose real life is less than real easy. ... As 'Outland' progresses, people will notice that the landscape changes."

He said that may include backdrops that resemble Utah and northern Arizona, locales that have been "inspirations to me artistically."

The Pulitzer Prize-winning "Bloom County," which began in 1980 and featured such characters as Opus the penguin and Bill the Cat, appeared in 543 daily newspapers. Breathed would draw a month's worth of strips in just a few days, working around the clock.

"I realized I was aging much too fast," he said.

'When Harry Met Sally' a must-see

by Brian Lumley

Director Rob Reiner, aka "Meathead" from the '70s classic "All in the Family," has struck gold again. His latest film, "When Harry Met Sally," is cinematic magic.

Movie Review

Reiner can't seem to go wrong. His four previous films have all been box-office and critical successes. Reiner's forte is comedy, but his foray into drama provided the silver screen with one of 1986's best films, "Stand By Me." This new film has brought the Reiner film full circle. It eloquently combines both drama and comedy in a film that is full of insights that brings about laughs, elicits cheers, and leaves the viewer on a cushion of air as he exits the theater.

The post-college ride home is the start of the film. Harry (Billy Crystal) is bidding farewell to his girlfriend as Sally (Meg Ryan) starts the car. Care-free Harry hops in the car and listens to Sally's verbal meanderings on how they will each drive three-hour shifts until they hit New York City. This ride quickly becomes the Ride From Hell as their conversation quickly reveals that they are ideological opposites. Dislike for Harry becomes apparent within Sally, and upon reaching the Big Apple she dumps him on a street corner, hoping to never see him again.

Over the next 10 years the duo bump into each other, faintly recognizing each other and bidding each other a forced hello. Harry, suffering through a divorce, and Sally, whose boyfriend has just left her, strike up a conversation in a Village bookstore. Out of mutual desperation the pair pour their problems out over dinner, quickly realizing they have more in common than what they once thought.

A fast friendship grows out of this new bond, and we are treated to a romance that both Harry and Sally want, but both fail to realize. The rest of the film asks the question "Can a friendship survive if the couple go to bed?" Reiner answers this by placing his protagonists in the sack and then tests their friendship through the couple's post-copulation blues.

What sets this film apart is the way

Reiner handles everything. The script is witty and both Crystal and Ryan take their material and bring it to life. Instead of a score written expressly for the film, Reiner opted to use older, already established tunes that fit the mood of the film. Shades of Woody Allen's "Manhattan," whose Gershwin score pumped moody rhythms into it, Big Band tunes such as "Let's Call the Whole Thing Off" and "It Had to Be You" give the film its timeless mood.

Both Crystal and Ryan are excellent. Ryan's "restaurant orgasm" scene is hilarious—one of the funniest moments in 1989 cinema. The film chimes with the actors' charisma, they fill every moment with absolute magic. Their chemistry is unique, they seem to work off of each other best, allowing each other to take the spotlight when necessary, and helping the other when the scene calls for it.

This film could be looked at as "just another love story," but with the combined talents of Reiner, Crystal, and Ryan, it is one of this summer's (and perhaps this year's) best films. Pass up the other big screen visual atrocities and take time out to see how and when Harry met Sally.

Prairie Margins for all students

by Tempo Bierley

"There's no better rush than getting published," said Kimberly Dilgren. As the fall editor of the Undergraduate Literary Review, or Prairie Margins as it is more commonly known, she is in a position to help students attain that "rush".

Prairie Margins was first published "sometime shortly after the (creative writing) bachelor's program started at the University about 10 years ago," said faculty advisor Ken Letko. Since then the University has had a literary magazine either under the name Penny Dreadful or Prairie Margins, according to Letko.

The motivation for such a magazine was "students desire to get their first chance at editing or getting some of their work published," said Letko. Such motivation needs to be harnessed in order to allow Prairie Margins to exist semester after semester.

Prairie Margins is a literary forum for creative writing and the arts, open to all undergraduates. "You do not have to be a Creative Writing, English, or Journalism major to get published in Prairie Margins. It's open to every undergraduate," said Dilgren.

Works of poetry, fiction, artwork and photography are accepted, said Dilgren. She also said beginning this fall, non-fiction will be accepted (i.e., interviews with visiting writers and accounts of literary events such as festivals, art shows and poetry readings).

There is no limit to the number of entries per student; however, a 3500 word limit on fiction and non-fiction pieces will be enforced for the first time this semester, said Letko.

Also, no other restrictions are set, but according to Dilgren there are some guidelines the editors would like students to keep in mind: "Fresh, interesting language is the key to interesting poetry. A strong sense of character and plot should be included in fiction and non-fiction pieces, and artwork should present a new visual perspective on the subject portrayed."

Students should place all entries in the Prairie Margins box in Room 201 University Hall along with a self-addressed stamped envelope before the Oct. 16 deadline, said Dilgren.

Prairie Margins can be purchased during the last two weeks of the semester at the Firelands and main campus bookstores, the 2nd floor of University Hall, the Student Union, the English department and Currents Art Gallery. The cost will be between $1.50 and $3.00.

BG students seek change of scenery

by Robert Wagner

"Two roads diverged in a wood, and I — I took the one less traveled by. And that has made all the difference."
— Robert Frost

Since the National Student Exchange program began in 1968, nearly 22,000 students from all over the United States and its territories have taken that road "less traveled by."

NSE is a program which offers undergraduate students an opportunity to study for up to one year at one of 83 colleges and universities in the U.S. and its territories, Diane Hagemeyer, assistant NSE coordinator, explained.

