Students to sleep-out for homeless

To raise awareness about the homeless, there will be a sleep-out for the homeless, Box City, on Friday night starting at 7 p.m. The sleep-out will be in the grassy area between the Student Services Building and Kreschmer Quadrangle.

During the evening there will be free food, volleyball games going on all night, box decorating, music, presentations by social workers, and free t-shirts to all who attend.

Students wanting to attend the event can contact their RA's or Wil Ranney at 372-1248. Tickets for Box City are $5 and students can buy tickets at the event or prior to it.

Ranney said they would like a good response to the event, and they are planning for about 200 people. He also said he would like as many people as possible to know about the event so they can participate in it.

The event is sponsored by the Resident Student Association, The Undergraduate Student Government, The University Activities Organization, Harshman Quadrangle and Rodgers Quadrangle.

Brooks & Dunn named top country music entertainers

UNIVERSAL CITY, Calif. — Brooks & Dunn were named top entertainers of the year at the 31st annual Academy of Country Music Awards.

Gentleman cowboy George Strait's "Check Yes or No" was the single record of the year and Tracy Byrd's romantic ballad "The Keeper of the Stars" was top song.

Conference plans to address issues of Latino students

Maureen Barry
The BG News

The second annual Latino Issues Conference will occur this Friday, focusing on the Inclusive Discourse in the 21st Century, according to Francisco Cabanillas, assistant professor in the Romance Languages Department. Six sessions will be offered between 8:15 a.m. and 5:45 p.m. to discuss issues that Latinos will face in the 21st century, Cabanillas said.

Cabanillas said Ed Whipple, vice president for Student Affairs, will provide opening remarks for the conference at 8 a.m.

Yolanda Flores, the conference coordinator, said the topics of the sessions include Latinos in the business community, the recruitment and retention of Latinos in education, and Latino music, art and poetry.

Flores said the presentation about Latinos in the business community will be presented by University alumni.

"The alumni will provide advice to Latinos in college," she said.

The sessions include presentations given by representatives from companies and universities such as Allied Signal Inc., the Cambridge Investment Group, Otterbein College and Michigan State University, according to Flores.

The conference will conclude Friday night with a theatrical performance developed by students, according to Cabanillas.

Flores said the play is directed by Ricardo Fernandez and is presented in both English and Spanish.

Coordinators for the conference are looking at the possibility of integrating the conference into curriculum next year.

Two meningitis cases diagnosed

The Associated Press

HAMILTON — Two cases of meningitis have been diagnosed in southwest Ohio, and a third is suspected, health officials said Wednesday.

The two confirmed cases involve children in West Chester, in Butler County, and in Mason, in Warren County, Butler County Health Director Pat Burg said. The first was reported Friday, and the second on Saturday.

There is a 50 percent chance of death from the disease, Burg said.

The possible third case was reported Wednesday in Hamilton County, in suburban Cincinnati. All three cases are in an area where the three counties meet, and the first two victims knew each other, Burg said.

No connection has been made with the third possible case, in which results of blood tests are pending, she said.

The germ is spread through close direct contact, such as from droplets of saliva or the respiratory tract through coughing. Symptoms include high fever, chills, headaches, vomiting, a stiff neck and rashes.

Rape trial continues

Expert says DNA links Pearson to victim

Joe Boyle
The BG News

DNA evidence dominated the second day of testimony in the Pearson rape trial.

Supervisory Special Agent Jack Quill was called by Wood County Prosecutor Alan Mayberry Wednesday to testify that his research pointed to Eric Pearson as the man responsible for a Aug. 1993 rape of a former University student.

Quill, recognized by the court as an expert witness, testified he was asked by Attorney General Betty Montgomery to compare a blood sample from Pearson to semen samples found on the Bowling Green victim's clothing.

"I received an item known to me as a known blood sample from Eric Pearson," Quill said.

Quill used an overhead projection of an ideal DNA strand to show jurors how DNA identification and comparison is done.

After giving jurors a brief lesson in DNA comparison, Quill compared the DNA sample from Pearson's blood and the sample of semen from the victim's clothing.

"My opinion is that the DNA profiles from Mr. Eric Pearson match those taken from [the victim]," Quill said.

Quill said the statistical probability of another white male matching the semen sample is one-in-350,000.

Quill later said the DNA sample could include people who were not necessarily responsible for the attack, but were simply "contributors" to the stain.

Throughout cross-examination Stanley Needles, Pearson's attorney, raised his voice and frequently became impatient with the FBI agent. At one point Needles asked

Judge Gale Williamson to have Quill "answer the questions so we might get along better."

Mayberry called Bowling Green Police Detective Dawn Kerschner, who pulled Pearson over on a traffic violation in February of 1994. Kerschner testified that Pearson was a white male with brown hair.

A victim of a rape by Pearson in July of 1994 was the prosecution's final witness.

Pearson was convicted of the Tiffin rape in 1995. According to the woman, Pearson covered her head with a pillowcase, tied her hands behind her back, and raped her in front of her four-year-old son.

Hartman files suit against University

Jay Young
The BG News

A former University professor filed a civil lawsuit against the institution Monday, claiming the school has violated Ohio's open records laws.

John Hartman, who worked in the Journalism Department from 1977-1979, filed the suit in the Wood County Common Pleas Court. Hartman said he requested public documents relating to the initial hiring and subsequent employment of Terry Rentner and Lucila Vargas on March 7.

Hartman said the records are important to his discrimination case against the University, which he filed with the Ohio Civil Rights Commission in July of 1994. Hartman had applied for a tenure-track position in the Journalism Department. Debbie Owens, a black female, was selected.

In May 1995, the OCRC ruled there was probable cause that Hartman had been discriminated against on the basis of race and sex.

Hartman said the employment records of Rentner, a journalism assistant professor, and Vargas, a former journalism professor, are important to his discrimination case.

"There were things that have come up in the course of the investigation that I believe needed to be followed up on," Hartman said. "The way to do that is to collect additional information, and I requested that information back in early March."

Hartman, currently a professor at Central Michigan University, said he called University Attorney Nancy Footer on March 11 to ask about the status of his request.

"I called to inquire about the information," Hartman said. "I was told by Nancy Footer that she had turned the matter over to David O'Connell."

O'Connell, an attorney from Toledo Marshall and Melhorn law firm, said his office was never contacted by Hartman.

O'Connell said the University will release those documents which are public.

"We, meaning the University and I, will review the complaint," O'Connell said. "We will comply with the public records law."

Letters to the Editor

Cartoon hurts Greeks and children, too

We are writing in response to the cartoon placed in The BG News on April 19, 1996. Where do we begin? Let's start off with the Ronald McDonald House. What, you may ask, does that have to do with Cult - excuse us - Beta 500?

The countless children of the Ronald McDonald House are the ones who benefit from this charity. We are doing this for them. How dare someone who has no knowledge of what Beta 500 stands for, knock it down!

We, as Greeks, are completely aware that this was not meant to hurt the children; however, it does hurt them as much as it hurts us. As Greeks we spend many hours raising money and helping people who need some type of assistance.

The only difference is the letters we wear. Even when we compete against each other wearing our different letters, we all know we are doing it for the same cause.

Beta 500 is a philanthropy. Yes, it is "hyped up" and played to its very extent. Then again, how dare the Greeks play up a philanthropy and have fun. We have 100 percent participation and again the children of Ronald McDonald House benefit and you're hurting them.

Of course this cartoon is an attempt to dent the Greek image. So, whatever happened to the Dance Marathon?

This was an opportunity for Greek life to be shed in a positive light. The participation by the Greek community was completely overlooked. Although this event was a campus wide philanthropy, we had the greatest percentage of involvement out of any other group.

All those children's faces and countless hours of dancing and fatigue and work and money raised, over $45,000 to help those children - and the cartoon placed in The BG News on April 19 was three times larger than any written article in relation to Dance Marathon.

Don't stereotype the Greek community. This cartoon completely demolishes the ideas that we stand for. This is as off-colored as any type of put-down to any organization.

We should not have to put up with that, especially to stand up for all those children. This totally reinforces negative stereotypes that people have of us. When, in actuality, we are doing the exact opposite.

The sad fact is people would not know that because all they see is the negativity.

So, thank you, for once again supporting the Greek system. The children of Ronald McDonald House thank you too.

