A BG grad should be ...

□ Town meeting explores what differentiates what a Bowling Green graduate should have compared to graduates from other institutions.

By DARLA WARNOCK
The BG News

There has to be something that differentiates a University graduate from any other college graduate. Now the University is setting it's sights on finding out what that distinguishing factor is. Beginning dialogues started Monday in a town meeting held to search for a common ground among graduates.

Sponsored by the Student Achievement Assessment Committee and the President's Office. Representatives from both the public and private sector, as well as academia and legislature were present to discuss the progress being made to define the learning outcomes.

University President Sidney Ribeau said the dialogues grew out of his thoughts given in his opening day speech. His goal is to clearly define the characteristics of a University graduate.

"What's the gestalt -- the collective product," Ribeau said, questioning the outcomes of an average graduate. "We need a clear indication of the future, and like it or not the students are moving and we as a faculty need to be moving ourselves."

USG receives Union plans

□ Vice President of Student Affairs Ed Whipple urges USG to take leadership role in construction of a new Student Union.

By TONY CAVALLARIO
The BG News

Vice President of Student Affairs Ed Whipple presented the Student Union renovation plans to USG at Monday's general meeting.

The plans, which will be submitted to the Board of Trustees for approval in December, were of the expanded Student Union in its present location. The plans include the demolition of Prout Hall and the movement of the Phi Mu sorority house.

Whipple spoke of the present union as "woefully inadequate." He stressed the importance of doubling the size and keeping the location of the Student Union.

Speaking often of the importance of USG as the voice of all students, Whipple asked USG to continue to provide input as the renovation project continues.

Whipple stressed that the new union must be "student centered." He said the proposed union will have enough space to include offices for every student organization and be open 24

UT holds forum to discuss race

□ Four universities -- including BG -- come together to discuss race in higher education.

By ROCHELLE CONVERSE
The BG News

TOLEDO -- Several University students engaged in a forum discussion about race in higher education Thursday at the University of Toledo.

As part of a four-part forum series, student leaders from the University of Toledo, Medical College of Ohio, Owens Community College and the University met in the Driscoll Center Auditorium to discuss their views on the relevance of race in higher education.

"Students' attitudes about race, about issues of multiculturalism and diversity are going to be very critical since clearly the future and what will happen in the next millenium around this kind of topic will be left to the students," said Marshall Rose, affirmative action director and member of the planning committee.

Due to space limitations in the center, students from Owens were not a part of the 12-member panel discussion. They were, however, included in a collaboration of videotaped interviews that were aired at the forum.

Moderating the discussion, Marlene Harris-Taylor, public affairs producer for WBGU-TV, led the students through the dialogue.

From the start, students were asked if racial tension existed at their college.

Although some of the responses varied, most saw some form of tension existing. University students saw some common threads, including segregation and apathy.

Kristina Wright, marketing and international student from the University, said relationships between African American and white students are non-existent.

"There's nothing there," she said. "They don't even socialize." Students from the University of Toledo said while tension exists, it is more "covert than overt" and the tendency is to ignore the issue.

Erik Soloff, second year medical student in the School of Medicine at MCO, said, "differences themselves tend to breed tension." He also said he thought people have self-imposed differences, which add to their own segregation by choice.

When asked if self-segregation was wrong, some panelists thought it had a valid role.

"You tend to feel most comfortable with your own," said Walter Hamilton, first year medical student in the School of Medicine at MCO.

As the students discussed the importance of ethnic identity, they also discussed whether a diversity requirement in college was needed.

"We have assumptions about people and you go to these classes to dispel these stereotypes," said Lynette Berkey, journalism major at the University. "That's one of the most important things you can get out of it." Soloff said at the medical level a diversity requirement is "pro-

Vietnam veteran runs for fourth ward spot

□ Fourth ward candidate Stan Bortel wants to improve the relationship between the University and the community.

By BRANDON WRAY
The BG News

After working all over the world in the military, coming back to Bowling Green might seem a little boring to some, but not to this city council candidate.

Stan Bortel, Republican fourth ward council candidate, flew planes in and out of Vietnam, served in Thailand as the last helicopters were leaving Saigon, and later worked, among other places, at the Pentagon for the Air Force.

Now he wants to represent the fourth ward on city council. Bortel, a native of BG and graduate of Wittenberg University, said he came back to BG when he retired in 1990 because it is good place to raise children.

"I came back as a single parent and I knew this was a good place to raise children because I had grown up here," Bortel said. "Now I am re-married, and we are raising our four children together here."

Bortel's ward is primarily permanent residents but he does have several connections to the University.

Voters face choices in race for council spots

□ Two Democrats and one Republican vie for two at-large city council seats.

By BRANDON WRAY
The BG News

In addition to selecting a candidate from the four wards, voters will vote for two at-large candidates.

Running for the at-large seats are Democrats B.J. Fischer and John Mura, and Republican Bill Culbertson. Voters will vote for their ward candidate and two at-large candidates. Fischer and Mura are currently on council representing the second and fourth wards, respectively.

Running for an at-large seat is different from running in a ward race, according to Fischer.

"It's a different kind of campaigning altogether. It's a lot more work but is also more rewarding," Fischer said. "At last count I had knocked on 2082 doors. You have to deal with the needs of the whole community and not just one section of it. You must appeal to a broader group and know that the city as a whole is important."

Both Democrats, Fischer and Mura are faced with an interesting situation in that they are running together but also against each other. With just one Republican running, a solid Republican voter

In this time of thanks, quit complaining

I could not remember exactly the last time somebody asked me the question, but I'm quite sure it had not been since high school. So when I was asked it recently, it sparked a tiny debate that I'd been wanting to dissect for a while.

"What nationality are you?" Normally, I tend to avoid these sociological debates, but this issue has irked me for the past few years.

Actually, this problem of mine started nearly a century before I was even born. If my family history is correct, my great-great-grandparents are my ties to the Old World. My grandparents were born in the United States. My parents were born in the United States. My sisters and I were born in the United States. I am an American.

I'm guessing this family heritage sounds pretty familiar to a lot, if not most of you.

So why is it when somebody asks the question, the usual response is something along the lines of "Dutch-German," "Scot-Irish," or "Polish."

Notice, one response absent from those above is "American." Is there any wonder why there is no pride in this country?

Collectively, the United States of America has no identity. We're ethnic mongrels. We celebrate being the Melting Pot.

Oh sure, we all claim to be American and angered when somebody burns an American flag outside the local city hall. Yeah, being American is cool when we smack China in Olympic basketball. Remember the Gulf War? Everybody was gung-ho about being American after we bombed the living daylights out of Iraq. How convenient it is to be American.

I can't think of anything about me that isn't American. Dad was a firefighter. Mom went back to work once all the kids were grown up. After school and in the summertime, it was Wiffball, Wiffball and more Wiffball. I got picked up from basketball practice in one of my family's fine line of grey station wagons. Somebody we knew either "found" or had their Transformers stolen.

I went to the public high school. Not wearing uniforms was a culture shock. I got my varsity letters and had them slapped on my coat. I laughed when students in my grade got pregnant. I couldn't believe it when I saw students crying at graduation. I still play Wiffball.