She said many students are content with choosing a college and staying put until they receive a degree, but others find a change in scenery refreshing and challenging.

"Currently, 15 students from places as far away as Puerto Rico and New Mexico and as near as New York and Illinois attend Bowling Green State University through NSE," she said.

Steve Merrill, sophomore accounting/corporate law major from New Mexico State University, said he chose the University because of its small town atmosphere.

Merrill said after he arrived here he noticed Bowling Green's flat country and its abundance of trees as opposed to the rolling, wide-open spaces in New Mexico.

"The humidity here is unbearable ... but I look forward to the winter and snow," he said.

Nanette Alomar-Camacho, senior psychology major, said she came to the University from the University of Puerto Rico to be closer to her best friend who attends school in Columbus and also to "take advantage of some of the University's psychology classes."

She said living in a dorm takes some getting used to because in Puerto Rico she lived at home while attending classes. She also said she was impressed with the variety of classes offered and a little surprised at the number of activities centered around alcohol.

"In Puerto Rico," she said, "there are more places where students under 21 can go to socialize."

Students geographically closer to Ohio have also chosen the University as an NSE school.

Elaine Plum, junior music theater major from the University of Northern Iowa, said she chose the University because "I've never been to Ohio ... when looking over the schools I could possibly go to, Bowling Green seemed to have a lot (of advantages)."

She said she was very excited about the University's Italian courses because her college does not offer those options.

"Some schools don't offer everything," she said. "You get a chance to try other courses not available at your college. As a junior, I'm checking around for schools that would have my master's program. Bowling Green does, so I'm testing this out not only as a place to get away from home and experience things, but also maybe as a future place to get my master's."

In addition to the students who attend the University through NSE, many University students have taken advantage of NSE to travel and learn near the beaches and warmer climates of California and Florida, Hagemeyer said. She said although these states are the two more popular places where BGSU students request to attend, students also have chosen eastern, southern and midwestern schools for a variety of reasons.

Stephanie Frye, junior elementary education major said she attended the University of South Carolina for its climate and location and for the chance to become "more independent, far away from friends and family."

Paige Nicholson, senior marketing major, said she chose Cal State at Fresno for its climate and location which gave her an "opportunity to travel to the major cities and attractions of California."

Deborah Linhart, senior speech pathology major, said she chose Towson State in Baltimore, Md. because "it had a strong program in her major and was located within three hours of major metropolitan areas such as New York and Washington D.C. which is close to the shores of the Atlantic Ocean."

While the BGSU students interviewed admitted NSE is probably not for everyone, they applauded the opportunities to make new friends and become more independent and open-minded as well as the chance to travel and become exposed to perspective ways of life different from that of Bowling Green.

"I now see some good points about BG that I hadn't seen before," Linhart said.

According to Hagemeyer, to become involved in NSE, a student must be currently enrolled full-time at the University, have a cumulative grade point average of at least 2.5, have completed 24 semester credits at the time of exchange and be of sophomore or junior standing at the time of exchange.

Resident Advisors are people, too

by Julie Potter

The resident advisor. Some students love theirs while others wonder what planet their RA flew in from. But, love them or hate them, they're a part of nearly every college student's life for at least two years.

There are currently 136 resident advisors on campus, according to Bill Lanning, director of residential management.

"The requirements to become a resident advisor are fairly simple," Lanning said. "A student must possess a 2.5 GPA, have resided on campus for at least one semester and have an interest in the position of RA."

"They also have to make a commitment to the position," he said.

"Watching a floor community develop and being a part of one is one of the most rewarding experiences of being an RA," Missy Watson, resident adviser in Founders, said.

She said although the ultimate goal of an RA is to make sure everyone on the floor can study, there should be time for fun, too.

Some students may ask, "Why do we have to have programs on our floor?" Lanning said. The reason for programs is not only to promote floor unity and to allow students to meet and get to know the people with whom they are living, but to inform them also.

According to Lanning the only requirement the RA's have concerning the programs is that they be "anything beneficial to the students."

This may include programs on date rape, alcohol abuse and other relevant social topics, as well as some of the more "fun" activities, like sports teams and "getting to know you" activities such as "The Roommate Game," a variation on "The Dating Game," he said.

Watson said she became interested in becoming an RA last year as a resident because she had a lot of ideas she wanted to try.

"A major drawback to my job is not having enough time to devote to the job because of my studies," Watson said.

She said her advice to anyone interested in becoming a resident adviser, "is to learn time management now, because it will be valuable in the future."

Lanning said anyone interested in becoming an RA should contact him or their hall director. Interviews for the next school year will be taking place sometime in October.

Taste-testing beer for college credit

HOUSTON (AP) — Two college seniors had no trouble finding volunteers for research on their thesis, but some subjects were surprised to learn they couldn't discern between cheap and expensive domestic beers.

"We figured that college students are experts on beer drinking and they would determine the difference in the five brands of domestic beer we tested," said Aristotle Economon, who shared the project with his brother, Andrew.

"But, statistically, people couldn't tell the difference," he said.

"Free beer" fliers were posted around the University of Houston campus and drew a predictable crowd, and 265 students ended up volunteering for the project.

The sample was pared down to 191 students who said they drank five or more beers each week, and each participant was given 3-ounce sample cups of five different brands of U.S. beer to measure for body, aftertaste, sweetness, bitterness and strength.

"Some people would say, 'This is great, I can buy cheap beer and get just as good a product,'" he said. But others won't accept it "because people are very loyal to their brand of beer."

He would not reveal the brand names of beers tested, but said they ranged in price from $1.60 to $3.20 a six-pack.
