Lab helpful to students

Audiovisual aids make learning languages easier

by Matt Freier News contributing reporter

There are some things about a foreign language that simply can't be learned from a book.

Luckily, for University students there is an alternative to everyday classroom activity. The foreign language lab, located at 303 University Hall, serves as a useful tool for students taking foreign language classes, according to Erik Graubart, director of the lab. Since 1960, the lab has been in the same location, assisting students taking any of the romance languages as well as Asian, Russian and German, he said.

ments from their foreign language teacher that require the use of the language lab. The lab has audio cassette players and headphones for students to use to better understand the language, Graubart said.

The lab operates on the principle of learning through audio and visual aids. Instructors assign homework which requires the student to listen to an audio tape of exercises which correspond to their written homework or lab manual, Graubart

"At the beginning of the semester I get together with the teachers and decide what books we will use. Everything is coordinated with the department and the staff," he

about once a week and are able to select the audio tape for the chapter they are working on, listen to it and then go back and do the assignment.

This gives them the ability to practice so they will be more comfortable in the classroom environment, he said.

"In class, students don't really get the practice they need. Here they have the privacy to listen and then go back and review," Graubart.

The lab also has videos of foreign films available for students to familiarize themselves with that particular culture and language, he said.

Professors do not normally assign the films for students to watch, however Graubert said students are welcome to watch them "to better understand the language."

We try and simulate the real life situation, he said.

Bosnians rail as death toll rises to 68

by Tony Smith The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina -- Three U.S. cargo planes evacuated victims of the massacre at the city's central market Sunday, while residents grieved and railed at a world they say should be stopping the fighting rather than mopping up after it.

The death toll from Saturday's shelling of the market rose to 68, the deadliest attack in the 22-month siege of the capital by Bosnian Serbs.

U.N. experts were still analyzing the shell's trajectory in an effort to pin down blame for the attack. But there was no doubt among Sarajevans that the Serbs were responsible and what should be done about it.

"Where were you yesterday?" a young soldier of Bosnia's Muslim-led government shouted to a NATO jet howling overhead. "And what are you going to do today?"

Standing at the morgue, he supported his girlfriend, who softly cried "Papa, Papa," for her dead father.

The explosion of a single mortar shell at the market, which also wounded more than 200 people, spurred more of the debate that has paralyzed the international community for months.

Belgium's foreign minister urged air strikes on Serb troops ringing Sarajevo, and France demanded that NATO set a deadline for the Serbs to lift their siege or face military action from the 16-member alliance.

But the European Union's mediator, Lord Owen, said intervention would do nothing to end a war that has killed more than 200,000 Muslims, Serbs and Croats, Defense Secretary William Perry backed away from the threat of U.S. air strikes, calling instead for a negotiated settle-

Speaking to European defense officials in Munich, Germany, Perry asked: "If air strikes are Act One of a new melodrama, what is Act Two, Act Three and the conclusion?'

At a soccer field below Kosevo Hospital, long since turned into a cemetery, eight gravediggers cut more holes into the earth. Blood still mixed with rainwater in pockmarks left by the 20mm mortar shell at the marbouquets of red, orange, yellow and pink flowers.

The government declared a day of mourning, and Sarajevo's streets were deserted.

But white U.N. armored personnel carriers marked with red crosses were at work, loading wounded at Kosevo Hospital for a ride across Sarajevo to the air-

Democrats, Republicans upset about package

WASHINGTON - Liberal Democrats and lobbvists aimed fire at President Clinton on Sunday for cuts he will seek in his 1995 budget, as administration officials defended the $1.5 trillion blueprint on the eve of its release

But to meet the tight strictures imposed by last August's package - and pay for increases Clinton wants for scores of other programs - the budget will propose eliminating 115 small programs, and holding nearly 600 others at or below the amounts they were allowed for this year.

The proposed cuts would total $25 billion, said one administration official who spoke Sunday on condition of anonymity.

Evaluation in need of reform

Seventeen thousand students make their way in and out of classrooms across campus every se-

For some University students, the only opportunity they ever have to administer feedback to the myriad professors they will encounter in their academic careers is through the teacher evaluation.

Many University students take the evaluation very seriously and answer the questions honestly in the hope of conveying their views on the class back to their professor.

In light of the article, "Students stand up for rights,"(The News, Friday, Feb. 4, 1994), The BG News believes the University should have a standardized teacher evaluation form and procedure for the student body to be administered to students during the last week of classes.

The student body should have a consistant medium in which they can evaluate their professors at the end of the semester, under no pressure and ample time to complete the standardized form.

By standardizing the form, students and faculty are ensured a fair, honest and complete evaluation of a University professor's performance.

The standardized form should cover areas such as: how was the professor's performance in the classroom; were they helpful and available for questions outside the classroom; was the way in which the professor graded fair; and additional comments the student would like to make for the teacher.

University students are not strangers to the fact the cost for a quality education in this state is on the rise. Students also want to get what they pay for in terms of a quality education taught by professionals who never stop learning.

Constructive criticism is an invaluable way for anyone to begin to understand their faults and weaknesses, realize their strong points and begin the process of improvement.

There are many quality faculty members who have set the standard for excellence in academics and teaching at the University. We believe a stan-dardized teacher evaluation will ensure that tradition of excellence in the future.

Four who are controversial

Howard Stern. Rush Limbaugh. Louis Farrakhan. Pat Robertson. What do these people all have in common? They have been labeled controversial people by one segment of society or another. At the same time, when they speak, their thoughts are aligned with people who share and hold their beliefs.

In a society like the United States, which consist of a great variety of people, everyone needs to be more open minded. One must also realize that many people have different sets of values and beliefs, and one shouldn't emit words like bigot or extremist just because they don't share the same views as you.

Howard Stern: many like his humor and many are just dying to get him off the air. About 90 percent of everything Howard Stern talks about is related to sex. Howard Stern's new book 'Private Parts" contains things I can't even write in this column.

For Howard Stern, being controversial is probably something which comes natural to him. Stern talks about and gives his opinion on every subject matter from homosexual sex, lesbians, his sex life, other people's sex life, and so on. He also rants and raves about people he likes and dislikes. His views on Rodney King: "They didn't beat this idiot enough. He should be beaten every time he reaches for his car keys." There isn't a subject matter Howard Stern won't touch, and by the looks of it, he enjoys the heat he receives as much as he enjoys what he says.

