Assistant professor faces jury

The BG News/Ross Weitzner

University assistant professor Floris Wood (left) leaves on an Own Recognizance bond after entering a plea of not guilty to rape charges at his arraignment before the Honorable Judge Charles Kurfess Monday morning in the Wood County Common Pleas Court.

Wood pleads not guilty to sex offenses

by Ginger Phillips
The BG News

A University assistant professor pleaded not guilty to charges of rape at his arraignment Monday morning in Wood County Common Pleas Court.

Floris Wood, 51, 241 S. Summit St., allegedly engaged in sexual conduct with a 6-year-old girl between August 1993 and June 1994.

Wood was indicted Wednesday by a Wood County Grand Jury and charged with one count of rape and two counts of gross sexual imposition.

Wood pleaded "not guilty" at the arraignment and is presently out on an Own Recognizance bond. This means Wood did not have to post any money for his release.

Wood is still working as an assistant professor and data archivist at the University's Science Library, according to Eloise Clark, vice president for academic affairs.

"There are procedures laid down for the suspension for terminating a tenured faculty member," Clark said. "That procedure has not been initiated."

Clark said being indicted for a felony does not usually warrant suspension.

"[The suspension process] is unlikely to be initiated until someone has been convicted of a crime," Clark said.

At the arraignment, Judge Charles Kurfess warned Wood not to have any direct or indirect contact with the girl or any of her family members.

If Wood is found guilty of rape, he may be fined up to $10,000 and a sentence of up to 25 years in prison. Each count of gross sexual imposition carries a maximum penalty of $5,000 and two years in prison. If guilty of more than one of these counts, Wood may have to serve the sentences consecutively and pay accumulative fines.

Wood, a resident of Bowling Green since 1978, has no prior convictions.

A pre-trial conference will take place Sept. 22 at 11:30 a.m. A trial date will be set at that time.

Business provides notetaking services for BGSU students

by Genell Pavelich
The BG News

Students who for some reason cannot make it to class on a certain day, and who are willing to spend a little extra money, can purchase the information they missed from a new notetaking service started by a University student.

Write from Class, located at 1450 E. Wooster, Suite 66 in the Falcon Plaza Complex, is a notetaking service that opened last month.

Jeff Jackson, proprietor of the business and a University student, said he had the idea for the business last December, but he did not open it until school started this year.

"My brother goes to Penn State. They have a notetaking service there called Nitny Notes," Jackson said. "He asked if we had one here, and I checked into it."

Notetakers for Write from Class get paid $200 a semester to attend a class and type the notes by 4 p.m. the next day, Jackson said.

Jackson said he then makes copies of the notes, depending on the number requested, which customers can purchase by 5 p.m.

Jackson used classified advertisements to hire the 25 students to take notes. Notes can be purchased for the 25 courses offered through Jackson's business.

All the note-taking positions are filled for this semester.

"We had a better-than-expected response to the Help Wanted ads," Jackson said.

Lecture notes are available in a variety of courses including biology, economics, geography, geology, IPCO and psychology.

Merchants Fair introduces local businesses to students Group aims to fight racism, educate campus, community

by Melissa Lipowski
The BG News

University students will have the opportunity to acquaint themselves with local businesses today by visiting the Lenhart Grand Ballroom between 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. for the fifth annual Merchants Fair.

The event, sponsored by the Bowling Green Chamber of Commerce, the University, the Downtown Business Association and The BG News, is an attempt to introduce area merchants to the University students, said Joan Gordon, executive director of commerce.

"By attending, students can become aware of what is available to them in the city in terms of services, retailers and products," Gordon said.

The fair, which is free and open to the public, will host 65 exhibitors, ranging from fast food to banks, agencies to retailers, she said.

While many of the merchants will be selling their products, others will be offering free samples, she said.

"The exhibitors will have coupons, drawings, samples, giveaways and other promotional items," she said.

In addition to the individual exhibitor contests, students will be able to participate in the grand prize drawing for airfare for two to Florida over spring break and additional drawings for a bicycle, a tailgate party, gift certificates, a portable phone and an answering machine, she said.

In the past, about 5,000 students have visited the fair throughout the day and the same is expected this year, she said.

Racism exists on this campus. The Racism Reduction Center is an organization at the University established to expose it.

Stacy Pettit, co-founder of the group, defined the organization as a pro-active/interactive organization that combats racism by educating, sponsoring forums to debate issues and implementing solutions.

The first organizational meeting is Wednesday at 9 p.m. on the second floor of the Student Services Building.

Thursday, Sept. 15 at 7 p.m. there will be a show on BG-24 News dedicated to racism and spotlighting the Racism Reduction Center.

Matt Boaz, co-founder of the group, said although racism is a very serious problem on the campus, there has not been an enormous amount of support from the African-American community.

"No matter what race you are, if racism continues to exist in any way, shape or form, or on any level, you cannot be at peace with yourself," he said. "All people should work together to combat racism because our campus is a microcosm of the entire society."

Chip Carter, another co-founder, is looking forward to beginning this academic year because there are a lot of issues concerning racism both in the media and in the city of Bowling Green that need to be discussed.

For sale: class notes or education

Now you don't even have to go to class to stay up on what's going on.

A new company in town called Write from Class, run by a University student, has proposed the solution for those individuals who, for one reason or another, haven't gotten all of the class notes. You can now buy them at your leisure.

If you are taking one of the 25 classes the company covers, including biology, economics, geography, geology, IPCO or psychology, you can now buy the notes of the lectures. Write from Class has hired 25 students to take the notes and type them up for you and have them ready by 5 p.m. the following day.

What a wonderful concept. No longer do you have to worry about missing those pesky lectures that seem to clutter up your sleeping schedule. You can now spend those extra hours in front of the television or play that extra game at the Rec.

