dent Services parking lot Wednesday morning. The mock accident was sponsored by Never Again in celebration of Alcohol Awareness Week.

Mock car accident attempts to raise student awareness

By Cristl Ellwood
The BG News

A student makes the choice to drive under the influence of alcohol. His two passengers have not been drinking. All of a sudden the car veers off the road and into a tree.

This scenario was the backdrop at the parking lot outside the of Student Services Building Wednesday afternoon. A mock car crash was staged for Alcohol Awareness Week.

The University organization Never Again sponsored the event in hopes of making students aware of the dangers and responsibilities that come with drinking and driving.

Never Again was started 10 years ago by the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity after two of its brothers were killed by a drunk driver.

Since then, the car crash simulation has been acted out every four years.

"Hopefully this will make [students] realize the consequences of drinking and driving," Never Again President Tracy Snare said.

A tarp was lifted to reveal the bodies of the driver and his passengers. One female passenger was thrown through the windshield and onto the hood. A student volunteer from the audience was asked to call the dispatcher.

The passenger, 18-year-old Nikki, was described as having multiple lacerations to the face as a result of broken glass and abnormal breathing from the impact of the dashboard. She was not wearing a seatbelt.

Kim, another passenger, was

BGSU golfer in fair condition following accident on course

By Christian Pelusi
The BG News

Freshman golf team member Corey Cameron had surgery yesterday to relieve pressure in his skull from a freak accident at Forrest Creason Golf Course.

Cameron, a native of Racine, Wis., is listed in fair condition, according to a St. Vincent Medical Center spokeswoman.

The accident occurred Sunday when Cameron was qualifying for the team's tournament in Memphis, Tenn. on Oct. 24-25.

Teammate Jason Carbone was playing with Cameron at the time of the accident.

"[Cameron] was on the first hole of the final round of qualifying. He hit his third shot into the bunker and after pitching out of the bunker, he was raking the trap when he got hit," Carbone said. "Someone on the 18th hole hit him with their tee shot."

Deliberation begins in rape trial

By Aaron Epple
The BG News

The jury deliberation in the rape trial of a former University of Toledo football player begins today.

The highlights of the second day of Troy Parker's trial included testimonies from the UT football coach, the victim and the defendant.

During Parker's testimony, Gary Bishop, a Wood County prosecuting attorney, played a taped phone conversation between Parker and the victim. On the tape, Parker told the victim he wanted her to see him without his ski mask.

John Helm, an investigator for the Wood County Prosecutors office, said Parker told him he was not wearing a ski mask when he entered the victim's house.

Parker said he learned of the ski mask after seeing an article about the rape in a newspaper. He also said he was just trying to get her to admit she was lying.

"I was just throwing statements at her to see what'd she'd say," he said, "I wanted to get her side of the story. I wanted her to spill the beans."

The phone call took place one week after the alleged rape.

Prosecuting attorney Gary Bishop asked Parker why he waited a week to make the call.

"I don't know, why not?" Parker said.

Parker claimed he and the victim knew each other and discussed his football career.

He said the victim let him in and she voluntarily took off her clothes to have intercourse.

He claimed the victim enjoyed performing oral sex on him and that they talked to each other after intercourse.

"We complimented each other on our performances," Parker said.

According to Parker, the victim then asked if she could see him again. Parker said he told her he would not see her because he had a girlfriend.

Parker said she started to argue with him.

Parker said the victim threatened to call a friend to assault him, and he threatened to tell everybody he worked with how "easy" she was.

The victim said she had never seen Parker before in her life. She also denied ever threatening him.

When Bishop asked the victim for her reaction to the oral sex, she said she was disgusted.

"I gagged, it was repulsive," she said.

Gary Pinkel, University of Toledo's head football coach, was allowed to testify for the defense. Pinkel spoke about Parker's work ethic and character.

He said Parker was never in trouble at school and there were never any complaints from any

Representative candidates debate Frustrated students post e-mail fliers

Gardner, Purdy argue about health care reform, abortion

By Cynthia Kent
The BG News

The two District Four State Representative candidates stressed the importance of additional funding for education during an open forum Wednesday.

Incumbent Republican candidate Randall Gardner and Democratic candidate Bruce Purdy, a University senior, said funding for education needs to be improved. Education is not receiving priority status in the state budget, according to the candidates.

Gardner supports Resolution One, a bill which makes education a higher priority and helps sustain equity problems.

"In the last 20 years, the percentage of the state budget for primary, secondary and higher education has declined," Gardner said. "It will be a major factor in helping to deal with giving education priority status and providing additional funds to get more equity."

Concerning primary and secondary education, Purdy said each individual school district should receive equal funding so every district can have equal opportunities for programs and finance.

"As a student, I am familiar with the educational process and the need for equity," Purdy said. "It is a problem throughout the state and it needs to be resolved right away."

Many college students are forced to transfer from universities to community colleges because the state government is making cuts in higher education, Purdy said.