Rush Limbaugh, is the author of two number one best selling To Be" and "See, I Told You So". On top of that, Rush Limbaugh has a three-hour radio talk show and a TV talk show. Limbaugh has a plethora of ways to showcase his controversial style. Here is another man who is controversial for being himself. On a liberal college campus all you have to do is mention his name and people start uttering vulgarities.

What does Rush Limbaugh say to be controversial? His opinion on feminism: "Feminism was established so that unattractive women could have easier access to the mainstream of society." His view on environmentalism: 'The Earth's ecosystem is not fragile, and humans are not capable of destroying it." These and other statements are what made Rush Limbaugh what he is today.

The most astounding thing is the vast number of people who tune into Limbaugh just to hear what he has to say. With so many mediums that channel Rush Limbaugh into mainstream society, I don't think he is going to go away any time soon. My guess is Rush Limbaugh would say to those who wish him to go the way of Morton Downey Jr., "Deal with it Amer-no longer be persecuted by the"-Radical Left". Those who he considers among the radical left are the American Civil Liberties Union, the National Organization for Women and the National Education Association. He is also one of the biggest advocates of family values, and by the looks of Clinton's State of the Union address, Robertson's rhetoric is rubbing off.

Louis Farrakhan is probably the most controversial, and has been in the news quite a bit lately. Farrakhan, the Nation of Islam leader, is known for his anti-semitic and racist remarks against whites. Even African-American leaders, like Jesse Jackson and Rep. Kweisi Mfume-Chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus, have distanced themslyes from Farrakhan and his remarks.

Many people may not agree with what they say, but you have to respect their right to say what they do. There is something called the First Amendment, which protects peoples rights to free speech. I may not agree with much of what Howard Stern and Louis Farrakhan say, but I'm not going to resort to calling them names. This is something many people do, wether they are con-servative, liberal, democrat, republican, whatever. Probably those who are most guilty are those who call themselves politi-cally correct. The thought police set the biggest double standards, yet they want you to conform to their rules. It's total hypocrisy.

The rule of thumb should be is this: if you disagree with what someone says, then debate their point of view or ideology. Don't resort to calling them a bigot or pen to disagree.

here at Bowling Green State University, the Ku Klux Klan has been given the stamp of "history," in their minds, meaning "it's over." To most, the KKK is a hate group from the past, or at worst, it still exists but focuses its energies entirely in the South. Yet, this belief could not be farther from the truth. The KKK is alive and well in the northern United States as well -- in fact, right here in the state of Ohio.

While most of us were at home enjoying our break between semesters by spending time with our families or getting reac quainted with old friends, the Klan was demonstrating in Columbus -- our very own state capital! Protected by First Amendment rights to free speech and asssemblage, the Klan spouted what it called "white pride," while expressing their detestment of all persons who did not fit into White Anglo-Saxon

To the majority of the students Protestant (WASP) mold. Some may feel that we must tolerate these actions because of the aforementioned constitutional rights. However, what the Klan has been doing lately has nothing to do with constitutional rights.

In the little town of Coshocton, Ohio, the Klan has been operating in a way which could be supported only by a constitutional amendment allowing for the right of a person to harass and intimidate anyone they please. One family in particular has been receiving the brunt of their hatred, ignorance and intolerable behavior. Thanks to the joint effort between the Coalition for Transcultural Enhancement here at the University and the women's rights organization at Wayne State University, a young African-American woman from this family will be coming to the University to share with the students her own (as well as her family's experiences with the Klan) on Feb. 11 at 7:30 in 110 Business Administration. On Tuesday, Feb. 15 in Coshocton, a counterdemonstration to a planned KKK march will be held.

We know the event on the 15th is in conflict with class sessions and we challenge the University to come to the frontlines in the battle against racism by providing students with excused absences, if and only if they attend both events. On the part of the University this would be a powerful symolic gesture which says "Enough is enough!" as well as a shining example for other insitutions of higher learning around the state.

We recognize it would be difficult to know if a student actually attended both of these events and thus should be excused form classes on the 15th. To alleviate this problem, the undersigned groups will have representatives at each site in order to provide University students with certification of their attendance. Finally, we understand class attendance is very important in the learning process, but it is equally important to provide the opportunity for life experiences which can be valuable to one's personal growth and development.

We are aware that studentathletes are excused from class to represent our school in sporting events. Certainly, students also could be excused for important field trips, such as battling white supremacy. What better way could there be for the University to heighten its students' sensitivity to racial issues than to give its support, from the top down, for these two events.

Collective bargaining at BGSU

Should University faculty vote for a faculty union this week?

Collective bargaining would bring a wealth of academic benefits

Ron Stoner is a professor of physics and astronomy. He is the president of the BGSU-FA/AAUP.

Bowling Green faculty will have their first opportunity in 15 years to chose representation through collective bargaining this week. If the decision is no, it will be many years before we have the same opportunity again. Only those of us who have been struggling for nearly two years to give BGSU faculty the collective bargaining option can fully appreciate why this opportunity can come only once in 15 years.

What do faculty have to gain from collective bargaining? There is a long list: higher salaries, better benefits, more influence over how the University allocates its resources, more protection from arbitrary changes in economic well-being, greater influence in Columbus, more secure terms of employment, access to an effective grievance system and much more. Over the longer term, collective bargaining empowers faculty to make the University a better academic institution for ourselves, our students, our alumni and the taxpayers

What do we faculty have to lose? A few, perhaps well-meaning colleagues have tried to minimize the probable gains and to frighten us by claiming potential losses. They list items such as collegeality, independence, motication for excellence, and institutional prestige. But faculty collective bargaining actually works to enhance all items on that list. When opponents point to instances where BGSU has it better in some way than some institution that has already organized, they always point to characteristics of those other institutions that were even worse before collective bargaining -- they are merely telling us why our colleagues at those institutions chose collective bargaining in the first place.

The faculty at 60 percent of all four-year institutions of higher education are represented in collective bargaining, including most of the public universities in Ohio and most of those in the MAC. Contrary to the propaganda, it is just as easy in Ohio and elsewhere for faculty to get rid of collective bargaining as it is to choose it, but we know of no instance where that has happened. On the other hand, the faculty of both of the two most prestigeous research universities in Florida voted to retain collective bargaining in a referendum ordered by the Florida legislature. The reason is surely obvious: once faculty have what collective bargaining brings, they want to keep it.

