Experts rush to battle Gulf slick

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Experts from around the world raced to the Saudi Arabian coast on Monday to help the kingdom defend its vital desalination plants against an oil slick.

A Norwegian company that helped fight the Exxon Valdez spill in Alaska was sending a pollution-battling ship capable of swallowing a half-mile of oil daily. It was to reach a critical desalination plant on Tuesday.

British Petroleum Co. was flying in more than 70 tons of oil booms and suction skimmers. A team of experts from the U.S. Coast Guard and Environmental Protection Agency arrived in Riyadh and immediately met with Saudi officials.

The slick was several days away from Jubail, site of the world's largest desalination plant and one of many such facilities in the path of the spill.

The oil from the Sea Island Terminal at Kuwait's Mina al-Ahmadi may have been halted by the allied precision bombing Saturday of the mechanism that allowed the oil to be pumped into the Persian Gulf, U.S. military officials said.

But environmentalists say so much crude already has poured into the waterway that an ecological catastrophe was certain.

For the arid desert region, the top priority was protecting the desalination plants that treat water for two-thirds of the region's estimated 18 million people.

U.S.-led allied forces in the war with Iraq also depend in part on the plants, which make sea water drinkable.

Saudi Oil Minister Hisham Nazer told King Fahd and his Cabinet that the slick contained roughly 11 million barrels of oil, or 460 million gallons, making it by far the biggest spill ever.

U.S. officials said the Kuwaiti spill was heading south at 15 miles per day and would reach the Saudi coastal city of Ras al-Misha'ab by Tuesday. That is about 100 miles north of Jubail.

Brig. Gen. Pat Stevens IV, deputy director for logistics of the U.S. Central Command in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, said the extent of the slick was not clear.

"It appears we have stopped the flow of oil, but we continue to seek positive confirmation of that fact," he told reporters.

Nazer said it also was unclear if the flow had been stopped by the U.S. bombing.

Lt. Col. Ahmed Roboyan, a Saudi military spokesman, said a fire at the source of the slick had begun to diminish, an indication that the oil flow was abating.

The slick was just off the coast and so far had not encroached on shipping lanes, shipping executives said.

Officials in Saudi Arabia say they are confident they can fight the slick.

USG recommends pay raises for RAs

by Robert Davidson
staff writer

University resident advisors will receive a raise and meal plan benefits if the University Board of Trustees approves recommendations endorsed Monday night by the Undergraduate Student Government.

The USG bill asks the Trustees to boost resident advisor salaries "beyond the rate of inflation for fiscal year 1991-1992 and include the minimum on-campus meal plan as a benefit."

University resident advisor benefits currently fall short of compensation received by advisors at other Ohio colleges.

University resident advisors receive a salary of $2,750 per year, and must pay the cost of a single room at $2,950 per year in all residence halls except Offenhauer, where a single room is $3,400.

Advisors receive a $200 raise the second year they advise.

In comparison, first-year resident advisors at the University of Toledo receive free room and board and the Ohio State University advisors are given free room and board, free local phone and a stipend of $90-$100 per month.

USG President Kevin Coughlin, who co-sponsored the bill with senator Joseph Fizek, thinks the job of resident advisor should command greater compensation.

"Resident advisors are the epitome of a grass roots student leader," he said. "They have to deal with problems from noise to suicide.

"They should receive a free room and at least part of a meal plan, plus a $100 stipend, which would increase each year," Coughlin said.

"If the resident advisor program fell apart [due to low pay], it would be very detrimental to the University," he added.

Coughlin expects the Board of Trustees to heed the recommendation of USG.

"This has been a long process, I am 99 percent sure they will approve," he said.

The Board will address resident advisor benefits Friday.

The passage of the senate bill pleased USG senator and former

Bush postpones summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, troubled about a long trip to Moscow in the midst of the Persian Gulf war as well as bogged-down talks over a strategic arms reduction treaty, decided Monday to put off his scheduled Feb. 11-13 summit with Mikhail Gorbachev.

The decision was "by mutual agreement" with the Kremlin, and the summit will be rescheduled in Moscow at "a later date in the first half of this year," according to a joint statement of Secretary of State James A. Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh.

Bush met with Bessmertnykh just prior to the announcement. It was the first time that a scheduled U.S.-Soviet summit had been put off since the late Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev canceled President Dwight D. Eisenhower's 1959 visit to Moscow in furious objection to U.S. spy flights over Soviet territory.

But the postponement of the Bush-Gorbachev meeting "was a mutual decision so there is no disappointment," Bessmertnykh emphasized.

Standing together in a White House driveway, Bessmertnykh first in Russian and then Baker in English read their joint statement.

It said: "The Gulf war makes it inappropriate for President Bush to be away from Washington. In addition, work on the START treaty will require some additional time. Both presidents look forward to setting an exact summit date as soon as it becomes feasible to do so."

Bush and senior administration officials have been hinting for weeks that he would forgo the Feb. 11-13 trip to register displeasure with the military crackdown on the independence movement in Latvia and Lithuania.

Asked whether that issue was involved in the decision, Baker said "the statement speaks for itself."

However, he said "we have made our substantial concerns known" to the Soviets over the Baltics issue.

Foreign housing problem continues

by Dan Gray
staff writer

Finding housing has been a problem for international graduate students at the University and will continue if current policies are not improved, according to some University leaders.

"There are a lot of orientation problems when any student arrives here," said Wayne Berman, president of the Graduate Student Senate, "and the housing situation is one of these very real problems."

"It is nearly impossible to find housing when you don't know how to talk to realtors, or when you don't know the norms about housing and housing costs," he said.

Students attending this University who leave to study in France have it a great deal easier because their housing is arranged for them.

However, when students leave France to study at the University, they must deal with Bowling Green realtors themselves.

Other universities, however, do have facilities for international graduate student housing.

Kent State University, for example, has a special complex across the street from its campus for the international students.

According to Lisa Pompeo, a student worker for International Student Services at KSU, the programs offered at Kent State University allow foreign students to have their housing arranged before they touch American soil.

Thus far, there is no such luxury at this University.

However, Jeff Grilliot, director of international programs, said the problem has not been as drastic recently as it has been in the past.

"All of the international students in our program this past semester found adequate housing," Grilliot said.

"We got a van with all the students and took a look at the houses and apartments that were available for the students [and] within a reasonable amount of time, the students found housing," he said.

According to one University administrator who wishes to remain anonymous, the University is looking for a reasonable, workable way to ease the stress of looking for graduate student

Diverse views show freedom

A man's country is not a certain area of land, of mountains, of rivers and woods, but it is a principle; and patriotism is loyalty to that principle"—George William Curtis.

Patriotism extended both its arms this weekend. A great protest march descended upon our nation's capital and a Superbowl was played in support of our troops.

Both are examples of what should make us proud about America. And both — though seemingly irreconcilable — embody the real spirit of our nation.

The colors of Old Glory wave true for both those behind the policy and for those protesting the conflict.

While there are pockets of divisiveness in our country, there seems to be an undercurrent causing us to question the conflict while also to support those who must do the dirty work of warfare — namely the soldiers.

The past week has seen the dazed and desolate faces of captured American fighters staring out from news photographs. It has caused the country to descend from euphoria to sobriety. War is not a celebration; rather, it is a brutal trial of endurance.

The essence of America can be seen in the patriotic stamina of the protestors, who are fulfilling the rights written in our Constitution.

It was also seen during the Superbowl. Amid all the flag-waving hoopla, two football teams — both aware that our troops, in hope of some moral sustenance, were watching the game — played an old fashioned, down to the wire gridiron classic.

We must not lose sight that it is we — the people, that make up our nation. We should not confuse this with the leadership that exists within this country.

Americans are hardy enough to protest something they believe is wrong, support their brethren with an event like the Superbowl and resolve to carry out a conflict that seems misguided.

So this weekend was a parading of symbols that embody the essence of our Constitutional democracy.

Symbols that sometimes tend to eclipse their source of motivation. While it seems we are supportive of our troops, the real war has not even begun. The ground assault in the coming weeks will test the true resolve of our country.

And while it might be hindsight to ask where were the protestors of war during the five month troop escalation, the Constitutional right to demonstrate should never be questioned.

The true symbols of democracy seem to rise only during conflicts, such as the one we are experiencing now. Perhaps we should learn from this lesson. Democracy, as well as patriotism, should be practiced in times of national repose, as well as in times of national strife.

U.S. control is real threat to Gulf peace

Pushing the world to the edge of war, every action by the Bush administration was designed to make conflict with Iraq a national obsession. By resorting to locker room boast, vowing to "kick Saddam's ass", Bush needlessly personalized the conflict, undercutting the possibility of negotiations. By increasing the number of American troops without Congressional authority, he transformed what was initially a defensive tripwire to check Iraqi aggression into an offensive force.

In retrospect, years from now, the focus of inquiry on the Gulf crisis will not be on Saddam Hussein and the invasion of Kuwait.

United the forces of Reaganism. With the end of the Cold War, American conservatives no longer felt obligated to support Bush's domestic or foreign policies. By the summer of 1990, even before Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, there was significant evidence that America was slipping into a major economic recession. An external crisis was needed to divert the attention of Americans standing in unemployment lines and awaiting pink slips.

By sending 400,000 American troops into the Mideast, Bush accomplished several political objectives. First, American intervention reestablished this country's central role as the role as the world's mercenary policemen, suppressing Third World nationalism and preserving western corporate and political domination. The Arab world's greatest threat is not Hussein, it is the power and exploitation of western governments and corporations. U.S. intervention ensures more decades of American dominance and provides a warning to all non-European countries struggling against neocolonialism.

Second, the American intervention justifies the expansion of the military budget, the production of nuclear and conventional weapons, eliminating the peace dividend. Thirdly, in terms of domestic politics, it divided the Democratic party into pro-war and anti-war camps. Pro-war Democrats were manipulated to grant Bush unprecedented authority to initiate massive warfare abroad.

The only language the American political and corporate elite understand is resistance. This means conducting teach-ins, explaining why the war was unnecessary. It means civil disobedience, marches, demonstrations and political organizing, bringing together religious groups, trade unions and civil rights, feminist and other progressive constituencies. Creative, democratic protests for peace abroad and social justice at home should be our focus.

Along the Color Line

By Dr. Manning Marable

Rather, it will center on the domestic prerogatives of American political, military and corporate power. All international politics is based on domestic realities. If we want to understand why the crisis in the Persian Gulf occurred, we need to analyze the system of American power.

In the aftermath of the Cold War, with the collapse of Communism in Eastern Europe, the United States was placed in a paradoxical situation. The $300 billion military budget could no longer be justified, as domestic critics called for a "peace dividend," increased expenditures for education, jobs, health care and human needs. With the retreat of Soviet troops from the center of Europe, it became difficult to justify the presence of thousands of American troops across the world.

Ideologically, the demise of the Communist threat undermined the political consensus which

Unconditional U.S. support is frightening

Editor The News:
I would like to respond to the statement made by one of the organizers of Thursday's pro-government rally — Jim Timura, as quoted in the Jan. 25 issue of The News. Mr. Timura expressed a sentiment that is, unfortunately, expressed often in this country and it is a very frightening one. Timura said, "Anything our government does we should be behind — anything."

Well, Mr. Timura, I could not disagree with you more. Your opinion frightens me. A government that is no longer questioned by the people is a very dangerous beast, indeed. I have heard people protesting our government's policies told, "If you don't love America, then get the hell out!" In the questioning of our government's policies, the average American can serve to chain the beast of an unbridled government. By doing so, as Americans, we do not serve to weaken the country — we serve to strengthen it.

In this way, as in no other, we can prove our love of the United States. I cannot help but wonder how history would have changed if Hitler, Stalin and Saddam Hussein had been responsible to the people and their policies had been questioned.

Dishonest draft dodging criticized

Editor The News:
This is in response to your Jan. 22, 1991 article, "Avoiding draft is possible."

