Olscamp may resign sooner

by Julie Tagliaferro assistant managing editor

University President Paul Olscamp has indicated he may step down from his position before his contract ex-pires in June 1996.

The University's Board of Trustees has begun the process of choosing a successor after Olscamp expressed in Olscamp terest in resigning his position sooner, providing the University is in a financially stable condition.

Olscamp, who has been president since 1982, has been out of town all week and unavailable for comment.

However, Lester Barber, executive assistant to the president, said Olscamp has informally mentioned on several occasions about stepping down at the close of the 1994-95 academic year.

"We are not letting any secret out," Barber said. "There have been many informal discussions about this for some time." Barber said he could not comment on the reasons why Olscamp was choosing to resign his duties sooner than scheduled.

Although he could not speak on the specifics for a search at the University, Barber said most college searches for a president take time so the trustees can meet and decide carefully what type of criteria they want in the next president.

John Mahaney, chairman of the Board of Trustees, said all authorities on presidential searches recommend a long period of preparation before selecting a successor.

The trustees will meet next Friday for a regularly scheduled meeting. However, Barber said it is not known yet if they will formally discuss the search or Olscamp's interest in leaving.

"I imagine it will be a topic of conversation between individuals, but whether the trustees will take any action, I don't know," he said.

Faculty divided over collective bargaining issue

by Leah Barnum News staff writer

University President Paul Olscamp recently released his official position on collective bargaining, evoking mixed reactions among faculty members

The position, outlined in a letter sent to all faculty members, reflects Olscamp's opposition to collective bargaining and cites various reasons for his opposition.

"In my opinion, faculty collective bargaining is a step backward attitudinally, not a sign of further efforts to lessen confrontation, act collegially, and improve communication," Olscamp wrote.

Olscamp said attention would be diverted from students and the "leveling force" of collective bargaining would hinder faculty excellence

Other major arguments Olscamp made were that the adoption of collective bargaining is not a guarantee that things will improve and that collective bargaining may result in less faculty representation, because the leaders of the Faculty Association would be the primary participants.

However, some faculty members disagreed with the president's position.

"I think, basically, it reflects what he wants to see as the outcome," said David Reed, professor of economics.

However, Reed said, the paper did not influence his position on collective bargaining.

The modeling agency, which represents such supermodels as Cindy Crawford and Naomi Campbell, is working with Boardwalk Event management of Daytona Beach, Fla., to find men and women on campus who have international modeling potential.

"This tour is new for Daytona," Cathy Gould for Elite Chicago said. "This tour is a way for us to find new faces.

The Elite agencies house separate divisions to accommodate every modeling need; New Faces, for testing and development; Model Management, for the working models; and the prestigious Elite Division.

The Harter Manning Woo Talent Representatives also handle Elite Models exclusively for commercial, television and theater, Gould said.

The main challenge facing the defense secretary, Perry said, is the decline of defense spending at a time of world instability.

"Historically, we have not managed well such budget declines," Perry said. "This time we must get it right or we will pay the cost later, either in blood or treasure or both."

Month dedicated to opening minds ebruary has long been known as the shortest month of the year, but in recent years it has also been dedicated to Romance and Responsibility, African-American History, and women.

These topics are often overlooked, thus society does need to focus more education on them. Lumping three topics that pertain to almost every college population into the shortest month of the year does not show the intelligence these groups wish to pass on through education.

Not only is the shortest span of time during the year a poor choice to focus on minorities, the time is utilized poorly.

The education that is offered is not nearly extensive enough. Romance and Responsibility usually takes the forefront, as Valentine's Day is the perfect setting for such education, but each group is equally important.

The majority of the education offered is basically comprised of a faded bulletin board in a corner of the dorm, and a few signs hanging around campus. More must be done in order to convey the message that these topics are relevant in today's society.

Even though the University does offer specific courses in such areas, many students do not have the opportunity to take them, let alone during second semester when these topics would be heavily focused on.

