Bush discloses spending plan for fiscal year

by Jon Poflik
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush unveiled a $3.25 trillion budget for fiscal year 1993 that includes a $1.37 trillion deficit, the most in history.

"We have a federal government that is not large enough," Bush said in a prime-time address Tuesday night, as he tried to revive sagging support for his economic plan.

"We have a federal government that is too big," he said. "We have a federal government that needs to be renewed."

Bush called for cuts in domestic programs, including education, health and welfare, along with a tax cut to stimulate the economy.

Bush’s budget proposal, which he said was "the first step in a comprehensive package," would include:

- A $1.37 trillion deficit, the most in history.
- A tax cut of at least 1 trillion.
- A reduction in domestic spending of $1.37 trillion.
- A reduction in military spending of $1 trillion.
- A reduction in other government programs of $1 trillion.

Bush said the deficit is necessary to deal with the country’s growing debt and to stimulate the economy.

"We have a choice," he said. "We can either continue to spend and borrow beyond our means or we can plan and save for the future."

Bush said the deficit is "the only way we can get our economy moving again."

"I know there are some who say this doesn’t make sense," he said. "But I believe it does."
Meijer could hurt BG

In the midst of the Great Recession, economic theories often get pushed to the side. The economic crisis facing this area and the nation now faces City Council, whose primary mission is to support BG businesses.

Councilman, while hungry eating the jobs and added tax revenue Meijer would create. We have seen the area from industry to commercial use and thereby destroying the city's master plan to attract big business to Bowling Green.

Their concern is justified. In 1989, the city promoted the coveted area as an economic zone - set aside in order to encourage a new economic activity that would further diversify business under which communities can thrive. To help attract these corporations, the city spent $3 million to build water and sewer lines, what made the area more attractive to industry. These companies have already created many new jobs through the area, the accessibility to I-75 and I-680, and the accessibility to water treatment plant.

In 1989, there is no doubt that the thought of a GIM or General Electric plant was a dream come true, for our surrounding businesses and for our citizens, but there is still a doubt that this area has to offer.

Not all Christians against condoms

The BG News opinion editor John Bernard says, "We can have sex...but with some considerations."

He argues that the idea of Meijer creating an industry zone would have been thrown away. You can choose to reject Meijer and all the potential it could do for the community is only a matter of time. The recession has wrought a new level of realism, and many who covet the jobs and tax income that Meijer would create have laid down their demand may not be among the best dreams.

It's a tempting offer, but it's just not prudent.

But by accepting Meijer, the city would effectively destroy the function of any other industry-related discussion. And just because Meijer would mean the millions of dollars of tax revenue is not enough to make an industry zone would have been thrown away. You can choose to reject Meijer and all the potential it could do for the community is only a matter of time. The recession has wrought a new level of realism, and many who covet the jobs and tax income that Meijer would create have laid down their demand may not be among the best dreams.

Adults are responsible

CONDOMS, CONDOMS EVERYWHERE

Hey, everybody - guess what. We're in college! Oh my gosh, doesn't that mean we're adults? You'll notice I didn't use the word "responsible" but nonetheless, we are all adults. We are able to distinguish right from wrong and base our judgments accordingly.

As adults, we are given the ability to make choices on our own. It means none have a tough time accepting this. As and adults, one of the choices we are confronted with is whether to have sex and whether to purchase... (Oh my goodness, is he going to say it?) Whether to purchase a condom!

Yes, he is!... A condom!

I'm saying that with condoms being more available, more people are likely to use them. All it comes down to is if you don't think it's right then don't have sex. And if you don't want to purchase a condom, don't. But don't take away other people's ability to decide things for themselves.

Talks focus on white supremacy

by Michael Zawacki
The BG News

The Black Student Union, along with the African-American Graduate Student Association, is sponsoring its second annual African Holocast Conference Saturday at 11 a.m. in Rockefeller Hall.

The theme is "Time Out... For The Mother: The End Of White Supremacy."

Besides the keynote speaker, Frances Gress-Westing, Ember X. Malvery and Eliaane Egrang are scheduled to speak on the effects of white supremacy on the African-American race.

Westing, author of The Iris Papers, will focus on the psycho-logical effects of white supremacy on the human race as a whole. An excerpt from Westing's book is scheduled to be read Saturday in Rockefeller Hall.

"The word "narcotics" some-times turns people away," according to Rick (last name withheld on request), the founder of the group. "The group is for people suffering from any drug abuse."

Rick said NA was created because Alcoholics Anonymous was not inclusive enough to include alcoholics as well as other drugs.

"NA begins in the 1980s and most (of the original members) were pill pushers," Rick said. "Today, it's for any kind of mood-altering drug, even alcohol."

"I see alcohol as just another drug," he added.

Rick also said that it is difficult at times for undergraduates to realize that they have a substance abuse problem.