As soon as I read the title, I became upset. I was in awe that The News would print how to get out of a draft notice, but as I read on, I hoped this might be an explanation of the status of being a conscientious objector. This status should be respected and is well worthy of print. It would have been great to see such an article. Yours was not.

Conscientious objectors are not looking simply for a way out.

Some people do have strong religious convictions that would prevent them from participation in battle. Such people should be exempted. But it is irresponsible for you to use this position as a cover-up.

It was clear that this article was not sincere about conscientious objectors at all. Other ways of exemption were listed and evident in the second paragraph that read, "classification as a conscientious objector may be a suitable avenue for refusing participation in the armed forces" was a direct referral to people other than true conscientious objectors.

The thought of war continuing an extended period of time and the reinstatement of the draft is upsetting to everyone. This article is exactly what we don't need. If you still feel the need to write an article describing ways to get out of a draft notice — fine. But don't use conscientious objectors or any other legitimate exceptions as a shield.

Freedom should be fought for; madmen must be 'kept in check'

Editor The News:
I would like to express my views concerning Paul Giaimo's Guest Column which ran Jan. 22, 1991.

Giaimo's states that he and other anti-war protesters are patriotic Americans and loving human beings. If that is so, why did his fellow "patriotic" protesters burn the American flag in New York for all the world to see? In addition, Giaimo states that the protests central aim is to prevent any deaths. What about the people of Kuwait whose husbands, wives, friends and children were brutally murdered by Hussein's death squads? Why doesn't Giaimo and his fellow protesters fight against the citizens of Kuwait?

Hussein committed these atrocities in front of the entire world and as a result, economic sanctions were imposed. The U.N.

gave these sanctions plenty of time to force Hussein out of Kuwait. After four months went by, it was apparent they were not having the desired result. It was then that the U.N., not the United States, imposed the deadline to authorize the use of force to get Hussein out of Kuwait. Bush and the other leaders of the other nations of the coalition are merely complying with a U.N. resolution.

Whether those who protest like it or not, the civilized world cannot stand by while a madman overruns other sovereign states. He must be kept in check in order to prevent further death and to protect the sovereignty of the other nations of the region who cannot defend themselves against him. The United States and the other members of the coalition are the only ones who can keep Hussein in check. That is the reason the troops are there and that is why we must come together so that they can get the job done quickly. No one ever said that freedom comes freely.

Americans can't ignore fact that main priorities need clarification

Editor The News:
It's amazing that the truth of a situation is usually not what one wants it to be. In fact, the truth can be disgusting and this is no less true in the sands of Saudi Arabia. When I watch TV or read a newspaper, I can't believe what my eyes and ears are telling me. I want to scream and shout and say, "No this is not true! We are not there to defend our friends or to defend our principles." But one cannot defy the truth of today.

How can we ignore what is going on in society today? In this land of milk and honey, where money is justice and might makes right, it becomes blatant what we are defending in the Middle East, a place many people cannot find on a map. It doesn't really matter as long as I have a job and a tank full of gas, does it? By God, I want a gallon of gas to be $.98 a gallon, instead of $1.38. I don't want to lose my job because the cost of producing products will rise. Ask yourself how much of our throw-away culture is made from oil-plastics, nylon, tires, shoes and so on. How many of our jobs and our parents' jobs depend on this black gold. We have been living high on the hog and it is now up to our "boys" to protect our way of life.

It is now time to ask what can we do for our country. It has been so long since we last had a real fight against a real enemy. It is time to defend our values and we know what we value — our bank statement, our new car, our houses and clothes. One can't deny the truth of today. Just look around. Check out the bumper sticker of that car in front of you — "He who dies with the most toys, wins." Well, America it looks as if we are about to win and win big.

Dissension on the home front

by James A. Tinker

WASHINGTON — They came from the East Coast and the West Coast, the North and the South. They are disenchanted, angry and frustrated and they are the vocal minority in the war against the war.

Washington streets were filled Saturday as thousands of peace activists protested the Jan. 16 U.S. attack on Iraq. Their beliefs conflict with most other Americans' opinions, but the greatest divider is the idea of supporting the troops while condemning their presence in the Persian Gulf.

Attendance estimates for the rally ranged from 75,000 to 250,000. The truth was probably somewhere in between, yet the actual total belies the number who protested. The march attracted not only those with strong convictions, but the curious as well.

Those unsure of their own opinions, but interested in what others had to say received a crash course in political frustration.

"Basically, I want the truth from the president, but I think the public really deserves the truth from the media. The media needs to express both sides," said Anderson Hunt, 26, of Melbourne, Australia.

Because the conflict in the Persian Gulf has been so well televised, he said, "We lose sight of what's real."

What is real is the point that has so many Americans confused.

"There's a lot of lies being told. Reagan and Bush lied their faces off," said Matthew Feiner, 27, New Haven, Conn. He claims the lies continue and the U.S. media participates in what protestors believe is a propaganda machine.

Many of the protestors believe the mainstream media serve as lapdogs and cheerleaders for the government, rather than as watchdogs and investigators.

"For the drowning we're doing in information there is so little we don't know," said Julie Turner, a 47-year-old marcher from Bedford, Mass.

"It seems there is almost a parallel universe going on," she added.

Protestors claim the war in the Gulf is the result of a faulty foreign policy that is mired in a conflict between rhetoric and action.

Like the United States did with Manuel Noreiga before invading Panama in 1989, America had been very benevolent to Hussein's Iraq before bombs rained down in the desert.

Several speakers and statements on placards claimed Bush knew well in advance of Iraqi intents to invade Kuwait. Indeed, months before Aug. 2, Saddam approached other Mideast nations including Egypt and Saudi Arabia and discussed his desire to carve up Kuwait.

Later, CIA satellite photos showed massive Iraqi troop movements along its border with the now-conquered emirate.

Natalie Celeste, a 19-year-old sophomore at Oberlin College said: "People are feeling confused. The troops want to believe they're fighting evil." She added that the public has a tough time knowing what to believe.

The daughter of former governor Richard Celeste agreed with the thousands surrounding her that their actions do not undermine troop efforts. Instead, she said it is "patriotic to stand up [to the government]. That's what we're based on."

Lynley Tolls, 22, a student at Kent State University, has a husband on board the aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy who works on weaponry systems for the F-14.

She said she did not think the protest and others like it would undermine the efforts of the troops overseas. She was videotaping the rally and said she was going to send a tape to her husband, who would understand her intentions.

"My husband knows better. Anyone who watches the tape will know that we're for the troops, but not the war," she said.

"How can you support dead troops?" added a bystander.

Despite criticism to the contrary, the activists are comfortable that protests will not endanger soldiers and may in fact bring troops home sooner.

And although divisive issues such as support for the troops and disbelief in the government can be understood, there are other points which may take years to explain.

"I think a lot of people fail to see the real reason for the war," said Sophie Froelich, a 19-year-old journalism major from Ohio University.

Froelich did not offer the answer to solving the Middle East crisis or if the United States should even be involved in such an endeavor.

Yet, as she marched with the OU Peace Coalition, she said, "It's more than just 'no blood for oil' or stopping a new Hitler."

New club means business

ACE resurrected to assist would-be entrepreneurs

by Kim Fenicle
staff writer

Students interested in making money by running their own business, now have the opportunity to learn about the art of making money with others through a new campus organization.

The Association of Collegiate Entrepreneurs began meeting this semester in support of those interested in small business and entrepreneurship.

"We thought Bowling Green needed an entrepreneurs club," Travis Granville, senior political science major and president of the organization, said.

There was not anything out there for those interested in small business ownership, he added.

Although there had been an entrepreneurs club at the University, it became inactive in the fall of 1990.

The present officers decided to bring the club back in the spring and then changed the name to ACE to give it national recognition, Granville said.

The purpose of this new organization is to provide a place for entrepreneurs to gather and recognize each other, Granville said.

"It will educate people and let them provide support for one another," he added.

One purpose of ACE is to provide inspiration to members through speeches from successful entrepreneurs. The organization also plans to educate its members and provide a networking system to help those interested in starting their own business.

The club's first informational meeting was on Jan. 22.

T.J. Thomas, senior general business major, attended the first meeting.

"I wanted to see what was going on, Thomas said.

"I have always been interested in making money," Thomas said. "This club sounded interesting and will hopefully give me the confidence needed to start my own business and express my ideas."

Throughout the semester, various speakers are planned. The ACE national convention is also a highlight of the organization.

As a new club on campus, ACE has many goals in mind, Granville said.

One long-range goal is to become "one of the most prominent clubs on campus," Granville added.

Anyone interested in small business is welcome to join this new organization. All majors are welcome, Granville said, adding that you should be interested in entrepreneurship and small business.

Granville said he believes the club will do well at the University.

"Small business is booming," Granville said. "This club fits in really well with the trends in the economy."

University ambassadors needed to represent BG

by Julie Potter
staff writer

Students wanting to represent the University in a positive way are encouraged to apply to become a University ambassador.

According to Jan Ruma, associate director of alumni affairs, University ambassadors serve as representatives of the University to the outside public because their primary duty is to promote the University.

"University ambassadors are primarily students who have had a good and positive experience at Bowling Green and want to convey that to other people," Ruma said.

Ruma said the University ambassadors are a service organization, started in 1974. They host guests of the president and greet them at the president's box during football games. They also serve as representatives of the University to visiting alumni and stars.

"Some of our ambassadors go to lunch with the parents of prospective students. It's an easy way for the parents to get information about the University in an informal setting," Ruma said.

She said the requirements for applying to become a University ambassador are fairly simple. Applicants must have a GPA of 2.5 and they must fill out an application. All applications are considered by a review board made up of about seven current University ambassadors who select a few finalists.

The final candidates are then interviewed and asked about such things as their involvement in other campus activities, Ruma said. About 35 people are selected for membership in University ambassadors each year.

According to Julie Zimmerman, junior elementary and special education major and student coordinator of the University ambassadors, there are many advantages to being an ambassador.

"Being a University ambassador is a good way to network. Many of the people you meet can be valuable contacts later," Zimmerman said.

Zimmerman joined the University ambassadors last year to get involved in campus activities and to meet new people.

"I thought getting involved in the group would provide me with a good leadership role," she said.

Being a University ambassador is an important position, according to Zimmerman.

"We're the representatives of the students to the public," she said.

Applications to become a University ambassador can be obtained in the Mileti Alumni Center or in 405 Student Services. Completed applications must be returned to either place by Feb. 4 at 5 p.m.

'Maze Craze' missing turnout

by Jacqueline M. Porter
staff writer

What do 101 pieces of 5 by 4.5 feet cardboard that stack to a pile 2 feet high equal? When spread out, they make the first annual Lambda Chi Alpha Maze Craze.

Lambda Chi Alpha vice president John Stadler, said he got the idea for the philanthropy in an unusual fashion.

"I was taking a shower before the Greek Olympiad and it just hit me all of a sudden," he said.

Stadler said the original idea was to make the event a version of laser tag, however, his plans were thwarted when the fraternity could not obtain the equipment needed.

"I think more [chapters] should come [to philanthropies], because if you're going to be in the greek system, you should at least participate in it."

—ZBT senior Paul Goodman

"When the laser tag idea got killed, we decided to do (the maze) instead," he said.

Lambda Chi Alpha sophomore Jim Goodman said the event appears simple; however, looks can be deceiving.

"It [the maze] looks easy — but when you're actually going through the maze, it's really hard," he said.

Only 13 chapters participated in the philanthropy, Stadler said.

"We hope that next year we will have a better turnout, because we hope in the future to get more cardboard to make bigger mazes and it will be even better," he said.

However, members of other chapters were not as pleased with the turnout.

"I think more should have come, because if you're going to be in the greek system — you should at least participate in it," said Zeta Beta Tau senior Paul Goodman.

Gamma Phi Beta freshman Jennifer Perry agreed with Goodman.

"I think the turnout was disappointing because it was a new philanthropy, but I think the turnout will be 50 percent better next year," she said.