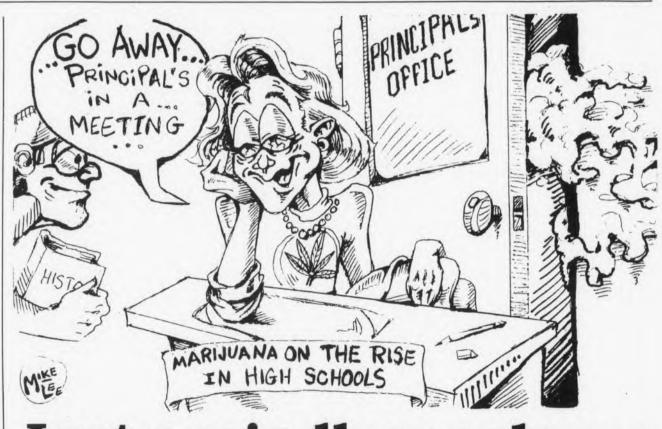

These topics can be discussed in almost any classroom setting. Business class professors can relate them to business, English professors can have students incorporate them into writings, and psychology professors can relate them to the context that they are currently studying.

It is only through examining history that we can learn about our present. What better time to do so than this month? The way to go about doing so is to attend some of the programming set up during the month, even if it is just one event. The potential knowledge to be gained is invaluable.

But rather than focus on these topics for only a month, every day must be dedicated to opening our minds and our hearts to new ideas and ways of thinking. After all, isn't that what college is all about?

Media scrutinized by all

Is media judge, jury and executioner of society's current events?

It's impossible to escape the information age. Most families have more than one television and several radios. The movie business is making more money than ever before. Computers receive information about world events, sports and even local news. How is this barrage of information affecting the poor, defenseless minds of innocent on-lookers and listeners?

Actually, it is very difficult to change established opinion. Twothirds of voters choose their candidates before the presidential campaign and, despite all the media hoopla, stick to their convictions in the voting booth. Most Michael Jackson fans will remain loyal. Media is notorious for doing something called reinforcement and crystallization. It's not as technical as you think. Media reinforces, or strengthens, existing attitudes or opinions. Crystallization refers to the sharpening of existing attitudes, making you more positive that your opinion is the correct one.

By presenting half of the truth, the media is encouraging the audience to make a simple judgement, or reinforce an already existing attitude.

There is good media, unbiased media and totally unnecessary media. The incredible power of influence which media holds should be geared toward uplifting the community and spreading truth. Select media coverage does not put unity and appreciation for other human beings into the spotlight. Attitudes about persons of other races, religions or lifestyles are created in the home, the media seems to feed off this "common bond of ignorance." Whether it is glorifying the Gulf War or covering the riot at the premiere of the movie "New Jack City," media will always take a stand and drag unwary consumers with them.

Andrea Wood is a guest columnist for The BG News

The right to free speech contains a weighty responsibility.

The media is entrusted to use this right to perform a check on society by asking questions, digging for clues and providing answers.

At times, the answers to the questions are not pleasing. Many people put a lot of stock and trust in entertainers, sports figures and politicians; some of these are even emulated with the respect given to heroes.

Being placed into the spotlight also puts well-known faces under the microscope of scrutiny

"Being judged by the media" is a phrase often heard by those who believe their situation has been exploited. In actuality, this excuse is tiredly used as a protective sheild for a guilty conscience which needs to be hidden.

The media is there to provide the truth about the myriad of occuring situations which take place in everyday life. Be it alleged child molestation, an arranged beating, an illegal diversion of funds or adultery, the truth will be made known.

If people of power, be it political or financial, are involved with wrongdoings then it is the job of the media to report the truth and the right of the general public to know the truth. This is the service which the media provides and is protected under the first amendment.

It is true our justice system is based on "innocent until proven guilty," but the media can get closer to the truth of a situation faster than any law in the land.

The media does not condemn; instead, it reports the facts. Michael Zawacki is the editorial editor of The BG News.

Wednesday night, the Univer-sity was host to the Chief Executive Officer of the American Association of University Professors, Ernie Benjamin, who spoke to a group of faculty members, and various represenatives of AAUP from surrounding universities regarding the importance of collective bargaining.