Christianity is just a bigger cult

"A remark generally hurts in proportion to its truth."
-Will Smith

"I AM THE GREAT CORNHOLIO!!!"
-Beavis

"Cult."

It's our society's biggest buzz word since "Bobbit." It's something our media has taken a sensationally adamant stand against. It's something that almost every person living in the United States belongs to.

Yes, that's probably including you.

Before I go any further with this, however, let's get the official Webster's Dictionary definition of the word "cult."

cult: a great or excessive devotion or dedication to some person, idea or thing.

OK, so how does this place most of the population in the United States in a cult?

Simple. All religions are cults, including Christianity, which is the most prominent cult in the United States.

Please take note that I'm not trying to bash Christianity or any other religions in this column. I mean, if it wasn't for religion we probably would have torn each other apart a long time ago. (Which is kind of ironic considering that in some countries [such as Bosnia] religion IS the reason why people are literally tearing each other apart).

Due to the fact that the word "cult" is being seen as such a derogatory term these days, I'm sure that some of you out there are pretty offended by the fact that I just called your system of faith a cult.

Sorry. How about if I use a more politically correct term like "Faith-inspired Collective"?

The question is, though, why is it that so many people who belong to a religion... especially the more prominent ones... don't like their groups to be referred to as "cults"? After all, most (if not all) religions are nothing more than groups of people who have a great (and sometimes excessive) devotion to some person, belief or thing.

Hmmm... That definition sounds kind of familiar, but I just can't seem to place it...

As I previously mentioned, I don't have anything against religion in and of itself. I mean, if you want to pay homage to the great and mighty Man on the Moon, so be it... until you start to blatantly get in someone's face about how your cult's beliefs are better than their cult's beliefs.

For example, last year there was a Christian speaker on campus who saw the Metallica t-shirt I was wearing and instantly assumed that I was Satanic.

I'm not Satanic, but I thought that it was pretty interesting that he thought I was, and asked him why he assumed that I was in league with the Prince of Darkness.

After explaining to me that my apparel was what led him to this faulty conclusion, he then went on to talk about how horrible Satanic people were.

Oddly enough, however, he didn't know anyone Satanic and admitted to know merely "a little" about the Satanic religion.

As it ends up, the few things he thought he knew were all incorrect.

The point? Listen, a lot of other people in this world share beliefs that might or might not coincide with yours. Maybe they're right, or maybe you're right. I don't know.

What I do know, though, is this. Just because you believe in something, that doesn't give you the right to ostracize other people because their beliefs don't match up with yours. Try learning from them rather than trying to teach them something.

The results might surprise you. The semester's almost over, and that means that this is one of your last chances to drop Aaron Weisbrod a line at aaronw@bgsu.edu or 210 West Hall. Remember, all intelligent mail is answered.

The Book is not The Authority

"Once you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth" - Sherlock Holmes.

These are the words that resound through my mind as I write this column. You see, my little walk on the wild side of mystery began almost a week ago. Being an avid Sherlock Holmes fan, I love a mystery. It's irresistible. So when this all happened, needless to say, I felt the urge to shamelessly write it down and share it with the campus.

It started out normally enough. I went to dinner with the usual "gang" over in Founders.

"Brad," a friend said. "Did you know that Einstein was a homosexual?"

After my initial shock at the question, I proceeded to ask Stu if he had been sniffing things from the Physics lab again. After giving me a negative answer, Stu explained that this information was displayed on a bulletin board, black and white, that Einstein was a homosexual.

This set my Spidey sense tingling. Einstein had been my hero since I was 6 years old, so I've read a lot about him and by him, and never once had I read anything like this. But, in the interest of objectivity, I decided to investigate this possibility further. So, clutching my pipe in mouth and holstering my magnifying glass, the game was afoot.

My stop was the RA who posted the bulletin board. I inquired as to the source of this information. She proceeded to show me the Multicultural Resource Guide, used by the Residence Halls for programs and planning. I prefer to call it "The Book." And yes, this book said that Einstein was a homosexual. The book cited no reference source for this information. Interesting.

So I asked the RA where the information came from. "Well, the hall directors got together with the cultural diversity department and put it together, so it must be true."

Next stop - the "cultural diversity" department on campus.

I was stumped. What now? What would Sherlock and Watson do? After leafing through my copy of "The complete Sherlock Holmes" for a while, it came to me. Holmes always meticulously investigated the crime scene first for clues. I had just glanced through The Book. So I made like a bread truck and hauled buns at Warp Nine back to the Scene of the Crime - The Book.

Several hours of scrutiny later, it jumped out at me. It was the proverbial Smoking Gun. There it was - as big as the construction in the middle of campus - and just about as obvious. The names. "This book compiled by..." and there they were. The names of the six individuals that had researched and compiled The Book. Woo Hoo! Things were getting hotter than living in Montana!

So, with the theme from "Mission: Impossible" playing in my head, I looked up the e-mail addresses of these individuals. And got them. Or at least five of the six. So I e-mailed them all, explaining my concern. Two e-mailed me back, saying they would check, and I haven't heard from them since. A third emailed me, saying the source was the Internet, and gave me a webmaster to e-mail.

Mustering my best English accent I spoke to Watson (Rally a Sherlock Teddy Bear I own - special thanks to Judy). "Eureka, Watson! I believe we have found our man! The weak link in the evidence is here!"

Now, for those of you who are shaking your heads thinking "What is this Holmes-wannabe talking about?" Don't worry - it happens all the time. Secon, I'll explain.

For those of you who aren't familiar with the Internet (and maybe to some of you who are) this might be as a surprise. Put your ear to the paper and I'll tell you. Ready - here it is - There's a lot of cybertrash on the Internet. Don't believe me? Surf for a while, you'll see what I mean. Literally anyone can put a page on the World Wide Web. Anyone. Would you trust anything you read if you were looking for the truth about something? Or would you actually be able to back up on your sources?

Evidently, the compilers of this information relied upon a source that was not very well backed for their information. Bad academic practice. But this is just one little fact. I have neither the time nor ability to check every fact in The Book.

But I did check this one. I checked several library systems and research databases. I checked OhioLink for any books with both Einstein and anything having to do with homosexuality in either their titles, subject, or abstract. Finally, I went to the magazines, periodicals and newspapers. After searching a total of 12,213,614 records and OhioLink (which includes libraries statewide), there is literally no mention of Einstein and anything to do with homosexuality in these records. So how reliable is this piece of information?

But I can't help to wonder - how big is the tangle of lies I move when I tug this thread? How much of the information put on the bulletin boards in our residence halls and spoken in our programs is unreliable because it was all from The Book - which at least obviously in some cases - uses extremely questionable academic methods?

So concludes my little mystery. It didn't involve a buggy chase through the streets of London or a boat trip down the Thames - but hey, so what? Perhaps the tip of a deeper iceberg has been struck here.

I don't know what I could say to help, except to take what you are hearing with a grain or two of salt, and question what is being fed to us here. If you hear something, ask the source. Cite it. If they can't, at least be skeptical. And wonder over and over again - is this truth? Is it biased? Is it reliable? And never stop asking for the objective evidence so you can make up your own mind. But then again, that's almost always good practice.

Dahmer's utensils will be put on sale

Jodie DeJonge The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE -- A search began Wednesday for an auctioneer willing to handle the sale of knives, saws, hammers and drill bits Jeffrey Dahmer used to dismember some of his 17 victims. A judge Tuesday ordered the city to give what prosecutors called Dahmer's "instruments of death" and hundreds of other personal possessions to Milwaukee lawyer Robert Steuer to sell. The proceeds will benefit the families of Dahmer's victims.

"The sale of all this material will have the unfortunate effect, in some ways, of glorifying the tragic incidents which have led us to this point."

Daniel George Columbia County circuit judge

Dahmer, who grew up in the Akron, Ohio, area, said he lured his victims back to his apartment to take nude pictures, have sex or watch videos. He then drugged, strangled and dismembered them, taking photos of the bodies in various stages of mutilation. No date or place for the auction had been chosen.

lize later, a videotape of the film "The Exorcist," a lava lamp, gargoyle figurines and greeting cards.

Dahmer was sentenced to multiple life prison terms after a jury rejected his insanity defense and was killed in prison in November 1994.

His parents wanted his belongings destroyed, but Columbia County Circuit Judge Daniel George ruled Tuesday there was no legal basis for barring their release.