The philanthropy raised more than $300, which will be donated to Saturday Morning Love Affair, an organization that tutors retarded children.

Sigma Phi Epsilon won the fraternity division, Alpha Phi won the sorority division and Gamma Phi Beta sorority won the spirit award.

"I'm glad the bill passed. Resident advisors do a tough job," he said. "I had two couches on my floor in two years."

Rossetti also does not believe resident advisors are getting the benefits they deserve.

"In [resident advisor] training, we were told we were the front line of residential services; apparently the University does not agree," he said.

Environmental company provides safe alternatives

by Kim Fenicle
staff writer

As the nation continues to fight the problems facing our environment, one local company is providing a solution before these problems begin.

World of Difference features all types of environmentally-safe products.

"We're a total environmental business," Anthony Thiebaut, co-president of the company, said.

Some of the products sold include makeup which is not tested on animals and is packaged in recycled plastic covers, Thiebaut said. The company also carries shampoos, soaps, oils and petroleum jellies, he added.

The company also offers household cleaners such as window washing liquids, dishwashing detergents and other non-bleach cleaners. These products are concentrated and are sold in recycled paper packaging.

Recycling bins and can crushers are also a part of the product line.

"We're running a throw-away society," Thiebaut said. "We have everything to make recycling easier — recycling bins for rooms, dorms and offices."

"Once you get into recycling, it's easy," he added.

Other products featured include string shopping bags, sun care products and drying racks. Instrumental, folk and environmental music as well as recycled stationary, multi-ethnic jewelry and a variety of tie-dyed articles are also available.

"These are products that everyone is going to use," Tim Newman, co-president and University senior film studies major, said.

"People won't live without them. Instead of giving up things, replace them with things that are better for the environment," Newman explained. Most of the products are from American makers, Thiebaut said, adding that a number of products are also supplied by local people.

Drying racks, known by the company as funny bones, are locally made. These clothes racks will mount on walls or beds, Thiebaut said.

Tye-dyed bags, shirts, sheets and pillow cases, welcome mats made of tires and bags are also the products of people in the area.

World of Difference is a company like Avon or Tupperware. Anyone interested in the products can call to get a catalog, order products or book a party.

"You can have a party and invite your friends," Thiebaut said. "We will come and show some products and then orders can be made."

The person who hosts the party receives a 25 percent discount on any products purchased. Anyone interested in booking a party can call World of Difference at 352-3081.

Miniature golf philanthropy 'kicked some putt putt'

by Jacqueline M. Porter
staff writer

Alpha Omicron Pi's second-annual AOPi Classic ran more smoothly this year after a lot of hard work and even more organization, said philanthropy chairperson Gina Cheverine.

Among the changes in the event this year was the setup of a miniature golf course, she said.

"Last year, we built our own course out of wood, but this year we were able to find a person who rents out putt putt courses," she said. "They [the company] also put up the course and takes it down."

This made it much easier for the sorority to concentrate on other aspects of the philanthropy, she said.

"We knew what to expect this year and we knew what we were doing — that really helped us," she said.

AOPi junior Ann Dorich also said the philanthropy was much better this year than last year.

"The setup [of the course] was really good this year — it went smoother because the course was better and we were more prepared for the event," she said.

Alpha Omicron Pi junior Jeanne Ellis said the event progressed very well and she was excited about the overall results.

"We kicked some putt putt," she said.

The money raised for the event will be given to the Arthritis Research Grants and will be donated as soon as possible, Cheverine said.

She said 24 chapters gave donations, while 22 participated in the tournament. "All together about $500 was donated," she said.

Delta Tau Delta won the fraternity division while Alpha Gamma Delta won the sorority division, she said.

To add a different twist to the traditional spirit award, AOPi decided to make a variation on the theme, calling it the Goofy Golfer Award, she said.

In this competition, Zeta Beta Tau and Phi Kappa Psi fraternities won, Cheverine said.

"We wanted to be different [with the award] and these fraternities displayed spirit throughout the event," she said.

Public Health Week to promote awareness, support

by Greg Watson
staff writer

The Wood County Health Department has designated this week Public Health Week to promote public awareness of health and improve the relations between the health department and Wood County residents.

"[We want to] increase public awareness of what health is," said Charles Wolford, health commissioner at the Wood County Health Department.

"[We also] want to communicate a message to the public that public health is very strong in Ohio."

On Wednesday, Public Health Day, members of state health departments will go to Columbus to convince state legislators to increase support for public health, he said.

"People do not know much about the health department," Wolford said. "There is a belief that [we] help only people on welfare. Sixty percent of the people we serve are working people without health insurance or are under-insured."

Helen Gatzke, director of nurse services at the Wood County Health Department, said, "When public health is good, nobody knows. Things are taken for granted then."

The health department hopes to make people not only more aware of what is dangerous, but also more knowledgeable about disease, Gatzke said.

Suggestions by the health department for "being a friend of public health" include regular exercise, not smoking, wearing seat belts, getting enough rest and relaxation, managing stress, safety at work and home, recycling, immunization, practicing safe sex and getting proper prenatal care, Gatzke said.

The Wood County Health Department is now involved in 42 programs, including helping pregnant mothers, promoting infant health and drug and alcohol prevention.

The health department is also trying to help prevent diseases such as cancer, heart disease and AIDS from spreading further, she said.

Gatzke said the health department also helps "provide a link between families and human health services."

Another program — Woman, Infant and Children — supplies nutrition and support for pregnant women and infants and children who are unable to support themselves.

The program also supplies coupons for food which will help with the children's birth and growth, she said.

Health department members also visit new mothers with special needs, including teenagers with children or parents with children who have medical problems, Gatzke added.

The Wood County Health Department also helps the University inspect all campus housing on a regular basis, Wolford said.

Electronic filing steps up processing of tax returns

by Julie Potter
staff writer

Electronic filing of tax returns — a relatively new process — is allowing people to receive their income tax refunds more quickly and reduce stress at tax time.

According to Rollie Woods, public affairs officer of the Cleveland District of the Internal Revenue Service, about 400 tax preparers in northeast Ohio are qualified to participate in the electronic filing program.

Right now, persons wishing to file their returns electronically must go to one of the tax preparers, rather than using their own personal computers to send information to the IRS.

"We hope to eventually expand our service so that people wishing to use their own computers to file their returns may do so," Woods said.

Using the electronic filing system is a relatively simple process. According to Woods, the tax preparers can prepare the return on the spot or the customers can do their own returns and bring them in to be filed.

"We transmit the returns from our personal computers over a modem to the IRS computer in Covington, Kentucky," Woods said.

Each preparer does charge a fee, which can be any amount as long as it is not based on a percentage of the refund, he said. But, participants reap several benefits from filing tax returns electronically.

The first is persons filing electronically receive their tax refunds much quicker than if they filed their returns by the conventional paper method.

"Filing by paper — it takes anywhere from three to ten weeks to process the return and send the refund," Woods said. "Our goal is to be able to give people their refunds within three weeks from the time the return is officially acknowledged as being received by the Internal Revenue Service."

Another benefit is that people can elect to have their returns directly deposited to their checking or savings account, rather than doing it themselves, he said.

Also, filing tax returns electronically is very efficient, according to Woods.

"We have found that one out of every five paper-prepared returns contained some type of error, whether it be mathematical problems or writing the wrong information on the wrong line," he said.

The error rate for electronically filed returns is as low as three percent, so efficiency is greatly improved by using that method, Woods said.

Woods said the IRS began testing the electronic filing system in 1986 and this marks the third year northeast Ohio has used the system.

Approximately 89,000 people used the electronic filing system in the Cleveland area last year, he said.

"The electronic filing system does come with a price, however," Woods said.

Students to be stars of 'Flicks'

by Morrella Raleigh
staff writer

University students can become video stars thanks to a University Activities Organization-sponsored event called "Fun Flicks."

Fun Flicks are two-to-three minute videos that can be musical performances or acts using special effects, UAO spotlight entertainment director Amy Kotton said.

The videos will be shot in the University Union Lenhart Grand Ballroom from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. on Tuesday by Grand Rapids-based entertainment agency Kramer Magnum, said Kotton.

The agency has wardrobe, props and over 10,000 special effects that can show video participants in acts such as flying like Superman, Kotton, a junior recreation programming major, said.

Participants can also perform in a music video fun flick. They can lip sync to favorite songs or bring in recordings of their own songs, she said.

"People on this campus have a lot of wit and hidden talents and it's [being in Fun Flicks] a lot of fun," Kotton said. Fun Flicks cost $5 per tape and participants will be accepted on a walk-in basis, she said.

Junior public relations major Chrissy Schroedel will be performing in a Fun Flick with a group of about 10 friends. She said the group will dress in Hawaiian attire and lip sync to Jimmy Buffet songs.

"It'll be a lot of fun," Schroedel said.

Housing

housing, especially for the international students.

One possible solution would include the minimal renovation of an existing dormitory for graduate students, the administrator said.

Another solution would be to create means — such as increasing funding — to make the Off-Campus Student Housing Center more aggressive.

For example, improvements are needed in the Center's housing list.

According to Berman, the list needs to be clearer, more updated and OSHC employees need to have some idea of what the homes on the list look like.

"I really don't know if they [Faculty Senate] are really working on this problem, or just pretending to be working on it," Blinn said.

"They keep saying that it would cost too much money to build more dorms or build apartment complexes for the benefit of the foreign students, but these options weren't even suggested in the resolution I submitted," Blinn said.

Blinn said the senate told him and other members who have been working on the problem that they want them to figure out how to solve it.

However, the senate pays people to work specifically on problems such as these, Blinn added.

"It is ridiculous for them to ask myself or Wayne Berman to work on this problem; they ought to be the ones to figure out how in the devil to solve this problem — that is their job," Blinn said.

However, according to Lester Barber, executive assistant to president Olscamp, the GSS is at the forefront of the investigation.

"GSS is probably more knowledgeable about the situation than I am at the present time," he said.

However, Blinn said "By saying that [GSS is at the forefront of the investigations], they're sending this issue back to a source that has no way to solve this problem. They [GSS] have no money or no resources to do so. That's like asking the BG News to build a new chemistry building."

Military biological research missed mark, Glenn reports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army spent millions of dollars on research that failed to deal with biological agents that pose a threat in war, a congressional investigative agency said Monday in a report issued by Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio.

The General Accounting Office also found that three of the 10 medical products, such as vaccines and drugs, developed to protect U.S. forces against biological warfare, do not deal with agents that are deemed a valid threat.

The agency drew several conclusions and issued recommendations, but did not suggest any serious danger for U.S. troops in the Persian Gulf.

"GAO's report disturbs me because it is another example of mismanagement within a government program," said Glenn, chairperson of the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

Glenn

Glenn cited reports that the Defense Department was forced to buy vaccines and drugs from outside sources to protect U.S. troops.

Pentagon officials said Monday they had not seen a copy of the report and would have no immediate comment.

By definition, biological weapons are a form of bacteria, virus, fungus or naturally occurring toxin. A biological weapon could be unleashed on an unsuspecting public by using it in a liquid to contaminate water or in an aerosol that is dropped by bomb.

The purpose of the medical unit of the Army's research program is to develop vaccines and drugs to defend against biological warfare.

The GAO found that due to a lack of internal controls in the medical research program, the Army "unnecessarily expended funds on research and development efforts that did not address validated threats and may have duplicated research efforts of other federal agencies."

The research program has received about $370 million since fiscal 1984, the GAO said.

The agency found that 49 research projects, valued at about $47 million, dealt with biological agents that the Armed Forces Medical Intelligence Center had not assessed as warfare threat agents.

In addition, neither the Army nor GAO could readily determine whether 57 projects — totaling about $48 million — addressed validated biological threat agents.

The GAO also said that the Army's Biological Defense Research Program may have duplicated the research efforts of the Centers for Disease Control and the National Institutes of Health.