"We must look at how [the state government] is generating and dispersing funds," he said. "The money going into the general [education] fund should stay in

Frustrated students post e-mail fliers

Publishers claim administrators won't address computer issues

By Heather Cvengros
The BG News

Those frustrated with the increasing problems within the University's computer facilities posted fliers throughout campus encouraging faculty, staff and students to e-mail their complaints directly to the administration.

The multi-colored fliers state "E-mail Paul [Olscamp] and his staff and tell him you want what you've paid for." Administrators' e-mail addresses were posted on the back.

The purpose behind the fliers was to get students to act, said one of the flier's publishers who wishes to remain anonymous.

"Students were not getting listened to," the publisher said. "There were proposals put through and they said they would give us a decision, but it was pushed back and pushed back. It's not fair to the students."

See COMPUTERS, page four.

Computer lab problems

- ✓ Fliers placed all over the University describe inefficiencies in the computer labs on campus.
- ✓ Some University administrators agree that changes must be made to update the computer labs.
- ✓ Students believe changes must be made to benefit the University community.

Clinton's policies conflict

Clinton and his administration have been busy. They've been busy in Haiti, Iraq, Israel and North Korea.

The United States has been directly involved with the achievement of peace all over the world with events ranging from the PLO-Israeli agreement last year to Jean-Bertrand Aristide's recent return to power in Haiti.

Last year Clinton hosted Yasser Arafat, leader of the PLO, and Yitzak Rabin of Israel for the signing of a peace agreement, which was perhaps one of the most important steps toward peace in the Middle East.

In addition, Clinton has spent the last couple of weeks successfully squelching Saddam Hussein's most recent threat against Kuwait.

Of course we cannot forget the recent events in Haiti. Clinton's work and the negotiations of former president Jimmy Carter helped to restore Aristide to power and peace to peoples' lives.

Clinton was involved in helping to establish the peace agreement between Jordan and Israel -- just signed Monday.

Most recently, Clinton has achieved an agreement with North Korea, convincing leaders of the country to stop making nuclear weapons.

So far, the operative word has been peace. Not many can argue against that. But where does domestic policy -- the other half of Clinton's job -- fit into this picture? Where is Clinton when people of his own country need him -- traipsing off to the other side of the world?

Not really. He came up with a health-care plan. Perhaps the plan lacked popularity and total feasibility, but he didn't just forget us -- Clinton had his nation's best interests in mind.

Clinton also passed a crime bill. As of yet, it is too soon to really know if it will be beneficial, but again, we can't say he forgot us.

The News believes Clinton has been doing a decent job. Establishing world peace is no easy task, but Clinton is trying and achieving success after success.

Yes, there are many other problems throughout the world -- consider Bosnia and Rwanda. Consider also the problems at home -- the economy, the homelessness and the AIDS epidemic, among others.

Perhaps Clinton should be more attentive to the problems at home. But we cannot say that what he's been doing to achieve peace throughout the world is less important.

Opportunities plentiful in college

There comes a time in every semester where the work comes in faster than you can turn it out. Papers, exams and presentations are stacked up and all you want to do is sit down and relax to a good episode of "MST 3000" or take a long nap.

You can't -- you want to -- but you most definitely can't, if you want to stay in school.

Every now and then you get those kind of urges mid-semester and sometimes you give into them. I do, to a fault. Midnight poker games, endless hours of Sega playing or just general hijinks with the roomies.

It tends to not only take a toll on the GPA, but also increases the amount of stress, especially if your trying to finish a paper at 11 a.m. that is due at 2 p.m.

So, I sit and wonder, why do people do this to themselves and more importantly why do I do it to myself? Can we not handle the great responsibilities that come with freedom.

If you happened to read one of my esteemed peers' columns a few weeks ago, the answer is no! However, I think Norm was just having some kind of mid-life crisis, and that is perfectly all right. However, I wish to encourage you to keep on pursuing that hedonistic dream that most of us partake in Thursday through Saturday.

It is my educated opinion that we are here for education first, but social fraternizing comes in as a close second.

Matt Fair

With all that in mind, we come to that gut check I have been alluding to. Every once in awhile, especially amidst all the hubbub that is life here at BG, one needs time by themselves, and no I am not referring to the bathroom. You have to get away from all to focus on why you are here. For some it may be the library, for others it might be at Downtown, but for me it is in my car.

The car is the one place I can truly feel in total control of everything. One such occasion when the stress was mounting, occurred last week. Even though I had a German exam later that evening, I made up some excuse to drive home.

One of the great advantages of only living an hour away is that when ever I am in trouble, or just plain depressed about anything I get on Route 6 and head east for Norwalk. The drive home is a relaxing one. Some people might say that an hour of looking at farms is boring, I think it is humbling. Everytime that I make that journey, I can experience the tranquility that is country life.

When I finally reach home I usually can sit down in the living room and go over old newspaper and let my mom pamper me. However, on this occasion Mom was not home and I was pressed for time, so decided to raid the fridge, go over some old news and then make the return trip. I opened up the latest issue of The Norwalk Reflector and it hit me.