Why don't more people consider themselves American? For starters, we're always blaming each other. Normally, I don't buy into the Generation X crap flashed across Entertainment Tonight. But there is definitely something about us that makes our parents and grandparents cringe.

Go to a sporting event. People are afraid to sing the National Anthem aloud because maybe it's not "cool." That makes me want to puke.

Has our government alienated this generation? No. Will somebody explain how we've been slighted by our nation? Maybe that traffic cop gave you a hard time a few years back. You're no exception.

People my age face none of the problems our parents did. Our leaders aren't being killed by the government. We haven't, and will never be asked to fight a war like Vietnam.

I'm not saying our country is perfect. I'm not saying we all should put our heads in the sand and never complain when our politicians spend $200,000 on an outhouse in a park (which just happened) while veterans of war are homeless.

I am saying the majority of us need to stop and take a sincere look where we live. We have running water. We have weekly garbage collection. We have been blessed to live in a country where you can receive unlimited education, you can sit on your ass and play Sega Saturn until 3 a.m. and you can waste a few hours daily on e-mail. You really think you have something to bitch about?

Yes, there are some of you who have ties to other nations. There are some of you who have been personally screwed by Uncle Sam. I am aware you exist.

But this problem haunts us all. It's not just the skateboarding punks who cause problems outside the mall. How did you spend your last Independence Day? Your last Veterans Day? Your last Memorial Day?

You were probably whining about the long lines at Cedar Point. You poor thing.

You complain about the school closing the Administration Building on Veterans Day, while we students still have classes. What would you have done if you had gotten that day off? Thrown a keg party?

Although we rarely admit it, there is more to being American than wearing Nike cross-trainers and listening to the Spice Girls on your way to watch the next Sandra Bullock movie. Pay a little respect and be thankful that you could even consider yourself an American. Not that you even do.

"Outcomes" are in

So what do we get for our money here at the University? The need for "learning outcomes," as initiated by the Ribeau administration, certainly comes as no surprise. Like most of Ribeau's policy ideas, we just can't object to this one.

In what may either be a sweep of humility or utter confidence, Ribeau has suggested it is time to specify exactly what students should walk away with from the University. Perhaps Dr. Ribeau thinks we already provide the "outcomes" he wants to solidify and wants simply to brag.

But more likely, he feels the "outcomes" may be slipping away and need to be reinforced. Acknowledging this is quite logically the first step in turning the abstract value of a BGSU degree up a notch.

The notion of "outcome" based education is a trend borrowed from Alverno College, a four-year liberal arts school in Milwaukee. Alverno, lists seven traits of a educated person: communication skills, critical thinking, problem solving, recognizing moral values and ethics, working with others, keeping a global perspective, preparation for responsible citizenship, and appreciation and understanding of art and culture.

In general, these are similar components of what is traditionally called a "liberal" education. No one dares ask for that lofty goal in the realm of state funded education. "Outcomes" are much more tangible, and allow us to retain our specializations. But the end result seems the same. No one wants the University to be a trade school. Too many valuable traits are sacrificed by that job-prep mentality.

Here is an enduring truth: There's a whole lot more to college than job training. There are resources at the University to make sure everyone gets a well-rounded education. In fact, to get anything less is waste of students' money, as well as the taxpayers who pay half our education and probably expect these outcomes anyway.

The question for the future is how Dr. Ribeau expects to test outcomes in students. How do we demonstrate that such traits as critical thinking have been acquired?

Most people, including those at last night's meeting, say it's impossible. But the goals are what is important. Perhaps, we will see the "outcomes" when we see the world's problems solved and see people working in groups, evaluating moral conflicts, and applying a global perspective to making the world a kinder, gentler place.

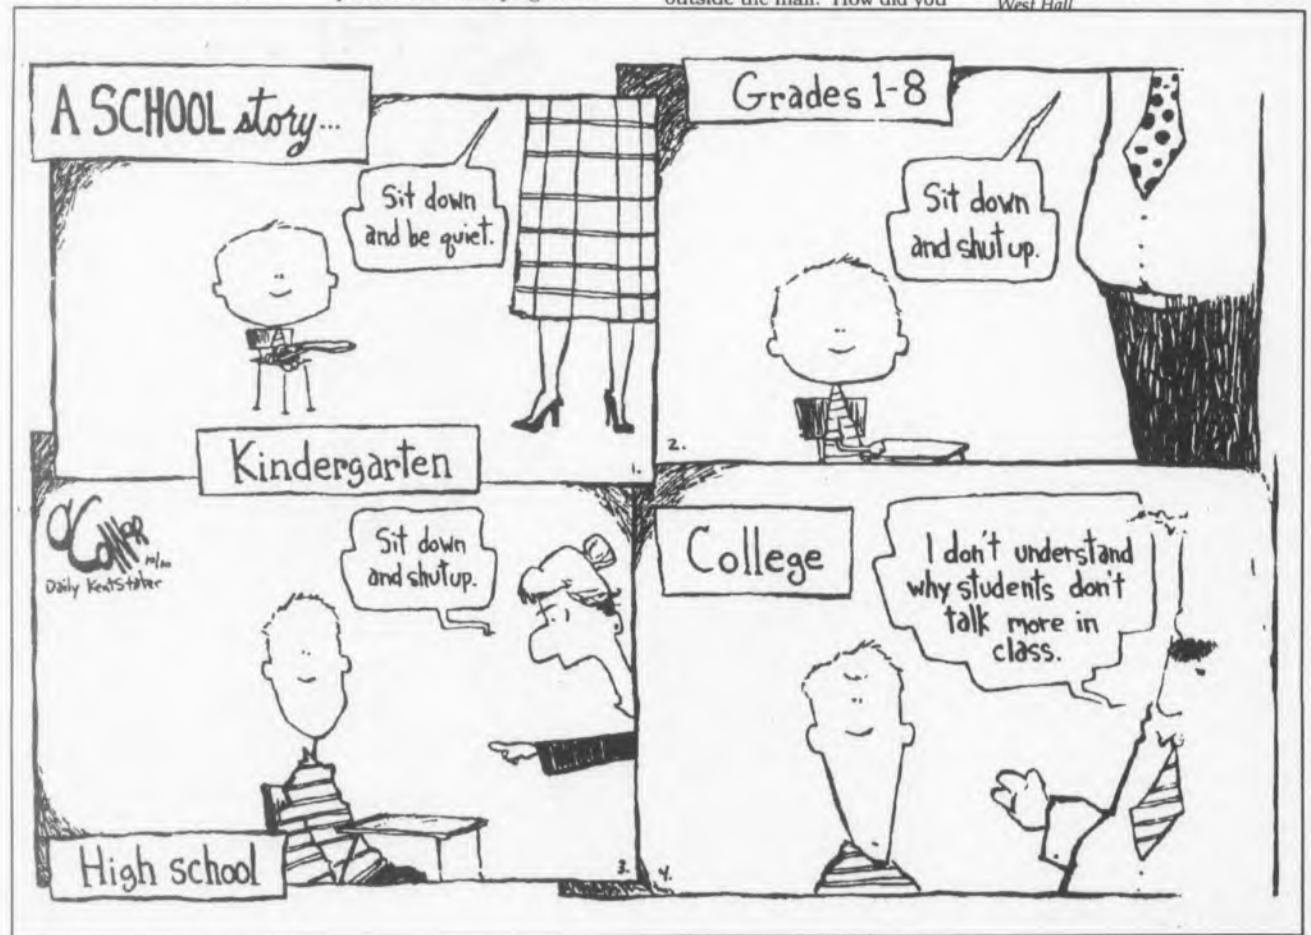

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the editor:

I am infuriated by the most recent misleading and deceitful act of the College Republicans. A banner hanging in the Union oval might lead everyone to believe that I have endorsed Julie Meyer as a candidate, and that is simply not true. I do not support her bid for council. As a member of Bowling Green City Council and as a student, I wholeheartedly support Shawn Luedde.