The agency recommended a review of all research projects to ensure that they deal with valid biological threats, stopping development of medical products that do not address a valid threat and arrange an independent review of proposed projects.

In Columbus, Glenn discussed the report at a news conference, during which he also said he doubted whether the war would end even if Saddam Hussein was killed.

Glenn said Hussein was surrounded by supporters who share the same views as those of the Iraqi leader.

"They have helped build up this huge military machine and I don't think we could assume that even if he was killed, he was personally out of the way, that this would end the war once it's gone this far," Glenn said.

Glenn said Saddam still had a potent military force, despite continued bombing raids by allied forces.

Saddam boasts success

NEW YORK (AP) — Iraqi President Saddam Hussein was quoted as saying Monday that the missiles Iraq has been firing at Israel and Saudi Arabia have nuclear, chemical and biological capability.

"We have maintained our balance using only conventional weapons," Saddam was quoted as saying in his interview in Baghdad with CNN's correspondent in Iraq, Peter Arnett.

Arnett paraphrased Saddam as saying the Scud missiles have nuclear, chemical and biological capability.

Saddam was quoted as saying he could not predict how long the Gulf war would last, but promised "lots of blood will be shed on every side."

Saddam said he was confident Iraq would prevail.

"We pray that not a lot of blood will be shed from any nation, we pray we shall not be forced into taking a forced measure."

Arnett spoke by phone with CNN in the United States after the interview he said took place in a bungalow in Baghdad.

He said he had asked Saddam whether he would refrain from using chemical weapons if the United States and its allies refrained from doing so.

"I don't mean that," Arnett quoted Saddam as saying, "Iraq will use weapons that equate the weapons used against us."

The Iraqis are known to have chemical and biological warfare capabilities, but Western analysts have questioned whether they could equip their Scud missiles with such weapons.

As for nuclear weapons, some in the West believed Iraq was just a year or two from developing atomic warheads. But the U.S. military says its recent bombing has obliterated Iraq's nuclear network.

Saddam attacked "hypocritical Western politicians" who he said convinced him last fall that if he let the hostages go, they would keep the peace, Arnett said. Iraq allowed most foreigners who wished to leave to do so by December.

Arnett quoted Saddam as saying, "If we had kept these 5,000 hostages here, would Bush have bombed Baghdad?"

Arnett said he was unexpectedly summoned to a meeting with a high official and then was taken to a small bungalow in suburban Baghdad. He said he waited about an hour and Saddam arrived. The interview was about 90 minutes.

Saddam was adamant that Kuwait is a part of Iraq and will remain so.

Asked about using the captured pilots as hostages, Saddam said that Iraqis have been interned in allied nations.

How long will the war last? Saddam was asked.

"Only God knows," he was quoted as saying.

White House deputy press secretary Roman Popadiuk said the Bush administration had no reaction to Arnett's report.

"Iraq will win the admiration of the world with their fighting prowess."

"Lots of blood will be shed, blood on every side," Arnett quoted him as saying.

"I asked him what message he hoped would come through in the interview," Arnett said.

"I wish the Americans well and pray none of their sons will die and that all the people of Iraq are grateful to noble souls in America demonstrating against the war, in France, in Germany, in Spain and all others."

Asked whether he had doubts about whether Iraq would win, Saddam said: "Not even one in a million."

As for Iraq using planes that have flown to Iran, Iraq's bitter enemy during eight years of war, Saddam said, "in all circumstances, we respect the decisions and regulations of the state of Iran," according to Arnett.

When asked if the planes would be used again, Saddam said, "each case in its own circumstance."

Hussein hints at chemical warfare

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Saddam Hussein on Monday raised the specter of chemical-biological warfare — and even nuclear weapons — in Iraq's fateful confrontation with the U.S. superpower. Meanwhile, scores more of his air force pilots were slipping out the back door to Iran.

CNN's Peter Arnett, who interviewed the Iraqi president, said Saddam claimed that the missiles his military has fired at Saudi Arabia and Israel have chemical, biological and nuclear capability.

The dozens of Scuds launched thus far have carried only conventional warheads. The Iraqis have chemical and biological weapons, but Western analysts question whether Iraq is technically capable of equipping missiles with such warheads.

As for nuclear warheads, some analysts believed before the Persian Gulf war broke out that Iraq was a year or two from developing a primitive atomic weapon. But the U.S. military says its recent air attacks eliminated the Iraqi nuclear network.

As recounted by Arnett, Saddam skirted the question of whether the Iraqis would use unconventional weapons.

"Iraq will use weapons that equate the weapons used against us," Arnett quoted Saddam as saying. "All the air superiority ... that has come upon us has failed. We have maintained our balance, using only conventional weapons."

But, Arnett said, the Iraqi leader then suggested Baghdad might be "forced" to take drastic action.

"We pray that not a lot of blood will be shed from any nation," he quoted Saddam as saying. "We pray that we shall not be forced in taking a forced measure."

Baghdad radio issued a more direct threat about what it called "strategic weapons."

"What will emerge from these days when these weapons are used is more tragic days for the allied forces," the broadcast said.

The Iraqis reported that captured pilots have been injured in air attacks staged by their Desert Storm comrades on "populated and civilian targets in Iraq."

The terse Baghdad radio report, which gave no further details, was an ominous followup to Iraq's earlier threat to turn POWs into "human shields."

The Iraqis, who say they hold more than 20 American and other prisoners, announced Jan. 21 they were sending them out to potential targets to deter air attack.

The Baghdad government says more than 320 civilians have been killed in Desert Storm air raids.

Iraqi tank corps set for battle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commanders of America's top-of-the-line M-1 tanks will need all their technological advantages and strong air support to successfully wage war against Iraq's massive, modern and battle-tested tank corps.

A land offensive to drive Iraq from occupied Kuwait will test the mettle of the M-1 Abrams, a $3 million piece of technological wizardry named after the late Gen. Creighton W. Abrams.

The Iraqi tank corps, hoping to smash an allied ground assault, contains the Soviet-made T-72, a powerful and respected vehicle the Iraqis used to good advantage in its 1980-88 war against Iran.

American military analysts say it could be the biggest tank confrontation since the Allies took on German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel and his Africa Korps in World War II. The number of tanks could be greater than in the 1943 battle of Kursk in the Soviet Union. In that engagement, 3,000 Soviet and German tanks were deployed.

In this war, the crucial factor in a tank battle will be air support, and it is here that the United States and its allies should have an overwhelming advantage.

A-10 attack planes armed with Maverick missiles and armor-piercing cannons and Apache helicopters firing Hellfire missiles will be swooping down on Iraqi tank positions, while reconnaissance aircraft will be calling in positions for ground artillery.

The analysts express confidence that M-1, developed in a $20 billion program over the last two decades, has the firepower to prevail. But the Iraqis will also be going into battle with several key factors in their favor.

Iraq will field some 4,000 tanks, compared to about 2,200 American tanks and 1,200 tanks from its allies. The modified T-72's 125mm main gun is slightly larger than the 120mm guns mounted on the M-1. The T-72's three-layer, 200mm armor compares with the best American equipment.

"These tanks are designed not to be easily destroyed," Gen. Colin Powell, chairperson of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said of the Soviet vehicles.

The T-72 is "the best export model the Soviets have," said Maj. Peter Keating of the Army's Public Affairs Office. "It's a good tank, a formidable piece of equipment."

Iraq has only about 500 T-72s, which it calls the "Babylon Lion." The rest of its tank corps is comprised of less lethal T-55 and T-62 Soviet models dating back 30 years and more.

Government calls on banks to stave impending deficit

by Dave Skidmore
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Bush administration is projecting that the government fund insuring bank deposits will run out of money next year unless banks shore it up with billions of dollars.

The forecast, to be included in the administration's budget due out Feb. 4, is the first official acknowledgment of a possibility that private economists have warned of for months.

By Sept. 30, 1992, according to the forecast, there will be a $4 billion deficit in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.'s bank fund, which stands behind $2.2 trillion in deposits. By the end of 1995, the deficit will be $22.5 billion, the Office of Management and Budget said.

Those losses will likely occur even if the FDIC, in several months, increases the insurance premium paid by banks to 23 cents per $100 of deposits, OMB projects. That's an 18 percent increase over the current 19.5-cent premium and nearly double last year's 12-cent premium.

The forecast was presented last week to banking industry representatives who are struggling to agree on a mechanism for rebuilding the fund, according to industry sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Congressional Budget Office is expected to present similar, or even more pessimistic, findings to the Senate Banking Committee on Tuesday.

President Bush will likely mention efforts to strengthen the fund in his State of the Union speech Tuesday night. It will be part of the administration's larger proposal for the biggest overhaul of the financial system since the Depression.

However, Bush will probably not get into the specifics of how the fund will be recapitalized, other than to assure taxpayers that they will not have to pay for bank failures as they have for the collapse of the S&L industry.

The Treasury Department has proposed that banks provide an extra $5 billion a year for five years — roughly an extra 20 cents per every $100 in deposits.

The money would go into a special trust fund within the FDIC and be spent in an "early intervention" program to strengthen weak banks before they fail. Bankers would serve as trustees of the special fund, giving them some say over how the money is spent.

Staff members of bank trade groups, who are evaluating the proposal at the request of the Treasury Department, agree that the FDIC should be shored up by their industry, rather than by taxpayers. But they remain deeply divided over how to do it and over how much and when the money should be provided.

Challenger disaster mourned

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space center workers, who will never forget where they were five years ago, fell silent for 73 seconds Monday to honor the seven astronauts who died in the explosion of the space shuttle Challenger.

All activity at NASA's Kennedy Space Center halted at 11:38 a.m., the time of Challenger's final liftoff on Jan. 28, 1986. It exploded 73 seconds later over the Atlantic Ocean.

The deceased astronauts include Christa McAuliffe, the Concord, N.H., teacher who had planned live lessons from orbit for the nation's students. She was the first ordinary American citizen to venture into space.

At Concord High School, where McAuliffe taught, students and faculty also paused for a moment of silence. Five years ago, cheering students had jammed the school's auditorium watching the launch on television before their joy turned to horror.

At Firestone High School in Akron, Ohio, where fellow crew member Judith Resnik graduated in 1966, attentive students listened to a commemorative account of her life. "You could hear a pin drop," said Principal William Holk.

At the cape, Kennedy Space Center's director, Forrest McCartney, in a message televised throughout the launch site, asked employees, as he has each anniversary, to "remember and honor the crew of Challenger and at the same time recommit ourselves to excellence in everything we do."

Thirteen missions have been accomplished safely since shuttle flights resumed in September 1988 and "these have been five years of accomplishment of which we can all be proud," McCartney said.

Workers stopped whatever they were doing and bent their heads in offices, cafeteria lines and on sidewalks. Security guards slowly lowered flags to half-mast.

No official observances were held at Johnson Space Center in Houston or at NASA headquarters in Washington. But NASA administrator Richard Truly, in a written message to employees, said the seven would never be forgotten.

"It has been through your tireless efforts in the interim that we have profited from the important lessons we learned," Truly said.

A leak in a joint on Challenger's right solid rocket booster caused America's worst space disaster. The shuttle and booster have since been extensively redesigned.

Shuttle director Robert Crippen, a former astronaut, and about 100 people attended an observance at a granite memorial to the Challenger crew in Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia.

Ohio Power forced to alter plant

by Robert E. Miller
Associated Press writer

COLUMBUS — The new U.S. Clean Air Act may force Ohio Power Co.'s coal-fired Gavin plant to switch to low-sulfur coal, forcing the shutdown of a Meigs County mine that employs 1,258 workers, a company official said Monday.

But Gerald Maloney, executive vice president of American Electric Power Co., Ohio Power's parent company, said an option could be the installation of scrubbers to clean the high-sulfur coal.

Maloney held a news conference that he said marked the start of discussions with electrical utilities, customers, industry regulators, the coal industry, environmentalists and other groups that have a stake in the outcome.