Those of us that are approaching our 23rd birthday experience a lot of changes with our old friends. Some move away to get jobs and some even do the unthinkable and get married, but what I saw before me was absolutely shocking. It was a small article in the lower corner of page three -- the headline read Michael Lawyer dies at 22.

Death is something that is not a rare occurrence to anyone, but the way the story read was certainly something that will stay with me. You see Mike was a real friendly guy. We went through Catholic grade school together and he was always a fun person from what I can remember. Then he went to the public school and his life went on in obscurity.

I heard a little about him later on through a mutual friend. He had a job at gas station and then a little later on he had some trouble with the law for stealing car stereos.

Then around four weeks ago Mike took it upon himself to go out to a country road, block the exhaust pipe and simply sit in the car and die. The body was found two weeks later with a note that read, "I am sorry, I let everyone down."

This, ladies and gentlemen, is a reality check.

The sheer anonymity of all is what really disturbs me. The fact that I had to read it in the paper is not surprising, but also embarrassing. Here is a man that could have been exactly in the same place I am in now, except for the fact he never had the same chances I did.

He never saw the opportunities that I did and because he ended his life. It could have easily been me given the wrong circumstances. It could have easily been anyone of you reading this column now, given the wrong circumstances.

Perhaps what can most be learned from Mike's actions is that we have the opportunity now to do something, to do anything. An opportunity that some people never get. Not only an opportunity to better ourselves by sitting in a classroom, but by going out and actually living life.

One of my favorite philosophies in life, especially when I feel that the whole world is caving in on me, is that somewhere there is someone having a worse day than I am.

You have to take a look at yourself when you get to that point and really think of how lucky you are to be here.

Alumni faces ghosts and likes them

It was Friday night and Bowling Green was a ghost town.

It wasn't the freshman who'd defected for home for the weekend who were making it so, but rather the journalism school alumni, their bags packed with memories, who arrived for a reunion and who kept meeting themselves, 25 years younger, at every turn.

On the way to the j-school's "new" headquarters, they cruised through University Hall. There, behind the now-locked door of the photo lab, they saw themselves renting beat-up box cameras, proudly cranking out their first prints and being lured into darkrooms "just to see what might develop."

In the quiet, carpeted suite next door they saw their ghost selves at their old wood desks, pounding away at ancient Underwoods, screaming into scratched black phones, turning out issue after issue of The BG News and believing there could be nothing better than this in all the world.

In the darkened offices across the hall they saw all the instructors they'd tormented for years in the classes they occasionally attended, admired the photojournalism displays in the cases the magically reappeared on the tiled walls, and sipped cardboard-flavored coffee out of the 10-cent vending machine.

After that, West Hall just didn't hold much familiar, despite the well-preserved issues of the News they'd worked so hard on. The ghosts struggled to edit copy with fat black pencils and soft erasers at a table overrun by computers -- they just couldn't produce thought-provoking editorials or scintillating sports stories without the smoke and smells of the '60s in the air.

So they escaped to downtown and a restaurant that hadn't changed much, and they took over a back room and felt somehow alive in the spirit again. They remembered when and they asked about who and they wondered just what had ever wanted to make them leave, or how they had ever found the time to graduate, and for an hour or two they were 19 and 21 again and nothing was impossible.

Later, at what had been the Canterbury Inn, they sat in a ghost drummer's lap, sipping flat, warm brew that could have been left over from their era, and drew the stares of students who wondered aloud if these graying, over-dressed parent-types were members of the Downtown Merchants' Association out checking their investments.

Ha, the ghosts snickered, you think you invented this place and getting drunk on Friday night and roaming the streets looking for action, wearing faded jeans and message T-shirts and strips of leader around your necks and ankles.

We were here first, they snorted, and one would have trusted us out on a deck where bands used to be because we'd have dived over the railing and flown down the main street to the tidy lawn where Howard's was and leaped into fishbowls of the nastiest beer in the Midwest and had deep philosophical discussions about life and love and war and peace and the walls would have taken up our very essence.

And in the end we'd have staggered home, sometimes alone, sometimes arm in arm with someone who used to be a stranger and would be again, and we'd have had sex without a care on sloppy old waterbeds, and got up the next day to do it all over again and we would have known we were as near to heaven as we would ever want to be.

Then one of the ghosts did the unforgivable -- he yawned. And allowed as how he was fading and needed to hit the sack because he just wasn't used to these late hours anymore.

And another, who in former life would have gone home with the yawner and danced -- or whatever -- until dawn, said, yeah, it was way past her bedtime, and still another had to race off to meet the wife and kids who were flying in for the big game the next day, and one by one they got up slowly and walked back into the 40-something bodies that has dragged them out here.

But what had been, was, and thankfully, forever shall be, somewhere, amen.

Thanks for the memories old friends.

Lisa Boulanger McNerney is a 1972 journalism school graduate who returned to campus for the first time in 16 years, looked her ghosts in the face, and found them good.

ACROSS THE WORLD

Bomb kills 10 in Tel Aviv

TEL AVIV, Israel - A bomb exploded on a bus outside the downtown shopping district today, and army radio said 10 people were killed and dozens wounded.