It's a shame that some campaigns have to resort to misleading people and attempting to trick the student body to get votes. Haven't we had enough of the lies and the crooked politicians? On election day we will be faced with a choice between two candidates. For me, honesty and integrity are important. Therefore, the choice is clear.

Forum held today to educate about China relations

A China Forum is being held on campus all day today, featuring Richard Bernstein, a journalist of the New York Times, Liu Binyan, editor-in-chief of "China Focus," and Tong Yi, former Chinese prisoner.

The forum began Monday with Bernstein leading an informal discussion about China. He will also speak at 9:30 a.m. today concerning "China and America: Future Friends or Future Foes?" in the assembly room of McFall Center. Binyan will speak during a session from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. in the Alumni Room of the Student Union.

Whipple also suggested USG start a task force to consider the Advisory Committee on General Fee Allocations (ACGFA) reform. ACGFA is responsible for dispersing general fee funds to the University's various student organizations.

He advised USG to take back their role in the allocation of funds to student organizations.

USG previously handled funding until 1978, when problems led to the current third-party ACGFA system. Whipple called the A.G.F.A. system "parental" and SAAC, showed University progress of defining learning outcomes and what the average student should retain from it. He presented the data from a survey answered by 60 programs and departments from across the University.

Out of each of the outcomes defined by the groups, there were four strands that became apparent through each, or as Hakel described them, "the big four."

They include: Inquiry, integration, communication and interaction, he said.

"These four broad themes pervade our curriculum," Hakel said. "They are visions of learning outcomes at BGSU."

He stressed the importance of general education requirements throughout all curriculums, noting they are often overlooked as an obstacle to overcome before a student gets to the courses in their major.

Ribeau disagrees with the idea that all departments and programs concentrate on those four ideals. That's the goal that he would like to have implemented campus-wide, but that isn't what he thinks is going on behind the scenes.

"I am not convinced that it is taking place in half of those departments," Ribeau said. "They are there on paper, but not in practice."

Craig Decker, manager for world wide recruiting for Proc-hoped USG could put the power back in students' hands, where he said it is at other schools.

In other matters, USG passed the allocation of $150 to a student filmmaker. The student, Thomas Kuo, is making and distributing an original educational film about alcohol, which will be offered free to campus. Kuo hopes to generate support for students interested in film.

Senate Bill 3 also passed. The bill asks that disbursements from loans, grants and scholarships be given no later than the first day of a semester so that students can take care of finances before school begins.

ter and Gamble, said there are certain things a company looks for in a college graduate looking for a job. The top three he outlined were initiative, networking and self-managing skills. He described the intense need for industry to be global in all aspects.

The lessons for higher education to take from his experience is to create excellence in teaching, provide opportunities to work abroad and start the initiative to create self-learning, Decker said.

"It's lifelong learning," Decker said. "Just think about what the world will be like in the not-so-distant future."

Rounding out the panel discussion were Randy Gardner, legislator, and Roger Sell, the director of the center for enhancement of teaching at the University of Northern Iowa. Vicki Petraka, director of the Institute for Culture and Society moderated the session.

Sell showed the model to define a UNI graduate and explained how some of the same ideas could be used at the University.

Gardner said the legislators are looking for results and outcomes. He applauded the efforts of the University in the areas of computing technology and communication skills.

He said higher education outcomes all very easily ties back to K-12 outcomes.

"There hasn't been enough emphasis put on core values," Gardner said.

Iraq agrees to U.N. mission visit

The Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS - Seeking to wrest concessions from the United Nations, Saddam Hussein agreed Monday to let a three-member U.N. mission visit Iraq to try to defuse the crisis over his plans to expel American arms inspectors.

But the atmosphere of conciliation dissipated over an alleged Iraqi threat to fire on U.S. surveillance planes that patrol Iraq in support of U.N. weapons monitoring.

U.S. Ambassador Bill Richardson condemned the threat as an "irresponsible escalation" of the crisis between Iraq and the United Nations.

Further clouding the mission, the two sides offered differing interpretations of its purpose. Secretary-General Kofi Annan said the three emissaries - from Algeria, Sweden and Argentina - would "discuss with the Iraqis a firm implementation of the U.N. resolution" allowing the inspectors unrestricted access to suspected weapons sites.

But Iraq's ambassador, Nizar Hamdoon, said the mission would open a "dialogue" on Iraqi accusations that the Americans are dragging their feet on lifting of U.N. sanctions by refusing to certify that Iraq has destroyed all its banned weapons. The crippling economic sanctions were imposed in 1990 after Saddam invaded neighboring Kuwait, triggering a clash that led to the 1991 Gulf War.

The decision to accept the mission was announced after Iraqi authorities refused to admit an American inspector to a suspected weapons site.

Chief inspector Richard Butler of Australia said the team leader chose to abort the planned inspection and advised two other teams to do so as well. Butler called Iraq's action "illegal."

"It's a challenge to the authority of the Security Council, which is very, very serious," Butler told The Associated Press. "It just slows down what we have to do - which is get rid of all this stuff (banned weapons) and get the Iraqi people back to a normal life."

Iraq's information minister, Humam Abdul Khaliq, told the Iraqi News Agency that the U.N. teams were welcome to resume their monitoring "and that only the Americans ... are barred."

It was the first time the U.N. weapons team had attempted an inspection since Iraq announced that American arms monitors had a week to vacate the country.

Nichols' trial opens

The Associated Press

DENVER - Terry Nichols helped mastermind the Oklahoma City bombing and arranged to be "at a very safe distance" at home in Kansas when the deadly explosion went off, a prosecutor said in opening statements Monday.

Nichols and Timothy McVeigh left a trail of evidence from Arizona to Oklahoma, lead prosecutor Larry Mackey said, emphasizing Nichols "was there at the beginning and there at the end."

But attorneys for Nichols countered that he was "building a life, not a bomb," describing him as a committed family man.

Nichols sat with his jaw taut, his glance bouncing between the prosecutor and jurors, who sat in rapt attention. Nichols' mother, Joyce Nichols Wilt, sat quietly in the front row.

The prosecutor described McVeigh and Nichols as two Army buddies who shared a hatred of the government and plotted the April 19, 1995, bombing to avenge the FBI raid on the Branch Davidians compound near Waco, Texas, two years before.