Classes will soon become a two-man operation with the professor and the note-taking student doing a one-on-one.

Heck, you could even stay in your hometown and show up on test day since you could just purchase these "Cliff Notes" of the University. Besides, teachers seem to have a problem with re-reading the book for their lectures.

But don't be too hasty on your class-skipping decision. The professors didn't get this far by being outsmarted. Soon, the generous teachers who treated students as adults and didn't punish them on their lack of attendance will start making it mandatory. And the ones who did use it as a percentage of your grade will now make it a larger percentage.

In addition, professors will start using more multimedia to get their point across, causing the note-takers to put their pens down. They also may prevent students who are not registered for their class from attending it.

What will happen by students using this note-taking service is teachers will become more dynamic in their lectures, causing the students who don't attend class to lose an essential piece of the course.

Basically, what it breaks down to is the student making the choice to attend class whether or not there is an avenue that will help them out if they do miss it.

If Write from Class is used as a second source to the lectures, then more power to them, but if it winds up being a flunky's way to slide through college, it may be a step back in the education system.

Let the next generation wonder

People travel through the journey known as life searching for fulfillment. Some turn to religion and worship, finding solace in faith. Others find more tangible security, such as a home, a car, a love.

It's a question of purpose -- a reason for living, for continuing.

Some poor souls never find what they are looking for. They live -- working, going to school, working some more. They do a lot of laundry. They see friends come, go and eventually die.

They'll lie on their own deathbeds and wonder why they went to all that trouble. They'll wonder if they will be a memory to anyone and worry that it was all for naught. What will they have left so that the world will at least acknowledge their presence?

I believe that some ease the uncertainty of their estranged lives by having children. By leaving tangible evidence of his or her existence, a parent alleviates some of the anxieties of coming and going.

For the parents, ultimate hope lies in the enlightenment of their children. As youngsters, we grow and feel the pressures of living and dream the same dreams. We inherit the grand questions and ponder the same profound mysteries of the human situation.

Soon, we will be having offspring of our very own. Will they keep that giant wheel of inquisition-a-turnin'?

I know I'm still clueless. Maybe my children can figure this all out.

The best we can do is give our progeny the skills, working knowledge and peace of mind so that their lives mean something to them.

I just want them to be an improved version of me. I want to rear good-hearted, competent people.

I find it interesting how children can be so different from their parents. My ultimate fear is to produce a moron.

This apprehension is so fierce I am forced to reconsider this child-rearing thing.

What if my child is a sexist pig, or a gun-wielding maniac? Or worse, he could think that the future equivalent of Big Johnson t-shirts are cool.

Could I handle a daughter who wants Barbie's life for her very own right down to the 38 inch chest and plastic apartment? What if she's a homicidal maniac as a result of her need to "be" Barbie?

What if they catch homophobia from the kids at school or inherit racism from society in general? We are already expert parents, or we should be, because we were recently kids ourselves.

My progeny will probably buy a movie ticket and sneak into a different one, just like I did. They'll learn to dislike homework, just like I did. They'll probably fight with me, just like I fought with my parents.

I used to think my parents were really mean.

"You'll understand when you get older and have your own kids," Mom would say.

Moms and dads make it look so easy. Mine had five kids and they're all doing okay. I'm in college, I haven't run up credit card bills or robbed a video store or anything. I don't know that my parents faced the same anxieties toward having children as I do in the here-and-now, but I'm sure they weren't gung-ho experts.

I think about my kids at my age.

I wonder if they'll have to deal with sexism, AIDS, violence and the Star System.

I hope they go to college. College is a must if they want to explore humanity's needs and limits (besides bowling and pop culture).

Since people are the product of their experience, I want my children to experience. I want them to experience more than I did.

Children are our leftovers for the world. They get our trash and dirty air. They have to grow up, learn and make their own judgments about life. We equip them with their own wondrous knowledge and hope for the best.

They inherit the hope of future enlightenment, and then they have children to pick up where they left off. That giant wheel of inquisition keeps a-turnin'.

I could be one of those people who aren't truly fulfilled until they harvest the fruit of their loins. In my innocent youthful stage, I'm still not without those pesky apprehensions.

I could drop a real loser who doesn't give a crap about anything and doesn't vote.

I'm a little hopeful when I look at my situation.

My parents are plain working folk without college experience.

They marvel at anything I do that they haven't done. They silently cheer me on because I'm living a dream life in their eyes.

Psychological experiments hard

An average of 1200 students this semester may be participating in an unnecessary class requirement. Psychology 201, general psychology, requires students to participate in experiments for credit. They involve simple psychological tests, usually surveys or observations. Yet this requirement is redundant as all students are constantly engaged in psychological endeavors, they just might not know it.

Take the psychological concept of conditioned reflexes. These were invented by nineteenth century Russian person Ivan Pavlov. Pavlov rang a bell whenever he fed his dogs. Eventually, he rang the bell without feeding the dogs, thinking that they would drool, associating the bell with the food. The truth was, nineteenth century dog food was nothing to write home about, so the dogs just sat there staring and waited until Pavlov stormed off in frustration. Then they ate Pavlov's lunch (balogna and light mayo on wheat). In this instance, Pavlov's storming off was the conditioned response.

As students with roommates know, unconditioned responses happen plenty. For instance, you may tell your roommate to pick up their four-day-old plate of spaghetti, but your roommate says "In a minute," which is roommate slang for "shut up."

Jason Young

But with simple Pavlovian conditioning techniques, the same situation can be resolved in a positive manner:

You: "Pick up that four-day-old plate of spaghetti."

Your roommate: "In a minute."
(Sound of cattle prod being fired up)

Your roommate: "Okay! Okay! I'll do it now!"

There are numerous other psychological tests we experience each day.