"Collective bargaining is a way that helps faculty members get things done themselves," Benjamin said. The main focus of Benjamin's speech was the urgency to get unionization between the faculty members in order to receive the things they deserve.

Benjamin introduced his arguments by emphasizing the kind of lifestyles that the faculty members have made a committment to, and the idea that collective bargaining will aim to fulfill those objectives and strengthen the asp irations of the faculty.

"Collective bargaining is trying to get the best terms and conditions for the members of the faculty at this University," Benjamin said. "[Collective bargaining] is a response to long term trends and changes in productivity concerning the facul-

Benjamin's outline included three major points in the aspect of collective bargaining. These points emphasized the ideas and issues of compensation and economic security, personnel decisions and adversary and collegiality. In these areas, Benjamin introduced such points as receiving the tenure plan over senority. the importance of faculty response in the the process of decision making and the involvement needed by the faculty in regards to the campus and the community.

Providing a secure relation within the faculty in association with the administration was a point proposed by Benjamin.

"Administration has a ten-dency to look at the faculty members as the easiest thing to cut in the budget aspect," Ben-jamin said. "The AAUP would provide the security of their policies."

These securities would include the idea of communication between the administration and the faculty and the major conception to equal relations between the two bodies.

Benjamin points out there are some minor faults regarding collective bargaining, such as the fees and dues administered, as well as the possibility of adversary between the faculty members, but he sums up his report with the contrast of the many significant positive attributes regarding collective bargaining.

Those positive actions included the legal framework or the legal rights the faculty right now is missing.

Congressman oversteps use of public expression

by Rich Harris

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- Activists, constituents and others had advice Wednesday on how Rep. Martin Hoke could make amends for his remark about the size of a television producer's breasts.

Mostly it boiled down to: Zip your lip.

"I did see that he apologized and what not. I don't care. It's still uncalled for," said Maripat Blankenheim, a spokeswoman for Cleveland-based 9to5, the National Association of Working Women

"I have a 17-year-old son and I would be extremely embarrassed if he did something like that, let alone a public official who's representing an area of the state," she said.

The Washington Post reported Tuesday that Hoke commented on Conus Communications producer Lisa Dwyer's breasts during preparation for a taping of the lawmakers' reaction to the State of the Union speech last week

Eric Fingerhut, D-Ohio, and say-ing: "She has the biggest breasts."

Hoke said he learned about the videotape Monday afternoon and was "mortified." He said he immediately called Ms. Dwyer and apologized, then followed it up with a written apology.

The Plain Dealer, in an editorial Wednesday, said the freshman congressman "seems to be curiously oblivious to the line between private thought and public expression."

"Hoke does not seem to fathom that women who cross his line of sight are not merely body parts assembled for his viewing pleasure," the newspaper said.

Public reaction was less critical. 9to5, which usually is swamped with calls when sexism and harassment issues are raised, said the only calls Wednesday were from reporters.

Voters reacted with tolerance.

"I think it was a very inappropriate remark, but I don't think it should have any effect on how he does his job or how he's viewed unless he does more of it in the future," said Robert Schenk of suburban Fairview Park, who said he voted for Hoke.

"I think he and maybe others will be more aware, because of After eying Ms. Dwyer, Hoke, this publicity, that they shouldn't say things like that. They ought to think before they speak," said Cathy Moore of Cleveland.

Sidney Kraus, a Cleveland State University communications professor who studies televised political debates, said Hoke's apologies are good, as far as they go. But Kraus said more needs to be done.

"He could give himself 100 hours of community service, or something like that," Kraus said. "But the question is whether he can - just by doing something like that -- atone for it."

Fingerhut, who shook his head but said nothing when Hoke made the remark, also came in for a share of the criticism. Fingerhut has said he was uncomfortable with the entire exchange, calling it "clearly an inappropriate comment."

But Kraus suggested Fingerhut should have rebuked Hoke on the spot.