He said compliance with the statute requires lengthy preparation and that a decision on either a fuel switch or scrubbers must be made no later than mid-1991 and should be made by April 1.

The first compliance deadline is Jan. 1, 1995.

Maloney said the act requires electric utilities to cut sulfur dioxide emissions by 40 percent to 50 percent on average over the next 10 years to reduce environmental damage from acid rain.

Ohio Power Co.'s prorated cut is 80 percent. Gavin accounts for about 44 percent of sulfur dioxide emissions from AEP's Ohio plants, Maloney said.

Using charts and other materials, Maloney reviewed the potential costs of both alternatives, but said they may not be accurate because certain decisions on implementing the law have not been made.

He listed $800 million for the installation of scrubbers, compared with $200 million for modifications at the Gavin plant to accommodate certain characteristics of low-sulfur coal, including higher ash content.

He projected that the annual cost of operating the plant with scrubbers would be $170 million, compared with $115 million for low-sulfur coal. However, he said there could be a savings of $30 million to $40 million a year in scrubber emissions credits, not yet determined.

Maloney said that based on the data available, fuel switching at Gavin may produce the lower cost of compliance for Ohio Power customers. But if that decision is made, production would be halted at the Meigs mine by early 1994, he said.

Area Hell's Angels accused of murder

TOLEDO (AP) — Jury selection began Monday in the federal weapons trial of three Hell's Angels motorcycle gang members accused in the slaying of a record store clerk.

Steven Yee, Mark Verdi and John Bonds are charged in the death of David Hartlaub, 27, of Sandusky, who was shot Feb. 27, 1988. They are being tried on federal weapons offenses before facing state murder charges.

If convicted on the weapons charges, they could each be sentenced to 25 years in prison and fined $750,000.

Twenty-seven potential jurors were given instructions by U.S. District Judge John Potter, who told them the trial could last one month.

Twelve jurors and three alternates are to be selected to hear the case of Yee, 33, of the Cleveland suburb of Parma, Verdi, 41, of Cleveland and Bonds, 35, of Lorain.

Prosecutors said Bonds shot Hartlaub as Hartlaub was making a night deposit at a savings institution in Perkins Township, south of Sandusky. He allegedly left the money bag, got into Hartlaub's van and drove away.

Prosecutors contend the shooting was part of a Hell's Angels initiation for Bonds. They said Bonds mistakenly thought Hartlaub was a member of the Outlaws, a rival motorcycle gang.

The defendants, all dressed in business suits, shirts and ties, sat next to their defense lawyers. They smiled at several gang members who were sitting in the courtroom.

Potter has prohibited spectators from wearing jackets and other clothing bearing the gang's insignia. During earlier court hearings, dozens of gang members, including their girlfriends, wore black leather jackets and other markings with "Hell's Angels."

Prosecutors and defense lawyers, including civil rights lawyer William Kuntzler, asked prospective jurors if they heard about "genetic fingerprinting," a key element in the case.

"Could you keep your mind open to the test?" Kuntzler asked a potential juror.

"Yes," she responded. "I read about DNA tests, but I don't know much about it."

Potter earlier this month ruled that DNA tests can be used as evidence.

Dems. file Voinovich complaints

COLUMBUS (AP) — The Ohio Elections Commission agreed Monday to delay for 60 days hearings on two complaints filed by the Ohio Democratic Party against Republican Gov. George Voinovich.

Both complaints were made prior to the Nov. 6 election in which Voinovich defeated Democrat Anthony J. Celebrezze Jr.

Carol Rowan, the attorney representing the Democrats, asked for a continuance to give new state chairperson Eugene Branstool time to review the cases. Branstool was chosen Friday to succeed James Ruvolo as chairperson.

"[Branstool] has not been involved in these cases, and he's our new chairperson, and we'd like to give him that courtesy," Rowan said.

Charles Saxbe, one of the lawyers representing Voinovich, agreed with the request.

"I am hopeful that, now that November is behind us, things may be resolved," Saxbe told the panel.

At issue are two cases brought by the Democratic Party against the Voinovich committee.

One accused Voinovich of improperly using campaign funds for personal purposes by paying an accountant to prepare his income tax returns, while a second charged the GOP candidate had maintained multiple campaign committees.

Lawyers for Voinovich said the only reason he sought the tax preparation help was because he was a candidate and the returns were to be made public.

Also pending is a third case filed by the Ohio Republican Party. The suit alleges that Choice '90, a pro-choice abortion political action committee, was improperly controlled by the Celebrezze campaign.

Falcons break Kent State jinx

Colbert, Burnett lead BG to road win

Schroder, M.D.
The Sports Doctor

by Matt Schroder
sports editor

No other football game in history can touch what took place Sunday night in Tampa.

True, for sheer drama and sporting excitement, the Bengals-49ers clash two years ago was the best NFL Championship game of this generation.

But the Giants victory over Buffalo in Super Bowl XXV was more than just a game — it was a celebration of everything that is American.

After watching Whitney Houston sing the National Anthem again on tape, it still sends chills up and down my spine. The half-time show featuring children of men and women in the Persian Gulf, could bring a tear to the eye.

The F-16 jets roaring overhead, the stars and stripes sweeping across the 74,000 seats, and the message from the president all helped keep this game in perspective.

Soldiers interviewed on the radio Monday morning expressed genuine gratitude for the NFL's decision to play the game as scheduled. "I've been a Bills fan forever and I would have been disappointed if it would have been cancelled," said one American in Saudi Arabia.

What better stories could one game boast? A career back-up quarterback, Jeff Hostetler, leads his team to a Super Bowl triumph and holds his children in his arms while being interviewed.

A cast-off running back from the Cardinals, Otis Anderson, rushes for 102 yards and wins the MVP award. A fitting feather for an underrated 12-year veteran's cap.

And credit must be given to the Bills. Thurman Thomas, Jim Kelly, Bruce Smith, Andre Reed, and the entire Buffalo team can hold its head with pride. So what if Scott Norwood's kick sailed right of the upright? The Bills played well enough to win and are a tough football team — the best in the AFC.

What made Super Bowl XXV great was not the winner, it was what the game meant to American forces stationed overseas. It gave them something back home to hold on to. Watching how concerned the nation is about them had to be a wave of fresh air in an otherwise hellish situation.

But now the game is over and we get to proceed with life at home. The soldiers are back to the gruesome reality of war.

It hardly seems fair. Matthew D. Schroder is sports editor of the BG News and thinks it's no coincidence both teams' colors were red, white, and blue.

KENT, O. — Before stepping on the floor at Memorial Gym Saturday night, the basketball team already had three strikes against it.

Clinton Venable's groin injury, the news of Billy Johnson's dismissal, and the seven year losing streak on Kent State's home floor were all working against a chance for a Falcon victory.

But in basketball, three strikes weren't enough to count Bowling Green out. The Falcons beat the Golden Flashes on the road for the first time in eight years, 66-60, to improve to 10-7 overall and 4-3 in the Mid-American Conference.

"This has been a tough place for us to get a win," BG head coach Jim Larranaga said. "I could tell from the vibes I was getting from the team they were ready tonight and very motivated. It was easy to coach tonight because the team was so mentally prepared."

With the loss of Venable and Johnson, BG was thin at the guard position. Sophomore Michael Huger was forced into starting duty and responded with eight points, three rebounds and three assists.

When Huger picked up his second foul at the nine minute mark of the first half, Larranaga called on Vada Burnett to take over the offense. The sophomore guard played 20 minutes and scored nine points, handed out four assists, grabbed five rebounds and hit a pair of three pointers.

Burnett, who had four minutes of total playing time in BG's first 16 games, said Venable was a positive influence on the bench.

"He was telling the team to pull together and that's what we had today, a team effort," Burnett said. "Clinton is very enthusiastic even when he's not playing."

"Our guards really met a tremendous challenge," Larranaga said. "(Kent's guards) are good players and we did a good job of shutting them down."

The Flashes' backcourt tandem of Mike Klinzing and Harold Walton combined for only seven-of-20 shooting and committed four turnovers.

One player who did not get shut down was BG's Ed Colbert. The senior center scored double figures (14) for the second time this season and claimed 10 boards. Eight of the Falcons' first 12 points of the game belonged to Colbert.

"We came down here with our heads together," Colbert said. "We've been talking among ourselves, just the players, about how to hold on to leads and to get leads. A lot of positive things came out of those conversations."

At the beginning of the second half the Falcons almost had to call an emergency meeting. Leading 34-28 at intermission, it took BG just three minutes to lose the advantage. A three-pointer by Tony Watson early in the half gave Kent a 39-36 lead.

But the Falcons weren't about to repeat mistakes that cost them the last two games. Colbert's jumper in traffic gave BG the lead for good with 13:40 to play.

"Momentum plays such a factor," Larranaga said. "We had worked and busted our tail to get a six-point lead and to give it up early can deflate your intensity, but it didn't.

We never became unraveled. We called timeouts and came right back in the game focused and executed very well," Larranaga added.

Kent lost its sixth game in a row Saturday and fell to 1-6 in the MAC. Playing in front of their largest home crowd of the year (4,274) the Flashes' shooters were ice cold. They shot 37 percent from the floor and 58 percent from the line.

"We play teams close but it's tough when you're always playing from behind," Kent State head coach Jim McDonald said.

The closest the Flashes were to the lead was a four point deficit with four minutes to play in the game. But a Joe Moore jump shot from the top of the key and three clutch points from Burnett iced the win for the Falcons.

Falcon forward Joe Moore leaps toward two of his 15 points Saturday in BG's 66-60 win over Kent State. Moore became the 25th player in school history to reach 1,000 points in a career.

Moore reaches 1,000 points

KENT, O. — Joe Moore scored 14 points Saturday against Kent State, giving him 1,008 for his career.

He became the 25th BG player to reach four digits in scoring.

His baseline jumper with 9:25 to play in the first half was the milestone shot.

Did Moore ever expect to reach this plateau when he came in three years ago? "Not even in my wildest dreams," Moore said. "I can't take all the credit because my teammates give me the ball. I just want to do the best I can for them.

"It's behind me now and the countdowns can stop. Now we have to concentrate on winning ball games," Moore added.

Moore was second team All-Conference last year and is almost an automatic first-team selection this season.

"It's exciting for a player to reach 1,000 points but Joe adds so much more to a basketball game," Larranaga said. "His rebounds, blocks, steals and overall enthusiasm makes the points just a small portion of his game."

Surprisingly, Moore scored more points in his freshman year (184) than his sophomore campaign (168). Last season, he averaged 12.4 points per game and grabbed 212 rebounds.

"I've come a long way and I play a lot more physical since my freshman year," Moore said. "Mentally I'm definitely stronger thanks to coaches and teammates working me each year."

Moore has led the team in scoring seven times this season, including a pair of 29-point efforts. His career-high is 30 versus Cincinnati last year.

BG runs and guns past Golden Flashes, 106-98

by Jamie Joss
assistant sports editor

KENT, O. — Mid-American Conference women's basketball action — IT'S FAN-tastic!

This is the familiar slogan associated with the National Basketball Association, but it certainly described Saturday's fast-paced action in the Falcons 106-98 victory over Kent State.

Known for its running style of play, KSU based its tactics upon the offense of the Denver Nuggets and Loyola Marymount University which were developed by Nuggets head coach Paul Westhead.

"It's a combination of Loyola Marymount and Kentucky. We blended a little bit of both teams styles and that is the game we play," KSU head coach Bob Lindsay said.

Typically teams try to slow down the pace of a running team, but the Falcons (4-3 in the MAC, 8-10 overall) chose to play with the Flashes (3-4, 9-8) in the fast-paced game — as long as they weren't hurt by it.

"We didn't want to take anything away from our game so we didn't want to slow it down. In fact we wanted to play a running game too as long as we had a transition game," BG head coach Fran Voll said.

Not even the Road Runner, could keep up with the pace of this full-court contest. Both teams combined for a shot every 16 seconds and 5.1 points per minute.