"We're going to try to have all of this accomplished as soon as possible," said attorney Perry Friesler, who represents Steuer. He said the attorneys are paying particular attention to selecting an auctioneer.

The items to be auctioned also include handcuffs, a hatchet, sledgehammer and hypodermic needle that prosecutors wanted destroyed.

Milwaukee attorney Thomas Jacobson, who represents the families of eight victims, said a New York auctioneer specializing in such memorabilia has estimated the value of Dahmer's belongings at more than $100,000.

The items also include a vat, refrigerator and freezer, where he stored body parts to cannibalize.

"The sale of all of this material will have the unfortunate effect of, in some ways, glorifying the tragic incidents which have led us to this point in the matter involving Mr. Dahmer," George said.

Steuer was appointed to settle claims on Dahmer's estate by relatives of eight of the young men and boys he confessed to killing. Police had held scores of items seized in July 1991 from his apartment, where investigators found human heads, genitalia and other body parts.

Ohio's official song list grows with 'Pride'

KSU professor's composition wows lawmakers in House, goes to Senate for OK

Paul Souhrada The Associated Press

COLUMBUS -- Move over "Beautiful Ohio" and "Hang on Sloop." The House on Wednesday voted to add "Buckeye Pride" to the state's growing list of official music.

Lawmakers marched in place and pretended to be orchestra conductors while listening to taped versions -- marching band and choral -- of the marching song written by Kent State University music professor Walter Watson. Afterward, they voted 82-12 to designate the song the official state march.

The bill goes to the Senate for consideration.

Watson, who will retire July 1 as director of the Kent School of Music, was delighted with the reception. He wrote the song to kill time during a drive back from Pittsburgh in August 1994.

"I like 'Beautiful Ohio,' but there isn't very much in 'Beautiful Ohio' that says very much about Ohio," he explained.

"Buckeye Pride," on the other hand, extolls the virtue of Ohioans' spirit and boasts of the state's prowess in producing astronauts and presidents.

The vote did not come without controversy.

Backers of "Beautiful Ohio," the official state song, threatened to scuttle the bill in committee before a last-minute compromise designated "Buckeye Pride" as the official state march.

"I didn't have to change anything," Watson said. "It was a march all along."

For the record, "Hang on Sloop" -- a fan favorite at Ohio State University athletic events -- is the official state rock song.

And Rep. Mike Shoemaker, D-Bourneville, thinks two official songs is plenty.

GOP's push for change in adoption laws draws fire from Indian groups

Katherine Rizzo
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- House Republicans on Wednesday revived a push to write some exceptions into the law restricting adoptions of American Indian children by people outside their tribes.

The changes, vigorously opposed by Indian groups, are part of a larger bill dealing with adoptions of children of other races and offering a $5,000 tax credit to offset the expenses families encounter during adoptions.

Rep. Deborah Pryce, R-Ohio, is the architect of the portion of the package dealing with Indian adoptions, which have special restrictions because of a federal law designed to stem the breakup of Indian tribes.

The 1978 law gives extended families and tribes of Indian children first adoption rights. It was intended to control adoptions that had removed thousands of children from reservations and threatened some tribes' survival.

Advocates say the law helps keep Indian families intact. At one time, an estimated one-fourth of Indian children were adopted or living in an institution or in foster care.

"That was a well-intentioned, much needed, well-meaning piece of legislation," Pryce told a news conference.

Separating children from their Indian families just because they lived in poor households "was shameful, but since 1978 the misapplication of (the law) is equally terrible," she said. "It could be applied to anybody with a trace of Indian blood."

Pryce, an adoptive mother herself, has been looking for a way to amend the Indian Child Welfare Act since becoming familiar with a Columbus, Ohio, family fighting to keep twin girls who are 1/32 American Indian.

James and Colette Rost have been locked in a court fight with Richard and Cindy Adams of Long Beach, Calif.

The Adamses were not married when the girls were born and gave up the twins 10 days after the births.

Three months later, Adams changed his mind and invoked his Pomo tribal heritage to seek the girls' return under the federal law, which gives tribes virtually unlimited power to claim children of Indian descent, although tribal eligibility requirements vary widely.

Pryce said the changes inspired the fight over the twin girls would be minor.

But Indian advocacy groups and individual tribes have been looking for a way to stop Pryce's language from remaining in the larger adoption bill.

Her proposed changes "are not in the best interest of Indian children and will be very damaging to Indian reservation communities and families," said A. Brian Wallace, chairman of the Washoe Tribe of Nevada and California.

New bypass causes uproar

Expensive highway additions unwelcome, residents say

The Associated Press

DELAWARE -- Opponents shouted in frustration late Tuesday when two committees made its final decision on where the Delaware bypass will be built.

More than 200 people gathered for a public hearing that ended at 11 p.m. Tuesday when two Delaware bypass advisory committees voted 22-9 to build a connector linking U.S. Route 23 north of the city via U.S. 42 and U.S. 36 to a new Interstate 71 interchange north of Columbus.

The decision ended a push for a commuter rail line.

Residents who oppose the project carried signs that read, "No need for more Interstate."

Commissioners said the $133 million highway project was the least expensive option left after three other road projects were rejected earlier. The recommendation will be sent to the Mid-Ohio Regional Planning Commission and the Ohio Department of Transportation.

No funding or construction schedule has been arranged for the project, which is not expected to be built for several years.

The bypass project is designed to reduce U.S. 23 traffic congestion and provide a link with the new Interstate 73, which will link Detroit to Charleston, S.C.

Trial of mom blamed for arson, murder nearing completion

The Associated Press

NEW PHILADELPHIA -- Prosecutors rested their case Wednesday in the trial of a woman charged with murder in the fire deaths of her four children.

Tuscarawas County Sheriff's Detective Walt Wilson was the last witness to testify for the prosecution. He played an audio tape of an interview conducted with Susan Gribben just days after the Aug. 17 fire that killed her children. On the tape, she said she had nothing to do with the fire.

Defense attorneys said they may wrap their case up by Friday.

Mrs. Gribben, 23, is accused of setting the fire at their home about 30 miles south of Canton. The fire killed twins Samantha Lee and Sandra May, both 3; son Michael Dean, 2; and son Tyler Anthony, 11 months.

She is charged with eight counts of aggravated murder and two counts of aggravated arson. She could be sentenced to death if convicted. Her trial in Tuscarawas County Common Pleas Court began April 1.

Arson investigators have testified they believe the fire was set with the aid of an accelerant, possibly gasoline. Davis testified that he found no evidence that a timing device could have set off the accelerant.

Rite Aid Corp./Revco merger abandoned

Antitrust regulators, fearful of monopoly creation, pressure companies to rescind

Lisa Cornwell
The Associated Press

CLEVELAND - The merger of the nation's two largest drug store chains - Rite Aid Corp. and Revco D.S. Inc. - was called off Wednesday under pressure from antitrust regulators who feared it would nearly monopolize the business in the East and Midwest.

Rite Aid withdrew its $1.8 billion offer for Revco a day after the Federal Trade Commission warned it would sue to block the merger.

The threat appeared to be an indication that the FTC had rejected a proposal by Rite Aid to sell 340 stores to ease antitrust concerns.

Rite Aid chairman and chief executive Martin Grass said the deal's expiration date of next Monday made it impossible to fight the FTC.

"It is apparent to us that the FTC has never been interested in reviewing the facts surrounding our intended merger with Revco in an impartial manner," Grass said in a statement. "Despite the facts presented that proved this transaction would be pro-consumer, the FTC kept changing the rules of the negotiations."

The FTC said it had no comment. A Revco spokesman did not immediately return a call for comment.

Had the chains merged, the resulting company would have had more than 4,000 stores in 22 Midwestern and Eastern states, more than twice its closest competitor.

The FTC contended that the merger would lead to market domination and higher prescription prices in at least nine states. Some states also were fighting the merger.

Industry observers had expected Rite Aid to fight in court to save the deal, which could have helped protect profits from pre-paid drug benefit plans. The plans, which cover prescription medicines for more than 127 million Americans, demand lower prices in exchange for guaranteed business.

The combined company could have more effectively fought off these discounts because of its market domination.

"Had this merger gone through, more people would have paid more money for prescription drugs," said Mark Weaver, a spokesman for Ohio's attorney general.

