Judge indicts man in assassination attempt on Clinton

By Laurie Asseo
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- The Colorado man accused of an assault-rifle attack on the White House last month was indicted Thursday on a new charge of trying to assassinate President Clinton. Francisco Martin Duran, who pleaded innocent, could face up to life in prison if convicted.

U.S. Attorney Eric Holder said prosecutors plan to prove that Duran intended to kill the president when he allegedly fired about 29 rounds from a semiautomatic rifle at the White House from a public sidewalk.

Clinton was in the White House at the time of the Oct. 29 attack. The mansion was struck by several gunshots, but nobody was hurt.

Duran did not speak during his arraignment before U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey. Public defender Leigh A. Kenny entered the plea on his behalf.

Prosecutors filed court papers asking Duran's lawyers to disclose whether they plan to assert an insanity defense. Richey gave Duran's lawyers until Monday to reply.

The judge did not immediately rule on a request by The Washington Post, The New York Times and NBC television that he release a letter written by Duran that was the basis for a government-requested competency examination of the defendant. A psychiatrist found that he was able to understand the charges against him.

Public defender A.J. Kramer told Richey the letter should not be released, at least for now, because it could cause prejudice against Duran.

"This letter says nothing about the president. ... It has nothing to say about any harm intended to the president," Kramer said.

Duran, 26, of Colorado Springs, was arrested on the Pennsylvania Avenue sidewalk after he was tackled by two bystanders.

An 11-count federal grand jury indictment also charged Duran with assault on Secret Service agents, destruction of federal property, weapons possession by a convicted felon, use of a gun during a crime and interstate transportation of a firearm.

Holder chastised unidentified people, including some at the scene of the shooting, who he said knew of Duran's intentions but did not tell authorities.

"Certain people did have information, did have contact with Mr. Duran," but failed to relay information that gave them "a basis to believe he was going to do what exactly did occur," Holder said at a news confer-

Republicans foresee new relationship with Clinton

By Thomas J. Sheeran
The Associated Press

AKRON -- President Clinton has a chance to develop a working relationship with new Republican majorities in the Senate and House, U.S. Sen.-elect Mike DeWine said Thursday.

DeWine, in a speech to 500 people at the Akron Roundtable and in an earlier news conference, suggested that the free trade agreement, prayer in schools and welfare reform will test the new Washington power structure.

"I think the president has the opportunity to move toward the center and become the new Democrat he told us he was when he ran for president two years ago," DeWine said. "Republicans in the Senate are going to be trying to put their agenda together and the president's going to be reacting to that."

The Republican lieutenant governor said he has not decided which committee assignment he will seek when he goes to the Senate in January. He said he

Community, cable company consider Spanish channel

By Jay Young
The BG News

In an effort to bring their culture to cable television, the members of the University Hispanic community are demanding Wood County Cable provide Spanish programming.

Dave Garcia, University admissions counselor, said Wood County Cable has a moral obligation to add the Spanish cable channel Univision to its selection.

"We've been trying for years to get Univision. We've been constantly hearing excuses," Garcia said. "When you are a business and the only business in the area, you have an obligation to meet everyone's needs."

Wood County Cable is currently considering adding channels to expand its selection. Larry Miller, general manager of Wood County Cable, said a final decision has not been made.

"We don't know at this particular time," Miller said. "We are in the process of looking at different channels."

Miller said community interest, cost of programming and the value of the channel toward the overall service is considered.

"I think it is a safe assumption that 95 percent of our subscribers wouldn't be able to understand [Vision] if we put it on," Miller said. "It certainly wouldn't have mass appeal, [but] that doesn't mean the other five percent aren't important to us. If we didn't recognize the moral obligation here, we would have said 'no' to this channel a long time ago."

Garcia said the Spanish-speaking population in Wood County should not be a factor. He said those who don't speak Spanish have other options.

"If they don't understand Span-

Assault suspects face charges

By Jim Vickers
The BG News

Two arrests have been made in connection with the Oct. 1 assault of a University student outside the Offenhauer residence halls.

Mark S. Miliken, 18, of Toledo was arrested Monday and Jeremiah J. Reymann, 20, of Toledo was arrested Tuesday in connection with the assault. Both men were charged with aggravated robbery.

The two men allegedly assaulted and stole $30 from a University student while he was walking on the south side of the Offenhauer residence halls on Oct. 1.

The student reported the incident to campus police on Oct. 3 and stated that one of the men had a gun and the other had a knife. The incident was the second on-campus assault of the semester. Barbara Waddell, University public information officer of public safety, said campus police had been investigating the case over the last several weeks and had been following up on the leads they had.

E.A.R. to the Ground ...

The big news on campus is that the establishment, a.k.a. "The Man," is offering $250 for information leading to the apprehension of the mad drano bomber(s).

So who's going to sell out their friends for $250? Hey, for $250 you can buy your friends back at the bar. Then you'll have to become part of the University witness protection program. You'll relocate to another residence hall, get a new i.d. and a new POO number.

But don't worry, the Bursar's Office will still be able to find you.

The real interview with a vampire is over at the Northeast Commons. Those bloodsuckers from the Red Cross will be on campus today for the last day of its blood drive. And just remember, if you give blood it's a cheap buzz later on in the evening at the bars.

E.A.R. Central noticed a used, bright yellow condom on the sidewalk by Thurstin Avenue. We want to know where these people were engaging in intimate activities that would allow the condom to end up on the sidewalk. Someone's maturity level needs to rise a bit. Take it inside, folks!

The Browns are now 8-2, and when Clevelanders hear the word "postseason," they foam at the mouth like Pavlov's dogs.

Beam me up, Scotti. Uh, I mean Worf. The new Trek movie, Generations, is set to open today and is a mix of the old and new crews. The best rumor is that someone is going to put Captain Kirk out of his misery. Check out this week's Weekend Reality for more info.

We finally get to go home and get some real home cookin'. No cafeteria food for at least a couple of days. Isn't it funny that all holidays encourage us to pig out? Oink! Oink!

T-day paradox is fairly crappy

"Thanksgiving is here!" America cries.

"You're welcome," say the Indians.

Thanksgiving is kind of a trade-off. On one hand, it's a chance to eat some damn good turkey, the Lions are on T.V. and my relatives drink good beer. On the other hand, the reason I'm feasting is because we killed a lot of Native Americans and took their land.

Sort of an interesting paradox.

I've always viewed Turkey Day as kind of a bittersweet experience. It's kinda like sitting down for a nice Thanksgiving meal only to find out that just hours before, your grandparents "carved the turkey" on the very same table.

Anyway, this time of year makes me feel pretty guilty for being a skinny white kid. Especially after watching P.B.S. for the past week and a half.

Let's admit it, if Indian screwing was a jack-o-lantern, America would be the Great Pumpkin.

Okay, bad analogy, but you get the picture.

Unfortunately, some people still have trouble accepting what we did was wrong.

For instance, I was in a class last year with someone who proclaimed that the Indians should just stop whining about their situation. Only after much prodding did he reluctantly admit that what we did was "kinda crappy."

Kinda crappy?! I don't know what crappy scale this guy was operating on, but it wasn't mine.