DELUSIONS like thinking you will actually graduate in four years. Also, thinking that the good looking person who sits next to you in your sociology class is interested in a relationship when in fact they are trying to remember your name which will be printed in the "Police Blotter" under "perverted stalker."

HYSTERIA in discovering how much your books cost. I could have bought a really nice mountain bike with the money I spent on books. The bookstore cashier said, "Looks like you will be doing a lot of reading this semester." Then the bagger handed over three seriously bulky bags of books and a sample-sized box of Advil. This is true.

"Hysteria is discovering how much your books cost. I could have bought a really nice mountain bike with the money I spent on books."

Various PHOBIAS on campus include fear of food service items involving the word "loaf" and fear of Star System rejection. Some people, in their PARANOIA, believe that the Star System calls them up late at night and taunts them. "So," the Star System says in its chilling nasal voice, "you really think that you're signed up for that vital English class? Well, think again! Press six to drop a section. Ha ha ha!" Not that I know any of these people.

BEHAVIOR MODIFICATION such as the BRAINWASHING

DEPRIVATION perpetuated by fire alarms, early classes, and drunk people in the hall who are doing what sounds like moshing against the walls at 3:30 a.m. in

After a battery of such trails and tribulations, what student would have the mental strength to even locate the psychology building, much less wield a sharp #2 pencil? Further psychological experimentation is not needed for that quivering mass of stress that has become know as the college student.

NEW YORK - The order of the day from retired Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf - Older men, see the urologist.

The former Gulf War commander considers himself the poster guy for prostate cancer. His doctors caught it early, and he has fully recovered 3 1/2 months after surgery.

Schwarzkopf urged men over 50 and those over 40 who are at high risk to get tested.

"Look the urologist right in the eye and say, 'Bring me to my knees if you have to, but do a thorough exam,' because that way they'll save your life," he said Monday on "CBS This Morning."

Prostate cancer is one of the most common forms of cancer affecting men.

MINNEAPOLIS - Oprah Winfrey got cheers for finishing a 15.5-mile run in hot, humid weather in a respectable 2 1/2 hours.

The 40-year-old talk-show host limped slightly as she walked off the effects of Sunday's City of Lakes 25K race.

"This took a toll. Even though I am getting into this running thing, the conditions today were difficult," she said. Humidity was high, and temperatures were in the 70s.

Winfrey said she plans to attempt her first marathon this fall.

NEW YORK - Meryl Streep hopes her new movie "The River Wild" will appeal to girls.

"I made a movie that my girls would be excited to see," the mother of four said in the October issue of Glamour magazine.

"They could put themselves in the hero's role and project without it being a burly man, without having to make the leap that girls are used to making."

Streep plays a whitewater enthusiast who is kidnapped while on a family river trip.

As for appealing to a new male audience, Streep said, "Oh, I don't give a damn about that. This is not my offering to the male action audience. If they like it, it's great. If they don't, well, we tried."

LOS ANGELES - A judge refused to block the broadcast of a miniseries on Elizabeth Taylor, ruling NBC had a First Amendment right to show it.

Taylor had argued that the miniseries, based on an unreleased book by C. David Heymann, is inaccurate and an invasion of privacy.

Among other things, the book contends Taylor was beaten by husbands Mike Todd, Nicky Hilton and Richard Burton.

Superior Court Judge Diane Wayne said that the series can be broadcast but that Taylor can seek damages later. The judge gave Neil Papiano, Taylor's attorney, the opportunity to argue again for an injunction Sept. 28.

The network plans to broadcast the miniseries in May.

"This is not free speech. This is taking somebody's name and using it for a commercial product," Papiano said.

Heymann's work was inaccurate and damaging, the lawyer said.

"For example, he says that a number of her husbands beat her. That is not true," Papiano said.

Jurassic Sequel

NEW YORK - Director-producer Steven Spielberg plans a sequel to "Jurassic Park," one of the biggest box-office successes of all time, but fans will have to wait more than two years, Forbes reported Sunday.

The magazine made the disclosure in its Sept. 27 issue cover story about the Top 40 best-paid entertainers, which Spielberg led with estimated 1993-94 gross earnings of $335 million.

Forbes said the dinosaurs-come-back-to-life thriller was a major contributor to Spielberg's wealth, grossing $900 million at the box office. Sales of Jurassic Park-related merchandise generated an additional $1 billion.

In an interview with Forbes, Spielberg said he plans to make a sequel to open for the summer 1997 movie season, renouncing his one-time aversion to sequels as a "cheap carny trick."

"It's not so precious to me and I'm not so personal about 'Jurassic Park' that I have any reason not to give the audience what they want," he said.

Group's focus is women's rights

Womyn for Womyn fights for equality through programming

by Angelica D. Huesca
The BG News

Womyn for Womyn is a campus organization which focuses on the issues and problems affecting women's lives.

Referred to as a womanist/feminist organization by its members, the group originally formed at the University in 1969 under the name People for People during the Women's Rights Movement. Then, during the 1973-74 academic year, it changed its name to Women.

In 1975, the group became Women for Women. Last spring, the organization took on a new and more political change - Womyn for Womyn - with the letter "e" being replaced with the letter "y."

Kristine Jordan, coordinator of Womyn for Womyn, is striving to create a better image for the feminist group. She said she believes there is a very negative connotation associated with the word "feminism."

Jordan said it is very important for people to recognize that feminism is not synonymous with lesbianism.

"We all are not the stereotypical short-haired, Doc Marten-wearing, man-hating women sitting around bashing males," Jordan said.

Womyn for Womyn's main objective is working toward human liberation from a feminist perspective, according to the organization's statement of purpose.

Some of their major concerns include sexist discrimination and sex-role stereotyping - both of which keep women in subordinate positions in society.

In addition, the group will focus on the changing of policies and situations which are harmful to the interests of women, both at the University and within the larger communities, Jordan said.