"This is a case about two men who conspired to murder innocent people," Mackey said. "Their plan succeeded. The bomb went off and people died."

U.S. Attorney Larry Mackey, center, is surrounded by staff and security as he arrives at the Federal Courthouse in Denver Monday to begin opening arguments for the trial of Oklahoma City bombing suspect Terry Nichols.

Nichols, 42, is accused of robbing an Arkansas gun dealer to finance the bombing and helping McVeigh acquire components, such as ammonium nitrate and explosives that he stole from a Kansas quarry, Mackey said.

Nichols faces the death penalty if convicted of murder, conspiracy and weapons-related counts. McVeigh was convicted of identical charges in June and sentenced to die. His appeal is pending.

On a cold rainy morning the day before the bombing, Nichols and McVeigh constructed the device in a Ryder rental truck at Geary Lake State Park near Herington, Kan., Mackey said.

"Terry Nichols had been side by side with Timothy McVeigh," Mackey said.

According to the plan, Nichols remained in Kansas and McVeigh delivered the truck to the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building and set off the explosion, the prosecutor said.

"It consumed the truck; it destroyed the building and it changed the face of American history forever," Mackey said. "It killed 168 people, men, women and children, a cross-section of the country, people of all ages, races and backgrounds."

Mackey said Nichols was at his Kansas home, "at a very safe distance from a truck bomb that exploded in downtown Oklahoma City in front of the federal building. And Terry Nichols had planned it just that way."

"Yes, Terry Nichols was not there and did not know about the bombing until the next day," Tigar said.

FCC chairman urges inquiry into liquor ads

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- The government should look into TV advertising of whiskey and other liquors, the new chairman of the Federal Communications Commission said Monday. The previous FCC deadlocked on the issue in July.

Bill Kennard discussed the issue with reporters on his first day on the job as chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

President Clinton asked the FCC in April to conduct such an inquiry into TV liquor ads, but the old panel rejected the proposal by a 2-2 vote.

"I have talked to people on both sides of the issue, and not one person has told me that more distilled liquor advertising is a good thing for the country," Kennard said.

"I believe that we ought to have this debate," Kennard said. "It is too important an issue for America to put it in the closet and say that government can't do anything about it."

Kennard did not say whether he has the three votes necessary on the five-member panel to move forward on a liquor ad inquiry, but said he intends over the next few weeks to talk to his new colleagues about the matter.

Kennard also did not say what regulatory role, if any, the FCC should have over these ads. "The real question is, Is there anything that we in government can do about it?" he said, adding that he is sensitive to the "difficult legal and constitutional problems here."

In addition to Kennard, three new commissioners started work at the FCC Monday: Republicans Harold Furchtgott-Roth and Michael Powell and Democrat Gloria Tristani.

They join holdover commissioner Susan Ness, a Democrat, who had voted with former FCC Chairman Reed Hundt in July against a liquor ad inquiry.

blematic."
 "It's better to be exposed to it at an earlier age," he said, because people's identities are already shaped by the time they reach college.
 Hamilton said a multicultural requirement is needed because "a lot of people considered racist are just ignorant."
 "If there's just one person that would benefit from it, it's worth it," he said.

Nagy added that college is full of requirements and diversity is just as important as others.
 "Multiculturalism and diversity are so ill-defined," she said, adding that it also includes gender, sexual orientation and one's religious background as well.
 While the University's requirement has the tendency to make white students feel a sense of guilt, she added that "there needs to be more defining of what multiculturalism is," in order to lessen the defensive feeling some students may have.

 Other topics discussed included whether the colleges were comprised of a diverse faculty and if the composition is important as an educational value.
 The forum was a collaborative effort to bring the four colleges together to discuss issues of race in higher education as part of the national dialogue as requested by President Clinton.

 Following forums will include faculty, staff and administrators from each institution. Each forum will be videotaped and the tapes will be available for educational as well as personal use, said Debbie Owens, assistant professor of journalism and member of the planning committee.
 Also, a presidential roundtable, featuring the presidents of each institution, will be held on Jan. 29 in the WBGU-TV studio.

the University," Bortel said. "I have had two children graduate from here so I think I know the needs of the University community. We do have some students on Merry Street but we are mostly permanent residents."
 Bortel said that a better relationship is needed between the University and the rest of the community.
 "We, as the town, are part of the education that students get here," Bortel said. "They come to get away from their parents and want to rebel. We have to be tolerable to an extent on certain issues."
 "Oxford (Miami University) has a zero-tolerance policy. If a student is caught doing something they will be fined, and that doesn't establish a good relationship between the two. I had a child at OU and on parents' weekend the city would change the parking meters so you did have to pay on Saturdays. You can't nickel and dime the University population like that."

 Bortel said that the tolerance is a two-way street also.
 "When I was growing up we could use just about any facility at the University for free, the rec center, the basketball courts, or pool," Bortel said. "Now if you want to use something you have to pay for it."
 Bortel and his opponent Barry Piersol also have a different relationship than most candidates.

They are close personal friends.
 "We have run a very gentlemanly campaign," Bortel said. "We agreed not put up any signs because we both thought they were sight pollution. Our wives taught school together. There is a microcosm of difference between us. The only difference is that I have the time and Barry is busy at the University with the technology school."
 Fellow Republican Rick Schmidt said both of the candidates are very evenly matched in this ward race.
 Bortel has also volunteered for the Special Olympics, the Boy Scouts and has served as President of the Wood County regional Airport Authority.

must choose one of the two Democrats to vote for.
 "There are two seats so I tell people to vote for us both," Fischer said. "I don't think of us running against each other."
 Mura agreed and said that he got into the at-large race after Fischer when Joyce Kepke decided to retire.
 "B.J. knew up front that this would be interesting with both of us running," Mura said. "But there are two seats and two of us. I think we will both get elected and do a super job."
 Mura and Fischer are the only two candidates running who are incumbent council members. Fellow Democrat Patrick Ng is the only other candidate who has served in office before.

 With the potential for a politically green council, Fischer said it is important to have people with some experience on council and that works to the advantage of he and Mura.
 "All the ward members will be new so it will be important for the city to keep some continuity on council," Fischer said.
 Bill Culbertson is running for office for the first time. Culbertson works as a commercial lender for Huntington Bank and is involved with the Planning Commission, St. Thomas More church and Pee-wee baseball. Culbertson has always been interested in politics and decided to run now because his family is older and he has the time. He sees some of the key issues in the city as maintaining a high level of services, having a good relationship between students and permanent residents, and improving water quality.

 "We have done well in the past with trash and leaf pick up and should continue to improve," Culbertson said. "We also have a good relationship with students but there is always room to improve. I think the city can be part of President Ribeaup's building community program."
 All the candidates agree that maintaining cautious growth is also important for the city.

California preference ban survives challenge

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON -- The Supreme Court let stand California's groundbreaking Proposition 209, a ban on race and gender preference in hiring and school admission. Affirmative action foes predicted other states now will follow California's lead.

Acting without comment Monday, the nation's highest court rejected a challenge to the California measure by a coalition of civil rights groups.