Joe Peiffer

Campus lighting is kinda crappy. Drowning your kids is fairly crappy. My sex life is really crappy. But genocide is real, real crappy.

There are some that say the Indians deserved it. I mean, after all, anyone who trades their gold for trinkets has got to be pretty stupid.

Of course, these are the same people who made parachute pants and fat, neon shoelaces such a money maker.

Anyway, I think Native Americans need more respect. After all, they have made some very significant contributions to my life. At least I think they're significant.

For example, anyone who has seen the movie "The Doors" knows that Indians are always hanging out with Jim Morrison. And because of Morrison's music, I was able to woo my high school girlfriend to help me on my walk to manhood.

In fact, I bet Jim is still calling big-stakes bingo on an Oklahoma reservation as we speak.

"Chief MoJo says we're playing four corners, so get ready, girls."

"This bingo caller is so hot," my Catholic grandmother would comment.

(Note: I'm Catholic and I'm also just kidding. So save your letters.)

And anyone who has seen "Young Guns" knows that they discovered peyote. This allowed me to discover how to talk to monkeys and make love to colors.

After peyote, I understand why the Indians never wanted to hurt anyone.

I also understand why they make such beautiful tapestries. No matter.

Seriously though, if it weren't for Native Americans all of our relatives would be wolf food.

So this left me in a professional dilemma. I must compensate for all of our wrongdoing. I must solve the Indian problem.

I journeyed off to the throne of knowledge, located in West Hall, second floor, first stall, and waited for ideas to come.

With a splash, my brain was off.

Why don't we name professional sports teams after them? I thought.

Nah, we tried that, and they didn't seem to like that too much, my mind said.

And hey, I respect their wishes. That's why I named my flag football team "The No-Dancing White Kids."

Idea danced like drumsticks in my head.

My heart then suggested giving them Oklahoma, but my brain knew we'd tried that, too.

How's about giving them Texas, my sensitive side thought.

"Are you kidding," my hardened-jerk side said. "You think border patrol has a hard time keeping illegal aliens out. Man o' man, those Indians are the worst at enforcing immigration laws."

Whoops, sometimes that cynical side just slips right out. Sometimes I think I should just take Mrs. Cobain's advice before I get into real trouble.

"Johnny," she told Kurt's little brother. "Just because Kurt is always shooting his mouth off doesn't mean you have to."

There I go again.

Anyway, I was just about fresh out of ideas and toilet paper when it came to me.

Invade Canada.

Wait a minute -- if we kick out all the Canadian folks to move our Indians in, then won't we just be creating a new problem?

I'll worry about that after the Lions game.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Olscamp asks for student cooperation

Of late, I am sure you have been reading about concerns of the accessibility of computing services to students, faculty and staff on the campus.

There are very real problems and they particularly impact the student body. In a way, we are the victims of our success, and of an explosive surge in computing technology throughout the country and the world.

In 1982, we had 302 non-interactive computers on this campus. We still used punch card machines. Now there are more than 4,900 personal computers on the campus and a wide range of powerful mainframe machines, as well as a hook-up with the Ohio Super Computer.

However, at the same time, we have been advancing into the modern computing age at what most would acknowledge to be a very rapid rate, and technology has raced even further ahead of our financial ability to keep up with it.

Personal computers which only four years ago were thought to be state-of-the-art are now considered to be obsolete. Access to the InterNet, which became available at the University with the introduction of BGNNet, has created a very large demand which at this time we cannot fully meet. There are just too many times when all of the available computers labs on campus are being used.

The University is well aware of the problem, which is not unique in any respect to this campus. Recent issues of the "Chronicle for Higher Education," the major source of news for the higher education community, indicate that universities across the country are facing exactly the same problem. Nonetheless, it is a set of problems that must be faced.

We need to find a way to open a significant number of smaller labs, or else one or two larger labs with at least 50 systems in the very near future. We are exploring possibilities concerning space and resources and will do our best.

We are also aware that staff in the computer labs, particularly student staff, are increasingly overwhelmed with students needing help.

Student and staff hours will be increased by about 10 percent which will result in at least a small increase in staffing levels in the computer labs.

Computer Services is also examining the possibility of extending the hours that the labs are open, at least in some cases.

Computer Services has also recently added a second Sun System to BGNNet, effectively doubling its capacity. This has resulted in a significant system performance enhancement, and we are currently in the process of ordering a third Sun System.

We are aware that most labs have some different types of computers which were purchased at different times. This lack of consistency does make it more difficult to maintain the labs as well as cause software problems because some newer software will not run on some of the older systems.

Furthermore, we are aware that since most of the older computer labs were provided with furniture from other areas that had been previously used, it is not in very good shape. We had to make a decision as to whether to spend our resources on computers or furniture, and we chose the former.

In short, the University is well aware of the pressing needs for additional new computer terminals, wider access to BGNNet and this to the InterNet, renovation of the computer labs, lab furnishing and increases in student staff assistance.

We are working on all of these problems, but we ask your patience because as you know, $13 million was cut out of the University's operating budget by the State of Ohio in the last three and one-half years.

We simply do not have the cash to solve all of the problems immediately. In the meantime, you as a student may help by using your personal computer only for academic reasons.

A lot of the time BGNNet is being consumed by people using the InterNet for personal communications and for entertainment purposes, and every time you are on-line for these reasons, somebody else is waiting who needs academic help. Your cooperation is appreciated.

As the University makes progress toward new computing horizons, we will keep the campus community informed.

Thank you for understanding.

Paul Olscamp

should know his preferences by next month, after the incoming GOP majority decides how many seats will be available on each committee.

DeWine defeated Democrat Joel Hyatt, the son-in-law of retiring incumbent Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, in the Nov. 9 election.

The Clinton administration is seeking congressional ratification of the 123-nation accord reached under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. DeWine said he supports GATT.

"A United States senator from Ohio has to understand that this is a major trading state," DeWine said.

DeWine noted that the current, Democrat-controlled Senate can approve the treaty before the Republicans take control Jan. 4. Some Republicans have suggested delaying ratification until next year to give them a stronger hand in making changes in the treaty.

On the school prayer issue, DeWine repeated his longstanding support for prayer in public schools as long as it is voluntary and not directed by the state, teachers or administrators.

DeWine also said the federal government should provide the funding but give states a free hand in determining how to run welfare systems.

"Every time we try to do something that's bold and imaginative and innovative and might even work, we deal with some federal bureaucrat in Washington D.C. who comes up with 25 different reasons why we can't do it," he said.

New NAACP president chosen

CINCINNATI -- A retired University of Cincinnati official has been elected president of the area branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Milton Hinton, 67, will succeed Frank Allison, the chapter president since 1989. Allison did not seek re-election.

Hinton won the post Wednesday in a 330-135 vote over Dorothy Coleman, a high school guidance counselor.

He formerly was vice provost for minority affairs and chairman of the Early Childhood and Special Education Department at the university. He retired in 1991.

Hinton was president of the NAACP's Glassboro, N.J., chapter for eight years during the 1960s and led the fight to integrate schools and restaurants in Gloucester County.