In late spring of 1992, more than 70 percent of BGSU faculty indicated by secret mail ballot that they wanted to explore collective bargaining. By November 1992, 60 percent of the same group had signed cards asking to be represented in collective bargaining by BGSU-FA/AAUP. A very large number of BGSU faculty have backed up those mandates by paying voluntary dues. Since then, there have been big faculty raises, and barrages of anti-collective bargaining argumentation. There has also been a change in the very language some central administrators use in talking to faculty: Expressions of "concern," "gratitude," and "admiration," for what we do have replaced the advisory that we should not "complain." Even the threat of collective bargaining has beneficial effects. Perhaps, as the AAI says, "the administration has gotten the message," but how long will that message be remembered if we wait yeat another 15 years for the faculty to regain some influence so that we can also take greater responsibility for moving BGSU forward?

Whatever the result of the election, we can be proud of the way the BGSU faculty have conducted themselves over the past many months of the collective bargaining campaign. I have never worked with a more courageous, sincere, capable, altruistic, collegial and effective group of faculty than the officers and Steering Committee of the BGSU-FA. I want to express sincere appreciation to all BGSU-FA members, and also to the many other faculty and staff who have supported us in so many way over the past many months.

Collective bargaining would be a bad bargain for University faculty

Milton Hakel is a professor of psychology and the coordinator for the Advocates for Academic Independence. The following editorial is written on his own behalf and not the AAI's.

BGSU-Faculty Association has had a year and a half to persuade the faculty they should give up shard governance and adopt collective bargaining. I am not persuaded that the gains they seed could be secured through collective bargaining. In any case, the costs which would be incurred along that path could never be recovered. Collective bargaining would be a bad bargain for the entire University community. It would be a bad bargain for the entire University community. It would be a bad bargain for the entire University community. gain even for it proponents. Here's why:

There is no reason to believe that unionization would get the University a better deal from the governor and the legislature. This would be true even if every faculty member in Ohio be-

Faculty salaries are determined by many factors, only one of which is unionization. The most sophisticated research show when geographic and regional factors are controlled, there is no salary advantage to unionization. R.G. Kesselring wrote in the Journal of Labor Research (1991), "Faculty at unionized institutions on average receive less pay then faculty at non-unionized

Most union contracts provide for across the board percentage pay raises. Existing salary differentials tend to be maintained. Unionization rewards seniority, not performance.

Whatever economic gains a local union might make will have to be paid for locally, through higher tuition and fees, or a smaller staff, or poorer services for students and faculty, or lower overall compensation, or all of these means. Remember, tuition and fees have been capped by the Ohio Legislature, so this is unlikely to be a way to pay for any "gains."

Collective bargaining necessarily creates an adversarial relationship, with department chairs and administrators defined as "management" and faculty members as "labor."

Unionization now would be virtually irreversible, as maintenance workers at Miami University are discovering. Ohio's collective bargaining makes it decidedly more difficulty to decertify a union than to create one.

A faculty union's real interest is economic, in helping itself. Everyone else, students, staff and the rest of the University community takes second place.

This past year has shown that the shared governance processes established in the University's Academic Charter works well. Raises have been received, the summer salary rates have been restored to the rates paid prior to the budget crisis which was provoked by Ohio's weak economy, and the Faculty Senate has taken action to strengthen its oversight of the budgeting

Bowling Green State University became an exemplary insitution through the dedicated work of thousands of people who believed in themselves and had no fear of the future. We too should advance the educational ideals and practices of this university, and I believe the best way to do so is through continued faculty

I oppose collective bargaining for our faculty because it would concentrate so much attention on material resources while undermining the sense of personal dignity, efficacy, and competence that our work as faculty members should build.

In closing, I urge every eligible faculty member to vote on Wednesday or Thursday. The University community deserves a 100 percent turnout.

USG does not approve of collective bargaining at University

The following was authored by Jason T. Jackson, Undergraduate Student Government president, and edited by Chad C. Luckner, Undergraduate Student Government vice president.

As reported in the Feb. 2 article of The News, the USG approved legislation opposing faculty unionization by vote of 25-2-3. The major issues for opposing this issue are outlined in Senate Bill 9394-13.

It is the opinion of the USG that faculty unions, all unions for that matter, have three major functions. Those functions are to negotiate the best possible wages, working conditions and benefits for the working body at hand. Where we find issue in this situation is that the quality of "product" is never discussed or negotiated. That product is us -- the students of Bowling Green. Now, supporters of the union will have you believe that actually the students will benefit from the formation of a union. We have been told by the "unionites" that a collective bargaining group will create a satisfied faculty by negotiating higher salaries, smaller student to instructor ratios and better benefits. But what they often leave out of this flowery discussion is the information surrounding where the money for all these satisfied faculty will originate. You guessed it -- the students! The state subsidy isn't going to go up anytime soon, so you and I will carry the burden of these negotiations. We are not insinuating that the faculty is receiving a fair shake now, but unionization only separates a force which could work together. Students and faculty have many similar concerns as it pertains to the quality of life and education at Bowling Green State University, but in collective bargaining there are always victories and concessions. The major concession in collective bargaining will be the voice and wallets of BGSU students.

All we have to do is look to the University of Cincinnati, 181 miles down Interstate 75, to see that unionization in its worst form is detrimental to students and the university as a whole. There are two issues here. One, a strike is possible every time a contract is up for renegotiation. If a strike ever happens at the University you can just turn the pages of time and look to UC for the horrible truth. Students were out of classes at the beginning of the semester for a week and a half. Some students lost financial aid. Some reports said students crossing the picket line were verbally attacked by disgruntled "unionites," fighting for the cause. With a union in place, the possibility for this scenario exists. Two, the voice of the students decreases incredibly. By law any and all things that effect the faculty's wages, working conditions and benfits must be negotiated by the bargaining group and the administration. As you can see, there are no students, involved in that process. The best demonstration of the decrease of student participation is structural and financial decision making is evident in statements by President Olscamp. He has stated that the committee system at the University will change drastically, if not terminated. For those of you who do not know, the committee system is the major way USG can voice the opinion and concerns of the students. If a union is established at BG, committees like the Faculty Senate Budget Committee, which produces proposals on all major University budgets, will be terminated. Two students will be left without a committee and students will be left without a voice. This will happen time and time again as the union pinpoints those areas that will only be discussed at the bargaining table.