The blast ripped apart two commuter buses during rush-hour traffic on Tel Aviv's main Dizengoff Street shortly before 9 a.m. (3 a.m. EDT), witnesses said.

"People flew from the sidewalk, the head of the driver was completely cut off," said Eitan Yamini, who witnessed the explosion and saw five or six dead.

Hospital officials said 32 people were wounded.

Avraham Gilitsky, who was near the scene, said he saw heads detached from bodies and car parts fly through the air.

The force of the blast hurled a large twisted piece of metal from the bus onto a power line. Dozens of people ran, screaming in panic along the street after the blast, which occurred between Dizengoff Square and Frishman Street.

Police and witnesses said the bomb was aboard the bus although there were reports initially that a car bomb was involved.

Police pushed back a crowd and sent in bomb squad experts after a suspected second bomb was found. A helicopter flew overhead and dozens of ambulances raced in to pick up wounded and dead.

"It is horrifying and hard to describe. There are bodies next to the bus. The entire bus is destroyed. This is a very, very sad moment," said Tel Aviv mayor Roni Milo.

The explosion comes after Islamic militants committed two major terrorist acts in the past ten days, shaking the already fragile peace between Israelis and Palestinians.

In London, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin described the attack as "very bad news."

"It is a continuation of the attempt by those who are the enemies of peace, the extreme Islamic terror groups," he said.

the general [education] fund."

Gardner said ensuring that universities have strong education programs will strengthen higher education as well as primary and secondary education.

"As a former teacher and graduate of the University, I think education is a very important issue. Universities that emphasize teacher training should have state support," Gardner said. "I do not think the funding formula treats them fairly."

The candidates also addressed the need for candidates in any election to control their campaign finances.

Purdy said there is no need for candidates to spend thousands of dollars on political campaigns. Limiting the amount of money candidates spend allows voters to make decisions based on issues instead of funds.

"By allowing equal expenditures, it allows the voters a better chance for an equal vote," Purdy said. "It is important that each candidate is on a fair playing field."

Gardner said he sponsored an amendment in the State House of Representatives requiring 50 percent of candidates' campaign money to come from the legislative district or county.

"It is a powerful amendment to reduce the influence of special interest and political action groups," Gardner said. "[The amendment] reduces the amount of money that comes from Columbus and elections."

Abortion and health care were two issues on which the candidates clearly had different views.

Purdy said the subject of abortion is a moral, not a governmental, issue and the government should not be involved in the woman's decision to have an abortion.

The decision should only be made between the woman and her doctor, he said.

However, Gardner said additional regulation and protection should be made for unborn babies, the woman, and their families.

Concerning health care, Purdy's goal is to make it available for every citizen in Ohio. He said Ohio can set the standards for other states health care system.

However, Gardner said he does not think every citizen in Ohio should be "thrown into a state-run health care system."

Author to read works at Union

By Heather Cvengros
The BG News

Award-winning author Jaimy Gordon will read from her work Friday, Oct. 21 at 7 p.m. in the Faculty Lounge in the University Union.

The University's creative writing program is sponsoring the event, which it has done annually for the past 25 years.

"I was very much taken by her writing in the novel, 'She Drove Without Stopping,'" said Howard McCord, director of the creative writing program.

The creative writing program looks for interesting authors and, if they are available, invites them to recite their works at the University, McCord said.

"It's a good opportunity for students to be able to meet with the authors and listen to some of their best works. They are also able to get an idea of life as a writer and learn about the career," McCord said.

In 1991, Gordon won an Academy-Institute Award for her fiction from the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters.

She has received several creative writing grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, as well as fellowships to the Fine Arts Work Center in Provincetown, Mass. and to the Bunting Institute at Radcliffe College.

In addition to writing poetry and fiction, Gordon translates German writings into English. She also teaches fiction writing at Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo, Mich.

The reading is free and open to the public.

also thrown through the windshield. She was not so lucky -- she died before the ambulance arrived.

The Bowling Green Fire Division tried to revive her with the electrical paddles but concluded she was dead. The body was then removed so the rescue team could work on removing the others and help them.

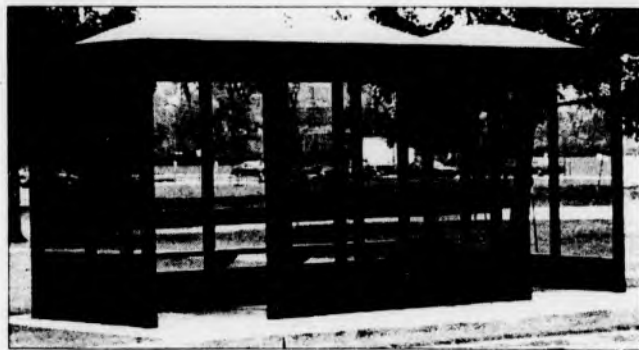

Next, the rescue team removed one of the car doors using the "jaws of life" and put Nikki in a neck brace. Through screams of pain, she was removed and placed onto a stretcher and taken away in an ambulance.