"The most pressing, immediate issue is to let the entire community know we are indeed watchdogs over every endeavor that affects the black community," Hinton said. "Some parts of the overall community believe they can act with impunity."

Man charged in abusing toddler

HAMILTON, Ohio -- The father of a toddler who died this week was arrested Thursday and charged with sexually abusing the boy.

The boy's mother on Monday was charged with involuntary manslaughter and endangering children in his death.

Della Sprague told investigators she had struck 22-month-old Christopher in the back with her fist several times to try to stop his coughing.

His father, Mark Sprague, 30, of Hamilton, was charged with two counts of rape and one count of felonious sexual penetration, Butler County Sheriff Harold Don Gabbard said.

Man dies in plane crash

BROADVIEW HEIGHTS -- A single-engine plane caught fire and crashed Thursday in a wooded ravine near a suburban Cleveland office complex, killing the pilot.

Authorities were trying to identify the victim with dental records.

State Highway Patrol dispatcher Karen Keifer said a flight plan had been filed for Cleveland Hopkins International Airport to Salem, 60 miles to the southeast near Youngstown.

"In the last (radio) traffic they had from him, he advised there was a fire," she said. "That was the last they heard from him."

Witnesses said the plane circled the area moments before the crash. Flames were visible from the underside of the plane.

Ms. Keifer said investigators were not sure what caused the fire. The plane apparently had been airborne only a few minutes, she said.

The crash happened about 10:30 a.m. near Ohio 82 and Interstate 77, about 20 miles south of Cleveland.

Ex-Mayor goes to jail

LISBON, Ohio -- The former mayor of Washingtonville has surrendered to Columbiana County authorities to begin serving the rest of his two-year sentence for theft in office.

Richard Kruegel, 61, had been ordered to be at the jail by 9 a.m. Tuesday. He surrendered Wednesday afternoon, Sheriff Richard Koffel said.

Kruegel had been living in Louisiana since August 1993, when he was released early from prison while he appealed his 1992 conviction.

A jury found Kruegel guilty of stealing money from mayor's court in 1986, and he was sentenced to two years in prison.

University music student honored for composition

By Heather Cveugros
The BG News

A University student recently won a state music competition and will compose the music for an upcoming University production.

Jenece Gerber, a senior liberal arts major with an emphasis in composition and ethnomusicology, won the Ohio Music Teachers National Association Student Composition Competition in the collegiate division.

Gerber won for her piece "Floating Down the River at Evening," written for mezzo-soprano, suling Indonesian flute, cello, piano and piano interior.

Gerber will now go on to compete at the regional level, and the results will be announced at the end of December. The winner of nationals will have the opportunity to travel to Albuquerque, N.M., to compete.

Gerber said she was glad and relieved to have won.

"I've been sending compositions to a lot of different competitions," she said. "I was happy to finally win an award - all the time and effort paid off."

Many people, including Gerber's mother and professors, influenced her to write.

"My professors were very helpful," Gerber said.

Burton Beerman, professor at the College of Musical Arts, was Gerber's composition professor for the submission of her work.

"She's a very bright and nice person, which is hard to come by," Beerman said. "She's serious about what she does."

Gerber's interest in music began when she was four.

"I used to play the piano all the time. When I was really little, my mom wrote the music down as I played," she said.

Gerber has written music for several years and said she has been somewhat discouraged by her piano teachers.

"My piano teachers discouraged my creativeness, and I began to lose interest," Gerber said. "They were always telling me everything I was doing wrong technically, and I worried too much about all that technical stuff."

By her junior high and high school years, Gerber became involved again, and by the end of high school she was actually composing the pieces herself.

Gerber's music style is very unique due to her interest in Asian style. She spent seven weeks in Gamelan, Indonesia and studied Asian music.

Groups promote political activism College Democrats, Republicans offer different activities

By Genell Pavelich
The BG News

Ever feel like an elephant? Maybe a donkey?

Either way, University students wanting to have an active voice in politics can get involved with both the Republican and Democratic parties at the collegiate level.

There are many campus organizations for students to get involved with, including two that can help students learn more about politics.

Wesseler

The University's College Democrats and College Republicans offer a wide range of activities for students who want to become involved with elections and issues.

Both groups had many activities last week in order to help with elections at the local and state levels.

Todd Wesseler, president of College Democrats, said the group does many activities including helping to register voters, campaigning for candidates and sponsoring information panels.

"It is very satisfying to work for issues and candidates you believe in even if they don't win," Wesseler said. "You don't just sit back, like a lot of students unfortunately do."

Wesseler said the group has more than 30 paid members in the organization. The group is also involved with the state party, so students can meet people in that organization as well.

"This organization is alive and well here on campus," Wesseler said.

He added that nine of the 13 democratic candidates were majority winners here on campus.

College Democrats have weekly meetings on Tuesdays at 9 p.m. in Room 116 of the Business Administration Building.

Stacy Mirrotto, president of College Republicans, said the organization also helps to work on elections and local campaigns.

"College Republicans is basically a forum for conservative students to get together and discuss their ideas," Mirrotto said.

She said the group helped to distribute more than 5,000 pieces of literature relating to the campaigns last week. They also went door to door to inform students of the different issues.

Mirrotto said she encourages students to get involved with the group.

College Republicans have between 35 and 50 members that come to meetings weekly, Mirrotto said. The meetings for the group are every Tuesday at 9 p.m. in Room 112 of the Business Administration Building.

Acclaimed vocal ensemble scheduled to appear in BG

By Tracy Todd
The BG News

One of the world's most sought-after vocal ensembles is scheduled to return to the University Nov. 18 to give an 8 p.m. concert in Koberger Hall at the Moore Musical Arts Center.

The King's Singers, who made their debut in 1968, are known internationally for concerts that resemble a tour throughout musical history with pieces dating from the 1500s through the 1990s and ranging from classic to popular, sacred to secular.

The group first appeared in Bowling Green in 1988 and gave a sellout performance.

"The last time The King's Singers were here, one of the members was sick so we decided to have them return and give a full show," said Martin Porter, director of public events for the College of Musical Arts.

Officials announce holiday closings

By Tracy Todd
The BG News

With Thanksgiving approaching, most University students are ready to return home. But for those students spending vacation at the University, eating and sleeping on campus may be a problem.

Only one residence hall will remain open, and dining hall hours will change during the holiday break.

"On Tuesday, Nov. 22, Harshman Cafeteria will be closed all day with McDonald and Commons dining halls closing after 2 p.m. Founders and Kreischer cafeterias will close at 6 p.m.," said Megan Schaffer, secretary of Food Operations.

Students will be able to eat in Kreischer and Founders from 4:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. on Nov. 27, and all dining centers resume regular hours on Nov. 28, Schaffer said.

Compton Hall is the only residence hall open over the holiday. Residents of Compton are the only students eligible to stay during break at a cost of $8.50 per day.

Students not residing in Compton may decide to stay in a hotel.

"We usually have about a dozen University students staying with us over the break," said Scott Mutchmore, general manager at Holley Lodge. "We have some reservations, but others just walk in."

All students must be out of the residence halls by 10 a.m. on Nov. 23. They will be able to move back in on Nov. 27 at 1 p.m.