In closing, it must be said the USG does not oppose unions across the board. However, we do oppose them on university campuses. We are in an institution of higher education, and we beleve the administration and faculty can work out their difference on that level. The adviserial relationship that will be set-up between the parties at hand will cause tension not satisfaction, and it will leave the University students on the outside looking in. And we all know how cold it is out

Gore recognizes graduate

Alumna who walked for environment receives letter

by John Gibney News contributing writer

A recent graduate of the University has been honored by Vice President Al Gore for her contribution to helping the environment.

Maria King, a December 1993 graduate, demonstrated her concern for the environment last fall by walking to campus from her Perrysburg home. This was a 15- to 20-mile hike that took three-and-onehalf to four hours.

King, a non-traditional student who graduated with a degree in ethnic studies, made the trip about four times throughout the semester.

The BG News did a story of King's efforts at that time. The writer of the article, Shari Veleba, forwarded the piece directly to Gore.

"It impressed me of her care for the environment," said Veleba, also a December 1993 graduate.

Veleba sent the article and a letter to Gore's office shortly after the story appeared in the newspaper.

Gore responded in December with a letter thanking King for her efforts and encouraging her to continue to help the environment.

"I was surprised he responded," King said.

Thinking it was junk mail, she almost threw the letter away. "I'm so happy I didn't tear it up.

King said she thought about walking to class as she became more aware of the environment. She saw it as a challenging opportunity to do something different.

While King admitted her journeys to class were a bit extreme, she encouraged everyone to help the environment by walking whenever possible.

"It's not only good for the environment -- it's good for our health," she said.

There are many benefits to walking, according to Jeanne Wright, director of health edu-

"Walking gives a person more energy -- it helps the cardiovascular system, and helps burn fat," Wright said.

King's concern for the environment has now pushed her to a new challenge.

In researching cancer, King said she has come to believe that many of society's illnesses, including cancer, can be attributed to societal environmental problems.

King said she intends to learn as much as she can about the disease. Her goal is to be-

Thank you for sending me information about your efforts in the field of environmental protection. I am always encouraged to learn about innovations and initiatives for the environment, and I appreciate being informed in this way.

As you know, I have a special interest in environmental protection, and I am working closely with the President to meet the challenges facing our nation in this area in a responsible manner. We need and value the views, suggestions, and proposals of the American people. In fact, the very best approaches come from citizens and businesses with a genuine desire to make a positive difference for the environment.

Please be assured that your efforts will be given careful attention. I hope that you will continue to be active on behalf of the environment. Thank you again for letting me hear from

In the above letter, Vice President Al Gore thanked University alumna Maria King for her efforts to help the environment. Grad student recruiting sees growing success

by Lisa Gallagher News contributing reporter

The University's program aimed at recruiting graduate students may be one of the oldest in the country, but with a new director it continues to be one of the more well known and successful programs

Project Search, which began in 1972, has enabled students in the United States and in other countries to receive money to attend graduate school.

Lisa Chavers, the new director of Project Search, said there is a variety of students who are involved in the program.

"Project Search is a multicultural program designed to increase the number of African-American, Latino-, Hispanic- and Native-American students in the [University's] Graduate College," Chavers said.

"I organized the alumn network to expand the program, and I did most of my recruitment through them. They've been a great help to the program," Champion said.

When the program started, there were 25 students involved Now, there are currently 150 funded students, she said.

"From the beginning, [the program] has been extremely successful. We have graduated 1,300 students with their master's degree and 100 with their doctorate," Champion said.

"We see [graduate students] through the whole process and monitor their progress. We plan social events so they can get acquainted with other students in the program. We're like a family."

Lisa Chavers, Project Search director

To be eligible for Project Search, students must have an overall and major GPA of 3.0 for the master's program, and a 3.2 in the doctorate program.

"Anyone with the grades can apply for an assistantship, even University students," Chavers

But there is more to Project Search besides recruiting African-, Latin-, and Native-American students to the Uni-

"We not only recruit, but we deal with the retention, funding and lives of the graduate students. We don't want them to have to drop out," Chavers said.

"We see them through the whole process and monitor their progress. We plan social events so they can get acquainted with other students in the program. We're like a family," she added.

If anyone is interested in more information about Project Search they can stop by the graduate college in 120 McFall Center.

Clinton considers possible military action

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- President Clinton conferred with his top national security advisers Sunday to chart a course for dealing with escalating violence in Bosnia amid intensifying calls from Congress

A top administration official said Western military action was clearly "on the table" in the aftermath of a mortar attack Saturday in a market in the Bosnian capital of Sarajevo that left 68 dead and hundreds wounded.

And Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole asserted that a decision by Clinton to order air strikes would have "strong bipartisan support" in Con-

But Clinton -- along with other allied leaders -g appeared still to be groping for an effective strategy for ending the bloodshed in the former

A day after he sent a U.S. medical team and three transport planes to Sarajevo to help evacuate the wounded, Clinton summoned top national security officials to the White House to discuss the deteriorating situation.

He was leaving later in the day for Houston on a

2 1/2-day trip that will combine political fund raising with promoting his health-care program. Aides said the president did not consider the situation to be enough of a crisis to warrant delaying the trip.

An administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Clinton asked for an update on the situation and was also eager for details on what the medical team had learned in Sarajevo.

Clinton -- who late Saturday issued a statement condemning the "cowardly act" and calling for engaging allies on next steps -- was not likely to take any steps without consulting with NATO partners, the official said.

In Munich, Germany, Defense Secretary William Perry said that the United States would not invoke air strikes unilaterally, noting the difficulty imposed by the presence of 28,000 lightly armed U.N. peacekeepers in Bosnia.

Perry denounced the attack on civilians in Sarajevo as an "unforgivable incident" but suggested air strikes would have limited value in ending the civil strife. He called instead for a negotiated settlement.

Senate Republican Leader Dole suggested it was time for air strike against Serbian positions. think it would certainly send a strong message to Belgrade," Dole told NBC-TV.

Ohio department asks for funding for prisons

by John Chalfant The Associated Press

COLUMBUS - The nation's most crowded prison system wants $395 million over the next two years to pay for major construction and renovation

It might be lucky to get half that much.

A request for the money was included in a package of proposed projects that the Ohio Department of Rehabilitation and Correction submitted to the Office of Budget and Management.