"We also come from a multicultural standpoint - which includes issues affecting women of color, women with disabilities, women's sexual orientation and health issues related to women," she said.

Jordan said she believes all of these issues concern not just women, but everyone.

The organization accomplishes its goals by providing programming at the University about the major issues concerning women.

They provide speakers, write letters to Congress on laws affecting women and co-sponsor many campus events such as films, concerts, workshops and forums.

Womyn For Womyn also produces a newsletter which circu-"I personally feel that this will enable the organizations to do more with each other and provide better programming for the University," Jordan said. "In the past, the human issues organizations have had a decline in memlates monthly to more than 1,000 subscribers.

Another goal of the organization is to collaborate with other human issues organizations at the University such as Lesbian and Gay Alliance and Student Environmental Action Coalition to establish better communication and support for the organization, according to Jeannie Ludlow, faculty adviser of Womyn for Womyn.

"We would like to involve as many people as possible on this campus," she said.

Week-long events at SRC emphasize health awareness

by Jim Vickers
The BG News

While many students visit the Student Recreation Center, they may not be aware of all the services it offers to improve their health.

Well Aware week is a chance for students to gain increased awareness of the different services the SRC has to offer, according to Cathy Swick, assistant coordinator of Well Aware week.

All this week, health and fitness programs will occur at the center from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

"I think it's easy for students to walk in and see the basketball courts and the aerobic classes without realizing the other programs we have here," Swick said.

Each day of the week will focus on a different fitness component. Body composition tests, which measure percentages of body fat, will be given inside the main entrance of the center.

Wednesday will center on "Heart Health," with blood pressure tests and cholesterol screenings. Thursday will cover stress management and relaxation techniques and Friday will focus on the importance of flexibility, Swick said.

Lauren Mangili, coordinator of Well Aware week, said this is the second year for the program and although the turnout last year was good, she hopes a wider range of students will take advantage of it this year.

"It seems most of the people that participated last year were regular users of the rec center," Mangili said.

Professor wins ninth award in a row for musical talent

by Joseph L. Belmaggio
The BG News

A University professor is on a winning streak, securing his ninth consecutive award from the American Society of Composers and Publishers.

Wallace Depue, a professor in the College of Musical Arts, submitted his work for 18 years before winning his first award nine years ago. He said he is now on a winning streak that just won't quit.

"Every year I think, 'Well, this will be the end of it,'" Depue said. "But to my surprise and delight, I win."

The American Society of Composers and Publishers presents this award once a year to an outstanding composer and/or arranger.

The $500 award is based on the number of compositions written by the applicant, how many times they have been performed, and by whom the pieces were performed. Pieces that were arranged are also taken into consideration.

There are no restrictions on how Depue can spend the award money. However, according to Depue, the award is worth more than the money.

"It's not the money that matters, it's being approved of by very distinguished people in the music field," Depue said.

The judging panel included: Harold Best, dean of the Wheaton Conservatory of Music; Jo Ann Falletta, music director and conductor of the Virginia Symphony, Long Beach Symphony and Women's Philharmonic Orchestras; Michael Morgan, music director of the Oakland-East Bay Symphony; and Tim Page, author, chief classical music critic at New York Newsday and faculty member of the Juilliard School of Music.

"These people are the 'creme de la creme' of music," Depue said.

Each year the judging panel is made up of different people. Nonetheless, Depue has managed to impress nine panels of judges.

In addition to receiving nine awards from ASCAP, Depue has won three Distinguished Teacher awards from the University, as well as awards from the National Education Association and a Cleveland arts appreciation foundation.

Depue received two bachelor's degrees, one in music composition and one in music education, from Capitol University in Bexley, Ohio. He earned his master's in arts from The Ohio State University and his doctorate in composition and theory from Michigan State University.

Before coming to the University, Depue worked as a music coordinator at the Toledo Museum of Art, as a high school instructor in Leontonia, Ohio, and an instructor at Dover High School in Dover, Ohio.

Depue is not the only member of his family who is musically inclined. His four sons are all virtuoso violinists.

Student affairs conference to come to BGSU campus

by Julie Hamilton
The BG News

Scholars from around the country will debate issues of student affairs at a national symposium that will take place in Olscamp Hall Sept. 30 and Oct. 1.

Donald Gehring, a professor of higher education and student affairs at the University, is organizing and hosting the symposium. He said the event will benefit the entire University, as well as other communities throughout the nation.

Invitations were sent out to only 160 people, but two hours of the symposium will be video-conferenced across the country. Sixty-two sites have already signed up to see the symposium, Gehring said.

Issues dealing with student affairs will be debated by people such as Robert D. Brown, author of "In Tomorrows Higher Education - A Return to the Academy," and Carol A. Cartwright, president of Kent State University and the only female university president in Ohio.

Patricia King, chairwoman of the department of student affairs, said she is excited about the symposium and said she feels it will have a strong effect on student affairs.

"The symposium is attracting interest from all over the country," King said.

Gehring said he is sure this will make a strong impact on student affairs.

"This is a significant, significant change in the way student affairs are handled," Gehring said.

People interested in seeing this symposium should contact the Office of Student Affairs.

Conference organizer earns accolades in student affairs

by Julie Hamilton
The BG News

Donald Gehring, organizer of a symposium on student affairs Sept. 30 and Oct. 1, is no stranger to the topic.

Gehring was honored last June for having a national institute on student affairs re-named after him. What was then the Campus Judicial Affairs Training Institute became the Donald D. Gehring Campus Judicial Program.

Gehring founded the institute in 1984 and was the original president of the Campus Judicial Affairs Training Institute. The annual institute-sponsored event is designed to teach students laws regarding student affairs.

The last seminar sponsored by the institute, which took place June 13-17, covered topics ranging from record keeping in disciplinary cases to hate speeches on campus. Those issues were discussed by 30 different experts from all over the country.