Faculty, national art to be exhibited

By Joshua Mossing
The BG News

The Fine Arts Center will host two art exhibits -- one featuring winners of a national competition, and the other highlighting the work of faculty artists.

"The 100 Show" and the 45th annual Bowling Green State University Faculty Art Exhibition open today with a reception in the Fine Arts Center from 7 to 9 p.m.

"The 100 Show" will be displayed in the Gallery of the Fine Arts Building, and the Faculty Art Exhibition will be in the Dorothy Uber Bryan Gallery.

"The 100 Show" is circulated by the American Center for Design in Chicago. The show features the winners of a nationwide design competition.

Terrell Curtis, director of events at the American Center for Design, said three judges individually selected the winners of the competition, allowing for a greater variety in design.

The exhibit contains primarily two-dimensional design projects such as posters, books and brochures that have been produced for companies throughout the country, according to Jacqueline Nathan, exhibition program administrator for the Fine Arts Center Galleries.

"We have a very active and enthusiastic design division in the School of Arts," Nathan said. "We wanted to bring in an exhibition that would display some of the best work in the country."

The second exhibit, the Faculty Art Exhibition, showcases the work of the University School of Art faculty and staff members. The show will include sculpture, ceramics, jewelry, paintings and metalworking, according to Nathan.

Literary collection to aid needy

A book of creative writing based on the theme "community" will benefit the homeless and victims of domestic violence.

Firelands College's creative writing annual "Heartlands of Today" went on sale Nov. 8 and can be purchased for $8.50. There will be poetry readings this Friday, at which donations will be accepted to help the homeless and victims of domestic violence.

"We chose community as our theme, so we will focus on mid-western stories," said Larry Smith, editor of the publication and professor of English at Firelands College. "This will be expressed in the non-fiction pieces and enhanced by the fiction stories."

The annual has a different theme each year. Smith said past themes have dealt with topics such as multicultural issues and arts and society.

Writers from all over the United States have written about the community for this year's 160-page journal.

Three poetry readings from the annual will take place Friday to raise money for the homeless and victims of domestic violence. The first reading will take place at noon at Firelands College. The other two will take place at 6 p.m.

Musicians present Band-O-Rama

By Genell Pavelich
The BG News

Three ensembles to perform at annual event

The Moore Musical Arts Center will be filled with the "sound of music" Sunday as the University hosts its annual Band-O-Rama concert.

Thomas Rohrer, assistant band director, said the concert is the major event for all the University bands.

Participating in the event will be the Fall Concert Band, the Fall Wind Ensemble and the Falcon Marching Band.

Rohrer said the concert offers a variety of music for those attending.

"This is a high-energy concert that has something for everyone," he said.

Bruce Moss, director of bands, said there are more than 300 students performing in the concert from the various bands.

"This concert has a varied program," he said. "There is music to suit every line of taste."

The Falcon Marching Band, directed by Moss and Rohrer, will be performing select pieces from the entire season including "A John Williams Spectacular" with music from "Star Wars," "Hook" and "Jurassic Park." They will also perform a "Disney Medley" and selections from the groups Chicago and Earth, Wind and Fire.

The flag corps and baton twirlers from the marching band will also perform during the event, Rohrer said.

Tickets for the concert are available through the Moore Musical Arts Center Box Office and are $5 for adults and $3 for students and senior citizens. To reserve tickets or for further information, contact 372-8171.

Planetarium examines earthen mounds

By Joshua Mossing
The BG News

The University's planetarium is hosting a program that examines the mysterious earthen mounds constructed by ancient Native-American cultures.

"Serpents of the Sun" discusses the significance of the mounds that are located primarily in Central and Southern Ohio. The large earthen constructions are formed in various shapes such as a serpent, an opossum and a cross.

Scholars propose that some mounds, like the Serpent Mound near Dayton, were used as calendars. Dates such as the summer and winter solstices could be calculated by comparing the position of the sun, moon and stars with specific points on the mounds.

Native Americans could use this information to choose the proper time of the year to plant crops.

"Serpents of the Sun" is shown every Tuesday and Friday at 8 p.m. and on Sundays at 7:30 p.m. There will also be one Saturday showing on Nov. 19 at 2 p.m. The program ends Nov. 29.

It is estimated that the largest mounds, such as the Cahokia Mound near St. Louis, took as long as 300 years to complete. Approximately 55 million basketfuls of earth were used to build it.

Dale Smith, director of the University's planetarium, recently visited several of the ancient mounds.

"The scale of the mounds is so much more impressive," Smith said. "The slides just don't project it."

The program is preceded by a "star talk" by Smith that shows the stars and constellations in the current evening sky. In connection with the "Serpents of the Sun" program, Smith tells the stories that Native-American tribes told about the constellations.

Friday and Sunday programs are followed by stargazing and telescope viewing from the rooftop observatory.

"Serpents of the Sun" was produced by Youngstown State University's Ward Beecher Planetarium.

The program is open to the public, and a $1 donation is suggested.

Bus overturns, injures 19

Triad high school students, driver sent to hospitals to get treatment

The Associated Press

NORTH LEWISBURG, Ohio -- A school bus carrying high school students overturned Thursday afternoon, sending 18 students and the driver to hospitals with mostly minor injuries.

Rachel Garriss, 13, of Cable, was admitted in fair condition at Children's Hospital in Columbus after complaining of head and neck pain, hospital spokeswoman Pam Barber said.

The rest of the passengers were taken to hospitals in Urbana and Marysville, where they were treated for cuts, bumps and bruises. All were expected to be released.

"Most injuries are bruises and bumps, lacerations. There was one broken arm."

spokesman for Mercy Memorial Hospital in Urbana

The accident probably was caused by a disruptive student who distracted the driver, said Lt. Tim Carnes of the Champaign County Sheriff's department.

The school bus had been carrying at least 20 students from the Triad School District when the accident occurred west of North Lewisburg on Ohio 245, according to a sheriff's dispatcher who would not give her name.

North Lewisburg is about 30 miles northwest of Columbus.

Charles Roberts, a principal at Triad, said the bus was taking the students home.

Bonnie Young, right, comforts her daughter after a school bus crash on Thursday near Lewisburg, OH. Authorities said the bus from the Triad School District overturned, injuring several students.

The bus was totaled when it slid off the roadway, struck a telephone pole and overturned, Carnes said. Charges were pending the outcome of the accident investigation.

Bonnie Young went to the site of the crash to check on her daughter, Amanda.

"My daughter has a black eye, but some of the other ones have broken bones," said Young.

Jerry Schenkel, spokesman for Mercy Memorial Hospital in Urbana, said 12 children were brought to the hospital.

"Most injuries are bruises and bumps, lacerations," he said. "There was one broken arm."

He said three of the students were treated and released, and the rest were expected to be released.

Five students and the driver were taken to Memorial Hospital of Union County in Marysville suffering bumps and scrapes. Hospital spokesman Jim Gray said all were treated and released.

Iacocca enters new market

Former automaker develops olive oil spread

By Paul Souhrada
The Associated Press

COLUMBUS -- Former Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca went back to his Italian roots to develop another product that needs oil to make it go.