Revco shares fell $1 Tuesday on news the FTC planned to go ahead with its suit.

Appeals court rules in favor of logging of old-growth forests

Bob Egelko
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO - In a victory for timber interests, a federal appeals court ruled today that a new law allows logging of wide areas of old-growth forests in the Pacific Northwest without environmental restrictions.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said the law, signed by President Clinton last July, requires the government to allow logging on more than 60 tracts for which timber sales agreements were reached between 1991 and July 1995. Tree-cutting and timber removal on the tracts has been blocked by the administration.

The sales, in national forests in Oregon and Washington and on Bureau of Land Management land in western Oregon, total 246 million board-feet of timber. Authority to log an additional 410 million board-feet in the area was also required by the law and was not disputed by the administration.

Although the new law was known as the "salvage rider" and authorized logging of dead and diseased trees on various federal lands, the timber affected by today's ruling is healthy, said environmental groups and the timber industry.

"This case has nothing to do with salvage. That's always been the subterfuge," said attorney Kristin Boyles of the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund. "These are healthy old-growth trees. That's why the timber industry wants them."

She said the disputed sales were "the worst of the worst" environmentally. But Chris West, vice president of the industry-sponsored Northwest Forestry Association, said the logging, which started last October, was "environmentally benign."

The effect of the law and its effect on more than just "salvage" logging "was never hidden from the public," West said. "It was fully debated, and the president knew all about it when he signed the bill."

The timber was sold to high bidders starting in 1989, but logging has been delayed by disputes over protection of the northern spotted owl and other wildlife.

Clinton first vetoed a bill containing the salvage rider, but later signed a budget-cutting measure that included the rider July 27. The president expressed regret for that action after a ruling last September by U.S. District Judge Michael Hogan of Portland, agreeing with industry arguments on the breadth of the law.

Logging was authorized after both Hogan and the appeals court refused to block the effect of the judge's ruling while the government appealed.

In today's 3-0 decision, the court said the salvage rider unfroze not only timber sales from the 1989-90 period, but also 1991-95 sales in the same region.

Deputy testifies at Klaas murder trial

Howard claims suspect Davis not under influence before kidnapping

Michelle Locke
The Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — The man accused of killing Polly Klaas did not appear under the influence of drugs or alcohol about an hour after the 12-year-old was kidnapped, a sheriff's deputy testified today.

Sonoma County deputy Thomas Howard and his partner encountered defendant Richard Allen Davis on a rural road after they were called to investigate a trespassing report on the night of Oct. 1, 1993.

Howard said he shone a flashlight in Davis' eyes and the pupils dilated, indicating he was sober.

That contradicts the story Davis gave police that he was "toasted" on beer and a marijuana joint he said had been laced with PCP.

Davis told police he remembered little about the kidnapping before finding himself driving around with Polly, according to transcripts of lengthy conversations he had with police before and after leading them to Polly's body.

Polly was kidnapped during a slumber party in her home.

At the time deputies talked to

Davis later that night, they did not know about the kidnapping because word of it had not been broadcast on their radio channel. They sent Davis on his way. Davis claims Polly was alive at the time on a nearby hillside, and he went back and killed her later. But authorities doubt that.

Howard was not asked why he never made the connection in the weeks that followed and the hunt for Polly reached national proportions.

He said realization began to dawn on Nov. 28, after a detective called him at home and asked him to write a report of the event.

Prosecutors have tried to show that the crime was carefully planned, calling a number of witnesses who said they saw Davis in Polly's neighborhood before the kidnapping.

Transcripts released Tuesday indicate Davis told police in chilling detail where he drove Polly, how he had to kill her to stay free and that when he cinched a cloth around her neck "she didn't know what hit her."

But in the interviews with police after his arrest, Davis gave no explanation, claiming he didn't remember much until he found himself driving around with Polly in the front seat, her hands bound.

"I don't know why I took her," he said. "I don't know, man. I don't know."

Davis, who has spent more than 15 years in prison for crimes including burglary and assault, said one thing he was sure of: "If I let her go I'd be goin' back to the joint."

Seeming at times detached from the crime, he gave a matter-of-fact description of how he held the cloth tight around the girl's neck for what seemed like "forever."

"I remember easing up," Davis said. "And I heard her groan or somethin'."

"So what did you do then?" an investigator asked.

"Tightened back up on the cloth," Davis said.

"She didn't know what hit her," he said. "Then I got another piece of cord, tied it around her neck, cinched the knot up, tightened it up, just to make sure."

Much of the key information in the transcript had been released previously, but the confession had never been made public in its entirety.

Radiation levels climb in Ukraine

Villages near Chernobyl see rise

Pavel Polityuk
The Associated Press

KIEV, Ukraine — Radiation levels around the Chernobyl nuclear plant rose as much as tenfold after fires swept through nearby villages, but officials on Wednesday played down the potential health hazards.

Environmentalists expressed skepticism at the measurements, and criticized the Ukrainian government for not ordering tests in populated areas outside the 18-mile exclusion zone around the plant.

The fires on Tuesday, six miles northwest of the plant, revived Ukrainians' fears about lingering contamination from Chernobyl, where a reactor exploded and caught fire in the world's worst commercial nuclear disaster 10 years ago this Friday.

Flames raced through five contaminated, deserted villages for seven hours. On Wednesday, forest fires caused by unseasonably hot, dry weather engulfed areas of neighboring Belarus also contaminated by the 1986 blast.

After monitoring radiation levels in the exclusion zone, officials reported a four- to tenfold increase in the radiation from cesium in certain areas. The overall increase in the zone was 10 percent.

"But it's impossible to talk of an increase in the average dose to people, because the radiation background would have had to increase 1,000 times to reach what we call dangerous limits," said Yuri Ivanov, head of the radiation monitoring center for the exclusion zone.

Environmentalists said the government should also have tested radiation levels outside the zone.

"You have to be very careful with their figures," said Yevhen Kobetsky, a nuclear physicist who works with the Ukrainian environmental group Union to Save Chernobyl.

He was particularly concerned about the radiation doses received by the firefighters and the picnicking families who had returned to their former villages when the fire broke out Tuesday.

One of them is suspected of dropping a cigarette that started the fires, which spread quickly among dry pines and abandoned homes in one of the most heavily contaminated areas.

The families were not tested.

Some experts said the health danger from Tuesday's fire is probably minimal, because the leftover radioactive cesium is mostly in the soil, and would be unlikely to be wafted up by smoke from burning trees and buildings. But others insist that any increase in radiation is a threat.

"Any fire that size is certain to affect radiation levels," said Oleh Bykov, spokesman for Ukraine's civilian defense service.

For many Ukrainians, memories of the disinformation by the Soviet government after the 1986 accident run deep. Authorities did not initially report that accident, which caused at least 32 deaths and exposed 5 million people to radiation.

"I don't believe the official information that everything is fine here," said Alla Kulishova, 32, a saleswoman in Kiev, 70 miles to the south. "Of course that's what they'll say. But I feel this danger everywhere."

"When I heard about the fire my skin froze," she said.

Yelena Bondarenko, a businesswoman with two children, called for the immediate closing of the plant and cleansing of the contaminated regions.

"I understand (Ukraine) is very poor," she said. "But when poverty hits a home, everyone makes a contribution to solving the problem. Let it be Western money or ours; I don't care. The zone should be clean."

The West has long pushed for Ukraine to close Chernobyl, but the energy-starved former Soviet republic says it needs the electricity and jobs the plant provides. Two of the plant's four reactors are still operating.

The Group of Seven industrialized nations has pledged $3.1 billion to help shut the plant but has not agreed on a timetable for dispensing the funds.

Bosnian government flights grounded

Srecko Latal
The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — The NATO-led peace force has grounded all Bosnian government flights, citing the participation of unauthorized aircraft in a military parade. NATO allows non-military flights in Bosnia on condition the former warring parties get advance approval. The Bosnian army failed to do that Sunday when it flew two helicopters and two light fixed-wing aircraft in a parade in Bihac in northwestern Bosnia.

"As a result of these breaches," Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Walker, the commander of the NATO ground forces in Bosnia, banned all Bosnian government flights until further notice, spokesman Maj. Simon Haselock announced Wednesday.

Also Wednesday, NATO-led troops escorted as many as 400 Serb refugees who traveled in nine buses from Banja Luka in northern Bosnia to visit homes in Glamoc in western Bosnia.