"These guys were some of the best in the country," Gehring said.

Patricia King, chairwoman of the department of higher education and student affairs, said the institute is very beneficial.

"It is really a service that benefits everybody," King said.

Gehring said he was not aware that he was going to be honored when Robert Bicker, professor of law at Stetson University, presented him with the award. Gehring said he was in shock.

"If I'd have said anything I'd have cried," Gehring said.

Even though she was not at the banquet, King said she knew how excited he was.

"He was so surprised," she said. "It was a great honor and he's earned it. He works very hard."

United Way sees benefits of area, campus alliance

by Amy Johnson
The BG News

Many University faculty members and students will contribute their time and effort to the United Way campaign once again this year. United Way and local agencies work together to provide solutions to our community's most serious problems.

The main purpose of the United Way is to increase the capacity for people to care for one another, said Nadine Musser, area director of the United Way branch in Bowling Green.

The part of the campaign directed toward faculty and staff members occurs during the last two weeks in February. The campaign is spread throughout all University departments, said Cindy Oxender, chairwoman of the campaign.

The campaign committee consists of the chairperson, faculty, staff members, graduate assistants and volunteers. Graduate assistants Makeba Clay, Kristi Bonnano and Amy Cole are currently involved in helping to organize the campaign.

"I hope to get with other resident advisers and get ideas on how we can get more students involved in the campaign," said Clay, who is also an assistant hall director of Offenhauer Towers.

According to Oxender, student groups are encouraged to start fund raisers for the United Way campaign, as well.

The United Way benefits not only students but also faculty and staff members, Oxender said.

The benefits are achieved through local United Way organizations such as The Link, YWCA, food pantries, Wood County Council on Alcohol and Drugs, Children's Resource Center, Big Brothers/Big Sisters and many others.

Black Swamp's return profitable

Festival entertains about 22,000 guests

by Heather Cvengros
The BG News

Last weekend's Black Swamp Arts Festival proved to be a fun and profitable time for all.

Jim Tinker, director of Downtown Business Association, felt the festival did well this year. He said cleanup was fast and easy with the help of Theta Chi Fraternity and others who contributed their time.

According to Tinker, the festival received all the breaks it needed. He said good planning paid off with lots of cooperation. Weather was also good in comparison to last year's cold, rainy weather.

"The festival is designed to celebrate the arts and bring people to downtown Bowling Green, and we unequivocally succeeded in those goals," Tinker said.

This year's attendance was estimated to be 22,000.

The DBA helped originate the idea with Arts Allied, and worked on planning with the festival committee. Tinker said there was a much better art showing this year. He added that if there is anything students would like to see more of at the festival, the DBA is open to ideas.

Deb Zappitelli, an artist who displayed watercolors and pastels, said she believed the turnout was very good.

"The festival is a way of the town giving itself a party with cultural and healthy entertainment," she said. "It's a celebration of what the people and town have to offer."

heard of this type of service at larger universities.

If professors do not want this going on in their classes, it is appropriate to honor their wishes, Clark said.

"I have no idea what sort of demand this business will have. My guess is that not very many students will use it," Clark said.

Write from Class is open Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday from 12 p.m. to 7 p.m., Tuesday from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday from 12 p.m. to 5 p.m. To find out more about what Write to Class has to offer, call 352-0660.

The BG News/Ross Wetzner

Looking in amazement at all the fantastic surroundings, this man stands in front of a glass sculpture at the Black Swamp Arts Festival on Main Street last Saturday.

Marge Meserve, an artist who displayed enamel on copper works said, "I was very pleased with the festival. I hope they continue the festival with the good atmosphere it has. The artists are treated as very special people, and the artists respond by giving their best back to the town."

For one artist, the festival was a very profitable and fun experience. Kevin Staas, a University student, displayed his stone sculptures which consisted of one limestone piece and nine alabaster pieces from different parts of the country.

Staas said he sold three of his pieces and received a business card from someone interested in displaying some of Staas' work in his gallery.

"I had positive feedback, which was really encouraging. This was my first show and I had a really good time," he said. "It was a nice experience and hopefully I will do it again."

The activities of the festival also provided "big business" on Main Street.

"It's the busiest I've ever seen since I've worked here. We've seen lots of new customers who come in and discover our jazz and classical section," said Bryce Glass, an employee at Finders Records and Tapes.

NOTES

schools and the majority of our notetakers are above a 3.0 average," Jackson said.

Jackson said he believes most professors are opposed to what he is doing and said that he is not trying to encourage students to skip class.

"I don't think students will just skip class because of the notes," Jackson said. "I think these notes are good supplements for the lectures."

Many University professors have different opinions about Write from Class.

Kenneth Pargament, professor of psychology, said he does not think this is a good idea, except for students who may need to refer to notes in addition to being in class.

"Part of learning is sitting in class and participating. If you are not in class, you are not getting to discuss the lecture with faculty," Pargament said.

Laura Juarez De Ku, instructor of biology, said she does not think this service will help students very much.

"Students need more practice taking notes. This could be a disservice to students who rely on notes for one class, but then don't have them available for another class," Juarez De Ku said. "I admire the guy for his business sense, though."

Joseph Spinelli, associate professor of geography, said the service does not bother him.

"Students borrow notes from each other all the time. Often other students' notes don't make much sense unless you were in the discussion," Spinelli said. "There are too many variables that enter into how students take notes."

Using the service as a substitution for class is not good, but using it as a supplement to lectures can be helpful, Spinelli added.

Eloise Clark, vice president for academic affairs, said she has

Falcons' air attack NFL players to haul in $30 million soars to new levels

by John D. McClain
The Associated Press

by Jamie Schwaberow
The BG News

Bowling Green quarterback Ryan Henry set a school record and a Mid-American Conference record for his almost perfect performance on Saturday against the University of Akron.