This time, it's an olive oil-based alternative to butter and margarine.

Iacocca was in town Thursday to kickoff a test market of the new Olivio spread. The spread, which contains no cholesterol and has 80 percent less saturated fat than butter, is also being tested in Syracuse, N.Y.

"When I retired two years ago, I decided to get into some fun businesses," Iacocca said.

He got into the food business a few years ago when he purchased a home in Tuscany, Italy. He formed the Nicola Corp. -- named after his father -- to export wine and olive oil from the farm.

"We've done okay," he said, but the olive oil business was becoming competitive.

Enter Ned Hentz, an ad executive and Iacocca's son-in-law, and Vincent Auty, one of the developers of the "I Can't Believe It's Not Butter" spread.

Together the three wanted to expand the niche occupied by olive oil, which has recently been touted as more healthy than other oils.

"We who are of Italian heritage are used to taking bread and dipping it in olive oil," Iacocca said. "The American public doesn't go for that."

More than three years later, the company came up with the olivecanola oil blend -- which tastes like butter, but carries the mystique of olive oil.

They're shooting for a piece of the $3.7 billion U.S. market for butter, margarine and spreads.

"Most of the products out there are not too hot," said Grady Chism, a professor of food science technology at The Ohio State University.

Many of them have added water to cut fat content, but sacrificed taste in the process and made them unsuitable for cooking.

"The key to this will be how good it tastes," Chism said. "If you have a good product, a little bit of name and some good marketing can go a long way."

Iacocca provides the voice for the spread's television commercials, but don't expect him to get in front of the camera.

"I'm out of the commercial business," he said. "I'm not going to come back selling olive oil to the American public after 15 years of selling cars on TV."

Iacocca led the No. 3 automaker for 14 years before his retirement in 1992. He led the company back from the brink of financial catastrophe in the late 1970s and was a household name by way of his more than 60 television commercials.

Now he says he's ready to take things a little easier.

Man may receive life sentence

The Associated Press

TOLEDO -- A man was sentenced Thursday to 33 years to life in prison for killing the manager of a Wendy's restaurant during a robbery.

Three judges deliberated four hours over two days before sparing Nathaniel Beauregard's life. He could have been sentenced to die.

Prosecutors said Beauregard used some of the $800 he stole from the restaurant Jan. 12 to buy video games.

They said he shot the manager, 28-year-old Bibi Englund, because he had worked with her at the restaurant in suburban Sylva Township and was afraid she would recognize him.

Beauregard, 20, of Toledo, was convicted Tuesday of aggravated murder and aggravated robbery. He will be eligible for parole in 33 years.

On Wednesday, Beauregard begged for his life and told the judges he was sorry that he killed Englund.

"I don't know why I pulled the trigger. I think it's because... I'm a coward," he said.

Englund's husband, Louis, urged the judges to order the death penalty. He called Beauregard a "cowardly, cold-blooded killer."

Judge opposes ousting of convicted attorney

The Associated Press

MANSFIELD, -- A judge who sentenced an attorney for forgery and molestation has recommended the lawyer not be disbarred.

Richland County Common Pleas Judge James Henson made his recommendation in a letter presented to the Ohio Supreme Court's Board of Commissioners on Grievances and Discipline regarding Stephen Ostheimer. The letter, presented Monday during a disciplinary hearing, was released by the board Thursday.

Ostheimer, 44, pleaded no contest and was convicted in July 1993 of two counts each of forgery and attempted felonious sexual penetration.

Henson sentenced Ostheimer to 10 to 30 years in prison. In February, seven months into the sentence, Henson released Ostheimer on shock probation.

In his letter, Henson said he has known Ostheimer for 17 years and believes the molestation is unlikely to happen again. He said Ostheimer was undergoing counseling with two agencies appointed by the probation department and with a third agency on his own accord.

"The easy decision in this matter would be to permanently disbar Attorney Ostheimer and send a message to the remainder of the bar and to the community," Henson wrote in the Oct. 6 letter.

"It is my belief that a substantial suspension would be appropriate to allow Mr. Ostheimer an opportunity to finish his probationary term for the felony and then have an opportunity to earn reconsideration to again practice law."

Ostheimer could not be reached to comment Thursday. A telephone message was left at his home.

Henson also could not be reached. He did not return messages left at his office or home.

Brain size may affect sexuality

By Malcolm Rittler
The Associated Press

NEW YORK -- A key passageway between two parts of the brain may be bigger in gay men than in heterosexual men, according to a study that offers new evidence that sexual orientation is at least partly a matter of biology.

The size difference appeared in the communication conduit between parts of the brain used for understanding speech and perceiving objects.

The finding suggests that sexual orientation may be part of a larger package of brain characteristics, so that gay men as a group may have a different pattern of mental skills than heterosexual men, said researcher Sandra Witelson.

She stressed that her study of 21 men was small and must be confirmed by further work. She also said its results and implications apply only to groups and not individuals.

Witelson, a psychiatry professor at McMaster University in Hamilton, Ontario, discussed the work before presenting it Thursday in Miami Beach, Fla., at the annual meeting of the Society for Neuroscience.

Studies in 1991 and 1992 reported size differences elsewhere in the brain that were related to sexual orientation.

Roger Gorski, co-author of the 1992 study on brain differences between homosexual and heterosexual men, said the discovery of another difference is no surprise. "I'm sure we're going to find others," he said in a telephone interview.

It's not clear whether the brain differences found so far really influence sexual orientation, and they may even be results of it, he said. Nor is it clear whether the brain differences affect mental functioning, he said.

Gorski, a professor of anatomy and cell biology at the medical school at the University of California at Los Angeles, also said the size differences in Witelson's study might have been due simply to chance.

Scientists are debating what produces sexual orientation. Witelson said the idea that biology plays a role "clearly does not mean that environment is irrelevant, but what it means is that environment is not the whole story."

Police suspect man of killing two wives

By Jeffrey Blair
The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH -- A man moves to town, sets up a business, takes out an insurance policy on a cheerful, churchgoing wife and hits a rocky spot in his marriage. She ends up dead in a tub.

The second time it happens, police suspect this is no mere coincidence.

Timothy Boczkowski has been charged with homicide in the death of Maryann Boczkowski, and investigators are looking anew at the death almost four years earlier to the day of Boczkowski's first wife, Mary Elaine.

The 38-year-old denture maker remained in jail on $1 million bail Thursday, two days after he was arrested and 11 days after paramedics he called found the second Mrs. Boczkowski floating on her side in their patio hot tub in suburban Pittsburgh.

On Nov. 4, 1990, Boczkowski told police he heard a "thump" and found his first wife dead in a bathtub at their home in Greensboro, N.C. The cause of her death was never determined, and Boczkowski was not charged.

"He didn't strike me as being very emotional about it," recalled a business acquaintance, Nancy Vodenichar of Stoneville, N.C. "But everybody shows their grief differently, I guess."

Vodenichar and her husband, Anthony, bought a miniature golf course and restaurant near Madison, N.C., from the couple in 1990. She said Boczkowski told her he and his wife had been planning to end their marriage.

Boczkowski returned to his hometown of Pittsburgh not long after his first wife's death. He opened a denture business, remarried in 1993 and took out a $100,000 insurance policy on his new wife.