The refugees were met by several dozen Croats "brandishing sticks and placards," but there were no reports of violence, Haselock said.

He said the Serbs were allowed to visit their homes after agreeing to a set of undisclosed terms issued by the Croat mayor of Glamoc.

Several clashes occurred recently when Muslim refugees tried to visit their homes and cemeteries in territory under Serb control.

The Muslim prisoners are being held in the Bosnian Serb headquarters of Pale, 12 miles southeast of Sarajevo, while the international war crimes tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands, decides whether to indict them.

The woman testified today about the nature of her attack, which was very similar to the method of the alleged Bowling Green assault.

The most striking similarity between the two cases was the fact that Pearson apologized to the Tiffin victim, calling himself "an asshole" and wishing he had met the victim under different circumstances, asking the victim if someday they could get together.

Palestine votes on abolition of PLO objectives

Said Ghazali
The Associated Press

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip -- In a historic vote, the Palestinian parliament-in-exile voted without debate today to revoke all sections of the PLO charter calling for Israel's destruction, clearing a major hurdle to statehood.

The vote means that Israeli-Palestinian peacemaking, interrupted by four suicide bombings by Islamic militants in February and March, is back on track. Israel had said it would freeze peace talks if Yasser Arafat did not keep his promise to get the clauses revoked by May 7.

The Palestine National Council voted 504 to 54 to revoke the clauses that call for armed struggle and destroying Israel. Fourteen members abstained and 27 were absent.

The vote was a victory for Arafat, who needed the support of at least 446 members, or two-thirds of total membership.

The council met in a closed-door session at the Shawwa Convention Center in Gaza City, with journalists kept outside. There was no debate, said PNC member Marwan Kanafani, a former Arafat spokesman.

"The Palestinians have chosen the path of peace," Muin Shreim, a member of the Palestinian delegation to the United Nations, said after the vote.

Israeli officials hailed the vote as a significant step toward peace. Nissim Zvili, a senior official in Israel's governing Labor Party, said amending the charter would make it possible to hold negotiations on a final peace agreement on May 4, as scheduled.

Some radical Palestinian groups had urged the council to delay or cancel its vote because of continued Israeli bombing of Lebanon. But there were other reasons to hold it quickly: The vote could help Prime Minister Shimon Peres, who faces an election challenge May 29 from right-wingers skeptical of Palestinian intentions.

Some PNC members opposed to changing the charter said such a step was premature and that Israel must first assert the Palestinians' right to statehood.

But Arafat has lashed out at the hardliners, saying if they voted "no," they would be responsible for yet another missed opportunity in the Palestinians' bitter history.

Today's vote also cleared the way for an Israeli troop withdrawal from parts of the Palestinian town of Hebron, the last West Bank city still under occupation. Troops were to have redeployed in Hebron in late March, but Peres held off after the suicide bombings.

Arafat warned hardliners Tuesday that if they voted against changing the charter, they would be responsible for the Palestinians missing yet another historic opportunity.

"Make up your minds. ... Are we going to have a Palestinian dream or not, are we going to have statehood or not?" Arafat said in his emotional plea. "We don't want to go astray again, we don't want to begin again from less than zero."

Israeli government spokesman Uri Dromi said before the vote that revoking the clauses in the charter would boost support for peacemaking in Israel.

"This is a cornerstone of the whole process," Dromi said. "If he makes good on his promise, then Israelis will be less reluctant to go on with the process."

Russia and China open summit

Jiang welcomes Yeltsin as countries work to strengthen ties

Renee Schoof
The Associated Press

BEIJING -- Their Cold War differences melting, the Russian and Chinese presidents opened a summit Wednesday that is expected to further strengthen ties between the two giant neighbors.

Boris Yeltsin was welcomed by a 21-gun salute on Tiananmen Square followed by a hug from Chinese President Jiang Zemin at the Great Hall of the People on the square in central Beijing.

The two leaders reviewed an honor guard, chatted briefly inside the hall and sat down to a banquet.

Jiang, who speaks Russian, told Yeltsin they had now met so many times they counted as "old friends," Chinese television reported. This is their third summit in five years.

"It's a warm spring in Beijing, which is full of flowers in bloom and is overflowing with vigor," Jiang said, adding the weather was a good omen for the advancement of Sino-

Trial opens without cult leader's plea

Mari Yamaguchi
The Associated Press

TOKYO -- Saying he pitied "those who do not know the truth," doomsday cult leader Shoko Asahara refused Wednesday to enter a plea to charges he masterminded the nerve gas attack on Tokyo's subways.

On the opening day of his long-awaited murder trial, the bearded cult leader sat fidgeting through a nearly six-hour recitation of about 4,000 names of those killed or sickened in the attack last year that shook the nation.

If prosecutors hoped to elicit some display of emotion from Asahara with the reading of names, they were disappointed. If anything, the 41-year-old guru merely looked bored. Occasionally he looked as if he were mouthing a chant.

In Japan, fewer than 1 percent of criminal defendants are found innocent, so many defendants make a show of contrition to try to win leniency. Not Asahara.

The cult leader said little in the course of the day, which was mainly taken up with the name-reading. He wouldn't answer to the name he was born with, Chizuo Matsumoto, and he claimed he couldn't remember his address.

But he did make one short speech, reminiscent of mystical remarks he once delivered to disciples.

"I pity those who do not know the truth," he told the four judges, who will render a verdict since there are no jury trials here. "I have no concern about things like lack of freedom, and pain." Under Japanese law, the proceedings will continue despite Asahara's refusal to make a plea.

Asahara's apparent indifference roused some victims to fury and reduced others to tears.

Michiko Hishinuma, whose subway stationmaster husband Tsuneo was among the dead, wept quietly as the names were read. Another subway worker's widow, Shizue Takahashi, raged afterward at a news conference,

Army chief ousted after mutiny

Replacement expected during negotiations following uprising

The Associated Press

BANGUI, Central African Republic -- President Ange-Felix Patasse fired his army chief Wednesday after a three-day army mutiny that killed nine people and wrecked the capital.

The ousted leader, Gen. Alphonse Gombadi, was replaced by Col. Maurice Regonessa, commander of an army unit.

Gombadi's replacement had been expected since the mutiny ended Sunday. Hundreds of soldiers who rampaged through the city to press demands for back pay called for Gombadi's replacement during negotiations following the uprising.

Loyal troops backed by 1,300 French soldiers stationed in Bangui quelled the uprising. Patasse agreed to an amnesty for the mutineers and to meet their demands for four months' back pay.

Other civil servants also are owed months of back paychecks. Patasse, elected in 1993 in the country's first multiparty vote, says the overdue payments are a legacy of previous regimes' corruption, and that his government cannot afford to make amends immediately.

On Tuesday, Patasse banned opposition political groups and trade unions from operating, saying such organizations had helped orchestrate the mutiny.

AL president ready to give Belle lesson in etiquette

Jim Little
The Associated Press

Since charm school wasn't an option, American League president Gene Budig plans to teach Albert Belle a few things about etiquette himself. He has summoned the Cleveland Indians star to his office to tell him that throwing a baseball at every photographer who tries to take his picture is not an acceptable way to let people know he is camera shy.

This is very admirable on Budig's part since sometimes all a young man needs to straighten himself out is knowing someone in a position of authority cares. In this case, of course, it will fail miserably — assuming Belle even deigns to show up. Assuming he does, the meeting will probably go something like this:

Budig: "Albert, do you see what I'm holding?"

Belle: "A baseball."

Budig: "And do you know how many people around here hate the media as much as you do?"

Belle: "Plenty?"

Budig: "Right. And how many of them throw baseballs every time one of those media types gets out of line? ... Right again. None. And do you know why not?"

Belle: "Too expensive?"

Budig: "Good answer. But it wasn't the one I was looking for."

Belle: "Bursitis?"

Budig: "Not a bad answer, either. ... But still not what I had in mind."

So money is not the answer. But familiar as the lament is by now, a commissioner might be. Not a pretend commissioner like Bud Selig. The players can see through that.

Belle (starting for the door): "Too bad. Because that's two more answers than I give most people. Your time is up."

Belle can afford to be that cavalier, both literally and figuratively, because he makes a lot of money.