The measure, an amendment to the state constitution, says the state and local governments cannot "discriminate against or grant preferential treatment to any individual or group on the basis of race, sex, color, ethnicity or national origin."

Lower courts had said the anti-affirmative action measure violated no one's constitutional rights and was a neutral way to promote equality. But its opponents contended the measure relegated racial minorities and women to the status of second-class citizens in California.

The Supreme Court's action was not a decision and set no national precedent. It merely left in place the lower court rulings. But the action could encourage voters in other states to adopt similar measures.

"I hope and believe other states will follow suit," said Clint Bolick of the Institute for Justice. "The court's (action) is a further repudiation of the arguments made by the Clinton administration and its allies."

He said an anti-affirmative action drive is under way in Washington state. In Houston, a ballot initiative to be voted on Tuesday would do away with affirmative action in the awarding of city contracts.

Another affirmative action foe, Michele Justin of the Pacific Legal Foundation, added: "This ushers in a new era in civil rights. This ... affirms that equal means equal and that discrimination will prevail no longer."

But an angry Mark Rosenbaum of the American Civil Liberties Union of Southern California denounced the court's action.

"For the first time in our nation's history, state and local governments have been stripped of their authority to remedy race and gender discrimination," he said. Enforcement of Proposition 209 leaves California "for the time being, at least, as the only state unwilling to stand up and take strong measures against gender and race discrimination within its borders," Rosenbaum said.

Martha Davis of the NOW Legal Defense and Educational Fund predicted future litigation if other states adopt similar roll-backs of affirmative action. "The last thing we want is to hold up California as a model. I think it would be disastrous if Proposition 209 were exported to other states," she said.

Davis also said the possibility exists that the California measure will be challenged again as individual programs are dismantled.

Republicans in Congress who have supported ending most forms of affirmative action praised the court's action.

Rep. Charles Canaday, R-Fla., said it "echoes the growing chorus of voices calling for equal protection of the law for all Americans."

He said the House Judiciary Committee later this week would continue its work on legislation similar to Proposition 209. It would ban the federal government from granting preferences in hiring, contracting and other programs.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the measure, adopted by a public initiative in 1996, last April.

Civil rights advocates then sought the highest court's help, contending that Proposition 209 would block even those government efforts to enforce racial or gender preferences that are "permitted or required" by the federal Constitution.

"Proposition 209 leaves public universities free to grant admissions preferences" to "children of alumni, donors or friends of university officials," the appeal said. "Municipalities are free to grant hiring preferences to veterans or those with close political ties to local officials."

Only preferences based on race and sex will be banned, the appeal said.

Lawyers for California and several local governments in the state urged the justices to reject the challenge.

"The fact that in some hypothetical case involving a particular set of circumstances the application of Proposition 209 may raise issues of ... constitutionality does not support (high court review)," state Attorney General Dan Lungren told the court.

In other action, the justices:

■ Refused to shield committees formed by the prestigious National Academy of Sciences from a federal law allowing public scrutiny of governmental advisory groups.

■ Rejected an appeal aimed at removing the feeding tube of an elderly Wisconsin woman who suffers advanced Alzheimer's disease. In fact, the tube was removed last week -- well after the appeal was filed in the case -- when doctors determined Edna M. Folz, 73, was in a persistent vegetative state.

■ Said the Clinton administration may participate in a Jan. 14 argument session over a key affirmative-action dispute in which a white New Jersey school teacher was laid off rather than an equally senior black teacher.

Writer crashes Johnny Depp's car

□ People in the News

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES -- Hunter S. Thompson is in top form in a gonzo report he filed for Time magazine from the set of "Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas."

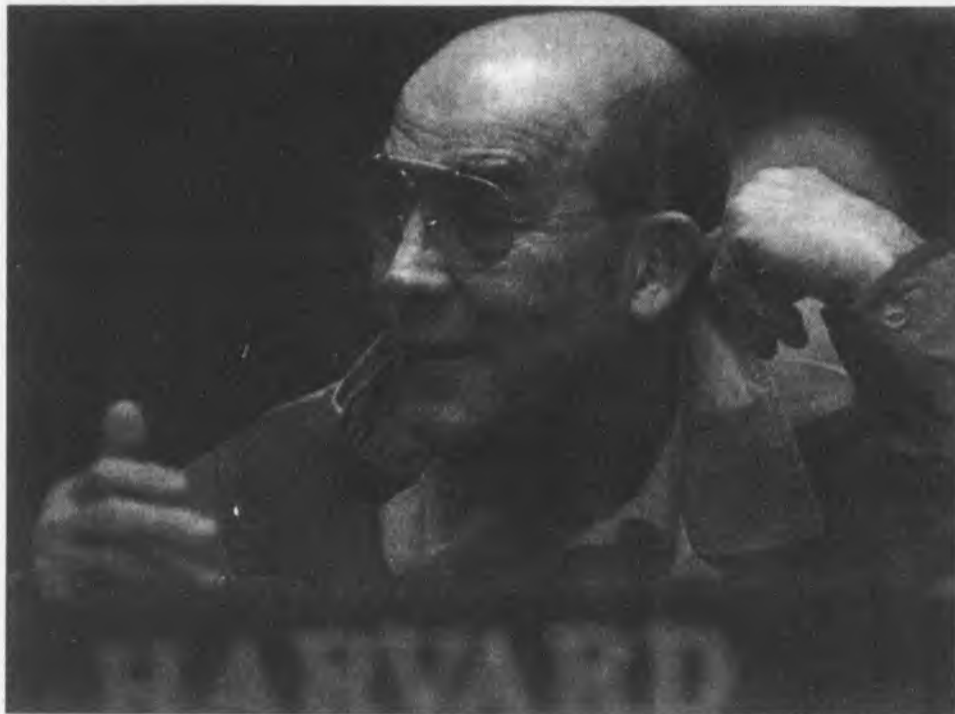

Thompson, whose journalism is a mix of substance-induced fantasies and straight reportage, wrote how he rescued a roller-skating girl named Heidi from the clutches of two Great Danes and crashed Johnny Depp's car into a waterfall.

"Well, I said to Heidi, this is it. We must have taken a wrong turn," he writes.

She responds: "You're very strange -- and you don't know why, do you?"

"I shook my head softly and drank some gin," he replies. "No. I'm stupid."

Depp plays Thompson in the screen adaptation of his 1971 book. Thompson has a cameo appearance.

Video stolen of cancer patient's 'X-Files' visit

VANCOUVER, British Columbia -- Video of a 16-year-old cancer victim's meeting with David Duchovny on the set of the "X-Files" was stolen from the family's car.

The footage along with photographs of the meeting were taken Saturday night during the family's weeklong visit to the set. The visit was arranged by the Make-A-Wish Foundation of British Columbia.

"The record of this young girl's visit is gone, lost through a robbery," said foundation director April Hamilton. "We want to challenge the street people and Dumpster divers to try to find this film."

The family doesn't want their last name used.

Hamilton said the car was parked in a lot when the thief broke a window, ripped out the back seat and stole the film from the trunk.