Overall, the department asked for $628 million over the next six years.

What we do is to ask all of our wardens of physical plants what they think they need. Sometimes they may put a little fat in there, and sometimes they really don't," said department Director Reginald Wilkinson.

"We end up with a pretty amazing list of items that we originally submit for our capital budget request. We generally don't ever get everything that we ask for, and we'll be pretty lucky to get half of what we asked for," he said.

But Wilkinson said the process is a way for the department to attach a priority to its construction needs.

Paul Mifsud, Gov. George Voinovich's chief of staff, last week identified at least four projects the administration will ask legislators to finance: a super maximum security prison in Youngstown, a close custody prison and two medium security prisons.

Among other proposals in the department's original request for the next two years

□ $15 million to pay for additional community-based correctional facilities.

□$18 million to complete the master plan at the London Correctional Institution. □ $6 million to complete renovation of the Southern Ohio Correctional Facility. ☐ $8 million to complete the Noble Correctional Institution.

"We can obviously use as much money as we get," Wilkinson said. He will find out how much when work on the state con-

School choice' debate resumes

The Associated Press

COLUMBUS -- Backers of a proposal to give taxpayer money to private school students are fighting for it in the Legislature again, hoping to get it passed

Proponents of the Ohio Scholarship Plan say "school choice" would give poor parents options and improve public schools through competition.

But opponents said it would not offer a real choice to those who need it most and would gut the public-school system.

Rep. Mike Fox, R-Hamilton, who sponsored one of the bills, acknowledged that opposition from some education groups could hurt the voucher bills this year. He said politicians are not eager to take controversial stands on issues affecting bigmoney contributors like the teachers union.

He said proponents will try to build public support and then try to enact the plan in early 1995 as part of the new two-year state budget, he said.

"This is about the politics of public opinion in 1994," Fox said. "This is the staging for the real battle that we know will come in

Barbara Sprague, executive administrator of the Ohio PTA, said the state already ranks among the top five states in terms of state-aid programs for children in nonpublic schools.

"A lot of school districts are struggling to get by on the state funds they do get. We need to fund public schools first before getting into funding nonpublic schools," she said.

Fox and others introduced legislation late last year that would create a pilot program that likely would involve three or four school districts in the state, de-

While the basketball was finding the bottom of the net with consistency for the Falcons, it was also finding its way into the hands of Kent defenders with regularity.

In fact, during the opening minutes of the second stanza the Falcons turned the ball over on six of their first eight possessions and were held without a field goal for nearly five

During this span Kent turned a 32-31 defiit into a 37-32 advantage.

"We're always talking about establishing ourselves in the first five minutes of the second half," Kent head coach Dave Grube said. "I thought defensively we did that."

BG, regaining its composure, began to chip away at Kent's lead and eventually pulled even when Shane Komives knocked down a three-point shot from the left corner to knot the score at 46-46.

It would be one of the few shot opportunities that Komives (2-7 from the floor) would get on the evening.

'We wanted Komives to be a lot more more involved in the offense," BG head coach Jim Larranaga said. "We wanted him to have a lot more screens and a lot more looks at the goal." Twenty seconds after Komives' triple, Kent's Jeff Anderson nailed a trey of his own to put the Golden Flashes back into the lead -- a lead they would not relinquish for the remainder of the While Komives struggled, BG's

Jay Larranaga and Antonio Daniels kept the Falcons within striking distance. Larranaga tossed in 18 points, including four threepoint bombs, while Daniels chipped in with 16 markers.

"I thought their two freshmen really came through for them,' Grube said. "I think they played really well and set up the offense."

In the end though it was the Golden Flashes' ability to get to the foul line and convert down the stretch that helped them hold on for the win.

Over the final 5:28 Kent scored 11 of its last 13 points from the foul line. For the game Kent outscored BG 26-8 from the charity

"We wanted to get to the free throw line as much as possible," Grube said.

While Kent's run in the beginning of the second half and its ability to get to the foul line were important, Grube said that the key to the game came in the first half when his team battled back from a 25-15 deficit.

"I thought the big key to the game tonight was that we got down but still stayed with what we wanted to do," Grube said. "This team has folded its tent at times after we've gotten down in games and strayed from what we wanted to do offensively and de-

Talita Scott made three key steals in the final three minutes that resulted in five BG points, allowing the Falcons to pull away down the stretch and defeat Kent State 102-92 Saturday.

The game was a sloppy one, which saw each team commit 30 turnovers.

The victory improves BG's overall, and 9-1 in the Mid-

American Conference. The Falcons still trail Toledo by one full game in what has become a two-team race for the MAC title. BG's balanced scoring and superior bench play was too much for the Flashes to handle. The Falcons had six players score in double digits, and received 39 points off the bench compared to just 11 for KSU.

Leading the way for the Falcon reserves was guard Jenny Kulics. Kulics scored a career-high 18 points on five-of-eight shooting, and added six assists.

KSU jumped out to a 15-6 lead by pressing and forcing Falcon turnovers.

Carroll scored 21 first-half points on her way to a careerhigh 33 for the game.

The Falcons managed to man-10-0 run midway through the second half that put the Flashes ahead by two.

With 6:11 to play and the score tied, Scott began to take over. She stole the ball from Carroll at mid-court and raced in for an uncontested layup to give BG the lead again, 84-82

"That was a bad choice on our part," Kent coach Bob Lindsay said. "We had a player wide open in the corner for a three-pointer and chose to reverse the ball and Scott got the steal."

Two free throws by KSU's Tracey Lynn made the score 89-88 before Kulics hit her third triple of the game.

"She's a good shooter and she knew she had to play big today and she did that. Our guards always have to play big against Kent."

Jaci Clark, on Jenny Kulics

She converted all three of her 3-point attempts -- including one with 3:59 to play that put the Falcons up 82-78 - and BG didn't look back as they finished the game on a 13-4 run.

The men's track team improved times and distances but not team results this weekend as they finished third in a quadrangular meet at the Fieldhouse.

Coach Sid Sink said that there really wasn't much BG could do against CMU.

"I actually feel like we didn't lose the meet but Central won the meet. We just weren't quite good enough today to beat them."

BG was led by distance runner Brad Schaser who won the 3000-meter run and finished third in the mile.

"I think Schaser was the guy that performed and really came through for us," Sink said.