Scott, the driver, refused hospitalization and instead paced around in a daze, apparently thinking about the consequences of what he had done. Later, he was read his Miranda rights, arrested and taken away in a squad car.

An officer stayed with the body until the coroner arrived. A hearse arrived to take Kim's corpse to the morgue.

When the hearse left the parking lot, the officers began their routine inventory of the vehicle and its contents. Tape was applied to the exact location of the tires so the investigating officers could determine the cause of the accident.

Scott Conley, the actor who played the fictional character of the driver Scott, said the demonstration "makes you realize the danger of drinking and driving."

University builds shuttle stops for students' comfort

By Katie Simmons
The BG News

This winter, waiting for the University shuttle service may not be as cold at three of the shuttle stops due to new shelters set up for students to sit under.

Last Friday, three new additions to the University were set up near the McDonald Quadrangle, the Harshman Residence Hall, and the Visitors Center for those students who use the University transportation system.

"This has been something the University has talked about for years through the students, administration and faculty -- it was a collective effort altogether," said Stacie Schroeder, the administration assistant to parking and traffic.

The University submitted the idea into the budget for this school year.

"It's something to block the wind out there," Schroeder said. "When it gets cold, we want the people who use the services to be comfortable."

The three locations for the shelters are the most used shuttle stops on campus and were the ideal locations to try out the new services.

"These three areas were the areas most used by people," Schroeder said. "Right now we don't have any plans to install any more shelters in the near future because the shuttle routes change every so often, and these three areas seem to remain on the changing routes."

All other shuttle stops seem to have buildings in the vicinity to block waiting travelers from the Bowling Green wind, and at this time shelters at those areas don't seem necessary.

Student views of the new shelters seemed to be overall positive, especially during yesterday's rainy afternoon.

"This is definitely a lot better when you're waiting for the shuttle," sophomore Ann Masterson said, while waiting for the shuttle under the new shelter. "These shelters are going to really matter in the winter."

While most outlooks were good, some students found the shelters had some setbacks.

"Overall, they are going to be really nice when it's raining and snowing out, so we don't have to sit in the cold while we're waiting," said Nona Cleavenger, a sophomore who uses the shuttle service frequently. "Then again, I'm sure they cost the University a lot of money which could have been spent on other things when we [consider that] nine times out of 10, students can walk to where ever they need to go on campus in about 10 minutes."

Funds for the shelters came from parking and traffic and the vice president of operations.

Panel discusses maintaining Hispanic cultural traditions

Program focuses on achievement of area Chicanos

By Angelica D. Huesca
The BG News

A panel discussion about stereotypes, racism and maintaining Hispanic cultural traditions in Ohio was the first in a four-part series on Chicanos and Mexican Americans Wednesday.

The program titled "An Introduction to the Chicano/Mexican American Society," addressed the topic "Hidden in the Fields -- Ohio's Chicanos/Mexican Americans."

The program began with a movie that served as an introduction to the series. The film was followed by a panel that featured Mexican Americans in the Toledo and Bowling Green area.

The panelists included -- Ramon Llayan, Elvira Gonzales, Marsha Hartz and Rolando Andrade, a University professor of ethnic studies.

The panelists spoke on Mexican culture and social concepts related to being a Mexican American in Northwest Ohio.

The panelists also discussed how the film related to the events they have experienced in their lives.

"What we gave was an introduction to the cultural heritage of the community."

Mary Wrighten
Multicultural Services librarian

Wednesday's program was part of an annual cultural diversity series sponsored by the Libraries and Learning Resources Multicultural Affairs Committee.

Mary Wrighten, the Multicultural Services librarian, said the committee was formed in 1988

"in order to serve everyone's need to be aware of differences."

The next program, titled "The Migrant Experience in Northwest Ohio" is scheduled for Wed. Nov. 16 at 10 a.m. in the Jerome Library Conference Room.

"I hope that we are really informing people and that people will come to the program," Wrighten said.

All the University's cultural diversity classes were invited to see the program. A calendar of events listed the program at area schools. Woodmore High School's Spanish class attended the event, as did students from one of the University's cultural diversity courses, Wrighten said.

"What we gave was an introduction to the cultural heritage of the community," she said. "We were pleased at the outcome and hope that this will continue."

professors.

Pinkel later said he had not seen Parker during the month the rape allegedly occurred. During his closing arguments Bishop described Parker as a "cocky, arrogant, overconfident man who thinks he is God's gift to women."

Bishop said Parker's mindset was that the victim enjoyed the rape, so he felt free to call her up and ask her to meet him somewhere.

He said Parker is a liar by his own admission.

"He lied to his girlfriend, he lied on the tape," he said, "There's just lies on top of lies." James Banks, the defense attorney for Parker, argued that if the victim really feared being attacked, she would have secured her house.

Bishop disagreed.

"In routine real-life situations, when we see the screen door is open, we close it. Besides, she said the wind had blown her door open in the past," he said.