Head football coach Gary Blackney discussed the performance of Henry and his receivers in a press conference on Monday morning.

"I think it is a great tribute to Ryan to be able to pick out the receiver who was getting the least amount of coverage," Blackney said.

Henry completed 13 of 14 passes for a 92.9 percentage. His mark surpassed the previous BG record of 91.7 percent held by Jim Bryan. Bryan set the old record in 1955 after going 11 of 12 against Baldwin-Wallace.

The previous league mark was 90.9 percent (10 of 11) by Central Michigan's Ron Rummel in 1977. The mark was set against BG.

"This year Henry is more patient, more poised and more confident, and he realized it is not as important for him to get the ball down the field 16-18 yards. Instead, he's making the six-yard completion and letting the receiver get the other eight, nine, 10 yards," Blackney said.

The Falcons have a talented receiving group as well. The core is led by senior wide receivers Rameir Martin and Ronnie Redd. In Saturday's game Redd was the top receiver with five receptions for 73 yards.

"In our scheme Rameir is going to demand more double coverage, especially when they line up on the same side," Blackney said. "Redd is the split end and he will normally receive more single coverage than the flanker would, that being Martin.

"I think tight end Ryan McElroy said it best in the press conference, with so many defenders paying attention to our two wideouts that it is going to give the tight ends and running backs more catching openings," Blackney said.

Senior tight end McElroy caught five passes against the Zips for 42 yards. The five receptions were a career best.

WASHINGTON -- About 1,300 professional football players will share in a record $30 million settlement of charges arising from the 24-day NFL strike in 1987.

The National Labor Relations Board said Monday the agreement between the NFL Players Association and the NFL Management Council is the largest such award in NLRB history. The settlement includes backpay, incentive bonuses and interest.

A breakdown of how much players from each of the 28 teams would receive was not available Monday, but the agency said distribution of the award was expected within a couple of months. The NLRB said further details are to be announced at a news conference Tuesday.

There was no immediate reaction from the Players Association.

The management council attempted to play down the settlement, saying the award was "part of the $195 million overall settlement that the NFL reached with its players' union in January 1993."

After receiving a complaint from the NFLPA, the NLRB had ruled the council and NFL teams had unlawfully refused to allow returning players to participate in games immediately after the end of the strike Oct. 15.

"The board found that the denial of the returning strikers the right to play or be paid, as well as other acts by league management such as withholding game checks for certain injured reserve players, constituted unfair labor practices in violation of the National Labor Relations Act," NLRB general counsel Fred Feinstein said.

After the NLRB upheld the initial ruling by an administrative law judge, the team owners appealed to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, which had the decision under review.

"This settlement would obviate the need for any additional proceedings before the circuit court," said David Parker, the NLRB director of information.

The strike began Sept. 22 after the NFLPA and the management council were unable to agree on several issues, including free agency in which players would be able to sell their services to the highest bidder after the end of their current contracts.

In its decision in September 1992, the NLRB found the owners had adopted a rule about two weeks into the strike requiring any player wanting to play in a Sunday or Monday game immediately following a settlement or end of the strike to report to work by 1 p.m. on the previous Wednesday.

Replacement players could be signed to play in Sunday games as late as 4 p.m. on the Saturday before the games and in Monday night games as late as 4 p.m. on the same day, the NLRB said.

Depth factor hurts women's golf team

by Christian Pelusi
The BG News

The women's golf team finished 10th out of 17 teams in the 34th annual Redbird Classic at Illinois State University last weekend.

The team, led by senior Jodi Ricker, who shot a three-round total of 243, combined for a score of 1030.

"It's a good tournament," said head coach Todd Brunsink. "A good combination of teams with two Big Ten teams, Purdue and Illinois ... but it's not by any means our toughest tournament of the year."

"Our goal throughout this year is to shoot below 330 per round, and in the final round we shot 336. I was happy with it, but with the scores coming in Sunday, I felt we could have done it," Brunsink added.

He noted the team's consistency is improving, but its depth is still a problem. This may be due to the absence of sophomore Shawna Weaver, who was ruled academically ineligible for the fall season. Weaver averaged 90.42 per round last year.

"Obviously it would have helped if she was in the lineup, but academics precede any type of athletic competition. We look forward to seeing her in the spring," Brunsink said.

"We are having trouble with the fifth and sixth spot. In a five-man tournament, score four, the team plays five and throws out the highest score, and you need all five to play well to use it effectively," Brunsink said.

Team captain Ricker and sophomore Gina Kiel have been the most consistent Falcons, with Ricker shooting an average of 81 per round and Kiel shooting an average of 85.

Freshman Amy Miller and junior Stacey Lavelle rounded out the four who made the scorecard. They averaged 87.6 and 89.6, respectively, for the weekend.

"I think we played pretty well under the circumstances," Ricker said. "Only three out of the five that played had been on the course before, so I think we played all right."

"We need to be more patient. We let bad holes affect us, myself included. We need to put it behind and go on from there. The next hole is different," Ricker said.

Next, the team moves on to the Ferris State Invitational, where Brunsink believes the women can finish stronger.

"It's a tournament where the field isn't super-strong, but it's stronger than it has been in the past," Brunsink said. "Approximately 14 schools will participate and our goal this week is to finish in the top five. Anything lower will be disappointing."

Brunsink, a graduate of Ferris State, hopes his knowledge of the course can aid the women and keep them away from scoring high on difficult holes.

Testaverde's interception overlooked by head coach

by Chuck Melvin
The Associated Press

BEREA, Ohio - The interceptions are piling up on Vinny Testaverde at a rate reminiscent of his worst days at Tampa Bay, and now they've cost the Cleveland Browns a game.