Although the game started out very quickly, the teams didn't accumulate much for their early mileage, as Kent took an 11-8 lead after the first five minutes of the contest.

But then both teams exploded to score 31 points in the next 5:18 of the first half and the Golden Flashes stretched their lead to 28-22.

Both squads took a two-minute breather with a lull in the action, but the Falcons caught their breath first, scoring six straight points to cut the deficit to 30-28.

Kent's Christy Nelson responded to the Falcon threat, hitting four-of-six free throws and KSU's Ann Forbes scored on a lay-up and added a free throw to take a 37-33 advantage.

But again the Flashes seemed to tire and the Falcons gained a second wind in the last 4:18 of the half, en route to outscoring Kent 19-8. BG sophomore forward Andrea Nordmann led the attack scoring nine of her first half 19 points in the four minute span.

The run enabled the BG to gain its first lead of the game and gave them a 52-44 advantage at the intermission.

BG picked up right where they left off with a charge by senior guard Wanda Lyle as she scored nine points (three three-pointers) in the first six minutes of the second half.

But, with the speed of the Kent team, they jumped back into the contest quickly with a Kathy Carroll three-pointer to take a 81-79 advantage with 7:37 remaining. Carroll added two free throws to move ahead by four points, but Judit Lendvay broke loose for two jumpers to tie the game at 83-83.

For the final five minutes both teams exchanged baskets. BG raised its level of play and took control in the last minute with a four-point lead on a Cathy Koch jumper, 100-96.

Kent's Ann Forbes scored her 31st point of the game to pull within two and the Flashes took a timeout with 13 seconds remaining. On the BG inbounds play, Carroll fouled Lyle and the referee called a controversial intentional foul giving Lyle two shots and BG got the ball out of bounds.

In the process of arguing, Kent received a bench technical foul. "They made plays that they had to in order to win the game and aside from that last official's call, they made some plays down the stretch that got them the lead. You have to give them credit for that," Lindsay said.

Lyle came through in the clutch hitting both initial free throws and added the technicals to ice the game with a 104-98 lead with 10 seconds remaining.

"I thought Bowling Green did a good job breaking our pressure and bumped people off the ball and did subtle things that got them the ball inbounds pretty quickly," Lindsay said. "They got the ball inbounds as quickly as anybody has against us." BG used a completely balanced attack with six players scoring in double figures and nine players played more than 12 minutes.

If player of the game were given Judit Lendvay would have received the honor playing a career-high 32 minutes and scored 18 points (12 in the second half), grabbed seven rebounds, five assists and five steals.

"This is the type of game that I played in Europe and I really like it a lot," Lendvay said.

Hockey team drops pair against Illinois-Chicago

by Steve Easton
assistant sports editor

CHICAGO — When it rains, it pours.

With the Falcon hockey team already drowning in a flood of losses from its school-record 10-game losing streak, the University of Illinois-Chicago expected to bring some rays of sunshine to the BG players' faces.

After all the Flames resided in eighth place in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association (5-18-1 CCHA, 7-18-1 overall) with only one win in their last ten games. Another statistic boding well for the Falcons was their commanding 36-5-2 series record against the team from the Windy City.

But the torrential downpour continued as UIC swept BG, 8-3 and 4-2, to lengthen The Streak to 12.

The sixth-place Falcons (9-15-2, 11-17-2) didn't fall any farther in the league standings with seventh-place Ohio State (8-13-3, 10-17-3) idle. But BG finds itself six points away from Western Michigan (12-10-2, 15-12-3) and home-ice advantage in the playoffs. Michigan State (9-10-5, 12-12-5) remains in fifth place — three points ahead of BG.

UIC senior centers Bob Melton and Larry Pilut scored the first of their two goals in the game fewer than ten minutes into Friday night's contest.

After junior center Martin Jiraneck cut into the Flames' lead with a nifty wrap-around goal past goaltender Gary Mangino, UIC center Brad Smiley knocked a cross-ice pass from Randy Zulinick past Angelo Libertucci to reinstate the two-goal cushion.

However, defenseman Otis Plageman notched the first of his two goals on a power play, to push the Falcons within 3-2 after one period.

But from this point on BG couldn't creep any closer as the Flames received five goals from five players, including three from the fourth line of Smiley, Zulin-ick, and Link Bessert.

"It was a fun game to coach, because everybody was physically and mentally sharp," UIC first-year coach Larry Pedrie said. "I can't say one line dominated. It was a good team effort."

With Friday's loss sticking fresh in the players' minds, the Falcons registered the first goal of the game when Dan Bylsma put the puck past Mangino. But junior Rick Judson scored two of his three goals to give the Flames a 2-1 edge after one period.

Then after a scoreless second period, BG entered the final period with a legitimate chance of winning.

But Judson put UIC ahead 3-1 less than a minute in and Cory Hextall lit the lamp for the Flames' fourth goal midway into the period.

"We were playing really well up until the third period," BG head coach Jerry York said. "We just couldn't capitalize on our chances, and the two goals in the third were the result of defensive miscues."

"We will continue to work with the defense. Sure it's a young defense with four freshman. But in two years, they'll probably be pretty good players."

Mangino sparkled in UIC's net with 31 saves after snagging 36 in the victory Friday night.

"This was probably his best game of the year," said Pedrie of Mangino who entered the series with a 4-9-1 mark and a 4.17 goals against average. "It certainly was his best series as a whole. He was the difference tonight for sure."

After yielding only 3.89 goals a game in its' first 18 games, BG is giving up 6.17 goals per contest during The Streak. And with the

Johnson dismissed from men's basketball team

by Jamie Joss
assistant sports editor

BG men's basketball player Billy Johnson had his number retired, but not in the manner most athletes would like to see it done.

A sparkplug off the bench for the past three-and-a-half years, Johnson was dismissed from the basketball team Friday afternoon.

In regarding Johnson Billy's situation, we felt it was in the best interest for team morale," BG head coach Jim Larranaga said. "Any further discussion about it doesn't serve a purpose of helping anyone and I certainly don't want to hurt anyone."

Larranaga also said the matter was discussed with the team before the dismissal was made. Not only was this action a shock to many of the BG fans, but also a shock to Johnson himself.

"It was a real shock to me too, but I would just like to wish the team luck and keep going for the goal we intended to achieve, which is to win the MAC, MAC tourney and go to the NCAA's," Johnson said.

ence was one step closer, but also one more step out-of-reach this weekend.

In addition to losing Johnson for Saturday's Kent State matchup, BG was without the services of senior guard Clinton Venable who sat out the game due to a groin injury.

The Falcons gained a foot as they managed pull out a 66-60 victory at Kent State for the first time in the last seven years.

But the goal was one step further away as Eastern Michigan maintained its first-place throne with a 73-68 win against Toledo and moved to 8-0 in the conference. Johnson, in his senior season, played in 15 of 16 games this year and averaged 13.4 ppg and 4.5 rpg.

In his 88-game career with BG, Johnson accumulated a scoring average of 10 points per game and 3.45 rebounds per game.

Other BG players declined to comment on the situation, citing that it was a team matter.

Hurry-up style suits BG fine

by Brian Dugger
sports writer

The women's basketball team got just what it needed on Saturday. Lots of points. They needed the points not only to win the game, but also to gain a little confidence. They had been struggling on offense coming into the game, averaging only 68 points per game. The Falcons ran into a Kent State team that threw organized basketball rules to the wind with their run-n-gun style of basketball. In case you weren't there to see it, let's just say the Flashes attempt to speed up the pace of the game a little. Using a 94-foot pressure defense and a shoot when you touch it offense, KSU came into the game averaging 97.2 points per game. It finished the game averaging even more after its 98-point performance. But BG won the game. Go figure. "We take some things from Loyola-Marymount and some things from Kentucky," said Kent coach Bob Lindsey, explaining his team's style of play. "I thought Bowling Green did a good job in breaking our pressure. They still turned it over 36 times, but there have been teams who have turned the ball over against us 49 times," Lindsey said. That's not a misquote. The man said 49 times. "They have a lot of real good athletes that run the floor," said BG guard Wanda Lyle. "It was real fun playing them, but the real good thing was we won."

The 204 points scored in the game were the third most points scored in a Mid-American Conference game. Kent also participated in the other two highest scoring games, including a 107-102 Toledo victory that set the record earlier in the year. "We prepared for it (Kent's style of play). But you just can't settle into it until you get here," said BG coach Fran Voll. "You just don't see enough of it." At the beginning of the game, it looked like the Falcons weren't going to get a shot off as they turned the ball over four times in their first four possessions. However, even though the Flashes' defense forced a lot of turnovers, they also gave up a lot of easy baskets when the Falcons were able to break the press. Taking away the 36 turnovers, BG played an astonishing offensive game.

Both swim teams record huge wins

by Kevin Cummings
sports writer

The up and down, roller coaster-like season of the swimming teams continued this weekend, only this time both squads got off the ride at the hill's peak. Both the men and women topped arch-rival Miami, but in very contrasting styles. The women crushed the winless Redskins 166-129, in a meet that could have been even more one sided if not for the Falcons swimming the final two events for time only (no points). BG won 12 out of the 16 events, and led from beginning to end. "This is such a big meet, that when you meet alumni they don't ask how you did in the conference, they ask how you did against Miami," Trish Klasmeyer said. Josie McCulloch led the brown and orange with individual wins in the 100 breaststroke (1:06.26), 200 breaststroke (2:22.80), and the 400 individual medley (4:39.96). She was also part of the 200 medley relay team (McCulloch, Jody Reed, Jill Bowers, and Deidre Heer) that won the afternoons' first event in 1:49.57. Other double winners for the Falcons were Keely Yenglin in the 1000 freestyle (10:24.89) and 500 freestyle (5:06.38), and Reed in the 100 backstroke (59.02) and 200 backstroke (2:08.83). Yenglin was also involved in the 400 freestyle relay team's (Yenglin, Klasmeyer, Gina Jacobs, and Heer) victory in the time of 3:36.99. BG's other three victories were turned in by Klasmeyer in the 200 freestyle (1:55.88), Heer in the 100 freestyle (54.04), and Jenny Kent in the three meter diving (218.925). "Our divers are really coming around," diving coach Chuck O'Brien said. "We're keeping our heads where they belong, and in the process are turning a few heads." "We knew we had to break this meet wide open," head coach Brian Gordon said. "A close meet would have went their way." The BG men took a different route on their way to victory, as they won a nail-biter 123-117, although the meet's outcome may

Falcon tennis team impressive at MAC indoor tournament

by Sebastien Caruthers
sports writer

Most of Bowling Green's students stayed indoors this weekend because of bad weather conditions. The men's tennis team was no exception. But instead of watching cartoons, playing Nintendo, and sleeping the day away, the Falcons represented BG at the Mid-American Conference Indoor Championships. "The performance of the team this weekend was very encouraging," head coach Gene Orlando said. "We had a very solid showing with some great individual performances." Freshman Jim Snyder made it to the semifinals of the B-flight singles before losing to Ball State's Doug Campbell in a grueling three sets. Snyder won the first set 6-3, but Campbell came back to win 6-3, 6-4, in the last two sets. Todd Koehler, also a freshman, fought his way to the finals as BG's number two seed in the A-flight singles. On his way to the finals, Koehler defeated Western Michigan's Jim Gleason and Carl DeBeer as well as Ball State's Scott Campbell. However, Western Michigan's Greg Winchester put a halt to Koehler's winning streak by beating him 6-4, 6-3, in the finals. "I played pretty well, but I thought I could have played better," Koehler said. "Todd had a remarkable singles tournament," Orlando said. "He played very well and earned the right to play in the finals of the MAC Indoor Championships as a freshman." Koehler believed his teammates and Orlando played a significant role in his success at the tournament. "The coach made me believe in myself and made the team believe that we had a good showing at the tournament," Koehler said. "The support of the team helped everybody and really assisted me in my last two matches." Sophomore Justin Overholser and freshman Jeff Huffman made it to the B-flight singles quarterfinals. In doubles action, seniors Doug Dickinson and Mike Teets along with Koehler and Overholser, bowed out in the quarterfinals. "I am very pleased with how the team has made steady improvements since the fall," Orlando said. "However, these improvements must continue on a daily basis for us to be completely ready for our next match against a very good Michigan State team."