Enough money so that last year's $50,000 fine for cursing out NBC reporter Hannah Storm didn't make much of a dent in his pocket (assuming he paid it and not the ballclub). Enough money so that whatever fine the AL president levies — assuming Budig tries to impose one and gets it past both the players' union and an arbitrator — won't even begin to make a dent in his attitude. Enough so that in the last few days, Belle turned down a $38 million, five-year deal the Indians dangled hoping to lock him up for the long term. So money is not the answer.

But familiar as the lament is by now, a commissioner might be. Not a pretend commissioner, like Bud Selig. The players can see through that. When they see an owner playing at being the commissioner, the message that peaks through is this: The last thing he wants to do is cost one of his fellow owners real money, which grounding stars like Belle for a long time would.

Albert, after all, will be visiting Milwaukee sometime soon and Selig has a vested interest in making money, too. That's why the justice that looks the best to him and his brethren is the kind that is swift, but most especially cheap.

Falcons pound Ball State by 15 to gain split

Blake Parkins
The BG News

Snow flurries and persistent rain was the demise of Tuesday's matchup against Central Michigan for the BG baseball team. The bad weather would subside for the Falcons to welcome Ball State to Warren E. Steller Field Wednesday.

The Falcons remained true to form as they split a double header with Ball State taking the second game in a 16-1 blowout. The Falcons couldn't muster that kind of offense in the first game, falling to the Cardinals 6-3. The team put up three runs on five hits and no errors.

Center fielder Bill Burgei went 2-3 at the plate and crossed the plate once. Drew Niles drove in two runs on one hit. Andy Tracy also drove in one run.

Hurler Joe Cotton was handed the loss while giving up four runs on five hits, and walking four batters. Cotton's record falls to 3-4 for the year.

Mike Chaney improved his record to 5-3 with a solid pitching performance. Chaney only allowed one run in five and two-thirds innings. Bob Reichow got an appearance in a relief role retiring the last four batters including three strike-outs.

The Falcons also came alive in the batter's box with a scoring frenzy. The team exploded to score 16 runs on 14 hits. All but one of the starters got a hit in the game.

Four Falcon batters recorded multiple hits for the game. Jerome Kynard singled in the first and drove in three runs on a bases loaded double in the fourth inning. Matt Craig had two singles and scored three times. Senior slugger Andy Tracy had a single and hit his 11th homer of the year. Bill Burgei had two hits and three RBIs, while crossing the plate three times. The late inning pinch hitters also had a good day coming off the bench. Travis Razor started off the sixth inning rally with a pinch hit single. Following a hit batter and a walk, the bases were loaded for Jay Harrington, who drove in two runs with a single. Bill Burgei drove in two runs and later scored on Tracy's dinger.

Bowling Green coach Danny Schmitz was pleased with the day's outcomes.

"I don't think that we hit the ball all that bad in the first game, we just got down in a hole early," said Schmitz. "We played an outstanding second game. We put all three phases of the game together, and Mike Chaney did an excellent job pitching."

This weekend the Falcons will travel to Kent State for a four game series.

Twins win by almost two touchdowns

DETROIT -- Minnesota's Tom Kelly was apologizing for a record-setting slugfest Wednesday in Tiger Stadium. And he was the winning manager.

Greg Myers and Paul Molitor each had five RBIs Wednesday as the Twins set a team record for runs and routed the Detroit Tigers 24-11.

It was the most runs against the Tigers in 84 years, matching the mark set in a 24-2 loss to the Philadelphia Athletics on May 18, 1912, when Detroit's regular players, angered that Ty Cobb had been suspended, went on strike, forcing the team to use players from semi-pro teams and St. Joseph's College.

Minnesota, which outthit Detroit 19-14, blew a 7-2 lead, falling behind 10-7 in the fourth before rallying. The Twins' previous high for runs was in a 21-7 win over Detroit on June 4, 1994.

But Kelly wasn't very happy about it.

"That wasn't very pretty, and all I can do is apologize to the fans in the stands who sat through that so-called exhibition of major league baseball," he said.

"The only thing good about that game was that we won."

The teams scored the most runs in a major league game since Philadelphia beat the Chicago Cubs 23-22 on May 17, 1979.

It was the most runs scored in an American League game since Chicago beat Boston 22-13 on May 31, 1970.

The total also set a record in Detroit, topping the 31 scored in the Tigers' 16-15 win over Chicago on June 2, 1925.

Tigers manager Buddy Bell, ejected for the first time this season, said his team's seventh straight loss was an embarrassment.

"I think that's a pretty good word, and I have as much to do

Baseball investigators quiet after Belle meeting

Ronald Blum
The Associated Press

NEW YORK -- Albert Belle met on Wednesday with baseball investigators who are looking into an April 6 incident in which the Cleveland Indians outfielder threw a ball that hit a photographer.

The meeting at the offices of management's Player Relations Committee lasted about 90 minutes, according to one baseball official who spoke on the condition he not be identified.

Belle was joined by Cleveland general manager John Hart, agent Arn Tellem and Gene Orza, the No. 2 official of the players' association.

Attending the meeting for management was baseball security head Kevin Hallinan, American League lawyer Bill Schweitzer, PRC lawyer Lou Melendrez and investigator Jim Murphy.

None of the people involved in the session would comment or even acknowledge that it took place.

"I really can't comment," said Hallinan, at Yankee Stadium for Cleveland's game against New York.

Two hours before the game, Indians manager Mike Hargrove was asking reporters whether they knew if the meeting had occurred.

"There are things Albert does that no one likes, but he's one of our own. He is part of the team," Hargrove said.

"I didn't see what happened. If he did it on purpose, it's very wrong. I've had 10 people tell me he did it on purpose, and 10 people tell me he didn't. That's what the people investigating this will try to find out."

Sports Illustrated photographer Tony Tomsic said Belle threw a ball from the outfield and hit him during pregame warm-ups at Jacobs Field. The outfielder contends he was trying to throw to Manny Ramirez but the ball sailed past his teammate.

"I'm getting the reports from all the parties involved," acting commissioner Bud Selig said.

Ptak returns to lead men's tennis in MAC tournament

Paul Markoff
The BG News

The Bowling Green men's tennis team heads full force into the Mid-American Conference tournament today in Kalamazoo, with the return of sophomore sensation Milan Ptak.

Ptak missed last week's match at Akron for disciplinary reasons. The Falcons 10-9 overall and 3-3 in the MAC finished the regular season in fourth place in the conference. With the team intact, Falcon coach Dave Morin feels the Falcons can go all out for a MAC tournament championship.

"We're ready for the tournament, full go," Morin said. "We need to be aggressive and competitive in all of our matches to be successful."

The Falcons enter the tournament on a four game winning streak, following a regular season in which the team accomplished many goals.

The team had a winning record overall, and won the majority of their matches in both singles and doubles play (113-110 in singles, 71-50 in doubles).

Sophomore Ryan Gabel lead the Falcons' singles line-up in victories with 22, and juniors Adam Tropp and Mark Ciochetto teamed up in doubles to lead the Falcons with 23 victories. Both Gabel and the Tropp/Ciochetto duo earned number three seeds in their flights, along with teammates freshman Radu Bartan and sophomore David Anderton.

Morin is confident in all of the Falcons' abilities, but likes Tropp and Ciochetto's chances the most.

"I feel we have a great opportunity at our top doubles spot," Morin said. "The best of three doubles format should favor Tropp and Cio, and the best team should come out on top."

Falcon women face tough road at MAC tourney

Paul Markoff
The BG News

The Bowling Green women's tennis team embarks on the Mid-American tournament today with fresh hopes, but slim chances of winning the MAC crown.

The Falcons, 7-7 overall, 3-3 in the MAC, enter tournament play in fourth place in the conference. The cards are stacked against the Falcons, but coach Penny Dean has the team thinking championship.

"We know the odds are against us," Dean said. "It all boils down to who beats who. We have the talent, and we still have a shot."

The Falcons set many goals before the season including a team GPA above 3.0, a regional ranking in the Midwest, and a top three finish in the conference. The Falcon's established a GPA over 3.0, have yet to be regionally ranked, and the third place finish is up for grabs entering the tournament. Dean feels a top three

Johnson readies for return to playoffs

Ken Peters
The Associated Press

INGLEWOOD, Calif. -- The beaming smile has disappeared, replaced by an intimidating scowl.