Yeltsin to make India visit

MOSCOW -- Boris Yeltsin will visit India in January as part of his push to strengthen Russia's ties to the leading nations of Asia. Deputy Foreign Minister Igor Ivanov called the visit Jan. 19-20 a "landmark event" in relations between the two countries.

Having lost its superpower status, Russia is seeking strong ties with Asian nations as a counter-balance to American power and influence.

Yeltsin met with Japanese Prime Minister Ryutaro Hashimoto over the weekend in Siberia and travels to China for a summit this weekend.

Bobbitt done with porn

FALLON, Nev. -- John Wayne Bobbitt is leaving talk shows and porn movies behind for the simple life.

Bobbitt, 30, moved last month from Las Vegas to this small northern Nevada farm town where four of his five brothers live. He said he just wants to find a job and go fishing and camping.

"I want people to get to know me for who I am and not what the media makes me out to be," he said.

"I want to let the past be gone and move on," he said in Friday's Lahontan Valley News and Fallon

Eagle Standard. "I did a couple of adult movies but do not want to make a career out of it because my parents didn't want me to."

Bobbitt said he is writing a book about his life. His ex-wife, Lorena, cut off his penis with a knife, accusing him of sexual assault. The penis was reattached and Ms. Bobbitt was found innocent by reason of insanity.

Connie Chung joins ABC team

The Associated Press

NEW YORK -- She didn't get along well with Dan Rather. Now Connie Chung is teaming up with Barbara Walters and Diane Sawyer.

The veteran broadcaster joined the ABC News team on Monday, where she will contribute to the newsmagazines "PrimeTime Live" and "20/20" and be available as a substitute anchorwoman.

Her return to network news comes two years after she left CBS under a cloud, fired after a two-year stint alongside Rather on the evening news and complaining that she was made the scapegoat for the show's low ratings.

"I'm anxious to get to work," Chung said in a conference call with ABC executives and reporters. She signed a multiyear contract believed to be worth at least $1 million per year.

During the past two years, Chung tried to develop a syndicated talk show with her husband, Maury Povich. But that deal fell through and Povich decided to continue his own show, leaving Chung free to make her own deal.

"I am particularly delighted at this because I have been after her for a long time," ABC News Chairman Roone Arledge said.

Chung joined CBS in 1971, covering politics from Washington. She switched to NBC in 1983, where she anchored weekend newscasts and "NBC News at Sunrise." Rejoining CBS in 1989, she anchored the newsmagazine "Face to Face with Connie Chung" and began her awkward pairing with Rather in 1993.

She ignited a debate over journalistic ethics after an interview in which House Speaker Newt Gingrich's mother said her son had described first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton as a "bitch." Just before the remark, Chung had told Kathleen Gingrich it would be "just between you and me."

Not only did ABC executives say they weren't concerned with the fallout from that incident, Arledge said he blamed CBS officials for the controversy more than Chung and indicated they hung her out to dry.

"Particularly when you choose to exploit it in the promos, I think the management did not serve Connie well," he said. Chung said she agreed.

Chung spent part of her last two years studying at Harvard, where she wrote a 40-page paper, entitled "The Business of Getting the Get," about the pressure to secure high-profile interviews for network newsmagazines. Now she will be experiencing it again.

BG emerging at perfect time

Just days before tournament time, Bowling Green's men's soccer team has undergone a metamorphosis.

The Falcons, who for years have been getting used to pounding fellow conference schools into submission, have lately become the "Cardiac Falcons."

Chris Dore's 25-yard game-winner against Eastern Michigan Sunday came with 21 seconds remaining in the game. It was the second consecutive game the Falcons came back to win in the final two minutes. Exactly one week earlier, Kevin Jackson's goal capped a three-goal comeback and led the Falcons over Northern Illinois.

The funny thing about Sunday's game is that EMU was never supposed to be in the game in the first place. The Eagles entered the match at 0-6 in the Mid-American Conference and 0-19-0 all-time against BG.

"It was an example of why you always play the games," said BG coach Mel Mahler. "When you look on paper, you have two teams, one going one direction, the other going the other direction -- still, anything can happen. The bottom line is, everyone is playing on the same field, everyone has the same referee."

Vallow Fowler

Mahler attributes the gut-wrenching win against EMU to a "lack of focus," and says about NIU that "we contributed to their goals more than anything."

These problems will need to be ironed out by 1:30 p.m. Thursday, when BG opens up its fifth MAC tournament in a rematch against NIU.

"We learned a lot (Sunday)," Mahler said. "Hopefully we'll be able to put that knowledge to good use in the tournament."

Fowler shines in season debut

One of the reasons why the comeback Sunday was so remarkable was that the Falcons had to do it with just 10 men on the field.

Goalkeeper Scott Vallow had been ejected from the game for "dissent" with EMU up 1-0.

"Then off the bench comes Ty Fowler," Mahler said. "He hadn't played a minute all year. Really, Ty hadn't played because it was going to be a redshirt year for him. He was thrown into the mix, and gives up a year of eligibility, having not seen one shot all year, having no time to warm up on a cold windy day ... and yet to play very well and to keep us in a position to win the ballgame. I think if there's any one bright spot in that game, it's Ty's play."

Fowler will have to carry the duties for BG Thursday as well, as NCAA rules require any player who receives a red card to sit out the remainder of that game and the next game as well.

Thus, that red card cost starting keeper Vallow 150 minutes of play and it cost Fowler a year's

Dakich ushers in new era as men roll

□ The Falcons hammer the Lithuanians in their new coach's first game at the helm.

By JIM TOCCO
The BG News

Let the Dakich era begin. New men's head basketball coach Dan Dakich led his team to a 105-69 exhibition punishing of the Neptunas Club Team from Klaipeda, Lithuania.

On the floor, sophomore forward Dave Esterkamp set on fire. Esterkamp score 24 points in the first half and added three more in the second half before leaving the floor for good four minutes into the second stanza.

With a team comprised mostly of its second stringers, BG out-scored Neptunas 46-26 in the second half.

"I thought this was a team we should beat," Dakich said. "And I don't think that often. But as I look at things, and I look at things semi-realistically, our guys start their day at 7 a.m. They're running, they're lifting weights, they practice three hours in the morning. So I think we should be able to beat a team coming over that's kind of just put together."

The conditioning showed, as BG stole the ball 14 times and out-rebounded a much taller team 37-31.

Esterkamp, who played only 19 minutes, managed to lead all players in scoring, and the 6-foot-7 sophomore also led all players in rebounds.

With 3:55 remaining in the first half, he launched a 3-pointer that bounced off the rim three times before falling wide. It was a rarity. Esterkamp made all the other 3-point shots he attempted, sinking 6-of-7. He was a total of 10-for-12 from the field.

"I thought Esterkamp's play in the first half stood out," Dakich said. "I thought on offense he was pretty good."

"Last year, Antonio (Daniels) and Jay (Larranaga) were doing most of the scoring," Esterkamp said. "This year, it's going to be a true team. I was making shots, but it wasn't just because of me. The next night, it might be DeMar (Moore). The next night, it might be Kirk (Cowan). That's how this team is going to play this year."