Freshman Travis Downey once again led the BG pole vaulters. Downey finished second in the event with a vault of 15 feet 9 inches. He also earned a secondplace finish in the 55-meter dash with a time of 6.47 seconds. Coach Sink said that although individuals are improving, the team is not a real balanced one.

"I think we have a ways to go, we're not a strong team right he said. "We're not real deep. We don't have good people in all the areas.

Freshman Adam Rose finished third in the shot put with a throw of 48 feet, 11 inches.

The freshman class has made some real contributions to the team but aren't ready to compete with the Mid-American elite. Sink said.

"I'm really excited about the group of freshmen we have," he said. "They're just not ready to beat upperclassmen from other

Belcher turns down Indians

CLEVELAND (AP) Free agent pitcher Tim Belcher turned down a one-year offer from the Cleveland Indians and is now focusing on negotiations with the Detroit Tigers.

The Sparta native had indicated that he was interested in pitching for the Indians this season.

"Sometimes a player will take less money to play in a certain city and I'm not saying that I wouldn't do that," Belcher said. "But when you're talking about a one-year proposition with a seven-figure difference in salaries, I'd be foolhardy to do something like that

Belcher said the lack of a guaranteed contract from the Indians played a part in turning down the offer Saturday. "You only play in this game so long, so I have to protect myself," he

If there is such a thing as home field advantage, the BG women's track team had it and used it Saturday.

The Lady Falcons won with a overall score of 56 points. Their closest compition was Central Michigan with 49 points. Ashland came in third with 21 points. Akron was fourth with 15 points.

Bobcats dump Miami; Gant vows to return Toledo, Ball State win

OXFORD -- Gary Trent scored nine of his 26 points in the final four minutes to help Ohio U. pull away to a 77-63 victory Saturday over Miami of Ohio.

OU (14-7, 6-4 Mid-American Conference) closed the game with a 14-3 spurt that included 8 of 10 from the foul line. Neither team led by more than seven points before that.

Miami (12-6, 7-3 MAC) suffered through a poor shooting night - just 3-of-16 on 3-pointers seven-point run that put OU ahead, and neither team led by more than a couple of points until OU went ahead to stay with a 9-2 spurt early in the second half.

The victory gave OU a rare sweep at Oxford. It's the first time in 22 years that the Bobcats have won football and basketball games in the same season at Ox-

TOLEDO -- Archie Fuller had a career high 32 points for Toledo the first half. Toledo used a 12-4 run in the final 3:43 of the half to go ahead 43-29 at halftime. An 11-2 spurt by the Eagles cut Toledo's lead to 62-58 with 6:34 left, but the Rockets scored nine straight points in a little less than three minutes to go up 71-58.

Toledo limited Eastern Michigan to 29 field goals in 69 attempts for 42 percent while going 28 for 51 from the floor for 54.9 percent.

Corey Henderson's jumper at 16:11 gave Central Michigan (3-15 overall, 2-8 MAC) its first points and made the score 14-2. But the Chippewas could come no closer than that for the rest of the game.

Akron 49, Western 40

AKRON -- Western Michigan had a cold touch, hitting on just 27 percent from the field, and Akron took advantage to win 49-40 Saturday night in the Mid-American Conference.

The Zips lost seven in a row in the conference before winning their last two. It was the third straight loss for the Broncos.

Akron (8-10, 2-8) went ahead 12-10 as Cornell Mann made a 3-pointer, and the Zips held the lead from then on.

4-of-26 shots, or 15 percent.

ATLANTA -- One day after Ron Gant snapped his leg in a nasty dirt-bike accident, the Atlanta Braves' left fielder sent a resolute message to his fans: He will launch another comeback.

"No one is more upset by this than Ronnie Gant himself. He is anxious to get back in re-covery mode," Gant spokesman Lou Tevlin told reporters at Piedmont Hospital Friday afternoon, 12 hours after surgeons finished inserting a halfinch steel rod in Gant's right Gant agreed to a $5.5 million contract on Jan. 27 - the largest one-year deal in baseball history -- will be out for at least three months.

When spring training opens in three weeks, rookie Tony Tarasco, newcomer Dave Gallagher and converted first baseman Ryan Klesko will be competing to open the season

The accident also meant Gant missed his scheduled testimony before a grand jury investigating allegations that he and a friend conspired to have sex with girls aged 15 and 16 on Christmas Eve at Victoria, Texas, Gant's hometown.

Gant and Stephen Gaskin, 27, were named in a lawsuit filed on the girls' behalf last Saturday. Bernard Klimist, a Victoria attorney representing Gant, released a statement denying the allegations.

Gant's still unexplained dirtbike accident in suburban Cherokee County Thursday afternoon broke both the fibula and the tibia bones, and left them sticking out the side of his leg about midway between the knee and ankle.

Tevlin and Dr. Joe Chandler, the Braves team physician who performed the surgery, said Gant was still too groggy from medication and pain Friday to describe the accident in any he "appreciates all the support and his main concern is getting back on track, getting into rehab," said Tevlin, a representative of Gant's agent, Eric Goldschmidt.

Last week, Gant agreed to the non-guaranteed deal for 1994, expressing disappointment only that the Braves were not interested in a multiyear contract. Gant, eligible to become a free agent after the World Series, can be released by the Braves at a cost of only $906,593, which amounts to 30 days termination

Gant hit .274 in 1993 with a career-high 36 homers, 117 RBIs and 26 stolen bases.

Tevlin said recreational dirtbiking is not prohibited in Gant's new contract, although motorcycle racing "would have been a different story."

The break was bad enough that the doctor said it would be at least three months before Gant could play baseball.

- and had a pair of turnovers that started OU's closing run.

OU led by as many as seven points in the second half, but Miami cut it to 63-60 with 3:57 left. Trent then hit a pair of free throws and had a layup off a turnover to put OU in control.

Trent also had 15 rebounds, two steals and two blocked shots. Curtis Simmons scored 13 points, Chad Estis had 12 and Jeff Boals added 11. John McKenna led Miami with 21 points and Derrick Cross had 15.

Miami built its biggest lead of the game, 19-13, with nine minutes left in the first half.

in an 84-73 Mid-American Conference victory Saturday night over Eastern Michigan, ending the Eagles' nine-game winning streak against the Rockets.

Scoop Williams' 23 points and 14 rebounds for Toledo (11-7 overall, 6-4 conference) also were career highs. Teammate Craig Thames scored 13.