"I would have. Or I would have kept quiet but walked away," Kraus said. "You have to stand up to those kind of things.'

Hoke said Wednesday he'd be willing to talk to his critics.

"I'm receptive to learning more about sensitivity training from 9to5," he said. But he said he couldn't immediately commit to the training because "I don't know what the time demands would be."

Computer company offers early benefits

DAYTON, Ohio - At 56, Norm Reeder wasn't ready to retire.

The computer program ana-lyst thought he would be on the job at NCR Corp. - now called AT&T Global Information Solutions - for at least another six years. But when the com-puter manufacturer decided to streamline its operations, it ade him an offer he couldn't refuse.

Reeder was among 2,400 NCR workers who accepted the carly retirement offer that includes a lump-sum payment of $30,000, insurance benefits for varying periods, and other benefits

The package was offered to 5,500 workers age 50 and older with at least 10 years of service. The company employs 51,000 workers worldwide, including 27,000 in the United States. The offer was extended only to workers in the United States. Reeder, who worked for NCR for 15 years, said it was a tough decision. He wanted to stay with NCR, but feared being laid off if he refused the offer.

"I really didn't have any ill feelings to the company, but at the time I was hired I antici-pated being there until I was 62," he said.

Reeder said a deciding factor was NCR's agreement to ex-tend for 10 years its health and edical coverage for him and his wife, Betty, who has had a history of health problems.

The Reeders, who raised three daughters, live on a 14-acre farm north of Dayton, where they raise wheat and soybeans.

Reeder said his wife, a retired schoolteacher, was worried about the financial impact of his retirement. For my wife and I, this was pretty difficult decision, said Reeder. "But I felt I'd find something to do."

It didn't take him long. After retiring Dec. 31, Reeder landed a temporary job with a con-tractor that administers his former employer's payroll.

"But I have made some contacts with some other contracting firms and friends of mine. and they feel I can probably continue in this capacity with another firm," he said.

"A friend told me when one door closes, another opens." For Lowell Rust, a 40-year employee, the offer came at the perfect time.

"I was planning to retire at the end of January anyway," said Rust, 62, who managed things we can do now that we couldn't do before.

Rust said he and his wife had wanted to put an addition on the house and buy some property in Tennessee, but were not sure if they could afford to. The early retirement package will allow them to do that, he said.

Rust plans to spend his re-tirement helping build homes for the needy, volunteering at Kettering Medical Center and playing golf.

He has not ruled out another job. He said he has heard from several companies that want him to help them set up trade shows

Children found in drug raid Clinton may lift trade embargo

CHICAGO - Police on an early morning drug raid today found 19 children, the youngest six months old, living in a squalid, cockroach-infested apartment, sleeping on the floor and competing with dogs for food.

The children showed signs of -- some with cigarette abuse burns and whip marks, said police officer Linda Burns.

"I saw babies everywhere," Burns said. "The apartment was cold. The apartment was filthy. I'm talking feces, garbage, food on the floor. I don't even know how to describe it -- it was just filth."

Six adults - four mothers, a father and an uncle of the children -- were charged with contributing to the neglect of a child, a misdemeanor.

Sgt. Russell Mueller said police were investigating the possibility of child abuse, a more serious charge. There were no drug charges.

Police entered the twobedroom apartment in a crimeridden neighborhood on the city's West Side about 4 a.m., looking for drugs. They didn't find any, but found a squalid apartment furnished only with two mattresses. Lt. Fred Bosse said five children were sleeping on the cold floor when police arrived.

WASHINGTON - It is one of the quirks of history that it could fall to the president who came of age as a Vietnam war protester to undo a remnant of the war's legacy of distrust.

"This is an issue for the present day," President Clinton said Wednesday as he weighed recom. mendations to lift the U.S. trade embargo against Vietnam

Aides said the president was preparing to lift the 19-year-old ban, urged on by U.S. businesses and encouraged by Vietnam's cooperation in helping resolve questions about unaccounted-for American soldiers.