Men's club team earns 2nd place finish in tourney

By Brett Thompson
The BG News

The Bowling Green club soccer team hosted the third annual Club Soccer Classic tournament this past weekend, earning a hard-fought second-place finish.

Twelve teams from Ohio, Indiana and Michigan participated in the tournament, making it the largest club soccer tournament of the regular season in this region.

The team earned a spot in the quarterfinals, playing Xavier University to a scoreless tie and edging Ball State University, 1-0.

Nate Lee provided all the offense Bowling Green would need when he deposited a penalty kick into the corner of the net midway through the second half. Alex Delfavric and Brian Salco earned the shutouts in goal, but the defense was the difference in both games.

"Miami has an excellent team with a lot of individual talent, but we seem to have [its] number this year."

Jonathan Broadfoot
BG defender

"Our defense has played well all season and this weekend was a perfect example," Salco said. "John Hazlett, Darren Rigel, Joel Calkins and the rest of these guys deserve a lot of credit for our success this season."

Bowling Green defeated Kent State University, 1-0 in overtime in the quarterfinals, setting up a showdown with MAC rival, Miami University in the semifinals.

After falling behind 1-0 at the half, Scott Kelly broke BG out of its offensive slumber with his second goal of the tournament, beating the Miami goalkeeper with a low shot to the near post.

Minutes later, Drew Gartner put in the game-winner with bicycle kick from a cross by Tripp Bacon.

"Miami has an excellent team with a lot of individual talent, but we seem to have [its] number this year," defender Jonathan Broadfoot said. "This was an intense game, as they usually are with Miami, and I think it took a physical and mental toll on us going into the finals."

Decimated by injuries and fatigue, Bowling Green hobbled into the finals against a powerful Ohio State team. Falling behind early in the game, BG constantly pressured the Ohio State goal.

The team finally found the break it was looking for when Sean Smalley scored on a loose ball in the closing seconds to send the game into overtime. BG's luck would soon run out, though, as Ohio State scored in the second overtime period to win the tournament.

"This is a tough loss for us," forward Mike Martin said. "I'm proud of the team for the tenacity we showed throughout the weekend, but we really wanted that first-place trophy."

The BG News

Harmon's goal gives BG 1-0 victory

Ypsilanti, Mich. - Entering Wednesday's game with Eastern Michigan, Bowling Green had lost three consecutive games and fallen out of first place in the Mid-American Conference race.

And starting the third place Falcons in the face this coming weekend is a trip to one of the MAC co-leaders, Miami.

So the 1-0 victory over the Eagles was more than just three points in the win column. BG also snapped a four game losing streak on the road and kept alive hopes that it can still finish first in the MAC.

"It's instrumental for the rest of the season," BG goal scorer Jamie Harmon said. "Our goal is to get into the and get in the play-in game."

"It's very important for us because it gets our morale up for a big game," midfielder Steve Klein said. "Plus it's our first road victory so that makes everyone feel pretty good."

Harmon's goal in the 58th minute was enough for the Falcons who improved to 9-5 overall and 3-1 in the MAC. Midfielder Brian Glibkowski split the Eagles defense with a pass through the midfield. Harmon then ran on to the ball and was in alone on EMU goalkeeper, Jason Elmy.

"Their defense pushed up and Brian Glibkowski saw an opening and he put it right through for me and I just slid it right past the goalie's leg," Harmon said.

BG enters Saturday's game with Miami with the possibility of finishing first, second or third in the conference. The first tie-breaking scenario would be head to head action among teams tied at the top. If BG defeats Miami Saturday and Miami then beats co-leader Akron a week later, all three teams would end conference play at 4-1.

Since each team would then be 1-1 against each other the tie would be broken by goal differential. Miami and Bowling Green both enter Saturday's match with a plus nine goal differential. Akron is currently plus three but still has a match with lowly Central Michigan at home on Friday.

The top two teams in the six team conference would receive first round byes and avoid the possibility of playing three games in three days. Also, the first place team, whoever it may be, would most likely avoid playing Miami, Akron or Bowling Green until the final match.

And the winner of the tournament would then host the Trans-America Conference champion on Nov. 13 in a NCAA play-in game. But first things first.

"Their defense pushed up and Brian Glibkowski saw an opening and he put it right through for me and I just slid it past the goalie's legs."

Jamie Harmon
BG forward

"Well, for the Miami game to have any meaning this was an extremely important game to come away with," head coach Gary Palmisano said.

The final score didn't indicate the Falcons' offensive domination. Bowling Green had far more offensive opportunities than the Eagles. BG had seven shots on goal to the Eagles' four and the Falcons attempted 21 to EMU's 11.

But the real difference was in the quality of the chances. The Falcons had several point blank chances throughout the game. Harmon, for example, was camped all alone in front of the net but the ball rolled over his foot and over the touchline.

The Eagles, on the other hand, had some decent chances but didn't have a shot on goal in the second half.

away in the back a couple of times in the back but didn't give it away at all in the second half."