Four other Falcons landed in double digits in scoring. Freshman Dubrey Black scored 18, Cowan and Moore added 14 and Bowling Green narrowly escaped its preseason opener Monday night thanks to two clutch free throws with 1.1 seconds remaining in regulation that sent the game to overtime, where the Falcons went on to an 84-80 victory over the Lithuania Select team.

The Falcons' savior, however, was a most unlikely hero.

It wasn't Sara Puthoff, who led the nation last year in free-throw percentage. It wasn't Charlotta Jones, who joined Puthoff on the preseason All-Mid-American Conference team.

It wasn't Sherry Kahle, one year removed from earning a spot on the All-MAC freshman team, nor was it flashy point guard Jaymee Wappes.

Instead, it was steady, dependable but unheralded center Jacki Raterman who forced the extra session by calmly sinking two foul shots after emerging from a loose-ball scrum with the ball.

"That's just concentration," Raterman said. "Down at the end of the game, you just have to keep your head and stay focused."

Raterman nailed two more free throws with 43 seconds left in overtime to ice the game. The junior finished with 19 points and 10 rebounds. Puthoff tallied 23 points to lead the team.

Bowling Green swimming will return to action tonight against Toledo at Cooper Pool.

Falcons renew rivalry with Rockets in water

□ BG takes on its archrival tonight in its home pool.

By MICHAEL LEONARD
The BG News

Tonight, Cooper Pool will be the battleground for the naval portion of the Battle of Northwest Ohio.

The Bowling Green men's and women's swimming teams take on Toledo tonight at Cooper Pool at 6 p.m.

In his two years as head coach of the Falcons, Randy Julian has seen two tightly contested meets between the women's teams. The Falcons won at Cooper Pool in 1995 - Julian's first victory at BG - but the Rockets eeked out a victory last year at Toledo.

This year's meet promises to be just as competitive as the Falcons finished just 19 points behind the Rockets at last year's Mid-American Conference Championship meet.

One of the events to watch will be the women's 200-yard backstroke. It could feature a showdown between the two best backstrokers in the MAC as BG's Nancy Simpson, school record holder in the 100- and 200-yard backstroke, goes up against Toledo's Elizabeth Rizzoto. Rizzoto broke the MAC record in the 100-yard backstroke at last year's MAC Championship meet.

The feeling of anticipation that the Falcon women have is largely shared by the Falcon men. Recent meets between the two teams, however, have not turned out as the Falcons had hoped.

Toledo destroyed the Falcons last season, and the Rockets were selected to place first in the MAC preseason coaches poll. The Rockets further asserted their dominance by winning nine of 10 swimming events at the Tom Stubbs Relay Meet Oct. 24 at Cooper Pool.

Despite these conditions, Falcon co-captain Tom Stoltz remains optimistic about the Falcons' chances against their archrival.

"I'm excited," Stoltz said. "We had a good practice (Monday) and we're ready for them."

Stoltz, however, does not underestimate Toledo's strength.

"They have a great team," he said. "We're putting up our best lineup against them. We just have to do our best and hope everything turns out."

Niemet questionable as end nears

Bowling Green, already licking the wounds of a 3-7 season, may have to enter the last game of the year missing a limb.

Quarterback Bob Niemet is, in the words of coach Gary Blackney, "very questionable" as BG prepares to close the 1997 season Saturday at Marshall.

Niemet dislocated the pinky finger on his throwing hand in the final minutes of Saturday's 29-20 loss to Kent. Blackney indicated during his weekly press conference Monday that Niemet might not even be able to grip the ball until Wednesday, much less be able to throw it later in the week.

Redshirt freshman Ricky Schneider, valiant in a come-from-behind win over Akron but mothballed in a 58-0 loss at Kansas State this season, is the starter if Niemet is a no-go.

"Ricky has to prepare and hopefully by Wednesday Bob will be able to grip the ball," Blackney said.

Trainer Bill Jones reported to Blackney that Niemet's pinky finger was "as big as his thumb."

It's the last problem that the Falcons need at this stage of the season. BG is trying to revive a defunct offense with an inconsistent passing attack and non-existent running game.

BG had the ball inside Kent's 35 a total of 10 times Saturday, but came away with two field goals and a touchdown.

"We're having trouble getting it in the end zone," Blackney said. "It happened at Ohio, against Toledo ... it's a real problem for our offense."

In hopes of getting the running

Leon Weathersby rumbles through the center of the Toledo defense earlier this season. The Falcons will close out their season this Saturday against Marshall.

game going, Leon Weathersby ends his two-way, Deion Sanders-like play on both offense and defense and instead will focus on running the ball. Blackney indicated Weathersby will likely start at tailback.

Getting ahold of the holding

Four of the team-record 14 penalties committed by the Falcons against Kent were either defensive holding or pass interference penalties, including one key call on a fourth-down play late in the game.

Blackney said that the call has been inconsistent all season.

"The pass interference this year is like holding has been the past few years," Blackney said after Saturday's game. "You can't get a read on it. It's such an inconsistent call right now."

"We've seen a lot more physical play, I guess because people are throwing the ball so much better in the conference. You've seen a lot more physical play by defensive backs. Sometimes it's called, sometimes it's not called - and then you have to determine if it's a catchable ball."

"Again, it's a judgement call. It's all in the hands of the official."

Blackney said Monday that he was not planning on raising a beef with league officials on the subject. He did say he would like to see more consistency in the call.

Stinky officiating

While BG was flagged 14 times against Kent, a few of the penalties were downright wrong.

The most flagrant was on a play late in the game where Kent running back Charlie Chapman was rumbling down the sideline. He stepped out-of-bounds at BG's 32, but kept on going - not knowing that he had touched the line.

While a single official marked where Chapman stepped out, the rest kept following the play. Chapman kept going and was finally tackled by BG's Junior Williams.

Williams was called for a late hit, despite the fact he probably thought the play was still live as Chapman continued to barrel down the sideline.

"If the whistle blew, why didn't (Chapman) stop?" Blackney asked Monday, visibly upset with the call. "What am I supposed to think as a defensive back, just wave hello to him?"

TV game

The Marshall game is part of the Mid-American Conference television package this week with former Falcon quarterback Erik White serving as color analyst.

The game can be seen live (3:30 kickoff) on SportsChannel Ohio (Wood Cable channel 34).

Garcia-parra runs away with Rookie of the Year honors

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Nomar Garcia-parra was the unanimous winner of the American League Rookie of the Year award Monday following one of the best seasons ever by a shortstop.

Garcia-parra hit .306 for the Boston Red Sox with 30 homers, 98 RBIs, 122 runs and 22 steals. He set major league records for most RBIs by a leadoff hitter and most homers by a rookie shortstop.

The 24-year-old Garcia-parra, the sixth unanimous winner of the AL Rookie award, received all 28 first-place votes and 140 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Other unanimous winners were Carlton Fisk (1972), Sandy Alomar Jr. (1990), Mark McGwire (1987) and Tim Salmon (1993).