Politics

Dogged during the presidential campaign by questions about how he avoided the Vietnam draft, and shadowed in office by strained relations with the military, Clinton would like nothing better than to put the war behind him.

He rejected suggestions that his past would make the decision politically more difficult, saying, "We just have to do what's right." Yet because of who he is the decision could carry special risks.

One administration official. speaking only on condition of anonymity, expressed a fear that "this issue's going to eat us alive."

Such concerns persist although the president got some political cover when the Senate voted last week to support lifting the embargo.

Just as the nation has spent decades coming to grips with its role in Vietnam, so has it been a long, difficult journey for Clinton, who in 1969 wrote to thank a ROTC recruiter "for saving me from the draft" by giving him a deferment. Clinton sought understanding cases.

for those who had "come to find themselves still loving their country but loathing the militar-

Keenly aware that such a past placed him in a sensitive position on veterans' issues. Clinton came into office talking tough on Vietnam

He promised to make resolution of the POW-MIA issue "a national priority" by insisting on a full accounting of all those soldiers still listed as missing before normalizing relations with Vietnam.

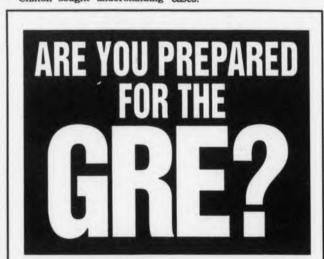

On Memorial Day, he con-fronted his detractors directly in a visit to the Vietnam War Memorial. Amid cheers and jeers, as some veterans turned their backs on him, Clinton declared: "Let us continue to disagree if we must about the war. But let us not let it divide us as a people any longer."

His pledge on that day to the families of soldiers who did not come home from Vietnam: "We will do all we can to give you not only the attention you have asked for, but the answers you deserve."

Clinton said his college-age protests against the war would not make his decision on the embargo more difficult because "there were so many distinguished veterans who think the embargo should be lifted and there are people on the other side who are not veterans."

It is true that veterans' groups and families of missing Americans are divided on whether the ban should stand. And some who oppose lifting the ban say Clinton's background should not be an issue.

"The real measure is a real, objective assessment of what the Vietnamese have and haven't done," said Ann Mills Griffiths of the National League of Families of American Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia. Her group believes the ban should be maintained until Vietnam offers more help in resolving POW-MIA

men's

by Mark Leonard DeChant sports editor

It will not go down as one of the most flashy wins in Falcon history, but BG will take it.

The depth of the women's basketball team finally took its toll on visiting Eastern Michigan Wednesday, as BG handed the Ea-Dastetball gles an 84-65 Mid-American

Conference defeat

BG once again spun its wheels in the conference race, however, as league-leading Toledo slipped by Central Michigan, 68-61, to remain undefeated (9-0) in the loop

The Falcons remain a half-game behind UT at 8-1 (14-3 overall). Eastern has played the first half of the league schedule without a win (0-9), and falls to 1-15 overall this season.

While the final score indicates yet another snoozer for the home team, head coach Paulette Stein and her young Eagles kept the contest caffeinated for the better part of 28 minutes.

The ball game was last tied at 18 with 10:52 left in the first period, and Eastern kept their halftime deficit respectable at 38-29.

The Eagles continued to hang on early in the second half. Senior Jean Akins, who came into the game with a 17 points-pergame average, tossed in a three-pointer in EMU's first offensive series.

She later added two free throws and a jumper, and when teammate Seena Waters pumped in a jumper with 12:01 left in the game, Eastern trailed the defending MAC champions by a 50-44 margin.

Ferraro twins

excited about her team's early effort.

"I don't think we've played a better half against Bowling Green in our history," Stein said.

History, in fact, may support Stein's statements. BG holds a 23-6 edge over the Eagles, and have come out winners in 23 of the last 24 meetings between the two clubs.

But hey, BG is the bestshooting team in the league.

"With Bowling Green's highpowered offense, a superior offensive team is going to hurt a team that is in a year of transistion," Stein said.

And hey, BG is perhaps the most unselfish MAC squad. "Once we started reversing the ball in the offense," BG head coach Jaci Clark said. "We got so many shots."