Nordmann, Friel named MAC's best

Bowling Green's sophomore forward Andrea Nordmann has been named Mid-American Conference player of the week. In BG's 106-98 victory over Kent on Saturday, she had a career high 21 points and also grabbed eight rebounds. Earlier in the week, she led the Falcons to a 69-64 upset victory over Toledo. She had 15 points and a career high 14 rebounds in the victory over the Rockets.

Junior Mary Beth Friel has been selected as MAC Gymnast of the Week. Friel won the all-around competition with a school record of 37.30 against Michigan last week. She won the balance beam (9.70) and the vault (9.30) and tied for second in the floor exercise (9.50). Her score on the balance beam was also a Falcon record and her floor exercise performance was a career best.

Gymnasts lose close call to UM

by Glen Lubbert
sports writer

Whenever a team loses, it can easily blame the judges for their loss.

But when the winning team starts complaining about the judges, that's when one knows something is wrong.

That's exactly what happened Friday at Eppler North Gymnasium when the Michigan defeated the women's gymnastics team, 182.25-181.95, dropping their record to 1-2.

Wolverines' head coach Beverly Fry expressed her dissatisfaction with the meet right away. "I thought it was a very inaccurately scored meet," Fry said.

"The judges didn't have a clue as to what was going on."

Fry thought the judges' scoring was off from the start. "In the vault, the scores were way below what they should have been," Fry said.

Interestingly, the Falcons took first, second, and fourth on the vault. The vault became the only event the Falcons could win, defeating the Wolverines 45.40-44.50.

Coach Simpson didn't agree with Fry's opinion of the judges performance.

"They were high in some events and low in other events," Simpson said. "They evened it out."

However, "two wrongs don't make a right," according to Fry.

"They did not use enough differentiation between skill levels. We had strong performances, but we didn't get the scores we deserved," Fry added.

Simpson defended the judges, stating their level ten ranking (highest possible). "We hire judges just once or twice to prevent any problems," Simpson said.

Following a loss in the vault, Michigan took control of the meet winning the event and closing their deficit to .25. However, the Wolverines' winning drive was hindered on the balance beam by junior Mary Beth Friel.

Friel won the event with a score of 9.7 and was followed by junior teammate Julie Zickes who placed second with a score of 9.55. However, it was Friel's score that dominated the event setting a new school record and giving her the best MAC performance of the season.

"I was basically ecstatic," Friel said. "After the vault, I was a little unsure of how I was going to do."

Friel won the vault with a score of 9.3 and placed eighth on the uneven bars with a score of 8.80.

"I wasn't looking for high scores that late in the meet," Friel said. "I knew my score would be at least a 9.5, but I didn't expect a 9.7."

Friel, whose performance on the balance beam eclipsed the 1987 record of 9.60 set by Kim Trost, was modest about her accomplishment.

"The scores don't matter to me," she said. "I just like to have a clean routine. It's the best I've ever done in my gymnastics career and I don't think that I'll ever be able to do it again."

Simpson was very happy with Friel's success.

"She had a field day," Simpson said. "Julie Zickes and Kathy Altonen also had a great day. It showed we could compete with such a well coached and talented team."

The Falcons trailed UM by only .20 entering the meet's final event, the floor exercise. However even with strong fan support, BG could not pull out a win in the event.

In the all around competition, Friel placed first with a score of 37.30. Her score set another school record which broke her last season mark by .50.

Simpson also felt the strong fan support was a factor in the meet. "The fans helped both ways," Simpson said. "Michigan had a lot of its own fans their too."

In fact, the gymnasium was packed with fans who filled the bleachers and lined the walls.

"It made for a really exciting meet," Simpson said.

The Wolverines' fans may have helped them with their win, but Friel thought UM may have been surprised by the Falcons performances.

"I think they came in with a big ego and were a little taken back by us," Friel said. "They weren't expecting what kind of gymnasts we were and they may have lost a little of their concentration."

"They may have realized that they had to work a little to beat us because we might have been in contention. They could have done better if they had their heads in the right spot."

Fry, who wasn't happy with the way the meet was run, said the Falcons had a strong team.

"Bowling Green did a nice job," Fry said. "They've got a decent program. I'm not cutting against them, but there was awful officiating."

Simpson hopes this meet will help iron out some problems and lay the groundwork for next week's MAC meet.

never have been in doubt after the diving duo of Jeff Morgan (236.85) and Mike Hunt (220.95) finished first and third respectively in the three meter diving event to pretty much cement the win with only two events to go. Morgan (242.25) and Hunt (219.45) also finished one-two in the one meter diving.

"Our divers kept their poise, even when the going got tough," O'Brien said.

"In a meet like this you have to lay it on the line," Gordon said. "We were fortunate to get the sweep."

Kevin Latta was a double winner for the Falcons as he recorded victories in both the 1000 freestyle (9:50.16) and 500 freestyle (4:42.95), and Brian Kaminski won the 200 individual medley, as he set a new school record (1:55.42), while eclipsing his own old mark by 00:00.09 seconds.

Other BG wins were turned in by Adam Burton in the 200 freestyle (1:47.07), Steve Haugen in the 200 butterfly (1:55.03), Chris Lewter in the 200 backstroke (2:00.52), and the 400 medley relay team consisting of Rob Schaefer, Haugen, Kaminski, and Burton as they covered the 16 lengths of the pool in 3:33.31.

The Falcons recorded nine victories in the 13 event meet, including three second place finishes.

"This is the guys reward for all their hard work," Gordon said. "If you stick together as a team, you get these rewards."

"This was just a great meet," Miami men's head coach Pete Lindsay said. "Both teams had some good swims. When they (BG) saw they could make this a meet they stepped right up and did it." The men are currently 4-5 overall and 2-2 in the Mid-American Conference, while the women are 7-3 overall and 2-1 in league action.

PLACEMENT SCHEDULE

BOWLING GREEN STATE UNIVERSITY UNIVERSITY PLACEMENT SERVICES
Campus Recruitment Calendar #7

For The Weeks of:
February 11 & February 18, 1991

Scheduling On-Campus Interview Appointments

The first day of sign-ups for interviews during the period of February 11 through February 22, 1991 will be held in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom of the University Union on Wednesday, January 30. For registrants with an Advanced Job Hunters Interview Card sign-ups begin at 3:00 pm; for those with a First Choice Interview Card sign-ups begin at 4:00 pm. All registrants must have a First Choice Interview Card or Advanced Job Hunter Card to participate in the first day of sign-ups. After the first day, students and Alumni may sign-up for interviews from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the University Placement Services, 360 Student Services Building. A Data Sheet MUST be submitted for each interview scheduled at the time of sign-up.

Cancellation of Interview Appointments: Cancellation of an interview must be reported in person to the University Placement Services no later than 5 p.m. one week (7 full days) before the interview day. Complete a cancellation card in the Sign-Up Room of the Placement Office. Cancellations after this time will be considered a no-show. Cancellations will NOT be accepted by telephone. You are encouraged to carefully consider employers before signing up for interviews.

No Show Policy: Failure to appear for a scheduled interview or violation of the cancellation policy will result in immediate suspension of your sign-up privileges for the next recruiting period. If you did not honor your scheduled interview, you are required to write a letter of apology to the employer for missing the interview, bring the letter with an addressed, stamped envelope, and meet with a Placement Counselor before scheduling any additional interviews. Any student who "no-shows" twice will be denied interviewing privileges for the remainder of the academic year.

Additional Placement Services: There are important services available to you at the University Placement Services. Please note that not all organizations and companies regularly recruit on college campuses. The list below generally reflects the high demand areas in the world of work. Don't become discouraged if your career field is not requested. To assist you in conducting an assertive job search, the University Placement Services provides career and placement counseling, credential services, job search workshops, professional development seminars, career fairs and an alumni Falcon Career Connection. The excellent Center for Career Resources, located in Room 300, Student Services Building, offers you career and employer information and current job vacancies in ALL career fields. Placement Counselors directly refer registered students to employers in their desired career fields. Ensure your access to these services by registering with the University Placement Services in your final year at Bowling Green State University.

Spotlight Presentations: Spotlight presentations offer valuable information about career paths, detailed position responsibilities and organizational philosophy. All students scheduling interviews are strongly encouraged to attend appropriate Spotlights. Spotlight presentations are usually held at the University Placement Services office at 6 p.m. or 7:00 p.m. To enter the Student Services Building in the evening, you must use the second floor, patio entrance. Professional dress for Spotlight presentations is recommended. Please consult the calendar for appropriate dates, times and locations.

Notice on Citizenship Requirements: An asterisk () following an organizational name denotes specific requirements regarding work status in the United States. Please review these requirements carefully. Only those organizations with an asterisk () will interview candidates with a student visa. Students who do not meet the work status requirements are encouraged to sign-up on the waiting list.

Comedians bring laughs to campus

by Thomas W. Kelsey
staff writer

With individual aspirations of becoming the next Jay Leno or Bill Cosby, 17 University students competed for the comedy crown and gave a receptive audience an escape from the troubles of the day.

David Lockard, senior theater major, nabbed top honors with reflections on childhood playthings such as the Big Wheel and Betty Crocker ovens.

The Fifth Annual Certs Mints' U.S. Comedy Competition in cooperation with the University Activities Organization began with Master of Ceremonies Randy Calbert, winner of the 1989 national contest. His monologue ranged from such topics as the 2 Live Crew obscenity trial to what goes on behind the bedroom door.

For many of the contestants, the everyday trials and tribulations of being a college student, including problems with personal relationships, coaxed howls of laughter from an understanding audience.

Judging the competition were three University students and one national representative from the Certs company. The judges rated each contestant based on five categories including originality of material, stage presence, humor content, crowd response and flow.

Rick Rettig, a junior communications major, said his aspirations of becoming a comedian came early on.

"I started cutting up as early as kindergarten," he said. "I was the kid in school who always got hit up side the head to get me to shut up."

Joanne McDonald, a senior graphics design major and the only comedienne in the contest, said women can sometimes be funnier than men "because they have a license to talk about certain things men can't touch."

Lockard will go on to regional competition and if successful there, will vie for chuckles at Daytona Beach, Fla. during Spring Break.

The national judge will be Jerry Seinfeld, stand-up comic and star of his own comedy show "Seinfeld."

Crook robs Custar Bank

CUSTAR — The Custar State Bank of this small town 10 miles southwest of Bowling Green was robbed Monday morning by an unidentified white male.

When the robber entered the bank wearing a ski mask, he ordered the customers to sit down and the employees were told to move away from the counter.

Seven people, including employees, were in the bank when the robbery occurred.

The suspect then took money from each teller's station and placed it in a grocery bag, according to a police report.

After the money was collected, the robber moved all the employees into the bank vault and shut the door.

The suspect has been described as between 25-30 years old, having an average build and a thin brown mustache.

The suspect appeared to be unarmed, the report stated.

Anyone who has information on this robbery should contact the Wood County Sheriff's Department (354-9001), the FBI (243-6122), or Wood County Crime Stoppers (352-0077).

Early sex education needed, report says

by Greg Watson
staff writer

A survey of University freshmen sexual behavior by a University professor reveals sexual education is needed in elementary and high school, according to a report published in December's Ohio Journal of Science.

According to the results obtained from a 1988 questionnaire, 67 percent of freshmen have had sex and most do not inquire about their partner's sexual background.

And despite the threat of AIDS, 40 percent of the students rarely or never use a condom, according to Assistant Professor of Medical Technology Judy Adams said.

In fall 1988 Adams sent a questionnaire pertaining to the past sexual activities of 1,450 incoming freshmen and transfer students.