But coach Bill Belichick on Monday absolved Testaverde for the most costly interception in Sunday's 17-10 loss to the Pittsburgh Steelers. The interception, Testaverde's fourth of the day and the third picked off by Steelers safety Darren Perry, ended Cleveland's last-gasp drive with 54 seconds left.

In two games, Testaverde has been intercepted six times, a pace that would easily surpass the career-worst 35 he threw for Tampa Bay in 1988. One of those six came on a Hail Mary-type pass at the end of the half of the Browns' opener at Cincinnati last week - clearly not a quarterback's fault, Belichick said.

The final pass Sunday, the coach said, was similar, because it came in a desperate fourth-and-16 situation. Testaverde badly underthrew the intended receiver, Michael Jackson, and Perry grabbed it at the Pittsburgh 10-yard line.

"I know the ball slipped on him [Testaverde] a little bit, but that was another throw-it-up-for-grabs situation," Belichick said.

One of the three receivers on the play was short of the 16 yards needed for a first down, and the other two were covered, Belichick said.

"There wasn't a real good spot to throw that one," he said. "I think Vinny did the smartest thing he could do in that situation. He bought some time in the pocket, waited for the pattern to develop and then tried to throw it up there to Michael and let him go up there and fight for it. But the ball slipped, and he didn't get everything on it. It would have been a 50-50 chance at best anyhow."

Perry said after the game that Testaverde was tipping his hand by "zeroing in on his receivers." Browns offensive coordinator reacted sharply to that suggestion Monday.

"Those defensive backs from Pittsburgh talk a lot," Crosby said. "You look at the film, and they weren't staring Vinny Testaverde down any more than I was. They talk big. They gave up a ton of yardage, and they couldn't give up a ton more. So what Pittsburgh needs to do is pay attention to what they're doing and not what we're doing, and take care of their own house."

Crosby and Belichick said they never considered replacing Testaverde with backup Mark Rypien at any point during the game.

"Nobody can play a perfect game," Crosby said. "He didn't play one, and I didn't call one. To start talking about the quarterback playing a perfect game, you're barking up the wrong tree. He's not going to do that."

Testaverde said his confidence was not shaken by the rash of interceptions.

"I'm just disappointed because we lost - more because of the way we lost," he said. "I really feel we beat ourselves. The Pittsburgh Steelers didn't beat us."

Falcons looking good
After getting clobbered by Bowling Green 45-0 Saturday night, Akron's head coach had some very lofty praise for the Falcons.

"This may be Gary's [Blackney, BG's head coach] best football team that he has had," Faust said. "I think they're a lot more diversified offensively. Their quarterback is capable of doing a lot of things which makes their whole team better."

"Plus, their kicking game is excellent. Their entire kicking game is the best that it has been in a long time."

Quick demise
Toledo head coach Gary Pinkel had an easy explanation why the Rockets blew a 17-7 lead against Purdue en route to a 51-17 thrashing.

"When you give up two quick turnovers that go for touchdowns and then miss two field goals that you should make, it's just too hard to overcome that kind of a turnaround in the point spread."

"I'm really concerned with our kicking game," Pinkel said. "That's one area that has been strong for us in the past and we really need to make some big strides in that area."

No moral victory
Although the Rockets had most MAC football fans on the edges of their seats when they held a three-point advantage over Purdue at the half-way point, Pinkel wasn't very impressed.

"I don't believe in moral victories at all, absolutely not," Pinkel said.

MAC Players of the Week
Central Michigan's Brian Pruitt and Bowling Green's Willie Gibson have been selected as the Players of the Week in the Mid-American Conference.

Pruitt, a senior tailback from Saginaw, Mich., rushed for 274 yards on 24 carries. His total was the second highest rushing total in school history and the sixth best in the MAC. He also scored touchdowns on runs of 4, 59 and 60 yards in the Chippewas' 35-23 victory over Nevada-Las Vegas.

Pruitt currently ranks second in Division I football statistics with a rushing average of 185.5 yards per game.

Gibson, a senior linebacker from San Diego, totaled three tackles and one assist in the Falcons' 45-0 shutout of Akron. He also had two sacks for 22 yards in losses and tipped a pass that resulted in an interception. Bowling Green held the Zips to 153 yards of total offense and nine first downs.

Nebraska not kind to volleyball team

by John Gibney
The BG News

The Falcon volleyball team suffered a thrashing last weekend in Nebraska, but returned with high hopes and a positive outlook for the start of the Mid-American Conference season. Three matches produced three losses for BG at the Nebraska Invitational, and their record now stands at 2-5.

"People may look at our 2-5 record and wonder how good we are, but they need to know we are playing the best competition in the nation," said head coach Denise Van De Walle. "I'm happy we went to the tournament and glad the players got to experience the level of competition we faced all week long."

The first match of the tournament had the Falcons pitted against Nebraska, who entered as the No. 2 ranked team in the country. The Cornhuskers' outstanding talent showed throughout the match as they won convincingly 15-1, 15-0, 15-9. The highlight for the Falcons came in the third game when they took a brief lead over the favorites.

"Nebraska has the makeup of a national champion," Van De Walle said. "The fact that we were leading at one point gave the team confidence that they

BG cross country tripped up by OU

by Andy Dugan
The BG News

Ohio University is still a team to beat for the men's and women's cross country teams after Saturday's three- and four-way competitions in Athens.

The men's team faced OU, the University of Rio Grande and Marshall, winning the latter two with scores of 25-34 and 27-32. BG lost to the Bobcats 13-43.

"We won two out of the three competitions," said men's head coach Sid Sink. "OU beat us, but that was kind of expected. They were picked to finish second in the conference this year and we were picked to finish around sixth or fifth."

Sink said the absence of top runners Tim Arndt and Brad Schaser undoubtedly had some impact on the team's overall performance.