And don't forget that incredible Bowling Green bench.

With the score at 50-44, BG outscored EMU 34-21 the rest of the game. Of the 34 markers, 27 were scored by the BG reserves.

Forward J.J. Nuesmeyer led the charge, tallying 11 points in the five minutes following Eastern's run.

Nuesmeyer hit a jumper with 7:25 left that made it 69-50, and effectively snuffed out any thoughts Eastern had of winning its first MAC game.

Clark said Nuesmeyer's outburst was a credit to BG's passoriented offense.

"I think we finally pushed the ball, and J.J. was just the person to get the shots," Clark said. "When they collapsed, she found herself open and put it in."

Nuesmeyer finished with a career-high 14 points in 18 minutes. Lori Albers also scored 14, while Michelle Shade had 18 and Nicky Meilmann 10.

Albers added 5 rebounds, 5 steals and 4 assists in 21 minutes of action.

by Mike Kazimore sistant sports editor

In the battle of the best defensive team in the Mid-American Conference against one of the league's best offensive squads something had to give.

Actually, two things happened. First of all, the Falcons played their usual hard-nosed defense, but they also came up with a stellar offensive performance dur-ing their 84-74 dismantling of Eastern Michigan. It was the first time this season that BG has broken the 80 point barrier gainst a MAC team.

The victory, coupled with Akron's upset win over Miami, puts the Falcons (12-5 overall, 7-2 in the conference) back into a first place tie with the Redskins. Eastern, losing a chance to gain valuable ground on the leaders, slipped to 10-7 on the year and 5-4 in the league.

Although the Falcons currently find themselves perched a top the league standings BG head coach Jim Larranaga said that it's a bit tooo early to start celebrating.

"I don't think that being in first place at this point in the year is very significant," Larranaga said.

After picking apart EMU's defense for 48 first half points the Falcons offense found baskets a little harder to come by in the second stanza. In fact, during the opening 11 minutes after intermission BG was only able to score 13 points.

The BG News/Ross Weitzner Antonio Daniels attempts to outmanuever Eastern Michigan's James Reed during last night's game. Daniels led BG in passing with six assists.

Meanwhile, the Eagles, behind the strong inside performance of Kareem Carpenter (25 points, 15 rebounds), were able to cut the Falcons lead from 14 to six. EMU could have further cut into BG's lead if it could have knocked down some free throws. During this period. this span Eastern missed seven of nine attempts.

"Our free throw shooting was poor and that also hurt us," EMU head coach Ben Braun said. That's the worst we've shot free throws all year."

Despite it's poor showing from the charity stripe Eastern still found itself in the ball game when Brian Tolbert (16 points) knocked down a three-point bomb to cut BG's lead to four with just under five minutes to Cindy Mikolajewski, Julie Weisblatt, and Jennifer Schwartz were asked to immediately come in and step up their play at the collegiate level. And like the champions they are, that is just what they did.

The year's top recruit comes from about 10 miles up the road in Perrysburg. Cindy Mikolajewski played number one singles all four years at Perrysburg High School.

That's right, all four years. Mikolajewski was Northern Lakes League Player of the Year her junior year, leading her team to the conference champioship and a state doubles with super-sophomore Patty Bank.

Cindy had a tough time coming in. She found balancing classes, adapting to a new environment, and practicing tennis three hours a day to be quite difficult. But like the champion she is, Cindy managed to play very well in the spotlight of third singles. During the summer, Cindy was heavily involved in the United States Tennis Association tournaments. Last summer was busy for Mikolajewski -she worked, played five times a week, and competed in tournaments.

Chris Ferraro learned of Taylor's decision Sunday, just before the team left for Europe to play its final four pre-Olympic games. Chris, who is still with the club, politely declined to comment.

"There's no doubt in my mind that he's a great player and he should be staying with us. Things just didn't work out," Peter said. "It's very unfortunate, but I'm just going to have to deal with it and live on for a month.

"I've never really played without him. I hope it doesn't change my game. I have to work things out by myself."