Magic Johnson has put on his playoff game face for the first time since 1991, and it's not very pleasant.

"No smiling, all serious; I'm a grumpy old man," said Johnson, who along with his Los Angeles Lakers teammates open the NBA playoffs Thursday night at the Forum against the Houston Rockets.

"It's been more than four years since I've been here and it's nice to be crazy again. I'm moody, get upset easy. I'm driving Cookie [his wife] crazy at home.

"I'm like a bear right now. Hopefully I'll be a bear for at least two more months," Johnson added, alluding to the long road to the NBA title.

The Lakers, a much better team since Johnson, 36, came out of retirement on Jan. 30, will get a reality check quickly in the playoffs against the two-time defending NBA champion Rockets in a best-of-5 series.

"They're the two-time champions, and they're probably the best road team in the league during the playoffs," said Johnson, who averaged 14.6 points, 6.9 assists and 5.7 rebounds and 30 minutes of playing time in 32 games following his comeback.

Los Angeles center Vlade Divac, who draws the tough assignment of guarding Hakeem Olajuwon, said it's good to have Johnson leading the Lakers again.

"Having him back helps our confidence," Divac said. "We know he's always going to create something for us."

Lakers coach Del Harris refused again Wednesday to name his starting lineup.

"If I were they, I would be wondering where Earvin [Magic] will play, and whether he will start or be on the bench," Harris said. "Earvin's got to be part of any game plan. And I'd wonder whether it was going to be Nick [Van Exel] or Sedale [Threault]."

The secrecy apparently hasn't cost Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich any sleepless nights.

"It really doesn't matter," he said. "We won't know how they'll start anyway. There's a combination of things that can happen, and we've just got to be ready."

"There will be tough situations defending them, and some [matchups] will be on our side. All players aren't created equal."

Falcon rugby takes another tournament

Brian Gibson
Special to The BG News

With hard charging center Beau Yoshida leading the way, the BG rugby team won Chicago's Windy City Classic with a 15-14 come from behind victory over the University of Chicago.

The victory gave the Falcons a clean sweep of every tournament they have entered this spring.

To get to the final, BG defeated Illinois-Chicago 20-0, Loyola of Chicago 59-7, UIC again 17-0 and Kankakee College 24-5. In addition, Yoshida was voted most valuable player of the tournament.

"This club has been on a mission ever since USA Rugby passed us over the final slot in the National Championship," said BG head coach Roger Mazzarella. "We intend to finish this season undefeated and boldly underline USA Rugby's error."

"Up until this year a team had to play its way into the National Championship," Mazzarella added. "Now you've got a Competition Committee making that decision, probably based on who will get USA Rugby the most television coverage. This university has a history of getting passed over no matter what sport you're talking about."

Despite soggy fields, a driving constant wind, and the loss of four regulars to injury, the Falcon offense and defense dominated every opponent except Chicago.

"I have to compliment Jamison Grime, Gary Fike, Mitch Cousino and Mike Green," said BG captain Dan Kelley. "They all stepped up to cover an injured player's slot and did an excellent job."

Ken Fink and Mike Grim control a lineup in Bowling Green's 15-14 victory over the University of Chicago.

Adding to Loyola's misery were prop Brian Gibson with a pair of tries, fullback Tony Mazzarella with a try and three conversion kicks, Tod's four conversions and solo tries by Kelley and as did fullback Scott Havericak. Fike.

Substituting liberally against tiny Kankakee College the Falcons nonetheless recorded an easy win. Wing Randy Waller scored twice while Core Ward added a try and two conversions

The ruggers, now 19-0 overall, will host Michigan State in the Falcons' final match and only home game of the season. Game time is 1 p.m. at the College Park Rugby Field.

Bowling Green will face steep competition from Western Michigan, Ball State, and defending MAC champion Miami. The number one singles flight is a toss-up with Western Michigan's Dave Genero as the favorite.

Genero is playing in front of a home crowd, which could help or hinder his chances according to Morin.

"We need to come out with composure, and leave everything on the line," Morin said.

The Falcons ground out a 20-0 victory in their first match with UIC. Wing Paul Tod tallied a try, a penalty field goal and two conversion kicks. Wing Kevin Kline added a try and fly half Jason King nailed a drop kick field goal.

Paced by Yoshida's four tries, BG's offense exploded for 59 points before Loyola could muster an insignificant late score in the second match.

"Bowling Green was absolutely incredible this weekend," said Loyola coach Jack Cushing. "As soon as we stacked the defense to stop Yoshida, they burned us from every other point on the field."

Falcon track teams head in different directions

Pamela Santangelo
The BG News

Starting today, the Falcon track teams will split up and attend three different relays.

Beginning today and ending on Saturday, the men's and women's teams will head to either the Penn Relays in Philadelphia or the Drake Relays in Des Moines, Iowa. Those who do not attend these two Relays may be asked to compete in the Hillsdale Relays in Hillsdale, Mi. Friday and Saturday.

There will be no team scoring at any of these meets as athletes will try to compete for their seasons' best times.

"Our runners will be attempting to reach qualifying standards for the NCAA outdoor championships in June at Eugene, Oregon," head women's coach Steve Price said.

Kristin Gaddis has already reached the provisional standard for the 10,000 meters.

For the women, the Penn Relays is the largest track meet held in the United States. This meet is in its 101st year of existence.

Hornets working on list of replacements for Bristow

Joe Macanka
The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. - Having wasted little time in getting rid of Allan Bristow, the Charlotte Hornets don't appear to be in nearly as much of a hurry to replace him.

The Hornets announced Tuesday that they were ending Bristow's five-year run as their coach by buying out the final season of his contract, which calls for him to be paid nearly $500,000 next year.

Bob Bass, Charlotte's vice president for basketball operations, said the Hornets had no one in mind to succeed Bristow, who compiled a 207-203 record and led the 8-year-old franchise to its only two playoff appearances.

"At this particular point, we do not have a list," Bass said. "In the next few days, we're going to work on that."

Bass refused to list any potential candidates, but names raised in various media reports include George Karl of the Seattle SuperSonics; Brendan Malone, who was fired Monday by Toronto Raptors' coach; and Massachusetts coach John Calipari.

Bass would prefer the Hornets have a replacement on board in time for the draft June 26, when the Hornets have two first-round selections.

"It would be our first choice that it not even go past the draft," he said. "But to be rushed into something is not our first choice either."

The announcement about Bristow's buyout came 40 hours after the Hornets finished their season short of the playoffs and with a 41-41 record - well below expectations coming off a franchise-record 50-victory season.

Those expectations were dashed on Nov. 3, when the Hornets concluded a bitter contract squabble with Alonzo Mourning by shipping their talented but disgruntled center to Miami in a six-player deal.

Mourning went on to fuel a late-season run that helped Miami overtake the Hornets for the eighth and final Eastern Conference playoff spot. Charlotte never was able to right itself.

The Mourning trade, the four-player deal that brought Kenny Anderson from New Jersey, and several injuries substantially altered the face of the Hornets from the previous season.

Charlotte went from a well-balanced team on offense and defense to one that had little inside presence, ranked among the league's worst in several defenfinish is possible, but the regionally ranking is not probable.

"We plan on taking care of business and finishing as one of the top teams," Dean stated. "Our schedule was tough, and we still feel we should have been ranked regionally."

If the Falcons are to finish in the top three in the conference, they must out duel MAC rivals Miami, Ball State, and Western Michigan. Miami enters the tournament as the favorite, boasting a MAC record of 6-0. Miami features freshman Natalia Soetrisno, a freshman transfer from Indonesia who finished with a perfect 6-0 record in conference play.

Molitor had an RBI-groundout in the first, a three-run homer in the third and an RBI-triple in the eighth. It was the fourth five-RBI game of his Dean knows the competition is tough, but feels the key to the tournament comes in the first round.

"It's very important to win the early matches," Dean stated. "From there anything can happen."

All of the Falcons doubles teams enter the tournament as fourth seeds. The format for doubles was changed for the tournament, establishing a best of three set format, rather than the eight game pro-set. The change should favor the Falcons pairs. Despite the fourth seeds, Dean is confident that the duos best is yet to come.

"All three of our doubles teams are capable of getting on fire," Dean said.

career but first since 1981.

"I know I did it my second game in the big leagues," Mollitor said. "I don't remember after that."