"Undoubtedly live in a giant plagger and usually they don't see the problems until they get out of school," he said. "It's then that your addiction causes something to go wrong with your life, like losing your job or your home." Rick said that NA has members having problems with marijuana and cigarettes, as well as the group at the University of Maryland.

"I was just a really big pot smoker," he said. "Theamount I was smoking was not socially acceptable."

Rick went to a few NA meetings as an undergraduate at UM but did not really enjoy the program. It took some time before he realized he was an alcoholic.

His return to NA was not prompted by an incident with the law or a financial mess but rather by depression and paranoia he experienced from his use of marijuana.

Panelists voice concerns about energy efficiency

By Terry Turek
The BG News

Six panelists representing various concerns touted energy efficiency and conservation at the final energy hearing in Mansfield Tuesday.

The Ohio Public Utilities Commission (PUCO) arranged nine energy hearings across the state to receive public testimony on the Ohio Energy Strategy (OES), to be completed by the agency in July 1993.

PUCO Director Elliot Wetzel of Ohio Department of Commerce said citizens and businesses are responsible for much of the programming last semester.

Wetzel said burning natural gas is less costly to the environment and society because pollutant emissions are lower when coal is burned.

Dave Berger of Buckeye Power and Electric advocated energy conservation in homes by using off-peak hot water storage which is controlled by the utility.

The Public Utilities Commission of Ohio Wednesday began drafting the Ohio Energy Strategy, a plan to light the way to a clean energy future.

The OES may include incentives for homeowners to educate consumers on energy conservation and to provide in-home automation opportunities such as consumer-controlled electric bill levels.

The 90-minute roundtable was co-sponsored by the University Activities Organization, the Film Studies Department and the Popular Culture Department.

Wednesday in Cleveland to vote shares, 97 percent of the Ameritrust meeting voted to merge and 96 percent at the Society meeting did so, Society spokesperson Paul Jacke said.

Approval of shareholders was needed to complete the merger. The two companies were expected to remain separate entities with the new holding company.

Under terms of the agreement, each outstanding share of Ameritrust common stock will be converted into 0.75 of a share of Society stock. The outstanding Ameritrust preferred stock will be converted into a newly created class of Society preferred stock.

The deal has an approximate value of $2.2 billion, based upon stock values at the time of the merger agreement.

Muskegon, IND — The Ball State women's basketball team dug out of a hole Saturday and locked up the in-state's most recognizable name in a contest that's largely ignored by Americans in the offensive. Their target isn't another scoring record, but the National Hockey League championship. In usually harsh criticisms of one of hockey's biggest names, Lemieux called the NHL "a ga-ga league" that will never attract a network TV contract as long as it condones sexual Officiating.

"It's just a disgrace for this game, and as long as we're going to have people like [former NHL star], the game's not going to go anywhere," Lemieux said. "Sometimes they wonder why we can't get a national TV contract. It's because of guys like that." Just a disgrace.

Lemieux unleashed one of his most memorable games in playoff history when he scored the third period of the Penguin's 6-4 loss Sunday in Washington to be played virtual-ly without penalty, despite ob-voious infractions by both teams. The officiating as a coach.

"It was a good hockey game, no use getting upset," he said. "The ad-voicing is to the marginal player. That's the way this garage league is run.

Men lose handle in three overtimes

by Matt Schoder

MUNCIE, Ind. — It took Ball State three overtimes to figure out what had happened.

After Bowling Green's Tom Hall sent the game to overtime with a coast-to-coast two-handed slam, these two teams put 5300 screaming fans on an extended roller coaster ride.

"It was a great college basketball game," BG head coach Jim Larranaga. "The fans left here happy and we are the guys who are suffering. Our players put their hearts and souls into winning this one. The only tough part is that we have to swallow the loss."

But Ball wasn't the only hero for the Falcons in a losing cause.

Matt Otto's rainbow three-pointer at the first and second overtime busters kept BG's hopes alive.

"Hall and Otto made great play after great play," BG head coach Dick Hunsaker. "They came in confident and played that way. I give them credit for a great effort."

In the third extra frame, the Falcons had a chance to win it on Matt Otto's rainbow three-pointer, but Ball State took control when Ball's Timmy Jones made a free throw with 0.9 seconds remaining.

But Ball State answered with two Keith Stalling foul shots to extend the lead at 88-87. The Falcons had a chance to win it with 14.7 seconds left, but Ball's Matt Otto made a three-pointer and BG fell to 2-4.

"We wanted to keep the ball out of Ball State's attention," Hunsaker said. "If they hit a three-pointer, they win. After the dunk, we just figured we'd keep playing." Once the overtime started, the Falcons decided to leave the ball on the court and pass off. Each overtime was a struggle for control of the game and the lead."The emotion was high out there. They showed how to win in overtime," Hunsaker said. "We wanted to keep the ball out of Ball State's attention."

Ball State had a 9-2 lead with 47.4 seconds remaining, but BG fell to 2-4.

"The emotion was high out there," Hunsaker said. "Each overtime was a struggle for control of the game and the lead."