Jose Cruz Jr., an outfielder traded from the Seattle Mariners to the Toronto Blue Jays, was second with 61 points, following by Anaheim pitcher Jason Dickson (27), Detroit shortstop Deivi Cruz (12), Cleveland pitcher Jaret Wright

Garcia-parra

(7) and Chicago White Sox outfielder Mike Cameron (5).

Ballots were cast before the postseason, in which Wright went 3-0.

In a season where the Red Sox floundered, Garcia-parra led the majors with 68 multi-hit games, and paced the AL with 209 hits and 11 triples. His 30-game hitting streak from July 26-Aug. 29 set an AL rookie record; four more than Guy Curtright's previous mark in 1943.

Garcia-parra broke Johnny Pesky's Red Sox rookie record for hits (205 in 1942), and his 365 total bases broke Ted Williams' team rookie record (344 in 1939). He also became the first Boston player to reach double figures in doubles, triples, homers and steals since Jackie Jensen in 1956.

Garcia-parra batted .241 in 24 games with the Red Sox in 1996, then won the shortstop job in spring training when John Valentin was moved to second base. Garcia-parra became the sixth Boston player to win the award, following Walt Dropo (1950), Don Schwall (1961), Fisk and Fred Lynn (1975).

OVERTIME

None were bigger than a driving scoop shot with 1:00 remaining in overtime. The layup down the right side of the lane broke an 80-80 tie and gave BG the lead for good.

"The shot clock was going low and I just saw a lane to the basket," Puthoff said. "Coach Jaci Clark has been telling us to drive the middle because it opens it up for everybody. Nobody collapsed on me and I just had the open layup and I was able to hit it."

Puthoff was 9-for-13 from the field, including 3-for-6 from 3-point range, in just 25 minutes of action.

Lithuania led 43-36 at halftime, using a fast-break offense to score several points on transition and off Falcon turnovers. All 14 players on BG's roster saw action in the first half.

"I think in the first half, I played everybody and everybody played pretty well," Clark said. "In the second half, we went for the win."

BG rattled off an 11-2 run to open the second half, erasing the deficit in a little more than two minutes. The game was a seesaw affair from that point on until Lithuania took a 78-76 lead with 19 seconds remaining in regulation.

The Falcons called timeout with 16 seconds to go, but turned the ball over with an errant pass. Lithuania in turn made an ill-advised pass of its own, which Raterman snagged before throwing up a shot.

"She stepped up and made two big free throws," Clark said. "That's pressure stuff. I can't simulate that in practice."

Jones hauled down 12 rebounds for the Falcons while playing 39 minutes. Lithuania guard Rima Vadapalaite led all scorers with 32 points.

freshman Dave Furlin chipped in 12.

The Lithuanian team contained a diverse cast of characters, ranging in age from 17 to 36. But they played solid, fundamental basketball, and Dakich was pleased with the win.

"If you're going to play college basketball, if you're going to win by 40, you've got to be a little happy with that," he said. "You've got to be somewhat pleased - I don't care who it's against."

"Even though Lithuania is not going to be the best team we play this year, we wanted to come out and make a statement that even though (Daniels and Larranaga) are gone, that we can all step up," Esterkamp said.

Talk about versatility

Fifth-year senior Brian Glibkowski was injured Sunday, so he didn't play.

But that doesn't mean he didn't see any action. An official was late to arrive, so Glibkowski started the game as a linesman.

diving relay was the only Falcon team that was able to beat the Rockets at the Stubbs Relays.

Stoltz, Darling and sophomore breastroker Matt Johnsen will need to lead the charge for the Falcons if BG wishes to emerge victorious. The teams will meet again Saturday against Eastern Michigan and Northern Illinois. The meet will take place at noon at EMU.

Disney consultant to present customer service strategies to University

No one would describe Tom Connellan's ideas on how to provide quality service for students and customers as crazy. However, some of his clients are known as Daffy or Goofy.

Connellan, a business consultant to Walt Disney Company, will share his knowledge about Disney's culture of customer service during a presentation Monday Nov. 10, 3:30-5 p.m. in the Lenhart Grand Ballroom of the University Student Union.

Connellan travels the country speaking about how to make employee satisfaction and service exceptional. He is one of North America's leading experts on how to create positive change. His presentation concerns three areas, based on his book "Inside the Magic Kingdom."

Those three areas are: Helping students and organizations embrace change rather than avoiding it;

How to keep customers coming back; and

Not only implementing quality and customer efforts, but also sustaining them for the long term.

For additional information, visit <http://www.bgsu.edu/welcome/connellan> on the internet.

Students and staff can fight world hunger with Nov. 17-23 awareness week activities

Though most people in Bowling Green probably find themselves far removed from hunger problems around the world, students and staff can support efforts to ease world hunger by participating in Hunger Awareness Week Nov. 17-23.

Sponsored by the Catholic Student Connection of BGSU, Thursday Nov. 20 has been designated The Fast For World Hunger Day and they are asking that people either fast for the day or give up some food that they normally would eat during the day.

They in turn would like to take the money that you would have spent on those items and donate it to the organization who would then donate all of the proceeds to a global hunger organization.

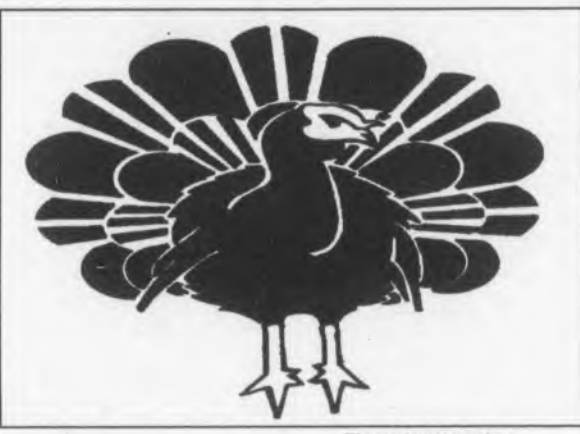

Other activities that are planned for that day are a prayer service after the fast at St. Thomas More Parish and a midnight meal which will include meals from third and second world countries.

"Our main goal is to raise awareness for other people's suffering, but a change in attitude would be the biggest thing," said Alice Krok, Hunger Awareness Week committee member.

All week long they will have boxes set up at the front desks of campus residence halls, in cafeterias, and in various spots outside of campus. They will be making trips to the local soup kitchen to help integrate the campus and community charity efforts.

All of the canned goods collected will be donated to the St. Vincent DePaul Society.

Editor's Note

This is the second-to-last issue of The Campus Buzz for fall semester 1997. The final issue will be Dec. 2. This issue covers events through Thanksgiving and I hope that the calendar will help plan ahead for all up-coming events.

If you have any questions, concerns or special events that you feel are story materials, please e-mail me at april@bgnet.bgsu.edu. or you can drop it in my mailbox in The BG News office on the second floor of West Hall. We welcome new ideas and encourage story ideas.

Event listings for the calendar may be submitted through the University's web calendar at <http://events.bgsu.edu/> no later than 5 p.m. the Thursday prior to our publishing date.

If you are interested in working on The Buzz, please let me know via the same contact methods. We at the Campus Buzz could always use an extra hand.

Happy Thanksgiving!