BG goaltender Dan Traver made four saves for his fourth shutout of the season.

Palmisano said that although the Falcons won the game, the players probably felt that they should have blown the Eagles out.

Former OSU star defends old coach before Cavs game

By Rusty Miller
The Associated Press

COLUMBUS -- Jim Jackson returned to St. John Arena Wednesday carrying the promise of a young NBA team along with memories of a glorious period in Ohio State basketball.

Jackson, who led Ohio State to two Big Ten titles before leaving after the 1991-92 season, was wearing the uniform of the Dallas Mavericks on his latest visit to the arena he filled for three years.

"It feels good, even though I've been here all summer," the 6-foot-6 third-year guard said before an exhibition game in Columbus against the Cleveland Cavaliers. "It's a different atmosphere, sort of like playing here again even though I'm wearing a different uniform."

A large crowd cheered Jackson and gave him a standing ovation when the starting lineups were announced.

Prior to the game, it was announced that Jackson was giving Ohio State a $100,000 gift to be divided between the athletic department and the school's black cultural center.

Jackson's homecoming conjured up memories for Buckeye fans. He departed after his junior year for a six-year, $20 million contract with the Mavericks.

Since then, the Ohio State program has been reduced to ashes. Records of 15-14 and 13-16 came the next two years. Ohio State was put on one year of NCAA probation this spring because of recruiting violations.

In addition, an ugly string of assaults and gunplay resulted in three players being kicked off the team. Two others have transferred, gutting the program to the point where Ayers is expected to keep several walk-ons from an open tryout of students, band members and Tuesday night.

Like a celebrity campaigning for a candidate in an election year, Jackson defended Ayers and said his ex-coach had little to do with the Buckeyes' decline.

"Coach Ayers is such a close friend of mine, going back to my high school days and through college. I hate to see the things that not only he -- but the program is -- going through some unfortunate incidents," Jackson said. "He's taking the blame for everything and I don't think that's right. But at the same time, they always try to put it on somebody and he's the head man."

Jackson admitted these are difficult days to be the most prominent alumnus of Ohio State basketball.

"It's tough for me because we built the reputation here of doing everything right and becoming winners," he said.

Jackson averaged 19.2 points a game last season for Dallas while starting in every game, stretching his streak to all 110 in his pro career.

He said there were parallels between what he experienced when he came to Ohio State and when he joined the Mavericks. Ohio State had not won a Big Ten title for two decades before Jackson came to town; the Mavericks have won just 20 of 110 games since he became a pro.

"It wasn't that bad to make that transition because when I came here to Ohio State we were in a similar situation," he said. "Fortunately for me, we turned it around quicker because you can do that at the college level. In the NBA, it's going to take some time. Everything is not guaranteed to happen overnight."

"It's like any job -- you've got to work at it to become the best. It's going to take some time. At the same time, I'm having a lot of fun and trying to get better each and every day."

Injury to sideline Wilkins for season

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND -- Already scrambling to fill vacancies created by Larry Nance's retirement and Brad Daugherty's bad back, the Cleveland Cavaliers learned Wednesday that starting guard Gerald Wilkins will miss the NBA season because of a ruptured Achilles' tendon.

Wilkins will have surgery later this week.

He tore the tendon Tuesday night during the second quarter of an exhibition game against the Boston Celtics in Providence, R.I. The tear was confirmed during an examination at the Cleveland Clinic on Wednesday.

Wilkins hurt the tendon when he was fouled by the Celtics' Blue Edwards.

"I pushed off my right foot after he fouled me and rolled left," Wilkins said. "All I felt is that there was nothing there."

Although the severity of the injury was not disclosed immediately, Wilkins' brother, Dominique, said after the game he was sure it was torn. Dominique, who is now with the Celtics, had a similar injury when he was playing for Atlanta in 1992.

Win over Cincinnati puts BG into Midwest Universities Cup

By Carl Lariccia
The BG News

After posting some of the most impressive records in the country over the past few decades the men's rugby team has found itself in an unfamiliar position this fall -- mediocrity.

After a lackluster tie against

Miami -- a team that had not come close to beating the Falcons in its last 17 attempts --

BG crushed the University of Cincinnati 48-0. For good measure, the Falcons tossed in a pair of shutouts over Ohio State.

With BG's win over Cincinnati the Falcons gained a playoff berth in the Midwest Universities Cup despite its erratic play this season. It is the 16th consecutive season that the Falcons have been invited to the National Championship regional playoff. The winner of the Midwest event will move on to the National Final Four next spring.

"I don't know, you tell me where the on-off buttons are on this team," BG head coach Roger Mazzarella said. "We were at the brink of elimination. There wasn't going to be any more second chances and no reason to hold back."

In the must-win situation, the Falcons defense came to the forefront with a hard-hitting effort.

"Everybody was laying on the big hit," team captain Brian Keefe said. "Matt Koon, Bruce Broad, Jeff Roman, the whole team just used every Cincy ballcarrier like a tackling dummy."

Broad did most of the damage for the Falcons, punching over four tries -- including two that came less than 30 seconds apart.