Brian Tolbert with 29 points and Naje McCune with 11 were the only double figure scorers for the Eagles (10-8, 5-5). Eastern Michigan's Kareem Carpenter had 14 rebounds to go with his nine points.

available in hockey -- the penalty shot. A UIC defender covered the puck in the crease after Jason Helbing hit the post with a shot and the penalty shot was called by referee Mike O'Donnell.

Head coach Jerry York selected his top gun to take the shot. It was just Holzinger, UIC goalie Jeff Featherstone and a 44 tie. The crowd waited in anticipation as Holzinger stood at center ice hoping to dice up Featherstone.

He skated left and fired a snapshot low to Featherstone's glove side to give BG a 5-4 led.

"You just see what happens, it was something I saw at the last minute. I anticipated going to that side, but I wasn't sure right away," Holzinger said.

His third tally, which sent hats flying down on the ice, came with only 32 seconds left in regualtion as he poked the puck by Featherstone to send the game into over time. In the extra session Holzinger earned his first assist on the game winning goal by Mike

BG then reeled off four consecutive goals over a 12-minute span to take a 5-4 lead.

The fifth Falcon goal came via a penalty shot by Holzinger. A Jason Helbing shot from the center of the right circle clanged off the post and a UIC defenseman froze the puck in the crease, giving BG the penalty shot.

Holzinger skated in alone and beat Featherstone low to the stick side to give BG a one-goal

Two defensive breakdowns by the Falcons, however, resulted in two UIC goals and gave the Flames a one-goal lead before the BG heroics.

Holzinger ended a nine-game goal scoring drought with his goal in the second period. A more physical type of game brought him out his slump.

"I wanted to get my body into the game a little bit more as far as hitting people and finishing checks," he said. "Good things happen when you finish checks.

Skating triumph and tragedy

by Ed Golden The Associated Press

BOSTON -- Nancy Kerrigan pronounced herself ready for the Winter Olympics Friday night after performing flawlessly during an exhibition that attracted Olympic champions, her family and more than 4,500 supporters.

"I'm ready to go. I can't wait to get there," Kerrigan told the crowd at night's end. "Thank you all for coming."

Kerrigan's Olympic hopes were uncertain when an attacker clubbed her just above her right knee Jan. 6 after practicing for the U.S. figure skating championships in Detroit.

But she landed every move that tested her rejuvenated right leg, from an opening triple jump to a number of sit spins.

"She's back," the arena announcer said over the crowd's applause, as Kerrigan ended the two-minute program she will perform at the Lillehammer

The applause started early. Dressed in a white skirt with black border and black transparent sleeves, Kerrigan was greeted with a standing ovation as she stepped on ice at Matthews Arena at Northeastern University.

Later she joined training partner and 1992 Olympic silver medalist Paul Wylie in a doubles routine before closing out the evening by skating the song "With One Look," from the musical "Sunset Boulevard."

Kerrigan told reporters that the Boston performance took off some of the pre-Olympics pres-

"I haven't been around many people, so it was nice to be able to get out there and skate," Kerrigan said. "I think anytime you perform in front of a crowd you have to feel good when you skate

Kerrigan refused to answer any questions about the attack in Detroit.

Friday's exhibition, which was taped by CBS, also featured 1984 Olympic champion Scott Hamilton, 1982 world champion Elain Zayak, 1992 Olympic skater and two-time national champion Todd Eldredge.

Also skating was Jason Sylvia of New Bedford, runner-up in the 1994 national juniors champion-

The night of skating was a much happier occasion than the last time Matthews Arena had the nation's attention. Over the summer, the building was used for a memorial service honoring Reggie Lewis, the Celtics captain who died in July of heart failure.

Leading up to the exhibition, Kerrigan sightings have been few. She received a warm reception while attending a roast of retired Celtics forward Kevin McHale last Saturday night. And on Thursday she was given a standing ovation at Boston Garden after being presented with a team jacket from Bruins captain Ray Bourque between periods of a game against the New York Rangers.

Kerrigan was scheduled to fly to Norway next weekend and train until the women's competition begins Feb. 23 in the village of Hamar.

Kerrigan was given the green light to compete Wednesday after she skated for a panel of judges sent by the U.S. Figure Skating Association at Tony Kent Arena in Dennis.

Matthews Arena, previously called the Boston Arena, was the first home of the Boston Bruins, from 1924 to 1929.

Olympic champion skaters Sonja Henie, Dick Button and Tenley Albright skated there. So did Babe Ruth, who joined the Arena Athletic Club hockey team. But, as history has it, Ruth eventually quit, claiming the players "are nuts."

CBS will air the performance Saturday night as a one-hour special at 9 p.m. EST. It will be competing against ABC's presentation of a skating exhibition taped in Boston in October. Earlier in the day ABC was scheduled to show an exhibition of performances by members of the U.S. Olympic figure skating team taped at the U.S. Championships

Kerrigan: 'I can't wait to get there | Father of ice dancer is stabbed to death near Cleveland; son charged

SHEFFIELD LAKE, Ohio - The younger brother of Olympic ice dancer Elizabeth Punsalan had been home on a weekend pass from a hospital psychiatric unit only a few hours when he told police he stabbed his father to death.

Ricardo Punsalan, 20, told Friday night he attacked Dr. Ernesto R. Punsalan, 57, as his father slept in their home, about 20 miles west of Cleve-

The elder Punsalan, a general surgeon, was well aware of his son's ongoing battle with mental illness but didn't want to commit him to a long-term center, a family friend said.

"He was worried about him," said Dr. Paresh Patel, a colleague of Punsalan's at EMH Regional Medical Center in Elyria. "He said, 'He is my son, he should be at home.' He seemed to be a nice Ricardo Punsalan was released on a weekend pass from the psychiatric unit at St. Joseph Hospital and Health Center in Lorain on Friday afternoon, said the Rev. John J. McCaffrey of St. Thomas Catholic Church.

The son was being held without ond at the Lorain County Jail in Elyria and was expected to be arraigned Monday morning in Lorain Municipal Court on a police charge of aggravated murder.

Jailers were checking his cell every 15 minutes as a standard precaution for inmates with histories of mental illness, said Lorain County Sheriff Sgt. William

Despite the family tragedy,

Elizabeth Punsalan said late Saturday that she will compete in the Winter Olympics. "My father was proud of my

"For this to happen in our family is a shock to all of us, and it comforts me to know he is with God today and God will take care of him," she said.