That wife, 36-year-old Maryann Boczkowski, suffocated Nov. 6, the Allegheny County Coroner's Office said.

Investigators said they suspected Boczkowski from the start.

He told them he found his wife's body in the tub when he went to check on her, less than half an hour after leaving her there.

Ross Township Police Chief Carl Zotter said Boczkowski told him that he and his wife were soaking in the tub as three children from his first marriage slept. They talked about his concern that she had been drinking too much, Boczkowski said.

"I think it was a one-sided conversation," Zotter said.

The police chief said authorities suspect Mrs. Boczkowski was strangled but don't know whether it happened in the tub or elsewhere. She had no water in her lungs, a sign of drowning.

Boczkowski had scratches on his back, arms and neck, and his wife had bruises on her throat and chest. Boczkowski told a detective that his wife had scratched him during a rough massage.

As paramedics carried his wife away, Boczkowski said, "I hope they don't try to put this on me," according to Lt. John Brennan of the Allegheny County homicide squad.

A lie detector test seven hours after Mrs. Boczkowski's death indicated Boczkowski gave deceptive answers, Zotter said.

Boczkowski will plead innocent, his lawyer, James Herb, said Thursday.

Jurors deadlocked in trial of tourist killing in Florida

By Adam Yeomans
The Associated Press

MONTICELLO, Fla. -- A judge declared a mistrial Thursday after the jury deadlocked in the trial of a teen-ager accused of killing a British tourist at a highway rest stop.

John "Billy Joe" Crumitie, 17, was charged with killing Gary Colley and wounding his girlfriend in a botched robbery in September 1993.

The state was expected to retry the case. Circuit Judge S.E. Steinmeyer declared a mistrial after the jury had deliberated about six hours.

Colley was the ninth tourist killed in Florida in a 13-month period. His girlfriend, 36-year-old Margaret Jagger, was wounded in the attack that attracted international headlines, damaged Florida's $31 billion tourism industry and spurred state lawmakers to approve major reforms to Florida's juvenile justice system.

The jury included a former classmate and former teacher of Crumitie. If he had been convicted of murder, Crumitie faced life in prison. He was being held without bond.

Assistant State Attorney Mike Schneider had no comment on the hung jury.

Crumitie testified Wednesday that he was at home when Colley was killed.

John "Billy Joe" Crumitie is taken from the Jefferson County Courthouse Thursday in Monticello, Fla., after a judge declared a mistrial when the jury deadlocked.

Defense is the name of the game

Junior specialist sparks volleyball team to 15-11 mark

By John Gibney
The BG News

Each week, the Mid-American Conference honors a volleyball player for her outstanding performance on the court. The MAC Player of the Week award usually goes to a player who registers both a high kill total and an impressive hitting percentage.

Because her primary role on the court involves passing, serving and playing defense, Marlene Metti will probably never receive that award.

However, the junior defensive specialist has proven herself to be one of the most valuable players with the Falcons this season.

"Marlene is the best defensive player we have," head coach Denise Van De Walle said. "She is someone who does not get enough recognition because of the role she's in. However, anyone who knows volleyball can see what she does for the team and appreciate her abilities."

Whether or not the praises and accolades ever come, Metti remains comfortable in her role.

"I'm not here for that," she said. "I play because I like to play, not because I want the highlights. My role is a defensive specialist. It's the role I adopted, and I like to do it."

As a four-year letter winner at Junior defensive specialist Marlene Metti dives to make a dig during a game last season. Metti has helped the Falcons reach the MAC Tournament for the sixth consecutive season.

Perrysburg High School, Metti received an abundance of recognition for her play on the volleyball court. In both her junior and senior seasons, Metti was named league and district player of the year.

Standing just 5 feet 3 inches tall, it was Metti's heart, not her height, that attracted college recruiters.

"Marlene impressed me with her hustle, heart and determination," Van De Walle said. "The style of defense she played was very intense and aggressive in her pursuit of the ball. I knew I wanted her."

MAC universities and some smaller schools expressed interest in Metti, but she chose BG because of her familiarity with the program. During high school she attended several University volleyball camps, and she felt comfortable knowing one of the Falcon players, Mitzi Sanders, now an assistant coach.

The success of the volleyball team in 1992 limited Metti's playing time during her freshman season. Van De Walle said Metti lacked the aggression she showed in high school, but has since played with the intensity BG expected.

"Last year she broke out of the mold and got back to herself," she said. "This year she has changed the momentum of several games because of her play. She'll get a critical dig, make a save and throw her body to the floor to make a play."

Metti enters the games in specific situations for Lori Hilton when the outside hitter rotates to the back row. Hilton dominates at the net, but Metti keeps the ball alive by getting more digs.

"Marlene makes a difference when she's in the game, and the players really appreciate her," Van De Walle said.

Metti's spark helped the Falcons to a 15-11 record and a sixth consecutive MAC tournament appearance. However, they must now prepare for their toughest challenge of the season as they face undefeated Ball State Friday night on the Cardinals' home court.

"Ball State gets us fired up because we are such rivals," Metti said.

state after Saturday's loss, their health is another question.

After losing to Mid-American Conference rival Eastern Michigan Saturday, the Bowling Green women's swimming squad is anxious to get back to action this weekend against Wright State and Kenyon colleges.

"[The women's team] expected to win against Eastern Michigan," head coach Brian Gordon said. "I think Eastern is a team that is very even with us as far as talent, but they just got the better of us."

While the Falcons fell to EMU as a team, some of the women turned in very encouraging performances. At the top of the list was Cheryl Paterson, who paced the Falcons with three victories. Gordon said that Lynn Rutherford also had a very good meet.

"We've asked Cheryl to do the impossible ever since she was a freshman, and she always seems to come through," Gordon said. "But Lynn Rutherford was also very good."

Although Gordon isn't worried about the women's mental

"We've got some people who are not 100 percent healthy, but every team is going to run into problems like that sometime during the season," Gordon said. "We did have everybody in the water at practice [Thursday], so we should be ready to go."

"We should be favored to win going into the weekend. But it's close enough to where it could turn out the other way."

While the women's team is the favorite, the men's squad will be playing the role of the underdog against Wright State Friday, despite its encouraging performance against EMU – the premier men's team in the MAC – Saturday.

"I thought that the only thing that went wrong against Eastern is that we didn't win the meet," Gordon said. "There was no pressure on us, and sometimes we swim better in those situations. This weekend there are a little higher expectations, so I'm anxious to see how we do."

The Raiders are also anxious to face the Falcons.

"Whenever we swim against Wright State, they really get excited about swimming against us," Gordon said.

BG looks to end two-game slide

Head coach hopes to start new win streak against Irish

By John Boyle
The BG News

The Bowling Green hockey team looks to rebound from its first two conference losses of the season last weekend to nationally-ranked Michigan and Michigan State.

BG begins that chore tonight against Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind., and returns home to entertain Western Michigan Saturday at the Ice Arena.

"It's a big weekend to get back on the winning track," BG head coach Buddy Powers. "We've got to start another winning streak here and get four points."