With Ted Drury and Peter Ciavaglia leaving pro teams to join the U.S. squad, someone had to go. Ian Moran was cut last week and Ferraro will depart after the four-day Rouen tournament. which starts Thursday when the United States meets Norway.

"Chris was dealt a bad blow in that he got mononucleosis in the middle of the tour," Taylor said. "That put him behind the 8-ball, at a competitive disadvantage to the other kids."

Despite missing three weeks in October, Chris Ferraro has 34 assists to go with eight goals. Peter shares the team assist lead (as does Todd Marchant) and also has 26 goals.

was one point behind. Each had 11 points during 1993 World Junior Championships. As freshmen at Maine last season, they helped the Black Bears win the NCAA Division I title; Chris was fourth in scoring with 51 points, Peter was fifth with 50.

And both forwards were drafted by the NHL's New York Rangers in 1992 - Peter in the first round, Chris in the fourth.

Chris made the trip to Rouen because Taylor wasn't sure about the status of Ciavaglia and Drury. Ciavaglia, who was playing in the Swedish elite league, arrived Wednesday and will play Thursday. Drury, who was with the NHL's Calgary Flames, joined the U.S. team Sunday and is just coming back from a knee injury; he's not expected to play until Saturday.

"It's a little bit awkward," said Drury, also a 1992 Olympian. "But Mr. Taylor said back in August that I was on the team.

"If I was coming out of nowhere, yeah, it would be a lot more difficult. But I think everyone knew I was coming back, so I don't really feel that awkward."

Peter said he doesn't begrudge Drury and Ciavaglia their spots on the team. He can't help but feel cheated that his brother won't be beside him in Lillehammer.

Last fall, Julie had plenty of fun and went undefeated in the process. Playing fifth singles, she did not lose one match -including the BGSU Invitationals.

Jennifer Schwartz, the third freshman phenom, is from Northbrook, Illinois, near Chicago. Jennifer is very quiet and is perfectly content with going unnoticed.

Puck plays a part in Falcon scoring woes

I walked into the hockey lockeroom after their 8-1 loss to Michigan State Saturday, in search of a few answers.

'Can't let it get vou down." Sean Pronger said. "All you can do is work a little bit harder, not force the shots. Otherwise, I try new tape jobs and curves on the stick and different lengths of sticks."

'We're going to find something," Brian Holzinger said. "It's a little bit frustrating and all you can do is bear down harder to keep getting chances."

"We're not fussy," head coach Jerry York said. "We'll take goals off shin guards, cross bars, whatever.'

I looked past the dazed and confused faces, but did not see who held the answer. Out of the corner of my eye, I saw a flash towards the door. I whirled and followed in a rush. I picked up my pace, snaking through the crowd hot on the trail of my quarry. I saw him duck into a vacant lockeroom and I caught the door before he could shut it and lock it.

Aha! I had cornered the culprit of BG's scoring problems. The puck

"All right, you got me. I'll answer your questions," the puck said nervously, wiping its brow.

I turned the recorder on and asked why it had so blatantly thrown the game in the Sparlosses to Illinois-Chicago, Michigan State and Notre Dame.

I went on to point out that before the winter break, BG had outscored opponents 73-49 and tallied a 9-5-2 record. Since the break, the Falcons have slumped to 11-11-2 overall, going 2-6-0 after the layoff. Scoring fell to a trickle, producing seven goals in the six losses and yielding 27 to the opposition.

Discounting the 13 goals scored in their two wins against Illinois-Chicago and Lake Superior, BG's scoring well had dried up. "The gig is up, puck, are you going to admit it?" The puck's brow had not gone dry, it shifted around nervously and looked at the floor. Finally the puck broke its silence. "I confess. I jumped over a few Falcon's sticks, wouldn't sit still for a clean shot, and I steered myself into Buzak's pads.'

"What about Brian Holzinger's attempt on a wide-open net in the third period?"

"I made sure that the pass never connected," it said. "Why?" I demanded.