Chip Hale hit a three-run homer in the eighth and Dave Hollins hit a solo homer for the Twins.

Mark Lewis homered twice and drove in four runs for Detroit. Eddie Williams also homered for the Tigers.

"We have to stay positive; we have to keep going," Williams said. "We're big-league ball players and a lot of us have been kicked in the face before."

WR: PhotoOp

It's official!

Next semester, Fall 1996, under the newly appointed Editor-in-Chief the Unaswampy, above, will be the editor of WR. We congratulate the Friendly Black Swamp Creature.

A Note To Our Readers

Yesterday the Board of Student Publications selected the Fall and Summer editors-in-chief of The BG News. The process for selecting an editor-in-chief goes a little like this: First, one applies for this position, and then is subjected to a ten-minute interview, which is closed to the public.

Sound a little fishy? That's what we thought. First of all, one cannot judge a person in ten minutes of standard questioning. In the weekly Cocktails with... feature in this magazine, our reporter spends at least an hour interviewing people and admittedly only gets "a hint" of what they are like.

Second, the review board which chooses new editors is named the "Student Publications Board" — a misnomer for one glaring reason. Out of 11 board members, only two are students. How can this possibly reflect the audience of a student newspaper?

And finally, student journalists, the folks who actually have to work with the new editor, were rarely asked their opinion. And when they were asked, their statements were ignored.

Given the above, we feel the process by which the BG News Editor was chosen is invalid. We demand more student involvement in the process — the students should be the reason the paper exists. We ask that the board be more careful in its future considerations — ten minutes is the time it takes to order a burger not a proper amount of time to judge someone's ability. And we request more that staff input be taken into account when selecting a leader of student journalists — After all, the staff are the people who must work with the Editor.

Mass staff defections are imminent. We are not satisfied with the process. As guardians of the public trust we can not afford to continue to compromise our beliefs under the current system.

Our readers deserve better.

The Bandwagon

PORN FLAKES: 1200 pounds of fun

By Aaron Weisbrod

In the ever-expanding, ever-changing, and always-improving Northwest Ohio music scene (believe it, there is one), the PORN FLAKES have remained both a solid influence on many (if not most) of the other local musicians as well as a driving force on the local club scene itself.

Now, almost exactly two years after their formation, PORN FLAKES have released their first CD under Sin Klub Entertainment, Inc. The results are HUGE.

"We're all collectively happy with it." PORN FLAKES' crunching guitar monster Todd Evans said with a smile in his voice.

And believe me, they has every right to be. Not only does the CD kick ass in and of itself (more on that in a minute), but the Toledo CD release party will be taking place on the main stage at The Asylum in Toledo, which is quite a feat for a band still considered a "local band" by many of the residents.

"Everywhere you go there's 'local' bands." Todd commented when discussing the issue, and how being seen as a local band can oftentimes inhibit one's chances of commercial radio airplay. "Every time I go up to Detroit I hear Ted Nuget on the radio. Every band's a 'local band' somewhere."

Even though the CD release party isn't until Friday May 3rd, the CD is flying off the shelves at area record stores. A studio recording from PORN FLAKES has been a long time coming, and the disc (aptly-titled "MOO JACK CITY") has undisputedly lived-up to (if not beyond) any and all expectations.

Featuring fan-favorites such as "Dave!?", "Angsta," "Pissin' Off the Next Seattle," and "No Cause," "MOO JACK CITY" is pound for pound without question the best locally-based CD I've ever heard, and the disc's smooth production is better than the production of many ... hell, MOST major label's releases.

Since the band decided not to include their names in the CD (they don't got nothin' to prove), I also feel as though it is my duty to inform you of such: The "instrumental" portion of PORN FLAKES consists of Joe D. on vocals, Todd on guitar, Pat on bass, Kev on drums, and Grinch on vocals, scratches, and samples. The Thespian division of the PORN FLAKES (i.e.-Two guys who run around stage adding a visual effect of what the band is singing about) consists of Hecto Destructo (the Supreme Master Thespian and Head Minion) and Hideous Jay (aka: "Handsome Jay" to the ladies), who donates his Thespian, wit, and brawn attributes to the band. Scotty Michaelis played saxophone on the disc, but he is no longer a member of the band.

What it comes down to is this: If you like Mr. Bungle, Public Enemy, GWAR, the Mighty Mighty Bosstones, Metallica, Elvis, and/or really big tattooed guys jumping around on stage having a good time (while playing incredibly well composed and written music), you'll like PORN FLAKES.

If you don't, well, sorry about your luck.

Opening for PORN FLAKES will be Harm's Way and Thudernuts. The show is an all ages event, so feel free to bring small children. Tickets are $5, and the doors are scheduled to open at 8:00 PM. Questions can be directed to The Asylum at (419)243-4446. The Asylum is located at 209 North Superior Street, just minutes off of I-75.

Aaron Weisbrod is the Official Music Guru of Weekend Reality. He's like to thank Mark and Michelle at WFAL for saving this article from computer-caused destruction.

The Mystery of Edwin Drood
By Rupert Holmes
Based on the unfinished Mystery by Charles Dickens
Eva Marie Saint Theatre
A BGSU Theatre Review
by James M. Brandon

PHOTO CAPTION: The Usual Suspects? Cast members from The Mystery of Edwin Drood pose for their mug shots. Drood plays through Saturday in the Eva Marie Saint Theatre. Curtain time is 8 p.m. For tickets, call the EMS Box Office at 372-2719.

The BGSU Theatre Department closes out its 1995-1996 season with Drood, a musical extravaganza presented by the members of the "Music Hall Royale," who are in turn played by members of the University community. So there are University actors playing the role of English actors who are playing the roles that Dickens originally created. Confused yet? Well wait, it gets even better.

Rupert Holmes based his musical on an unfinished mystery novel by Charles Dickens, but left the ending up to the audience. So while we are watching actors playing actors who are playing roles, we are also required to tie together any clues in the script that might help us solve the mystery. Therein lies the fun in this script. In an age where interactive CD ROM equipment and "choose your own adventure" books are commonplace, The Mystery of Edwin Drood is right at home.

Allen S. White, Professor of Theatre, is the man responsible for putting this zany show together, and he has assembled a wonderfully creative team to make it happen. The choreography from visiting artist Maria Glaudini is filled with evocative stage pictures that bring some of the larger scenes into sharp focus. Steve Boone's lights run the gamut of seemingly endless requirements that the script requires of them with ease. Margaret McCubbin's costumes brighten the stage and harken back to the Victorian England.

There is no "fourth wall" in this staging, and the actors mingle freely with the audience in their Music Hall personas. While there is nothing new in this strategy, it is refreshing that the cast moves beyond the token tricks required of them and make a serious effort to engage in a running dialogue with the members of the audience. This is important, for as has been stated, the audience decides the outcome.

Which leaves this reviewer in a bit of a pickle, so to speak. The show discussed here may be vastly different from the one which any other audience encounters. Is Drood alive or dead? Who murdered him? Who solved the mystery? Did Drood really hit the Chairman of the Music Hall Royale in the groin? The answers may be different for each night.

Yet there are some things that shouldn't change from night to night. One is the superb job that the ensemble does in maintaining a high level of quality and consistency. This very trait makes it difficult to single out performances, but there are a few that must be mentioned nevertheless. Ray Mannila guides us through the evening as the affable Mr. William Cartwright, the Chairman of the Music Hall Royale. Jim Williams is a hoot as the nerdy Rev. Crisparkle and Monica Bueno puts forth a solid performance in the title role.

But it is Jill Van Brussel, playing the hilariously low-brow opium dealer known as the Princess Puffer, who steals much of the show. Her comedic antics are matched by the strongest (in terms of volume) voice in the cast. In the tradition of an Ethel Merman (but thankfully, with a prettier voice!), Van Brussel's voice rings throughout the Music Hall and sets a standard of articulation and audibility that is wonderful to witness.

In the end, Drood is a night of theatre that "pulls out all the stops" and makes for an extremely entertaining evening of music and fun. It is a mystery that should not go unsolved, and a show that should not be missed. Take a chance to test your wits and solve one of literature's greatest unsolved mysteries. Drood plays through Saturday in the Eva Marie Saint Theatre. Curtain time is 8 p.m. For tickets call the EMS Box Office at 372-