Bowling Green (7-3 overall, 5-2 CCHA) posted a 7-1 victory against the Irish earlier this month and a 5-3 decision over the Broncos in Kalamazoo last month.

The Falcons broke open a close game in the last 10 minutes of the third period in the win over the Irish. Notre Dame attempted to slow down the BG offense by incorporating a physical style of play.

That game plan worked for much of the game, and Powers expects much of the same from the Irish in their own rink.

"That's the way they're going to play all the time," Powers said. "That's their style. When you've got that many big players, that's the way you want to play the game."

Notre Dame (3-6 overall, 1-6 CCHA) enters tonight's game fresh off its first conference win of the season last weekend against Ferris State.

When WMU visits Bowling Green on Saturday, both teams might remember the Broncos' last excursion to the Ice Arena more so than BG's win earlier this season.

Western scored three goals in the last 1:42 seconds to defeat the Falcons 4-3.

"They beat us here last year - it's something we have in the back of our minds," tri-captain

Brian Holzinger said.

The Broncos should have Holzinger in the forefront of their thoughts. Holzinger has been held scoreless just once this season and is currently riding an eight-game point streak (7-11-18). Holzinger also leads the CCHA in scoring with 22 points (9-13-22).

BG should also be bolstered offensively by the return of winger Tom Glantz. Glantz, who is tied for the conference lead in game-winning goals, returns against the Irish after missing five games due to a shoulder injury.

Glantz has amassed 10 points (6-4) in only five games.

The Broncos are paced by winger Chris Brooks. Brooks scored his first goal of the season with 17 seconds left against Ohio State last Saturday. He also has 13 assists to go along with the goal for 14 points this season.

Beating Michigan could save Cooper

By Rusty Miller
The Associated Press

COLUMBUS -- Former Ohio State coach Woody Hayes never liked to utter the word Michigan. Current Ohio State coach John Cooper is getting to be the same way.

In close to seven full years as the head coach of the Buckeyes, he has won (53-25-4), graduated his players and kept the team free from the taint of NCAA probation that has rocked the OSU basketball program.

But any time Cooper hears the word Michigan -- as he has this week leading up to Saturday's bash at Ohio Stadium -- he almost shudders.

This week he blew up several times when asked about the rivalry, his record in the rivalry and Michigan co-captain Walter Smith's comment that he wanted to win so Cooper would be fired.

Cooper has declined to answer any questions about anything other than the X's and O's of the game.

Winless with one tie in six starts against the Wolverines, is this the year that Cooper finally pulls the maize and blue monkey off his back?

"In May, coaches worry about graduation rates," said Michigan coach Gary Moeller, who had the rivalry burned into his psyche as an Ohio State captain in 1962. "In February, we worry about recruiting. But winning and losing is what we're graded on."

So far, at least in terms of the annual pressure cooker of the Michigan game, Cooper has received a failing grade.

There have been close calls -- 34-31 in his first year, a last-second 16-13 setback in 1990 and even a 13-13 tie two years ago. There have been lopsided defeats -- by 28 points in 1991 and 28 again last year when Ohio State was unbeaten and ranked fifth in the country.

Still, there have been no victories. Cooper has lost more games to Michigan without a victory than any coach in Ohio State history. The last time the Buckeyes went six years without beating Michigan was 1951 -- and it took four coaches to do that.

Cooper's predecessors, Hayes and Earle Bruce, each had winning records against the Wolverines. Hayes, who helped mold the rivalry in his showdowns with former pupil Bo Schembechler in the 1960s and '70s, was 17-10-1. Bruce was 5-4.

The teams will be on relatively even terms Saturday. Michigan is 7-3 and ranked 15th in the country. Ohio State is 8-3 and ranked 22nd. They are tied for second in the Big Ten, with the winner going to the Florida Citrus Bowl and the loser heading to the Holiday Bowl.

There already has been speculation in newspapers and on radio call-in shows that if Cooper loses, he's gone.

An hour before the kickoff of the 1991 Michigan-Ohio State game in Ann Arbor, then-OSU Athletic Director Jim Jones awarded Cooper a new four-year contract. Jones later said it was done to show that Cooper wouldn't be judged on the basis of one game.

Ohio State then went out and lost 31-3, inflaming many Ohio State fans and Cooper detractors.

Now Cooper is again about to enter the last year of his contract and the speculation has mounted weekly. Cooper won't say what it's like to have the pressure of being graded by a single game.

"I would hate to have any job riding on one game," said Moeller, who has also caught some heat this season. "I think Ohio State has done an awful lot of good things. They've played some great football games this season. And they're a young team, too. They're just going to get better and better."

Whether Cooper will weather the storm to lead that team may be determined by Saturday's game against you-know-who.

Battle of the beatens pits Zips against OU

By Rusty Miller
The Associated Press

COLUMBUS — Two hours away and at about the same time as Ohio University plays Akron Saturday, 94,000 fans will cram into the gray stadium on the banks of the Olentangy River to watch Michigan and Ohio State renew their annual feud.

Around three hours after the Ohio U.-Akron game — and in the same stadium — Canton McKinley will meet Massillon Washington for the second time in three weeks. There could be 30,000 in the stands for the playoff game, the 101st game in a rivalry that is one of the most heated in high school football.

And Ohio U. and Akron? They'll be playing before about 3,000 fans to find out which team is indisputably the worst in college football.

"It's too late to cancel," Ohio U. coach Tom Lichtenberg said, only half joking.

It is believed to be the first time that 0-10 major-college teams have ever met.

"I don't like that kind of history," Akron coach Gerry Faust said.

On the same day Auburn meets Alabama in a battle of unbeaten, Akron's Zips — the nickname has taken on new meaning — and the Bobcats will decide who is No. 104 in Division I-A.

Lichtenberg was fired three weeks ago after eight wins in five years with the Bobcats. Faust — yes, the same Gerry Faust who used to shake down the thunder as head coach at Notre Dame — is hanging on to his job with his fingernails. For weeks newspapers in Akron and Cleveland have speculated that he will be fired.

"No one's even said a word to me, so I don't think so," said the ever-optimistic and ever-hoarse Faust. He is 42-53-3 in nine years at Akron since getting fired for going 30-26-1 in five years with the Fighting Irish.

Akron owns the nation's longest losing streak, 12 in a row. Over those dozen missteps, the Zips have been beaten by an average of 26 points a game.

By comparison, Ohio U. has been a juggernaut, despite losing 10 in a row, the nation's second-longest skid. They're winless, but the Bobcats have had close calls with Utah State (losing 0-5), Ball State (14-21), Central Michigan (10-22), Western Michigan (3-15) and Eastern Michigan (13-24).

One subplot is that Ohio U. had held the nation's longest losing skid, 15 in a row, until the Bobcats and Lichtenberg won four of their last five games last year.

Another is that Lichtenberg and Faust are best friends, the former serving as Faust's offensive coordinator for three years at Notre Dame.

"If I had my druthers, I'd rather he was playing somebody else and I was playing another team too, so both of us could go out with a win," Lichtenberg said.

The game is light years away from some of the two coaches have been in on other November afternoons: Notre Dame-Southern Cal, Ohio State-Michigan.