Students just out of high school were surveyed so Adams could get the sexual activity, knowledge and beliefs of young people "before college has a chance to change them."

Adams said the survey proved more sex education is needed in elementary and high schools.

Part of the problem is that schools are reluctant to offer sex education classes because of public pressure, plus churches have yet to seriously address the situations, she said.

"We have to have parents, schools and churches to work as a united front to fight AIDS," Adams said. "[We need] the united front to grasp the AIDS situation."

"While there are good educational programs, they are not hitting where they need to hit. The younger population view themselves as immortal. We have to tell them they are not immortal."

Adams said the outcome of the survey basically fell within the norm of national surveys.

When the students were asked their age when they first had intercourse, 50 percent answered they had had sex by their 17th birthday, Adams said. One-third of the students said they have never had sex, she added.

"When somebody is having sex with a person, they are having sex with all of the people that person has had sex with," Adams said. "[It is important] to find a person's background."

Of the students surveyed, 17 percent said they are monogamous or abstain from sex and 45 percent had three or more sexual partners in their life, Adams said.

She added that 65 percent of the students said they are more selective about their partners with the growth of AIDS cases.

"Most of the individuals felt they modified their sexual behavior with the advent of AIDS," Adams said.

Also, the survey reported 3 percent of the students surveyed had sex with partners of the same sex, she said.

While larger universities on the West and East coasts have done similar surveys, Adams said this was the first to survey freshmen and the first done in the "conservative Midwest."

Adams said the number of AIDS cases has leveled out recently, but the number of cases in the heterosexual population will probably grow in the next five years.

Young people are especially at risk, because they are more experimental, are not as aware of risks, and are not as conservative as older people, she added.

Bush assures U.S. victory in broadcast

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush confidently assured Americans Tuesday night that the war against Iraq will be won and the recession at home will end in short order. "We stand at a defining hour," the President said in his State of the Union address.

"For two centuries, we've done the hard work of freedom. And tonight, we lead the world in facing down a threat to decency and humanity," Bush said in a nationally broadcast address to a joint session of Congress.

It was the first wartime State of the Union address since the dark days of Vietnam. Extraordinary security precautions enshrouded the Capitol, a bow to threats of terrorism.

The President won a long-standing ovation when he praised U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf as "truly America's finest" and again when he predicted "we will prevail" over Saddam Hussein. "As Americans, we know there are times when we must step forward and accept our responsibility to lead the world away from the dark chaos of dictators, toward the brighter promise of a better day," Bush said.

The President delivered a terse assessment of the war to date, "I'm pleased to report that we are on course. Iraq's capacity to sustain war is being destroyed. "Time will not be Saddam's salvation."

Shortly before the President spoke, the State Department issued a joint U.S.-Soviet statement that said a cease-fire would be possible if Iraq made "an unequivocal commitment" to withdraw all its troops from Kuwait and took "concrete steps" in that direction. It was the first indication the White House might be willing to accept less than immediate, total withdrawal of Saddam's troops.

With Americans' attention focused on the almost half-million troops risking their lives in the Persian Gulf, Bush devoted the DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — One of Iraq's "human shields" — captured allied pilots — was killed in a Baghdad air raid, the Iraqis said Tuesday. Other Desert Storm fliers struck anew across Iraq, and reportedly stopped an Iraqi armored convoy dead in its tracks.

The Iraqis countered with an unverified report that their forces knifed 12 miles into the Saudi desert and killed "large numbers" of enemy troops before withdrawing.

Refugees fleeing to Jordan told of non-stop bombardment, "fire everywhere" and civilian casualties in Iraq. "It is really hell," one woman said.

The U.S. command still seemed puzzled by the getaway flights of Iraqi warplanes to Iran. But an American general warned the Iraqis that if they tried to return to their home bases, "we'll get them."

The Iraqis, who claim to hold more than 20 downed pilots, said Jan. 21 they were dispersing the prisoners to potential target sites in an effort to ward off allied air attacks.

On Monday, Iraqi broadcasts said an unspecified number of POWs had been wounded in air raids. On Tuesday, the official Iraqi News Agency said one was dead.

"One of the raids hit one of the departments of the Ministry of Industry, killing one of the captured foreign pilots, who had been

Bush calls for united effort

Like most State of the Union addresses President George Bush's speech Tuesday was a chance to play up American strengths, promise to hurdle obstacles and frolic in national pride.

A year ago Bush gave his report to the nation at a time when America was celebrating the end of the Cold War and trying to digest the U.S. invasion of Panama.

Now, our forces are at war in the Persian Gulf and the ominous clouds of economic hardship are drizzling down on the United States.

Economic difficulties were not necessarily on the horizon a year ago, but it seemed America had the time and room to sharpen the nation's economic problems.

Bush took the challenge before him and like a motivating coach at halftime, he offered words of inspiration and issued a mission to his listeners.

"Almost 50 years ago we began a long struggle against aggressive totalitarianism. Now, we face another defining hour for America and the world."

Tuesday's address to the nation may be noted by historians as Bush's shining moment. The end result in the Persian Gulf will play a role as will the success or failure of Bush's domestic agenda.

Like John F. Kennedy did almost three decades ago Bush challenged Americans to take on "something larger than ourselves." He reiterated his "thousand points of life" theme and said true success takes hard work and cooperation.

He touched on a variety of domestic issues with goals that more wishful thinking than probable. His speech aimed to boost morale on the homefront which it did, however, we must be realistic in our expectations.

Our education system continues on a progressive track, but innovative plans can do only so much.

Teachers must be paid the money they deserve. How can we become the leaders in math and science when the military attracts the brightest minds?

Of course, money spent on defense can save or take lives to our seeming advantage, but America's toughest battles are being fought within our borders.

City crime, drug abuse, a crumbling banking system and the domination of Congress by special-interest dollars sap our strength and limit our potential.

Perhaps the greatest limit on this nation are those who take advantage of its resources and enjoy many freedoms, but don't participate in this democracy.

The president is right that we, "we the people" need to work together and give of ourselves to achieve greatness.

Bush said, "Those who say America's best days are behind her are looking the wrong way."

We agree the best days may be ahead, but only if all the people, including our representatives, work together, for each other and accept the strife that may be the foundation for our finest hour.

Student considers censorship of ideas unconstitutional

Editor The News:
In a recent editorial in The News (1-24-91) appeared the following statement — "The freedom of speech and of the press allows our country to stand as a democracy ... a muzzled press is the first indication of democracy's failure within our society." While I support this assertion, I do not feel that the blame lies entirely with the military.

I have heard and read the sentiments of people who oppose anti-war demonstrators plenty in the last weeks. Things like protesters are unpatriotic, they should support the president, they should support the troops. Anti-war demonstrators are told to be quiet and sit down, the President knows what he is doing. I would sincerely ask those who make such statements to wake up.

Ask yourselves something — "Is George Bush a saint or a politician?" He is a man and a politician. He can do wrong, and there are people out there who believe he is doing wrong. Should they ignore the dictates of their consciences and not stand up for what they believe in? If the government does something wrong, is it not the people's responsibility — not to mention right — to see that it is fixed?

Isn't the rights of the Kuwaiti people one of the reasons given for U.S. action in the region? What about the rights of our own citizens to ensure that the government has not over-stepped its bounds? Have these rights been forgotten in our haste to war? I say that those who are trying to tell me how to think and what to say are unpatriotic, undemocratic and unconstitutional. As for military censorship, should we be surprised when part of the public is trying to dictate the mouths, minds and consciences of the rest?

Professor urges reflection on war before actions

Editor The News:
A Sic Sic sign on the front of Prout Hall caught my attention. It said "Go U.S. — kick butt." I was revolted by that sign, for war is not a football game played between nations.

Seven students to whom I taught chemistry at a small Midwestern college not very far from here were killed in Vietnam. When that war began most who attended that little school had never heard of Vietnam, and some of those students cheered Lyndon Johnson on just like Sic Sic is cheering "Our Boys" on now. In just a year or two "Good Old Uncle Sam" had decided he needed a draft, and some of those doing the cheering ended up in body bags. Others amongst them spent their undergraduate days in a series of never ending protests — the culmination of which was four dead students here in Ohio — at our sister school Kent State.

Before you cheer the war on too loudly, find the names of a few of those listed on the Vietnam Memorial in Washington. Reflect, for just a minute, on the similarity of the human beings whose names are represented on that War Memorial to you.

Some years from now will there be a similar memorial on still another corner in our Nation's capital? And will some of your names be on it?

War is no football game.

Balkan history, a precursor to civil war

Nationalistic countries in 'powderkeg' region remain tense

It is a long and painfully-known fact in history that when trouble starts in Europe, it usually manages to ignite in the Balkans first. World War I erupted out of the "Balkan powderkeg," and just last year Yugoslavia was among the first Eastern European countries to remove itself from Soviet influence and toss the Communists out of power. Now it appears that Yugoslavia's problems have moved into a new level of tension.

The Balkan region is the peninsula in southeastern Europe that contains Greece, Yugoslavia, Albania and Bulgaria. It has traditionally been a place of great tension, due to the high amount of individual ethnic groups, all with strong nationalist fervor. There are Greeks, Serbs, Bosnians, Herzegovinians, Albanians, Montenegrins, Slovenes, Croats, and many other groups. All of these groups want their own independent nation states.

At various points in history, all the Balkan nations were under foreign dominance. The southern territories were part of the Ottoman Empire, while the northern territories were part of the Austria-Hungarian Empire.

All of the dominated territories under the Austrians and Turks had exceptionally strong nationalistic fervor, and this aided in beginning World War I. When Austrian Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the throne, toured Sarajevo with his wife, he was shot by a Serbian student linked to a Serbian nationalist movement. Austria-Hungary demanded retribution of then-independent Serbia, and presented a list of demands that were essentially impossible to accept.

The Serbians could not accept it, and war was begun. It eventually spread to all of Europe, and tens of millions died.

In the aftermath of World War I, the peacemakers at Versailles decided to deal with the Balkan problem. Woodrow Wilson made a great deal about "self-determination of peoples," but that was not the result. Instead of giving all these individual groups their own countries drawn along most effective, and at the end of the war, he assumed control of Yugoslavia. Though they were communist, they did not follow the party line from Moscow. Yugoslavia followed its own path.

Now 73 years after its creation, Yugoslavia is once again wracked with tension. Each of the individual republics that make up the country are at odds with one another. Many of the republics resent the control that Serbia has over the country; many of the top military and civilian officials are Serbs. Another factor is that in freely-held elections, the Communists were returned to power in Serbia; this has caused much fear and mistrust in the northern republics.

There are also inequalities economically; Slovenia (in the north) is the economic powerhouse of Yugoslavia, and they do not wish to carry along the other republics, many of which are faltering economically. Consequently, Slovenia will probably be the first republic to declare independence, followed by the other northern republics. The southern republics will probably remain under Serbian Communist control. This will make the chances for civil war very favorable. It appears to be only a question of when.

But the key question is, will anyone notice? If international attention is not focused on the Gulf, it is on the Baltic States, also artificial creations from the legacy of Versailles. But Yugoslavia should be watched; a civil war in the Balkan region could spread to other Central European countries, many of which are still unstable.

Conflicts in the Balkans have a tendency of pulling in other countries. Hopefully, in this time of international tension, that won't happen. This is a crucial time in world history; civil war in the Balkans and the Baltic states, combined with a Gulf War and an volatile Soviet Union could disrupt the world order for countless years to come.

ethnic lines, a single country combined them all in one artificial creation.

Officially called (originally) "The Kingdom of Serbs, Croats, and Slovenes," Yugoslavia was dominated by the Serbs, who were part of the Allies during World War I. The Serbian monarch was given the throne of Yugoslavia.

During World War II, Yugoslavia was occupied by the Germans. Resistance to the Germans was offered by the communist partisans under Josip Broz Tito, and the Serb nationalist chetniks under Draja Mikhhalovich (who later was executed under Tito's orders). Tito's partisans were the