"Because the media and coaches picked BG to finish sixth in the preseason polls. They were holding onto fourth place and got as high as third earlier on. Without my intervention, they would have peaked too soon. I had to ground them with a little reality.'

Last season, they made a late run to finish seventh and pulled off a first-round upset against Western Michigan. The year before that, the Falcons sunk to the depths of ninth place and missed the playoffs after putting together a midseason sweep of Michigan and a win and tie against Michigan State.

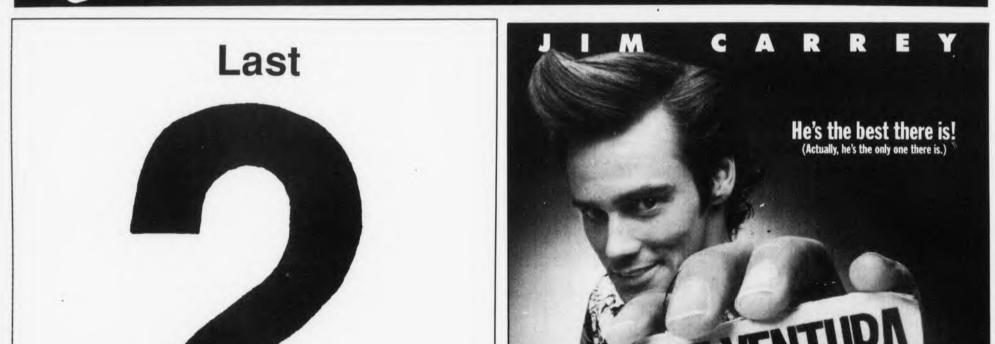

I can see the puck's reasoning, after all, I am the person talking to it, but it still acted a little overzealously.

With justice served, the Falcons have nothing to worry about when they shoot. The puck promises not to intefere anymore. Maybe it will even give them some favorable bounces

OSU grabs best of slim pickings

by Rusty Miller The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio - Ohio State coach John Cooper said it was a lack of negatives as much as a lot of positives that helped his program seal the deal with 20 players Wednesday on the first day for the signing of national letters of intent.

"We didn't have any controversies," Cooper said during an afternoon news conference. "There wasn't any, 'Is Cooper here? Is he leaving? Are they go-ing to renew his contract?' We didn't hear any of that this year or I haven't heard any of it. That wasn't an issue with many of the recruits this year."

Also aiding the cause was a 10-1-1 record last year that included a Big Ten co-championship and Cooper's first bowl win in his six years at Ohio State.

Cooper, who has two years left on his contract, said, "It was a smooth recruiting class for us. Everything went pretty much according to the way we thought it would.

With the Buckeyes losing five offensive and two defensive linemen, the immediate need was help up front. Cooper said he felt that was met with the signing of players such as 6-foot-6, 330-pound Winfield Garnett from Riverdale, Ill., 6-4, 330 Eric Gohlstin of Cleveland St. Ignatius, and Sandusky's 6-6, 320-pound Orlando Pace, who decided on Ohio State Wednesday morning.

Eleven of the 20 signees come from Ohio. With early returns showing a total of only three native Ohioans signing with Penn State, Michigan and Notre Dame, Cooper said that spoke volumes.

"It says we kept them at home," he said. "We were able to get the ones we went after. That's the way it should be every year." Still, several prominent players selected out-of-state schools, including the stars who finished 1-2 in the Mr. Football balloting. Both Curtis Enis, who rushed for a state record 2,764 yards this season at Union City Mississinawa Valley, and St. Ignatius defensive lineman Mike Buzin opted to play for Joe Paterno at Penn State.

After the top level of players, the pickings were slim, according to Cooper and Bowling Green coach Gary Blackney.

"We didn't feel like there were the numbers in the state as maybe in past years," Cooper said. "But I think the quality of some of these athletes is as good as it's been in some time."

Blackney, who welcomed 17 players into the Falcon fold, agreed.

"I don't think this was an extremely good year in Ohio outside of players in the Ohio State category," Blackney said. "There wasn't an abundance at the next level.