Elizabeth Punsalan, 23, was scheduled to skate in the icedancing competition with her husband, 27-year-old Jerod Swallow, on Feb. 18-22 during the Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway. She didn't practice Saturday because she was traveling home from Pontiac, Mich., to help her family make funeral arrangements, said Nancy Rosenberg, wife of her manager, Michael Rosenberg. Sheffield Lake Police Chief Thomas Schmidt would not comment on a motive, but he said the elder Punsalan was sleeping when his son allegedly stabbed him twice in his chest with a large chef's knife.

Theresa Punsalan, the doctor's wife, was watching television and their oldest son, Robert, was home when the doctor was killed. They were not injured. Theresa Punsalan called police, Schmidt

Harding close to losing spot on Olympic roster

by Steve Wilstein The Associated Press

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. -- Tonya Harding's fight to remain on the U.S. Olympic team suffered a setback Saturday when a U.S. figure skating panel found there were "reasonable grounds" to believe she was involved in the attack on Nancy Kerrigan.

The U.S. Figure Skating Association called for a disciplinary hearing against Harding, but stopped short of kicking her off the Olympic team. Instead, the association passed the decision on to the United States Olympic Committee along with a "black book" containing nearly 400 pages of affidavits, court documents and other evidence gathered independently by the

"The ball is back in the USOC's court," said Bill Hybl, chairman of the five-member panel and former president of the USOC.

In Lillehammer, Norway, where the Olympics begin next Saturday, the USOC said it was considering convening its Games Administration Board within two weeks in Norway "to determine the status of Tonya Harding on the U.S. Olympic team."

No changes can be made to the women's figure skating team after Feb. 21, two days before the start of the event.

The USFSA ordered Harding to appear before a disciplinary hearing, but she has 30 days to respond. If she does not respond in that time, the hearing will be set for March 9 -- more than a

Football coach attempts suicide

The Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. -- Depression fueled by job setbacks led former Florida football coach Charley Pell to attempt suicide, Pell's doctor said.

"We are dealing with a medproblem and I feel very optimistic," Dr. Carl S. Burak, a psychiatrist at Baptist Medi cal Center, said at a news conference Friday. "Charley Pell has a habit of landing on his feet. I feel his prognosis is very good."

The coach, forced to resign a decade ago because of NCAA violations, attempted suicide Wednesday evening by running a hose from his running car's exhaust pipe through the passenger

Pell was found by state trooper Malcolm Jowers, the head of the Gator football team security and a close friend, after the former coach left him a suicide note and map of where to find his body.

Pell, 52, has no lasting effects from his exposure to carbon monoxide, the doctor said.

Burak said he expected Pell to be released from the hospital in a few days. Common treatment for depression, he said, is "dealing with the stresses in someone's life and dealing with the appropriate medication."

Burak and Pell's wife, Ward, who released a statement, said Pell's depression was the result of "professional setbacks since departing the University of Flor-

The physician said Pell and his family agreed to the news conference because of the many calls of concern about the former

"He wanted everyone to know he is really OK. I sincerely wish we could have handled this with the traditional privacy," Burak

Pell, one of the most successful coaches in Gator history, was forced to resign in 1984 during an NCAA investigation into widespread recruiting violations.

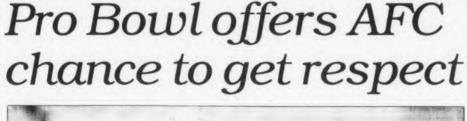

He later opened an insurance company in Tampa. In 1991, he and his wife moved his Team-Staff management firm to Jacksonville.

Schottenheimer said being 2-0 in the Pro Bowl is good and bad, because the coaching staffs at the game are the ones whose teams lost in the conference championships -- leaving them a victory short of the Super Bowl.

"My feeling is that this is a great opportunity for the coaches and players," he said. "If you can't be in the Super Bowl, this is the best place to Schottenheimer's AFC squad has an impressive offense, including quarterbacks John Elway of Denver and Warren Moon of Houston, and running backs Thurman Thomas of Buffalo and Marcus Allen of Kansas City.

The starting wide receivers are Anthony Miller of San Diego and Tim Brown of the Los Angeles Raiders, with Denver's Shannon Sharpe the tight end.

Defensively, the AFC features linemen Cortez Kennedy of Seattle and Ray Childress of Houston, plus linebackers Junior Seau of San Diego and Derrick Thomas of Kansas City.

The NFC offense also is explosive, with Steve Young of San Francisco the starting quarterback, rookie Jerome Bettis of the Los Angeles Rams among the running backs, and the 49ers' Jerry Rice and Dallas' Michael Irvin among the receivers.

The National Conference defense has Reggie White of Green Bay at one end and Richard Dent of Chicago at the other, and also includes New Orleans linebackers Rickey Jackson and Renaldo Turnbull, and cornerback Deion Sanders of Atlanta.

McSorley is not happy with NHL

The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH -- Pittsburgh Penguins defenseman Marty McSorley is glad to be cleared of a charge that he instigated a fight, but he wishes National Hockey League officials had viewed a videotape of the fight a bit sooner.

Like before he served his onegame suspension.

The NHL notified the Penguins that league Vice President Brian Burke overruled referee Terry Gregson, who threw McSorley out of the game Monday after he fought with Jeff Beukeboom of the New York Rangers.

Gregson ruled that McSorley started the fight and therefore was guilty of a game misconduct. beat Pittsburgh.

Because it was his third such infraction this season, McSorley was suspended for one game.

"It was a questionable call, so we sent a tape in and they reviewed it," Penguins coach Ed Johnston said. "Brian Burke thought that, in all fairness, that it wasn't warranted.'

McSorley sat out the game against the Florida Panthers while he waited for league officials to view the tape of the game at Madison Square Garden.

'Why didn't they look at it the day of the game (in Florida)?" he said. "That's very frustrating."

The game misconduct was erased from McSorley's record. The Penguins defeated the Panthers 2-1 without him, but in the previous game, New York

The Indians will begin using the ballpark in April. The team's publicity has referred to the 42,000-seat stadium as Indians Park.

Gateway Executive Director Thomas V. Chema said Friday night that no deal had been consummated.

"We have not reached an agreement with Society, or anybody," Chema said. "I wish we had it done, but we don't."