"We did decide to red-shirt Schaser this year, and I think that kind of hurt the team," Sink said. "Arndt was out with a sore Achilles."

Despite the docked runners, Sink was very pleased with the performance of those who did run.

"Of our top five guys, four of them were freshmen," Sink said. "We didn't do too bad considering -- they ran very well for their first collegiate race."

Finishing in the top five for the Falcons were: Jim Weckesser, fifth place (out of 40) with a time of 25:49.37; Brad Bowman, ninth with 26:02.62; Jason Salak, 16th with 26:31.08; Jason Izvorski, 18th with 26:40.30; and Scott Powell, 19th with 26:42.12.

Sink said he was pleased with the togetherness the team displayed throughout the race.

"It was a really good race for grouping," Sink said. "The team really stuck together. They stuck together better than past teams have. We really need to work together and so far we are. We have a long way to go after getting beaten by OU that badly."

Sink also said he was pleased with the individual performances of some of the runners.

"For his first race in college, Jim ran very well," Sink said. "Second place was 25:45 -- he was only four seconds behind. He was a good runner in high school, and I think he now realizes that he is good in college. Bowman was injured all last year and I think after this race he's got some confidence back."

Sink now faces conference opponent Kent on Saturday at Kent.

"Kent is a team very similar to our own," Sink said. "They are a young team. We can win this one, but we really have to pull together to do it."

The women split their Saturday meet against the Bobcats and the University of Rio Grande.

OU won 20-35, but BG outscored URG 17-42.

Tracey Losi was the top runner at the meet, winning with a time of 18:02.91 -- a full 23 seconds ahead of second place. Laura Hall was seventh overall and number two for the Falcons with a time of 19:11.10. Renee Stayer was eighth with 19:17.68, followed by Christin Lacroix in 10th with 19:19.04 and Beth Staszak in 11th with 19:31.04.

New basketball coaches hired

by Mike Kazimore
The BG News

The Bowling Green men's basketball team made two coaching changes during the off-season.

Stan Heath, a former assistant coach at Wayne State University, joined the Falcons in July after Marc Ivaroni left for the University of Virginia.

The University announced Monday that Keith Noftz, a former Ohio high school coach, was also hired as an assistant to Bowling Green head basketball coach Jim Larranaga.

Noftz compiled a 208-151 record and won two league titles, six sectional championships and three regional titles in 16 years as a prep coach. His teams also made three appearances at the state tournament.

"Back in the spring when it became apparent that two of our coaches were moving on, there was a great interest in applying for the openings because of the tremendous amount of success that our assistant coaches have had in the past," Larranaga said.

"We had a tremendous group of applicants, and Coach Heath's name became very high on my list because of his success as a Division II assistant coach, helping Wayne State reach the Final Four," Larranaga said. "He will be able to help us with our recruiting, and the players are really going to like playing for him."

Noftz, who most recently comes from John Adams High School in Indiana, will fill the void left when Reggie Renkin took a full-time assistant coaching job with Boston University.

"Coach Noftz actually interviewed for the position that Coach Heath was hired for," Larranaga said. "So I'm really excited that I was able to get them both."

As the restricted earnings coach, Noftz will not be involved in the recruiting process but will work with all of the players on campus, Larranaga said.

"Noftz is by far the most experienced coach I've ever had on my staff," Larranaga said. "He's especially experienced in the kind of things that we will be having him do -- like working more personally with the players."

Big Ten officials admit to bad call in Stanford game

by Mario Fox
The Associated Press

CHICAGO -- The Big Ten said Monday that officials mistakenly awarded a touchdown to Stanford in the Cardinal's 41-41 tie with Northwestern, but the error won't change the outcome of the game.

It was the third time in a year that the conference acknowledged that mistakes by Big Ten officials altered the result of a football game.

"We don't have an instant replay or access to go upstairs and look at a monitor and reconsider the call," David Parry, the league's supervisor of officials, said from his Michigan City, Ind., home. "There is not much to do but live with the judgment."

On Saturday, Stanford's Mike Mitchell fumbled as he was about to cross the goal line and Northwestern recovered the ball in the end zone for an apparent touch-back. But officials conferred and decided Mitchell had crossed the goal line before losing the ball.

After reviewing ESPN replays, the conference said Monday that "game officials were not in position to see Mike Mitchell's fumble between the 2- and 1-yard lines." The league said that resulted in "an obvious error in judgment" and "the Wildcats should have been awarded possession."

The Big Ten said decisions of game officials are final, but "when obvious errors of judgment or rules application have a significant affect on the outcome of the game, the conference believes public acknowledgement of the error is appropriate."

"The officials are rated and graded, and records are kept. I can assure you of that," Parry said.

On two occasions last year, Illinois lost because of bad calls.

In Arizona's 16-14 win on Sept. 18, two Illini fumbles that were picked up and run back for touchdowns should have been ruled dead at the points of recovery.

Illinois lost to Oregon 13-7 the following week, but the Big Ten said officials should have let stand linebacker Simeon Rice's TD after he stripped the ball from a Ducks' running back. Instead, they ruled the Oregon player's forward progress had been stopped.

the ninth-rated team in the nation, 16-14, 15-9, 15-1.

The greatest chance for winning a match came against Wyoming, the final opponent for the Falcons. The Cowboys, a top-30 team, had other thoughts, however, having upset ASU in their opening match. BG took the first game, but Wyoming fought back and won 14-16, 15-10, 15-5, 15-11.

"I'm not ashamed of coming back home 0-3," Van De Walle said. "We gave it our best shot, but the level of competition we were playing..."

Senior Jessica Andrasko's aggressive play earned her a spot on the all-tournament team. She finished the weekend with 27 kills and seven service aces.

Van De Walle said Carlyn Esslinger and Jodi Olson also turned in exceptional performances. Esslinger led the team in blocks and hitting percentage.