How far is it from being on the sidelines of the most prestigious program in the country to playing before a handful of people in a stadium called the Rubber Bowl?

"You've got to understand me," Faust said. "If I'm working with young kids, there can be 100,000 or 1,000 in the stands and it wouldn't make any difference. To see them get better on the field and to get better in life, to try to help them, that's the important thing."

When Lichtenberg was fired, Ohio U. President Dr. Robert Glidden said he had "asked to be reassigned." But Lichtenberg said he didn't quit, resign or ask for reassignment.

Now he hopes to just bow out with his memories in what could be his last game after 33 years in coaching.

Veterans helping Browns win

By Chuck Melvin
The Associated Press

BEREA, Ohio — Even their teammates still think of Pepper Johnson and Carl Banks as New York Giants linebackers, Don Griffin as a San Francisco cornerback, Mark Rypien as a Washington quarterback.

Come January, they'd all like to be known for their work in Cleveland.

"We're always going to be these guys who came over from some other team, until we reach the same accomplishments here," Johnson said. "And I want it. I'm a greedy guy. When it's all said and done, I'd like to say, 'Oh yeah, I got a couple Super Bowl rings with the Giants, and I ended my career with the Browns and got a couple Super Bowl rings there.'"

As recently as a week ago, talk like that would have been dismissed out of hand. Surely, the Browns' 8-2 record equals the best in the league, but until last Sunday, they hadn't really beaten anybody.

But their 26-7 victory at Philadelphia, where Randall Cunningham had won 20 straight games, made believers of a bunch of skeptics — including many of the Browns themselves.

"We opened a lot of eyes, showed what the Cleveland Browns are made of and what we can do," Johnson said. "I think we can match up with anybody in the league."

The victory lent credibility to the long-term plan of coach Bill Belichick, who until recently seemed to be assembling a team that, like himself, had no personality.

He apparently knew what he was doing all along. He kept only a select few of the players from the Cleveland team that went 3-13 in 1990, the year before he arrived, and has been coldly methodical in gluing together his ideal mixture of talented youngsters (CB Antonio Langham, WR Derrick Alexander, C Steve Everitt), prime-time veterans (S Eric Turner, DT Michael Dean Perry, RB Eric Metcalf) and experienced winners (free-agent additions Banks, Johnson, Griffin, Rypien).

From that group, a personality has emerged, precisely the one

Belichick was driving for: This team would have fit in perfectly in the NFC East back when Belichick was working as a defensive coordinator for Bill Parcells' Giants in the 1980s.

The Browns have yielded 118 points in 10 games, making them by far the stingiest defense in the league. Offensively, they'd rather run than pass, and lately Leroy Hoard and their revamped line have made that possible. And their special teams are second to none.

"I'll tell you what, they'll definitely get into the playoffs,"

Cunningham said after Sunday's game. "They spanked our butts real good. They're probably the best team in the AFC."

Deep down, Belichick loved hearing that, although he insists the lack of national attention paid to the Browns so far — they're 4-point underdogs at Kansas City this Sunday — is of little concern to him.

"What's really important is what this team feels," he said. "I think our team's got good talent, good chemistry, a good work ethic. We've got a pretty good team this year. I'm not concerned about what somebody in Fort Lauderdale thinks about the Cleveland Browns. I mean, I am, but I don't think it affects the outcome of the game."

Even so, Johnson is mighty proud to be the Browns' leading tackler and one of the emotional leaders of a defense that is at last being recognized as one of the NFL's best.

"I always felt I was a big part of the teams I was on," Johnson said. "But now, I'm being looked up to."

Webber traded to Bullets

The Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — The Golden State Warriors traded Chris Webber to the Washington Bullets for Tom Gugliotta and three first-round draft picks Thursday. The move came hours after the Bullets had signed first-round draft pick Juwan Howard, who teamed with Webber to lead Michigan to the NCAA championship game in 1992 and 1993.

And it came one day after the Warriors re-signed Webber, who exercised his option to terminate a 15-year, $74 million contract in the offseason and became a free agent. The Warriors had to sign Webber to trade him.

The Warriors will get the Bullets' first-round draft picks in 1996, 1998 and 2000.

Webber was the NBA rookie of the year last season, but said he was unhappy playing for Golden State coach Don Nelson. Those hard feelings intensified during the contract stalemate when Nelson said he'd quit if that would help bring Webber back to the team.

That remark angered Webber, who felt it was an attempt to turn public opinion against him.

The 6-foot-10 forward averaged 17.5 points and 9.1 rebounds and shot 55 percent from the field last season. The contract he signed Wednesday night reportedly was for $73.14 million over 12 years.

Gugliotta has averaged 15.8 points and 9.5 rebounds since joining the Bullets as their top draft pick in 1992.

"It's devastating," Washington swingman Calbert Cheaney said from New Jersey.

INSIDE FALCON HOCKEY

In 1991, Brian Holzinger decided to attend Bowling Green State University. It was the toughest decision of his life because he had also received scholarship offers to play for some of college hockey's premier teams. Teams such as Michigan, Michigan State, Wisconsin, Denver and Miami all battled unsuccessfully to get Holzinger.

Like all of his on-ice decisions, Holzinger made the right choice. He began his senior season as one of the most decorated players in Falcon hockey history. His name stands alongside the leading career scorers for BG. Former Falcons that have gone into the NHL to make a name for themselves - Nelson Emerson, Rob Blake and Gary Galley.

What really sets Holzinger apart from the impressive numbers that he shares with BG's greats is the improvement the Falcon hockey program has made since he first put on the No. 19 jersey that Emerson wore before him.

The year before Holzinger arrived, the Brown and Orange struggled to a 15-23-2 season. That was followed by an eight-win season during his freshman campaign. This year, however, thanks in large part to Holzinger, the BG hockey team is once again in the national polls.

Awards and Accomplishments:

- 1994 • currently leads the CCHA in scoring
- preseason All-American
- 1993 • led BG with 22 goals
- CCHA All-Academic team member
- 1992 • CCHA second team selection
- led BG with 31 goals and 57 total points
- played on the U.S. over 20 squad
- 1991 • played on the U.S. Olympic Festival and Junior National teams
- sixth-round draft pick of the Buffalo Sabres

"Quotable"

BRIAN HOLZINGER

On why he decided to attend Bowling Green:

"When I was looking at colleges, I wanted to go somewhere I could play right away. BG was a place that had a lot of tradition in its hockey program and it was a good atmosphere for athletics and academics, which was something that I was looking for."

On participating in the Olympic trials:

"There are so many good players, so it raises the level of your game so much because you're playing with the best players in the country."

"It was a great honor and a great feeling. It was like something magical happening, just like an All-Star game."

On his academics and athletics:

"I take academics seriously. Athletically, everyone wants to be an All-American. I try to be the best I can in athletics and the best I can in academics."

On playing in the NHL:

"With the lockout, who knows what is going to happen, but it has always been a dream of mine."

Description of play and responsibilities:

"Kelly Perrault steps out from behind the net, he takes one step and then I cut across the ice. Kelly will hit me with a pass at center ice while I am moving at full speed. so I can hopefully get the puck into the zone and set up the power play."