"Bruce smells that goal line and anyone who gets in his way should look out," Keefe said.

With Bruce scoring the Falcons first three tries and Grady Slack adding two conversions BG, found itself with a comfortable 19-0 edge at the halfway point.

"Nineteen to zip isn't much, but you could just smell a rout in the making," Mazzarella said. After intermission, BG added five more tries in the second stanza. Slack, Koon, Jeff Roman and Scott Anderson chipped in with solo tries

The BG rugby team earned its 16th consecutive trip to the Midwestern Universities Cup with a win over Cincinnati this weekend.

KC rookie garners named tops in AL

By Ben Walker
The Associated Press

NEW YORK -- Bob Hamelin, who inherited the Kansas City Royals' designated hitting job first-place votes and was third from George Brett and became one of the league's best sluggers, announced Thursday as AL rookie of the year.

Hamelin was the first DH to win the rookie award, and the first Royals player to earn it since Lou Piniella in 1969. The honor, now named the Jackie Robinson Rookie Award, was first presented in 1947.

Hamelin hit 24 home runs, drove in 65 runs and batted .282. He led AL rookies in homers, RBIs, runs (64), hits (88), doubles (25), walks (56) and games (101) when the players' strike started Aug. 12.

Hamelin, who also played 24 games at first base, received 25 of 28 first-place votes in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. He also got three second-place votes and finished with 134 points.

Cleveland Indians outfielder Manny Ramirez, who hit .269 with 17 home runs and 60 RBIs, was runner-up with 44 points.

Texas Rangers outfielder Rusty Greer, who hit .314 with 46 RBIs and also made a diving catch that finished off Kenny Rogers' perfect game, got the other three first-place votes and was third with 42 points.

The NL rookie award will be announced Thursday.

Hamelin, 26, broke Bo Jackson's rookie Royals record of 22 home runs set in 1987. Hamelin's biggest homer was a two-out, three-run shot in the bottom of the 12th inning off Chicago reliever Roberto Hernandez on July 25 for a 6-4 victory that kept alive Kansas City's eventual 14-game winning streak. Helped by the string, the Royals closed within four games of the AL Central-leading White Sox when the strike started.

Hamelin also became a fan favorite at Kauffman Stadium, earning the nickname "The Hammer." After the All-Star break, many fans showed up at the park waving toy hammers when he came to the plate.

Hamelin ranked ninth in the AL in home runs, fifth in slugging (.599) and fourth in home-run ratio, connecting once every 13 at-bats.

GOLF

"He dropped and tried to get up but fell again. His speech was slurred, but he finished out the hole and tried to hit his drive on two, but his balance was thrown off and he had trouble focusing."

Carbone said that his group told Cameron to go back to the pro shop and get help, but instead, not thinking straight, Cameron drove home.

From there, golf assistant Kurt Thomas heard what happened and took Cameron to Wood County Hospital to get checked out.

The hospital X-rayed Cameron for a possible fracture of the skull. When those tests were found to be negative, Cameron was sent home.

Cameron's parents rented a hotel room to watch him Monday and when he showed no signs of improvement, he was taken back to Wood County Hospital. From there, since it seemed the swelling had not decreased, he was life-flighted to St. Vincent's Medical Center.

Doctors waited another day to look for a reduction in what was classified as a contusion on his brain. When that did not happen, surgery was prescribed. The surgery took place about 10 a.m. Wednesday.

Carbone and other team members visited with Cameron Wednesday afternoon.

Tight end lost in Cinicinnati's offense

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI - What's happened to the tight end in the Cincinnati Bengals' offense?

Seems he can't go out for a pass because quarterback David Klingler needs all the blocking help he can get.

"We've been keeping him in more, for protection reasons," coach Dave Shula said. "We haven't been able to give him the same number of opportunities as he had last year."

Tony McGee has just 12 catches for 134 yards in six games. Last year, as a rookie, he had 44 catches for 535 yards.

"I'd like to be more involved in the passing game," McGee said. "To be successful, you have to use your tight end. But some of it's been my fault, too."

Two passes bounced off his hands for interceptions, one in the opener against Cleveland and one in the Miami game on Oct. 2.

"I was better last year because I played looser," McGee said. "I wasn't as tight. This year there were more expectations for me, and I haven't lived up to it."

Tight ends coach Paul Alexander said McGee is among several players whose statistics are down because of problems in up-front protection on the 0-6 Bengals.

"We're being sensitive to how much pressure we're getting," Alexander said. "We need to keep it clear so we can throw it downfield. So, we've had to keep Tony in to block. It's not the ideal situation."

McGee, at 6-foot-3 and 245 pounds, is among the best receiver-blocker tight ends in the NFL, Alexander said.

"He's smaller than [Pittsburgh's] Eric Green, but Tony's faster," Alexander said. "He's a better blocker than [Miami's] Keith Jackson. He's stronger than [the New York Jets'] Johnny Mitchell. He's ahead of most [tight ends] in this league."

But the low number of catches bothers McGee.
